A SCRAMBLE FOR LIFE.

Delevan House, Albany, Gutted by Fire—Several Guests Badly Injured.

ALBANY, N.Y., Dec. 31.—The Delevan house was gutted by fire last night. There were 100 guests in the house. All escaped, although two women and one man who jumped from the third storey on the Steuben street side were badly injured. They are: Mrs. H. F. Fookes, wife of the agent of the National Cash Register Co., of this city, formerly of Dayton, Ohio. Benjamin Heilman and his wife, of Brooklyn, who were on their wedding tour. Mr. Fookes was badly burned, but will recover. His wife was internally injured and will die. Mr. Heilman was badly burned about the chest and internally injured. He will probably die. His wife is badly burned about the face, her nose being split open, and she was cut on the ankle. She will recover.

No one above the main floor had time to save anything and before the affrightened guests emerged upon the streets the flames had broken through the roof. Those who were not able to get by the elevator shaft so as to pass down the main stairway on Steuben street were without hope of escape for some minutes until their way was directed to the servant's stairway in the north section of the structure. There were many narrow escapes.

MUST IMPROVE THE CANALS.

Report of the Superintendent of Public Works for New York State.

ALBANY, Dec. 31.—Superintendent Edward Hanna, of the State Department of Public Works, has completed his report on the operation of the state canals for the past season. The number of tons carried on the canals during 1894 was 3,882,550, as follows: Erie canal 3,144,144 tons; Champlain 550,279; Black River 56,024, Oswego 92,843; Cayuga and Seneca 38,270. Compared to 1893 there is a loss of 449,403 tons.

The past season's tonnage is the smallest that has been transported upon the canals any year since 1859.

The Superintendent says: "The time is fast approaching when operation of the canals in a practical manner must cease unless the canals are improved, for practical operation cannot continue unless the business done thereon can be done at a profit to the boatsmen. It is clearly evident that the duty of the Legislature will be to provide the measures for construction of largest possible canals intended for the navigation of boats of such construction as will be able to navigate the inland waters of this state."

NEWFOUNDLAND'S TROUBLES.

The Government Passes an Unpopular Bill—Change in Union Bank Directorate.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Dec. 31.—The Government carried its bill for the guaranteeing of bank notes through the council on Saturday night by a majority of one. The dissatisfaction with the bill is so general here that the note holders have decided to call a mass meeting at which resolutions will be adopted petitioning the Governor to refrain from attaching his signature to the measure.

The Union Bank's shareholders will hold a meeting to-day to remove the present board of directors and appoint a new one. The condition of the Union Bank, it is said, is very satisfactory.

MR. BOWELL TO BE KNIGHTED.

An Unofficial Announcement That He Will Receive This Honor.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—It is stated that amongst the recipients of New Year honors from Her Majesty will be Hon. Mackenzie Bowell. This announcement is unofficial, but the name of the Canadian Premier is mentioned by all of those who are usually in possession of authoritative information upon matters of this kind.

A Suit Against the T. H. & B.

HAMILTON, Dec. 31.—J. V. Teetzel, Q.C., acting for C. R. Smith, issued a writ on Saturday against the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo Railway Company for $8,000 for salary, travelling expenses and interest on back pay for four years past. An agreement was drawn up on November 15, 1890, between C. R. Smith and the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo railway, whereby the former was to receive $200 per month for services as agent of the company and was to have all travelling expenses paid. The principal part of Mr. Smith's business was to boom the road in the cities and towns throughout which it was proposed to build it and urge upon the municipalities to bonus the company.

Robbed and Locked in a Vault.

SANTA ROSA, Cal., Dec. 31.—The Treasury of Sonoma county was robbed of $8,000 and County Treasurer Stofer was left insensible in the treasury vault, the robber locking the door on him. The robbery was not discovered until 5 o'clock in the evening, although Treasurer Stofer had lain on the floor of the vault gasping for breath from 9 o'clock in the morning. Had it not been for the timely arrival of his wife, who went to the office to ascertain why he had not returned home for dinner, he would have died before the door of the vault was opened.

The Blenheim Will Arrive To-morrow.

HALIFAX, Dec. 31.—Lord and Lady Aberdeen, Lady Thompson, Joseph Thompson and members of the family, Governor and Mrs. Dewdney, Sir C. H. and Lady Tupper and Mrs. Sanford have arrived here for the state funeral. The Blenheim is expected to-morrow morning. Landing at Ordnance will take place about noon. The funeral will start from St. Mary's shortly after noon. Col. Sherwood, chief of the mounted police, is to act as grand marshal and he will be assisted by about ten local marshals.

A Love-Sick Youth Suicides.

BUFFALO, Dec. 31.—Michael E. Schrank, aged 16, strangled himself to death in the home of his adopted father on Upper Main street. The boy left a letter for Miss Lena Brecherer, of 675 Genesee street, a comely seventeen-year-old girl, in which he stated his reason for committing the awful crime was because his love for her was not returned.

Another of Those Bookkeepers.

HUDSON, N. Y., Dec. 31.—W. F. Rossman, jr. is charged with stealing $14,000 from the Hudson River National Bank of which he was bookkeeper. Rossman confesses and says the money was spent in stocks, speculation and fast living.

A REMARKABLE CAREER

AN ENGLISHWOMAN'S SUCCESSFUL RACING STABLE.

She Loved Horses and Personally Conducted Her Sporting Property—It Was Not a Fad With "The Red Duchess" But a Pursuit Followed Through Love.

Caroline Agnes, Dowager Duchess of Montrose, who died recently, and who was known in the racing world as "Mr. Manton," and also as "The Red Duchess" had been for many years a picturesque figure in the life of the British capital and on the race tracks throughout England. She trained and raced horses with much success, and maintained one of the finest racing stables in the world, the entire management being in her own hands. From the beginning to the end of her life she was "horsey." It was not merely a fad with her, but a pursuit she followed through the love of horses, of betting and of the life with which she was brought in contact.

She was born in 1818, the youngest daughter of the second Lord Decies, and even as a girl showed her bent by spending more time in her father's stables than she did in his house. At the age of 18, she was married to James, fourth Duke of Montrose, himself a man of sporting tastes and owner of a racing stable. He was also of illustrious lineage, being descended from Scallish Graham, who was made a baron in 1451, and of the great Marquis of Montrose, a supporter of Charles I. For 28 years they had a merry sporting life together and then, in 1874, the Duke died.

The issue of the marriage was three sons, the youngest of whom is the present Duke, and three daughters, two of whom survive and are married. The Duchess married again two years later. The man she selected was W. S. Sterling-Crawford, who was even more widely known as a "horsey" man than the dead Duke. When Mr. Sterling-Crawford died in 1883, his valuable stable passed into his widow's possession, and she at once decided to continue it and to race horses herself under the name of "Mr. Manton." That pseudonym soon became famous, because most of her horses were good ones and won a large percentage of the races in which they were entered. When the horses were not good "Mr. Manton" had luck.

The Duchess, launched for good in her new career, made a practice of attending all the horse sales and recruited her stables with yearlings that she bought at low prices. She developed many high-class horses in this way. She superintended her stables personally and learned to swear roundly at the men when they neglected their work or did not do it properly. In the paddock and at the judges' stand, she was also able to hold her own, and the public disputes in which she came off victorious were many. She was afraid of neither jockeys, trainers, bookmakers nor judges, and she was never backward in expressing her opinion of them if it was bad.

When Fred Archer was at the height of his popularity as the first jockey in England, the Duchess took him up and became very intimate with him. It was even said she was going to marry him. With other well-known jockeys she was also on the closest terms, and she found much entertainment in their society. For men who could not talk "horse," she had no consideration whatever. At the track she seldom deigned to enter the grand-stand. It was in the paddock that she was most at home.

In 1888, Sterling-Crawford having been dead for five years, the Duchess took her third husband, Marcus Henry Milner, a youth about one third her age, who was a follower of race-tracks because they delighted him. She appeared very devoted to her young husband, and they went into society together so much that people thought the Duchess was going to give up racing, but while she ran her horses in Mr. Milner's name, she still kept up her personal supervision. At the end of three years, there was a quarrel and a lawsuit, the Duchess charging that her husband had mismanaged or was trying to mismanage her property.

In the course of the hearing in the suit it came out that she had settled $10,000 a year on Milner at the time of the marriage. The Duchess had an income of about $100,000 a year, consisting principally of her dower from the Montrose estate and the fortune Mr. Sterling Crawford left her. She added to this largely by the amounts her horses won on the track and the sums she won betting upon them. Money ran through her fingers like water, however, and aside from the great cost of the maintenance of her stable, she had tastes that were uniformly expensive.

The Wasp-Waisted Woman.

On corsets humanity is tired of speaking its mind. No sensible man likes a woman with a waist like a wasp or an hour glass, nor is comfortable in the secret of a girl whose form suggests that he may at any moment have to apply a kite to her stylaces. Such incidents have actually occurred. But it is not to please sensible men that many girls dress. Where does a tight laced beauty's dinner go to? is a topic on which science has not pronounced.—London Daily News

Dropped Dead.

Henry Wilkinson, of Courtland, Ont., dropped dead Thursday afternoon, as he was talking with friends in Snell's Hotel there. Dr. Kenwick was called in and pronounced it a case of heart disease. He was a brother of the celebrated "Big Push" of Cobourg, who has relatives in Peterborough and is well known here.

Buried in Verulam.

On Thursday of last week Mrs. Whish, accompanied by her little son, Douglas, drove to Peterborough to spend Christmas with Mrs. St. George. The exact particulars are not to hand, but as far as known, the little boy was out of sorts on Friday, and on Saturday had inflammation of the lungs. He was taken to the hospital and died on Christmas day. Thursday Mr. Bellegham arrived with the body, and the little fellow was laid beside his father, Capt. Whish, in the Verulam cemetery.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

A Landmark.

In the death of Mr. Kelso last week, another of the old settlers was removed. Mr. Kelso came to Verulam some 38 years ago from Peterborough, in which town he was one of the first residents, and for years had a carding mill. On disposing of his mill, he purchased the Sawers' block of 1,100 acres, on which he has since resided. He had a family of eleven children, ten of whom he survived, and at the age of 88 he has departed leaving a widow and one daughter. He was a strict dealing man, and a much respected member of the community.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

"The Gold King" was presented yesterday afternoon at a special Christmas matinee. The audience at this performance was very large, every seat in the hall being occupied.

Tom Marks, as "Dan McGinty, a true Irishman," but "not him that wint to the bottom av the say," won immediate favour, with his amusing "Irishisms." Lee J. Kellam in the role of "Jack Goodman, the Gold King," the hero of the play, also drew from the audience repeated marks of approval. Miss Myra Collins, in the character of 'Little Pug" was fully equal to her part, and made a very amusing and natural child of nature."

At last evening's performance "The Little Duchess" was presented, and the members of the company acquitted themselves creditably.

Fifty or seventy-five people were unable to gain admittance and were refunded their money. To-night's play will be "Struck Gas."—Kingston News. Dec. 26th

Warsaw Football Club's Assembly.

An assembly was held on Friday evening last in the Warsaw town hall under the auspices of the Warsaw football club, was a great success, fully a hundred invited guests being in attendance. An orchestra from Keene was present, and Mr. Mat Jamieson performed the offices of floor manager in his usual efficient manner. It was under the management of a committee composed of Messrs. Morgan and Lumsden, that the affair was worked up to so successful an issue.

DESERVING OF THE VICTORIA CROSS.

A KNIGHT OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

Mr. Harry Brault Performs a Most Heoric Action by Carrying a Sick Comrade on his Back for Forty Miles Through the Bush Woods.

In these prosaic days when the attention of man is absorbed entirely in the pursuit of the almighty dollar, a simple record of heroism recalls all the old tales of chivalry, tales which to their best efforts and helped men to raise their thoughts above such things as the accumulation of sordid wealth and the lust for gold.

The tale is that of a backwoodsman, who for friendship's sake, carried a sick comrade on his back for forty miles through a trackless wilderness. Through the deep snow and bitter cold of the last week.

Last fall Mr. John A. Jamieson left here with a large gang of shantymen collected by Mr. Ted Cavanagh for the St. Anthony's Lumber Company, operating in the Madawaska region on the other side of Coe Hill. The men rode by the railway as far back as it would take them, and then tramped a distance of ninety-five miles further into the woods.

Mr. Jamieson was drafted to Camp No. 3, where he worked steadily until when he experienced a great mental shock by being caught in some logs which were rolling down the skidway. A huge timber struck him in the thigh and the unfortunate man was hurled a distance of twenty-five feet in the air. The strain on his nerves proved too tense, and for two or three days his mind remained unbalanced. As at times he became somewhat violent, Mr. Harry Brault, of Peterborough, who had been drafted into Camp No. 4, some three miles distant, to come over and see if his presence would not have a quieting influence upon Jamieson.

A COUPLE OF WEEKS AGO

WAS SENT WORD

As soon as he saw his friend, Jamieson announced his intention of starting for home. Brault attempted to dissuade him from carrying out his project, but the sick man was determined to start, though so weak as to be hardly able to stand. Brault thereupon announced that he would accompany him on the journey and at five o'clock Christmas morning the two started out on their long tramp through the wilderness. Instead of attempting to cross over to Rathbun Station to take the Central Ontario railway, which would involve a

WALK OF NINETY-FIVE MILES,

the two planned to strike the track of a new railway running out from Ottawa, to facilitate the shipping of lumber. It was forty miles away, but the two, after getting some meagre directions, as to the course to pursue essayed forth. "Jack" Jamieson gave out before he had gone a hundred yards, but the intrepid Frenchman seeing that his comrade was intent on reaching home and perceiving that he was a very sick man, took a firm grip of the bag which contained their provisions, in his teeth, slung another bag of clothing under his arm and taking Jamieson

The sick man became so weak that he had to climb from his perch and rest himself at intervals during the trip and during one of these periods of rest, he gave ample evidence that his mind was unbalanced by drawing a revolver and attempting to shoot his comrade.

One bullet was fired through Brault's overcoat just at the shoulder and the other pierced the coat through the side below the arm, before the weapon could be secured.

Without a moment's sleep, Mr. Brault kept an eye of watchfulness on his companion, and on the fourth day after starting, the railway was reached and the two arrived in Peterborough on the 4.48 C. P. R. express. Fortunately a doctor boarded the train at Havelock, as Jamieson was becoming most violent, but a few morphine pills served to quiet him until he reached home.

ON SATURDAY AFTERNOON,

At present the sick man is with his brother, Mr. Mat Jamieson, at the Little Windsor Hotel, where he is receiving every attention. His mind at times seems clear and he recognizes his friends, but at intervals he becomes almost uncontrolable.

The advisability of placing him in some retreat for a time is being considered, and will be carried into effect if symptoms of improvement are not apparent soon. It is feared that "Jack" may do himself or his relatives some bodily harm in one of his paroxysms. The family has many friends in town who will sympathize with them in their trouble.

FASHION FADS.

Cut-away jackets of velvet are much liked by young girls.

Sleeveless jackets of various materials with passementerie edgings are popular.

A dress of cloth with a narrow moire panel down the front is among the new importations.

Muffs are somewhat larger than heretofore. Many muffs will be used during the coming winter without other furs.

Capes of moire are trimmed with fur collars and lined with bright silk. One of the handsomest of these garments was recently made to order and lined with very stiff brocade.

Ermine, from becoming popular, has become a fad, and every woman who has money to buy it wants ermine in some form or another. The only difficulty is its scarcity and extravagantly high price. Really fine ermine is almost impossible to obtain, and the most fabulous prices are paid for it.—N. Y. Ledger.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER.

A BUSINESS ANNOUNCEMENT.

THE credit system of conducting business is always attended with loss, not only direct loss in failure to make collections, but indirect loss in the increased expense attending its operation. The cash system, or as near an approximation to it as possible, is the only correct and sound method of conducting business.

Though the cash system cannot be exclusively applied to the newspaper business, yet the EXAMINER, after ample and unsatisfactory experience of the credit system and after mature consideration, has decided to adopt it as nearly as possible.

To begin with, after the first day of January, 1895, the EXAMINER Printing Company will render ALL accounts monthly, and insist on settlement, and all contracts will be made with that understanding. It is not in the interest of newspapers that business men should feel it their duty to practice payment of bills due to parties outside of the town, and to remedy this undesirable state of things, and to place the printer on a par, at least, with outside creditors, the following change of system will be adopted at the beginning of the New Year:

All advertising and printing contracts with merchants and others will be billed at the beginning of each month, and if within four or five days a cheque is not received for the amount of the month's bill, our collector will call for the settlement.

Business men prefer paying monthly to paying quarterly or half yearly and the above arrangement is being made largely in deference to the feelings of merchants who prefer meeting a small monthly bill to a large half-yearly or yearly bill. In order to avoid the heavy loss resulting from the acceptance of notes, which have, in many cases, to be paid by the endorser, notes in payment of monthly accounts are not expected to be suggested and are hereafter out of the question.

Not expecting to exact any conditions of payment of liabilities which the Company would not itself be governed by, THE EXAMINER Printing Company will make monthly payments of all bills against it, and in order to be able to do this, will have to insist upon others doing the same. In regard to payment of subscriptions to the DAILY and WEEKLY EXAMINER, the rule of invariable payments in advance will be insisted upon. No copy of either issues will be sent out without the subscription being prepaid, although the subscriber has the option of paying in advance by the year, month or week; but in all cases advance payment by some of these methods must be made. Accounts have been rendered for all subscriptions in arrears and it is the intention of the EXAMINER Printing Company to insist upon speedy payments of all unsettled accounts, and to discontinue those papers that are not paid for in advance. A number of our daily and weekly subscribers are considerably in arrears and a considerable sum has been spent in postage, different forms of circulars and every other known means adopted to arrive at a friendly settlement of the amounts due us. In cases where mild and considerate means have failed we are being compelled to invoke the assistance of the law to securing our just dues. We have been forced during the past few weeks to place a large number of over due accounts in court for collection. The final notice to delinquents will go forward this week, which, if promptly attended to, will save costs being added, as it is the intention of the EXAMINER Company to have a clean settlement up to January first, 1895, no matter who becomes displeased with the pressure. A word to the wise should be sufficient. We cannot afford to continue carrying on our books from $20,000 to $25,000 worth of accounts.

THIRTY CANDIDATES FOR COUNCILLORS.

JAMES KENDRY RE-ELECTED MAYOR.

A Fierce Fight in Every Ward for Councillors—Nine Candidates in No. 1, Five in No. 2, and Eight Each in Nos. 3 and 4 Wards—The Candidates in Ashburnham—School Trustees Elected.

The meeting for the nomination of candidates for mayor took place in the council chamber at 10 o'clock. Mr. Town Clerk Armstrong presided. There was a large attendance of the electors.

The first nomination made was shortly after 10 o'clock.

Mr. Wm. Cluxton proposed James Kendry for mayor, and Mr. H.S. McDonald seconded the nomination.

Mr. A. P. Poussette was nominated by Mr. A. McNeil, but there was no seconder.

Mr. Poussette, in declining the nomination, spoke briefly on municipal matters, dealing particularly with the union of Ashburnham and Peterborough in respect of which the town council, he asserted, had pursued a most vacillating policy, especially in view of the expressed desire of the people in favour of the amalgamation. The council was to blame in allowing a trifling monetary consideration to interfere with the wishes of the people. On this account the council of 1894 should condemned as well as on account of the sewer muddle. He also referred to the financial condition of the town, whose apparently improved condition was due to borrowing $10,000 and he thought that when the expense of the arbitration, etc., was arrived at, there would be $4,000 or $5,000 to be paid out of the taxes of 1895, a state of things that was not in the interests of the town.

The hour for receiving nominations having expired, the returning officer declared James Kendry elected by acclamation.

This announcement was greeted with applause and Mayor Kendry read the following address:—

GENTLEMEN.—I have again to thank you for the high honour you have conferred upon me by placing me in the office of Mayor of your town, and for the confidence shown in me by electing me for the fourth time. I have, during the time I have been in the council, I can truthfully say acted solely with a view to the welfare of the town. I would not say that I have not made mistakes, for that would be a bold statement for anyone to make who has been in any position of responsibility, such as membership in the Council of Peterborough, for a number of years; but your action to-day shows me that it has been recognized that I have been actuated by right motives and that my course has met with approval. This is indeed gratifying to me, and I return you my warmest thanks, and I assure you that nothing will be left undone that I can do to advance the interests of the town. The year that is now closing has, in some respects, been an eventful one. The people of this town, in common with the people of the whole Dominion, have mourned the death of the late Premier, Sir John S. D. Thompson, who was suddenly called away while still in the prime of life, and while we all hoped there were many years of usefulness ahead of him. While his funeral is taking place in our sister province now by the ocean, we will mourn with those who mourn there, and the wave of sorrow will wash the Dominion from the Atlantic to the deep waters of the Western Coast. In our town, one of the most important municipal matters dealt with has been that of the outfall sewer, which was undertaken to form an outlet for a sewerage system for the town. It has long been recognized that this town required sewers, and the first requisite was a suitable outfall. Following the plan outlined two years ago by Mr. Alan Macdougall, M.S.C.E., of Toronto, the council submitted a by-law to the ratepayers for the construction of the outfall, and the ratepayers instructed the council to proceed. One of the objects in view was, also, to provide work for people of the town, because, owing to the general depression, which, fortunately, was not felt here as much as it was in some places, employment was needed. As the township of North Monaghan refused to permit the construction of the sewer through its territory, that could be followed was to resort to arbitration as was done in 1892. The arbitrators appointed in accordance with the law made an award, giving the town the right to proceed with the work, and recognizing that if the work was to be of any benefit in giving employment it would have to be proceeded with promptitude—the contract was let, and let at what all acknowledge to be a close figure and in the contract provision was made that local labour must be employed. The Courts, as you are aware, set aside the award under which the council acted, and the township persisting in its refusal, the arbitration had to be taken up again, which has caused a regretted delay, and the award is now awaited. During the year the equipments of the Street and Bridge Department and of the Fire Department have been improved. The method of improving the streets by using broken stone has been found beneficial, and at the same time it gives employment in the winter season when work is needed, and in order to better carry on the work a machine was procured for the purpose of properly grading the streets and also one for rolling the stones. The Fire Department has been improved, in accordance with the requirements of the Underwriters' Association, by the addition of a new hose wagon, the purchase of appliances and the addition of several electric alarm boxes, as well as improvements about the building. These were needful and will be found beneficial in the future. The Market Bylaw has been improved during the year by excluding outside buyers from purchasing on the market before eleven o'clock and thus taking from outsiders the advantage they were formerly given over our own dealers. The question of the revision of the tolls and weighing charges is one that

DURING THE COMING YEAR,

THE ONLY COURSE

HAS BEEN CONSIDERED

with members of the county council, and will require further consideration as since these rates were fixed twelve years ago the course of trade in some particulars has greatly changed. The market tolls were sold by auction again this year, and the revenue from this source increased. The council revived the matter of the Trent Valley Canal, and owing to its action a meeting was held here which resulted in a large deputation visiting Ottawa and waiting on the Government. The outcome of this has been that the Government has received tenders for two portions of the work and awarded the contract, and is preparing to place other portions under contract. The question of the distribution of charity has received considerable attention, and the council was approached with a proposition to form a committee of citizens to undertake this work, so as to have it better done and to avoid imposition. The Council has approved of this plan, and awaits the action of the churches, when it is hoped that those who are unfortunate and deserving will be better assisted, and the interests of the ratepayers protected. The Legislature of this Province has authorized the organization of societies for the rescue and protection of children who are in circumstances that call for the intervention of the benevolent in the interests of both the children and society. A society of this kind has been organized here, and its purposes have met with general approval. The Council has expressed its readiness to co-operate in this good work, and we may hope that

HELPLESS LITTLE ONES,

whose helplessness and danger appeal to our sympathies, will be benefitted by the work that has been inaugurated. The matter of arrears of taxes is one that has been looked into by the Council, and especially by the Court of Revision, and recommendations have been made that will be carried out, and which will save the town from any danger of loss in regard to arrears in the future. A year ago I referred, on a similar occasion, to the long-standing question of union with Ashburnham, and I then hoped that by this time the town would have included our neighbors in the village. Meetings with the members of the Council of the village have been held, and progress was made, but two points have caused delay. One was with reference to sewerage and the other the matter of fire protection. In regard to the latter, the two municipalities were agreed, and the questions between them and the Water Co. can doubtless be adjusted. The former difference, however, was one between the municipalities, the majority of the town council, with whom some members of the Ashburnham council agreed, feeling that the union should be a complete one without any conditions that would establish a divided interest at the beginning. There seems to me to be no good reason why this question could not be settled amicably, and with further consideration it may be done, when the union will no doubt be carried out, and in union increased strength be found. The town's financial position has always been, and is now, a good one, as it has substantial assets that amount to much more than its total indebtedness. The council this year has, by carefulness and economy, met the expenditures of the year out of current revenue and has a balance

ON THE RIGHT SIDE,

although it had to pay a portion of the floating indebtedness that was an accumulation of former years. This is very satisfactory, and with continued carefulness the same satisfactory state of affairs will, I have no doubt, exist at the close of the year we are now about to enter upon. I have great reason to thank the people of Peterborough for their repeated evidences of confidence. The position of Mayor is an honourable one, but it is also one of responsibility, and if I am spared to the close of the term of 1895 I will retire from this position in which you have in your kindness placed me for the fourth time. I hope I have not wearied you, and I again tender you my heartiest thanks and wish every citizen a very Happy New Year.

There was no further speaking and the meeting adjourned.

AN IRONDALE WEDDING.

Nuptials of Miss Ward and Mr. Harry Davey.

On Thursday, Dec. 28th, 1894, Mr. Harry Davey, of Toronto, was united in marriage to Miss Maude Ward, daughter of Mr. W. A. Ward, Irondale. The ceremony was celebrated at the family residence by Rev. Ralph Trotter, Baptist minister, Lindsay. Relatives and intimate friends of the principal parties were present. The bride was assisted by her sister, Miss Mabel V. Ward, and Mr. R. A. Ward, Peterborough, supported the groom. At the conclusion of the ceremony the guests enjoyed a sumptuous wedding breakfast. The presents were numerous and the bridal pair received the most cordial congratulations upon the occasion. They left by the early train on Friday for their future home, Toronto, where they will take residence at 12 Oxford street.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

A very touching story entitled "Dan" was read by Mr. Martin at the song service Saturday night. Mr. Paul, who is engaged in Association work in Midland, was present and gave a short talk.

At yesterday's meeting Rev. Mr. Young gave an earnest address on "The Prodigal Son." Thirty-one men were present.

The ladies are at work preparing for tomorrow's reception. We will not give a list of those who entertain, but we can promise you an interesting programme. Young men of the town and strangers are invited. Don't wait for written invitations. We are not sending any.

Are you "in it" for an hour a week of Glee Club work? It is important that those who wish to do anything in this line should be at practice Wednesday night at 9 o'clock.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 75c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

WELL BALANCED

—the mind of the woman who knows the best medicine for her aches, pains and weakness, is to be found in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a remedy which corrects and cures the distressing derangements and diseases peculiar to women, builds up and strengthens her system when she's weak, run-down and overworked. For an invigorating, restorative tonic, especially adapted to woman's needs—the "Favorite Prescription" is so positive in its effect that it is guaranteed. If it ever fails to benefit or cure, in cases for which it's advised, you have your money back.

What else can be "just as good" for you?

For bearing-down sensations, ulceration, inflammation, everything known as "female complaint," this is a remedy that's safe, certain, and proved.

Take it for the prompt relief it imparts.

SIMPLY A SUGGESTION.

What's the use of sighing?
Just as cheap to laugh.
What's the use of crying?
Just as cheap to chaff.
Song will sweeten sorrow,
Sun will rise to-morrow,
And relief you borrow
For a guiding staff.

What's the use of fretting,
When the clouds hang low?
What's the use of getting
Left where'er you go?
Just step out and hustle
'Mid the din and bustle,
Brains and brawny muscle
Always stand a show.

What's the use of moping?
Doesn't pay your rent.
What's the use of groping
In your tenement?
Tho' the skies are grieving
And the birds are leaving,
Stand up for achieving,
Never be content.

Pleasant Debt We Owe to Dr. Holmes.

Among the titles of Dr. Holmes to gratitude and enduring remembrance, which recall themselves to us so numerously and forcibly at the moment of his death, there is one I hope no one will lose sight of, and which perhaps ought to be called his influence as a civilizer. He not only showed us, it seems to me—and I am thinking of some of his more didactic poems, of the opening chapters of "Elsie Venner," of countless passages in the "Autocrat" and the "Professor"—what a fine foundation we Americans have to build upon, but he was the means of inciting directly a multitude of readers to work toward ideals of real and sincere culture (not the sham article) which have never in our literature been put into such sane and comprehensive form. I should like to see a muster, and I am sure it would be a large one, of the men now in middle age whose mental tone has been, consciously or unconsciously, considerably influenced by the kindly castigation, until they seemed intolerable, of shams and half-baked pretences that otherwise they might have gone on tolerating; by the flashes of unmalignant wit in which even small boorishness and meannesses were suddenly shown up in so unmistakable a light that it seemed impossible ever to permit them again; by the numberless cumulative touches by which an ideal of the gentleman was built up, wholesome, sensible, unprigkish, attainable by every sincere sham-hating man, yet also full of quiet, high things, charity, consideration for others—"a man of gentle will." From "The Point of View" in Scribner's Magazine.

Curious Properties of Spices.

The aroma of red cedar is said to be fatal to house moths. The aroma of black walnut leaves is fatal to fleas. It is a matter of common observation that persons engaged in the business of making shingles out of odoriferous cypress timber in malarial districts are rarely, if ever, effected by malarial diseases, and that persons engaged in distilling turpentine do not suffer from either malarial diseases or consumption. It is said that when cholera was epidemic in Memphis persons working in livery stables were entirely exempt from it. It is affirmed that since the destruction of the clove trees on the inland of Ternate the colony has suffered from epidemics unknown before, and in times when cholera has prevailed in London and Paris those employed in the perfumery factories have escaped its ravages.

How to Broil in a Frying Pan.

When one has no means of broiling over coals or under heat, the next best thing is broiling in a pan. For example, have a steak cut about an inch thick; after making the frying pan very hot, sprinkle in some fine salt and lay the steak in the pan. Cook for two minutes, then lift the steak up and sprinkle the pan with salt, turn the steak and cook for two minutes; cook the piece of meat ten minutes in all, turning it every two minutes; then put the meat on a hot dish and season with salt and pepper.

Are the good qualities possessed by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Burdock Pills, small, safe and sure, regulate the liver and cure constipation.

ICE FROM NATURAL GAS.

It Can Be Made at a Cost of 50 Cents Per Ton.

It is announced that an Indiana firm has constructed a refrigerator for making ice with natural gas. It is well known that when gases are compressed they part with a portion of their heat, and, as they expand again take back the same amount from bodies in contact with them. Gases thus deprived of heat can be made to take it from uncongealable fluids, which in this way accumulate cold, that may be applied to the freezing of water. Application of this principle has been made of the cold produced by the sudden expansion of compressed air to the production of ice. Powerful and expensive machinery is required to compress air and cool it. Ammonia machines require a pressure of from 120 to 180 pounds per square inch. These gentlemen hold that all that is required for making ice with natural gas, except the refrigerator and cans, is provided for by expanding it from its initial pressure to the atmospheric pressure, nature having done all the work of compression and cooling and made it ready to absorb the heat made latent and freeze the water into ice.

An ordinary gas well, furnishing 1,500,000 feet per day, with a suitable refrigerating apparatus, is capable of making 51 tons of ice at an expense not to exceed 50 cents per ton; and then, by conducting it to furnaces or rolling mills, glass works, brick, lime or pottery kilns, it would produce the same amount of heat as if it was delivered directly from the well.—Philadelphia Record.

Odds and Ends.

The cat may not be expert at mathematics, but it can "foot up a column" easy enough.—Richmond Dispatch.

Tramp (to reporter)—If you will give me a quarter I promise to do something that will give you three columns to morrow.—Fliegende Blaetter.

"I have often heard that time was money," said the thoughtful man, "but I never realized the force of the proverb till I watched them putting up a Government building.—Washington Star.

When the traveler Burckhardt visited a camp of Wahabee dervishes to attend a lecture on "The Wickedness of Swearing," he was amazed to hear the orator open his harangue with a shower of blasphemies that seemed a perfect burlesque on the proposed text till the sequel of the harangue revealed the fact that the lecturer's definition of impious language was limited to the phrase, "Arrat, ya mularakim" ("Avaunt, ye blessed ones"), an imprecation by which Arabian apostates are supposed to forfeit the assistance of their guardian angels.

A Flooring of Plaster.

The French, who have carried the art of hardening plaster to where it is utilized for flooring, either in place of wood or tile, use six parts of good quality of plaster intimately mixed with one part of freshly slacked white lime finely sifted. This mixture is then laid down as quickly as possible, care being taken that the trowel is not used on it for too long a time. The floor, adds the National Builder, should then be allowed to become very dry, and afterward be thoroughly saturated with the sulphate of iron or zinc, the iron giving the strongest surface, the resistance to breaking being twenty times the strength of ordinary plaster. With sulphate of zinc the floor remains white, but when iron is used it becomes the color of rusted iron; but if linseed oil, boiled with litharge, be applied to the surface, it becomes of a beautiful mahogany color. Especially is this the case if a coat of copal varnish is added.

Brushes of Spun Glass.

An American glass manufacturer has now begun to make glass brushes such as are used by china decorators for burnishing the gilding on china after it comes from the kiln. These brushes now come from Bohemia. They are marvels of glass spinning. They are made of glass fibres so fine that they look like spun silk. These fibres are rolled up in bundles about six inches in length and in three sizes in diameter half inch, three-quarters and one inch. The bundles are wound with cord to within about three-quarters of an inch of each end, each end being used as a brush. The brushes are cut square across the ends, and so extremely fine are the glass fibres that in the face of the brush the compact centre presents a velvety appearance. The brushes are flexible and silky to the touch. They wear away in use, and as they wear the cord is cut away to leave the end of sufficient length.

After LaGrippe.

After La Grippe obstinate coughs, lung trouble, etc. frequently follow. There is no remedy so prompt, and at the same time effectual and pleasant, as Milburn's Cod Liver Oil Emulsion with Wild Cherry and Hypophosphites, which is the latest and best combination of anti-consumptive remedies. Price 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

ITCHING AND PIN WORMS. PILES

No More Misery. Gives Instant Relief.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and mortal burns, consecutive moisture is created. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

PIN WORMS is an ailment entirely different as to cause from Itching Piles, yet its effects and symptoms are exactly the same. The same intolerable itching; the same creeping, crawling, stinging sensation characterizes both diseases. Chase's Ointment acts like magic. It will at once afford relief from this torment.

Every Man Should Insure.

The following from a Toronto Daily, is worthy of very careful consideration:—

The force of the obligation resting upon every man to carry a substantial insurance policy on his life was never better illustrated than in the death of Sir John Thompson.

If ever a man lived who could claim freedom from this obligation it was the late Premier. Before the fatal illness seized him he had every reason to expect a long life; his earning capacity was large; and he was, at one time at all events, justified in expecting that he would fall heir to a considerable fortune. But the expectations of fortune were swept away, death came in mid-life and pratically the only support left for the bereaved family is a paltry insurance of $6,000.

The moral of it all is that every man, no matter how circumstanced, should insure, and insure to the largest extent that his income will justify.

The Late Premier, SIR JOHN S. D. THOMPSON, was insured in the SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY of CANADA.

TAPIOCA RECIPES.

Some Luscious Dishes That Are Cheap and Easily Prepared.

Tapioca is one of the products of the manioc or cassava plant, and is used largely in the preparation of desserts, and as a food for children and invalids. It is inexpensive, light, wholesome and nutritious, and a great variety of delicious dishes are prepared from it.

Cream—Soak in cold water for two hours two tablespoonfuls of tapioca. Drain it and beat it up with one scant teacup of sugar, and stir it into one quart of boiling milk. Let it boil half an hour; then cool it slightly, and stir in three well beaten eggs, any flavoring desired. Serve cold with preserved or stewed fruit.

Pudding—Soak one cupful of tapioca several hours in tepid water, add one quart of milk, four well beaten eggs, two thirds of a cup of sugar and a pinch of salt; three tablespoonfuls of grated cocoanut; add the tapioca to the milk, and put in a double boiler, or in a tin basin set in a pan of hot water, and stir until it thickens. Remove from the fire and adds the yolks of the eggs and the other ingredients; lastly the well beaten whites of the eggs. Let it cool, and when cold lay spoonfuls of jelly upon the top. Serve cold.

Pudding—Equal quantities of rice and tapioca, say three tablespoonfuls of each, soak for a short time in a cup of milk, four tablespoonfuls of sugar, grated nutmeg to taste, a pinch of salt, one quart of milk. Put all together and bake in a slow oven for two hours, stirring often during the first hour.

Apple Pudding—One cup tapioca soaked several hours in cold water, one cup of sugar, a pinch of salt, one-half nutmeg, grated. Slice apples into a baking dish until two-thirds full; add the other ingredients, with water enough to cover. Put a cover over it and bake slowly three or four hours. Serve either hot or cold, as desired.

Blackberry Tapioca—One cupful tapioca soaked 10 or 12 hours in cold water; add one pint of hot water, and simmer until clear; sweeten one quart of blackberries and stir into the tapioca. Pour into a deep dish and serve very cold, with sugar and cream.

Jelly—Three quarters of a cupful of tapioca, soak, then boil it in a double boiler, with one and a half pints of hot water and a pinch of salt. When it thickens, add two-thirds of a glass of apple, currant or lemon jelly and a little sugar. Cook about half an hour, or until the tapioca is clear. Put it in a mold, and when perfectly cold, turn it out. Serve with whipped cream or soft custard.

Custard—Soak three large spoonfuls of tapioca in one quart of water for several hours. Boil one quart of milk and stir in the soaked tapioca; boil about 10 minutes until it is clear. Beat yolks of three eggs, one cup of sugar, one teaspoonful of vanilla or other flavoring, and add gradually to the tapioca. Boil five minutes; pour into a dish and mix in lightly the whites of the eggs beaten to a stiff froth. Eat cold with sweetened cream.

Blanc Mange—One cup of tapioca, three cups of boiling milk, three tablespoonfuls of white sugar, a pinch of salt, any flavoring desired; soak the tapioca several hours in a little cold water; pour it into the boiling milk and let it boil for about twenty minutes, stirring it constantly, add sugar and flavoring. Take it from the fire and pour into molds. Serve cold.

Tapioca and Peach Pudding—One large cupful of tapioca; soak in three pints of cold water over night. In the morning put in the double boiler and cook until it looks clear; add one cup of sugar and one dozen peaches pared and cut in eighths; put in a buttered pudding dish and bake one hour. Serve cold with sugar and cream.

Fruit Dessert—Make a plain blanc mange or jelly by boiling soaked tapioca until clear in either milk or water; put a layer of mixed preserved and candied fruits in a glass dish, and when the tapioca has cooled sufficiently, pour a part of it over them; add more fruit and the remainder of the tapioca. Serve cold.

Soup—Two quarts of stock, one cup of tapioca; let it boil for twenty minutes, stirring it frequently; one teaspoonful of sugar, one tablespoonful of catsup, butter half the size of an egg, half a teacup of milk; cool slightly and stir in two well beaten eggs. It must not be hot enough to curdle the eggs, but should be smooth like cream.

To Tunnel Toronto Bay.

TORONTO, Dec. 29.—City Engineer Keating is preparing specifications and will advertise at once for tenders for contract for the borings and survey necessary for the tunnel under the bay. The work will go on immediately after the contract is let. The borings and survey are not needed for the purpose of determining the feasibility of the tunnel plan, but simply to determine the route. As to the practicability of the tunnel, Mr. Keating entertains no doubt whatever. The question which the present borings will decide is whether the tunnel shall go straight across to Brockhouse Bay or to Hanlan's Point. The Brockhouse Bay route would mean a saving in distance of four or five hundred feet. To Hanlan's Point would mean a long detour and a bend.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS
THREE RUNNING SORES
PHYSICIANS FAILED
BUT B.B.B. CURED

DEAR SIRS—After having used Burdock Blood Bitters for Scrofula in the blood, I feel it my duty to make known the results. I was treated by a skilled physician but he failed to cure me. Three Running Sores on my neck which could not be healed until I tried B. B. B., which healed them completely, leaving the skin and flesh sound and whole. As long as I live I shall speak of the virtues of B.B.B., and I feel grateful to Providence that such a medicine is provided for sufferers.

A SCALY ERUPTION
UNENDURABLE ITCHING
Suffered Three Years—Now Positively Cured by B. B. B.

GENTLEMEN—I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for Skin Diseases, from which I have been a sufferer for three years. I have used six bottles and am now entirely cured. I tried other remedies, such as Donald Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura Remedies, but all to no good. I doctored one year with the best physicians in the land; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but could not remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard dry scales. The itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured, and I owe it all to B. B. B.

PURIFIES THE BLOOD

"I TELL ALL MY FRIENDS."

A Lady of Shelburne, Ont., Permanently Cured of Indigestion After Using Two Bottles of South American Nervine —Glad to Let Everyone Know It.

MRS. A. V. GALBRAITH.

With indigestion it is not only that one suffers all imaginable torments, physical and mental, but more, perhaps, than anything else, an impaired digestion is the forerunner of countless ailments that in their course lead to the most serious consequences. Let the stomach get out of order and it may be said the whole system is diseased. When the digestive organs fail in their important functional duties, head and heart, mind and body are sick. These were the feelings of Mrs. Galbraith, wife of Mr. A. V. Galbraith, the well-known jeweller of Shelburne, Ont., before she had learned of the beneficent results to be gained by the use of South American Nervine Tonic. In so many words she said: "Life was becoming unbearable. I was so cranky I was really ashamed of myself. Nothing that I ate would agree with me; now it does not matter what I eat. I take enjoyment out of all my meals." Here are Mrs. Galbraith's words of testimony to South American Nervine, given over her own signature:

"Shelburne, Ont., March 27, 1894.
"I was for considerable time a sufferer from indigestion, experiencing all the misery and annoyance so common to this complaint. South American Nervine was recommended to me as a safe and effective remedy for all such cases. I used only two bottles, and am pleased to testify that these fully cured me, and I have had no indication of a return of the trouble since. I never fail to recommend the Nervine to all my friends troubled with indigestion or nervousness.
"MRS. A. V. GALBRAITH."

The testimony of this lady, given freely and voluntarily out of a full heart because of the benefits she experienced in her own person, have an echo in thousands of hearts all over the country. South American Nervine must cure, because it operates at once on the nerve centres. These nerve centres are the source from which emanates the life fluid that keeps all organs of the body in proper repair. Keep these nerve centres sound and disease is unknown. There is no trick in the business. Everything is very simple and common sense like. South American Nervine strengthens the digestive organs, tones up the liver, enriches the blood, is peculiarly efficacious in building up shattered and nervous constitutions. It never fails to give relief in one day.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE
Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease).
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want;
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then went home, but stop, I miss,"
They gave us every one, a kiss,
And said, "be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home,
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers' shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

THE MEN OF THE NORTHERN ZONE.

Oh, we are the men of the Northern Zone;
Shall a bit be placed in our mouth?
If ever a Northman lost his throne,
Did the conqueror come from the South?
Nay, nay—and the answer blent
In chorus is southward sent:
"Since when has a Southerner's conquering steel
Hewed out in the North a throne?
Since when has a Southerner placed his heel
On the men of the Northern Zone?"

Our hearts are as free as the rivers that flow
To the seas where the north star shines;
Our lives are as free as the breezes that blow
Thro' the crests of our native pines.
We never will bend the knee,
We'll always aye be free,
For liberty reigns in the land of the leal,
Our brothers are 'round her throne;
A Southerner never shall place his heel
On the men of the Northern Zone.

Oh, shall we shatter our ancient name,
And lower our patriot crest:
And leave a heritage dark with shame;
To the infant upon the breast?
Nay, nay—and the answer blent
With a chorus is Southward sent:
"Ye claim to be free—and so are we,
Let your fellow freemen alone;
For a Southerner never shall place his heel
On the men of the Northern Zone."

Shall the mothers that bore us bow the head
And blush for degenerate sons?
Are the patriot fires gone out and dead?
Ho, brothers stand to the guns!
Let the flag be nailed to the mast,
Defying the coming blast,
For Canada's sons are true as steel,
Their mettle is muscle and bone.
The Southerner never shall place his heel
On the men of the Northern Zone.

Oh, we are the men of the Northern Zone,
Where the maples their branches toss,
The great bear rides in his state alone,
Afar from the Southern cross.
Our people shall aye be free,
They never will bend the knee,
For this is the land of the true and leal,
Where freedom is bred in the bone—
The Southerner never shall place his heel
On the men of the Northern Zone.

Destruction to the Orange Crop.

JACKSONVILLE, Dec. 31.—Despatches to the Times Union indicate that the cold wave has been very destructive to the orange and vegetable crop. Oranges on the trees are frozen solid and it is said that there is now not a sound box of oranges in the state. Peas, tomatoes and other vegetables are ruined. Despatches from the east coast say that the pineapple crop is ruined. It is estimated that there were 2,500,000 boxes of oranges on the trees and that 2,000,000 are a total loss. Young orange groves are reported ruined. Old trees may pull through. The total loss will likely reach $2,000,000. The freeze is more disastrous than the memorable one of 1886. The average temperature early this morning over Florida was about 20 degrees.

A Preacher Threatened by Whitecaps.

MALDEN, Mass., Dec. 31.—Rev. L. W. Adams, pastor of the Mapleweed M. E. church, who, following the recent, as he claimed, unnecessary death of Miss Mabel Webb, denounced the so-called Christian scientists from the pulpit, has received several anonymous letters within a few days. The latest communication is as follows: "Malden, Dec. 26 Rev. L. W. Adams, Bigot. If you don't stop your slanderous talk you will be visited by the whitecaps." Mr. Adams says: "I think I am in the right and will not allow myself to be 'bluffed' to use the language of the day. I do not believe the whitecaps will visit me, but if they do they will find me ready for them."

A Salvationist Attempts Suicide.

BUFFALO, Dec. 31.—A woman who attempted to jump into the Hamburg canal was arrested and at the station gave her name as Ellen Muschew from Toronto and was second tambourine player in the Salvation Army. When placed in the cell she sang many army hymns and finally became quiet. The door man grew uneasy at the cessation of the noise and going to her cell found her trying to strangle herself. She was black in the face and would have been dead in a few minutes. After her rescue it was necessary to put her in a straight jacket and bind her arms. She will be examined as to her sanity.

City Buildings Destroyed.

BIDDEFORD, Maine, Dec. 31.—The city building was gutted by fire down to the first storey. The building contained two banks, the police station, four stores, a law office, court room, city council, municipal offices, city library, opera house and Masonic hall. The total loss is estimated at $100,000. Insured for $20,000. Many of the municipal court documents were lost. The postoffice was burned out and some mail was destroyed.

To Swell the Irish Fund.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Joseph P. Ryan, secretary of the Irish National Federation of America, reports that the federation has forwarded through Eugene Kelly & Co. $1,000 to the trustees of the Irish Parliamentary fund.

Canadians Win at Hockey.

MONTREAL, Dec. 29.—The international hockey match between the United States hockey team and the Victoria team of Montreal resulted in a victory for the Canadians. In the first half the Canadian game was played and the Canadians won by a score of 5 to 1. The second half was the American game and in this Canadians proved themselves the equal of the Americans the score standing at the close, one to one, the Canadians thus winning the match by a total score of 6 to 2.

How Reub Miles Was Murdered.

BRANTFORD, Dec. 31.—Particulars received here from Washington, regarding the death of Reuben Miles, who was shot on December 24, say the affair occurred at 5.15 p.m., and the shooting was done by one Tom Craven. According to a letter from an eye-witness, Craven and deceased had a fight and were separated, and upon latter resuming his meal, Craven grabbed a revolver and shot him in cold blood. The remains arrived here on Saturday and were taken to the residence of Mrs. Miles, Oak street, whence the funeral took place yesterday.

Fire at St. Mary's.

ST. MARYS, Ont., Dec. 31.—Last night fire was discovered in J. F. McGarvey's grocery store in Guest's old stone block. The building which belonged to the T. B. Guest estate was damaged to the extent of about $200. The grocery stock was completely deluged with water and is almost a total loss. Both losses are fully covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

CENTRAL SMITH DAIRY COMPANY

Annual Factory Meeting—Resume of the Season's Operations.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Central Smith Dairy Company was held in the Temple Hall, fourth line of Smith, on Wednesday, Dec. 19th, 1894, at 1 o'clock p.m. Nearly all of the stockholders were present and quite a number of patrons also. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mr. A. Young. On motion R. J. Edmison was chosen secretary for the meeting. The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted. The secretary-treasurer then gave the financial report of the season's business, which showed an increase all around over last season. Although there was incurred considerable extra expense in making improvements, etc., during the summer, the company were still able to declare an increased dividend. The report was moved and adopted. The election of officers for the coming season was then taken up and resulted in the following named gentlemen being elected: R. J. Edmison, C. D. Moore, T. D. Young, M. Blewett and A. Young for Directors; J. Darling and T. D. Young for Auditors. The President then announced that the question of paying according to butter fat for another year would now be considered. He called for the report of the tests made with the Babcock tester during the season. This was given by the cheesemaker, who had this work in charge. This showed that samples had been taken each morning that milk had been delivered. These samples were tested twice a month. The amount of milk sent by each patron during the season was figured according to these tests, so each patron was told what he would have received if they had been paid according to butter fat. S. H. Payne, cheese maker at the Warminster factory, was then called upon for an address upon the Babcock tester, paying according to butter fat, etc. Mr. Payne stated that they had used this test in his factory for the past four years, and had paid according to butter fat, the past two years, and that his patrons were all well pleased with this way of dividing the profits. He showed in many ways how paying by butter-fat was superior to the old way of pooling. His remarks were practical and to the point, and were very helpful and much appreciated by all present. A vote was then taken to see who were in favour of paying by butter-fat the coming season, and it was carried unanimously in favour of paying by butter fat. A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Payne for his able address. The meeting then adjourned.

All things considered, the season has been a profitable and satisfactory one, for the company and for the patrons as well, all of which speaks well for the manager. The company has re-engaged the services of Mr. Kevill as cheesemaker for the coming season, and they hope that by fair dealing and strict attention to business, to still further increase the output. Following is a report of the season's business:

Factory opened May 1st, closed Nov. 3rd, 1894
Number patrons sending milk, 42.
Total lbs. milk delivered, 873,178.
Total lbs. cheese manufactured, 79,734.
Average lbs. milk per lb. cheese, 10.95.
Average price per lb. cheese, 09.08.
Total amount money received for cheese, $7,723.21
Number of standards of milk manufactured for the season, 291.
Total value per standard, $26.53.
As compared with last season, there is an increase of lbs. of milk of 74,306.
An increase of cash of $707.31.

MEDICAL MEN.

Are Interested in the Discovery of a Remedy for Bright's Disease.

MONTREAL, Dec. 24.—The subject of kidney disorders and diseases is one receiving special attention from the medical profession just now, probably owing to the fact that a disease of these organs caused the death of Russia's Czar. Among other points attractive to the profession is the case of Dr. McCormick, of Richmond, Que., a practitioner well known throughout Quebec and Ontario. He has lately published a letter announcing that he was cured of Bright's Disease by Dodd's Kidney Pills. This case has a peculiar interest for medical men because until these pills were offered for sale, this disease was universally considered incurable. That belief is now thoroughly exploded by the success of this remedy, to which numerous victims of the disease owe their lives and sound health.

PRISON REFORM IN CANADA.

The Work of the Prisoners' Aid Association.

The Prisoners' Aid Association of Canada has been engaged in its noble work of prison reform and rescue work for the last 20 years, although the prison reform movement proper dates back to only about four years ago. The objects of this Association, as stated in their constitution, are: "The reformation of offenders, their welfare when discharged, the prevention of crime and prison reform." Among the most zealous members of this Association was the late ex-Mayor W. H. Howland. The Hon. S. H. Blake, Q. C., has been the President for a number of years, while Hamilton Cassels, Esq., Barrister, has been connected with the Central Prison Sunday School also for several years. Dr. A. M. Rosebrugh, the well-known specialist, has during the last ten or twelve years, been actively connected with the Association, firstly as Treasurer, but laterally as Corresponding Secretary and Honorary Secretary. Among the Vice-Presidents may be mentioned the following well known gentlemen, viz.: J. G. Hodgins, LL.D.; E. A. Meredith, LL.D., for ten years one of the Board of Inspectors of Asylums and Prisons in Canada, and for several years Chairman of the Board and John Hoskin, Q.C.

Among the means employed for carrying out the objects of the Association may be mentioned the following, viz.:

1. A Sunday School mission in the Central Prison.
2. A Sunday School mission in the Reformatory for Women.
3. A Sunday School mission in the County Jail.
4. A Night School for secular education in the Central Prison.
5. The employment of an agent and a Bible woman for the welfare of discharged prisoners.
6. The distribution of prison reform literature, and the use of other means for awakening a more general interest in the cause of prison reform.
7. The maintenance of a central office in the City, at 150 Simcoe Street, as a place of call and temporary shelter for prisoners after their discharge.
8. Assisting with tools, and making temporary loans to discharged prisoners.
9. A preaching service weekly, in the Central Prison and Female Reformatory, by members of the Toronto Ministerial Association.

It was through the influence of this Association that the Ontario Prison Reform Commission was appointed in 1891, and it was through these combined agencies that the "Act for the Better Protection of Children" was passed, as also the establishment of the proposed reformatory for young men by the Dominion Government.

The Association also aims at the general adoption of the County House of Refuge or Poor-House system, as also the introduction of a more efficient system of separation of the prisoners in the county jails.

"Dark Rooms in English Hotels.

Ordinary readers must occasionally be puzzled by the now frequent addition of the words "Dark Room" to the advertisements of hotels and boarding-houses. So numerous are the photographers, amateur and otherwise, who now travel about the country provided with kodak and camera that the provision of a dark room for the purpose of their pastime, or profession, as the case may be, has become a feature with many hotels. It is sometimes only a shed or outhouse, rendered absolutely light-proof, and provided with a red light for the use of the photographer, and a little water with a cistern for containing it. Some hotelkeepers have at hand for these customers some of the stock chemicals they require, the general use of the dry plate rendering such dangerous poisons as are scheduled under the sale of drugs act unnecessary for the production of the photographs.—London Daily News.

New Profession for Women.

THE BLENHEIM ARRIVES

Sir John Thompson's Body Brought Home to Canada.

THOUSANDS MEET THE REMAINS

The Warship Arrives at Port In a Drenching Rainstorm—The Body Conveyed to the Legislative Council Chamber—It Will Not Be Exposed

HALIFAX, N. S., Jan. 2.—H. M. S. Blenheim with the Premier's body arrived at the mouth of the harbor yesterday in a rain storm and ran almost opposite York redoubt before the first minute gun announced her approach to the thousands who had lined the waterfront where they had been standing under a steady torrent of rain from early morning. As she steamed up the harbor Fort York, Macnab and George's in turn saluted her with minute guns. The first gun was fired at eight minutes after eleven and five minutes later ten thousand people filled every available spot of standing room on the wharves and roofs of the shores along the harbor front where they patiently watched her approach. She came to anchor off the gun wharf at fourteen minutes to twelve. On her foremast at half mastshe flew the Canadian Jack, and the white ensign was hauled half way down the main peak. The Dominion customs steamer Argus with Louis Coste of the Public Works Department, Superintendent of the funeral. Sir John Thompson's two sons and representatives of the Dominion Government and the Imperial Government, steamer Lily, with Colonel North, chief staff officer of the garrison, who takes charge of the military funeral and Rev. Dr. Murphy, secretary to Archbishop O'Brien, and Father Moriarity of St. Marys Cathredal, ran up alongside the Blenheim and transferred their passengers.

After dinner the crowds congregated in the vicinity of the gun wharf and waited for the coffin. The ministers of the crown, Sir Frank Smith, Sir C. H. Tupper and Hon. Messrs. Curran, Daly and Angers and the two sons of the deceased Premier remained on board the Blenheim. At 3 o'clock part of the afterdeck of the warship was removed and the coffin gently hoisted on the deck, passed over the side and lowered on board the steamer Lily. The coffin was covered with a Canadian flag draped with crape and bore the wreath of laurels placed on the coffin by the Queen and Sir Mackenzie Bowell's wreath. On board the warship and on the steamer the coffin was handled by squads of bluejackets and on the Lily the coffin was placed under a tarpaulin in the bow. While the coffin was being lowered on the Lily the band of the warship played the "Dead March in Saul" and the ship's guns belched forth fifteen mournful salutes.

The coffin was taken from the Lily by eight sergeants of the Royal Engineers and placed upon a gun carriage with postillions of four black charges. Two hundred men from the King's Regiment formed a guard of honor to the right and left of the corpse and the funeral precession, headed by the band of the King's Regiment and followed by all the military and militia dignitaries, Chief Paul and a delegation of braves of the Micmac tribe of Indians, proceeded along Water street through Granville street to the Parliament buildings where the body is now lying in state in the Legislative Council chamber.

All along the line of procession despite the tremendous rain storm the streets were lined ten and twelve feet deep with a rubber-coated crowd of anxious sightseers. Lady Thompson and daughters who are the guests of her uncle, John Pugh, Esq., Pleasant street, saw the Blenheim coming up the harbor from the window of Lady Thompson's apartments. It was decided not to open the casket for public view, discoloration having taken place. The doctors are of the opinion that Sir John Thompson's death was directly due to the bursting of a blood-vessel in the brain which, if so, would cause the discoloration as at present.

After the body of the late Premier had been placed in the Legislative Council Chamber the lid of the outer casket was removed in the presence of the relations for the purpose of identification. The lid was then replaced and fastened and the casket will remain closed. Senator Sanford soon after returned to the Blenheim, where he will remain the guest of Captain Poe.

Every train to the city brings a quota for the funeral and already the leading hotels are all filled. By to-morrow the number of visitors will be enormous. Provision is being made to accommodate the Ministers at private houses.

The Journey Out.

Senator Sanford, who is the guest of Captain Poe on board the Blenheim spoke with genuine feeling in an interview of the hundreds of kindly acts of sympathy and respect towards this country which he had witnessed after Sir John's death in England. He said the effect on both sides of the ocean cannot yet be measured, but appreciation not only in the mother country and in Canada, but throughout the Empire will not be wanting.

Asked to give an account of the voyage out, Mr. Sanford said: "After the body was brought on board the Blenheim, guards were stationed at the entrance to the mortuary chamber as you have seen it today. There is a magnificent band on board, but its music was not heard during the voyage and indeed the utmost quiet, consistent with the duties on board a warship, was maintained. I particularly wish to express my appreciation of the true attention to and consideration for the occasion which his ship was called that has been shown by Captain Poe. I am equally anxious that you should say the same for the officers. This is something the people of Canada will like to hear, for not only is the Commander (Capt. Kingsmill) a Torontonian, but Capt. Poe has the pleasantest recollection of his former service at the Halifax station on H. M. S Northampton. Other officers of the ship know Canada and they will tell you that they love it as they do their own country."

The weather was so severe that we did not leave Portsmouth on Saturday as had been proposed, but early on Sunday morning the start was made. The next day we experienced some heavy weather, but on the whole the voyage was satisfactory. On Sunday last again we had a gale and since we have had some fog. The Blenheim, which is a magnificent ship, could have reached Halifax, of course, much earlier without difficulty. The fact is, she slowed down to meet the views of the Dominion Government, as cabled to the Admiralty, asking that the ship might arrive at noon to-day. She did arrive to the second and did not anchor a minute before noon.

There were two days on board that I will long remember. One was Christmas Day, and you will wonder how it was spent on our ship. There was service at morning and mid-day by the chaplain, but the men had no music. Captain Poe went around to every mess and ate something at each table. Good will among men prevailed in reality on board the Blenheim, and it was to me also the most fitting way in which the day could have been passed upon such an occasion. The day impressed me not only with discipline which prevails on board a British warship, but it showed me how well the men acted through respect to the dead on board, showing at the same time their unbounded respect and confidence in their captain.

AFFAIRS IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

Resolutions Passed at a Public Meeting—Confidence Being Restored.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Jan. 2.—A public meeting attended by about 5,000 persons adopted resolutions protesting against the measure which was recently passed by the Council guaranteeing the Union Bank notes at eighty cents on the dollar and the notes of the Commercial Bank at twenty cents. The resolutions also demanded that the notes of both banks be redeemed at their face value and that a royal commission be appointed by the British Government to investigate the condition of the colony's affairs. In the Legislature on Monday night the final stage of the bill guaranteeing the notes of the suspended banks was passed, the President of the Council casting the deciding vote. The Assembly passed through all its stages the bill to remove the disabilities placed upon the seventeen Whitewayites who were convicted of bribery in the recent election.

MONTREAL, Jan. 2.—The Bank of Montreal has decided to establish a branch office in St. Johns. The announcement of this fact will infuse confidence into the commercial community of the island, and the report of the determination of the bank authorities has already exerted an influence for good. It is not necessary to say that in taking this step the Bank of Montreal has no intention of obtruding upon the disordered state of the finances of the colony, or arranging for the taking over of the liabilities of the suspended Union and Commercial Banks, or of mixing up with the party warfare which has been so rampant there. The agency is to be established as a simple matter of business, just as one might be located in any party of Canada, and its business will be conducted upon exactly the same principles as govern the operations of its Canadian offices.

This will bring into still closer and more satisfactory relations the commercial intercourse between the Island and Canada, the United States and Great Britain and must assist appreciably in the promotion and enlargement of the trade of the colony. A staff of Montreal Bank officials has gone to St. Johns to establish a branch of that commercial institution there.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The Daily News says to-day: "The distress in Newfundland represents the unusual results of reckless trading against the effects of which no banking system in the world can provide. It is evident that Newfoundland must abandon her isolated political position."

Death of a Respected Brockvillian.

BROCKVILLE, Jan. 2.—One of Brockville's oldest and most respected residents in the person of A. H. Brown died suddenly at one o'clock Monday night. He was on his way to midnight service in the Methodist church and fell on the street and died soon after being carried to his home. Heart disease was the cause of death. The deceased was 69 years of age and for many years has been a prominent tea merchant. He was a life-long Liberal and always took a deep interest in the welfare of the community. A wife and large family survive him.

Hamilton Assesses Her Gas Mains.

HAMILTON, Jan. 2.—For the first time in the history of the city the Hamilton Gas Company was assessed for the mains running throughout the city for a total of $126,000. On appeal to the court of revision the assessment was reduced to $74,000. The gas company then appealed to the county judge on the ground that the mains were not assessable. Judge Muir gave a lengthy written judgment confirming the assessment and dismissing the appeal of the company.

Annual Poultry Exhibit.

NEW HAMBURG, Ont., Jan. 2.—The Ontario Poultry Association's annual exhibit commenced here yesterday. It is the finest display they ever had. The judging began at one o'clock. The show will continue until Friday noon. To-morrow the annual meeting will be held for the election of officers and reading of essays and other work. Addresses will be delivered by Hon. John Dryden and other prominent gentlemen.

Private Letters Continue to Corroborate the Armenian Butcheries.

THANKS FOR MR. GLADSTONE

Boston Armenians Cable the Grand Old Man Their Appreciation of His Sympathy—Numerous Arrests Being Made Daily of the Unfortunate People.

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—Letters have been received in this city from reliable sources in Turkey giving further testimony regarding the outrages in Armenia. A letter just received is in part as follows: "The Armenians, oppressed by Kurds and Turks, said they could not pay taxes to both Kurds and government. Plundered and oppressed by the Kurds, they resisted them. There were some killed. Then false reports were sent to Constantinople that the Armenians were in rebellion. Orders were sent to exterminate them root and branch. The order read before the army collected in haste from all the chief cities of Eastern Turkey was: 'Whoever spares man, woman or child is disloyal.'

"No quarter was given nor mercy shown. Men, women and children were shot down or butchered. The most probable estimate is 15,000 killed, 35 villages plundered, razed and burned. Women were outraged and then butchered.

"A priest was taken to the roof of his church, hacked to pieces and set on fire. A large number of women and girls collected in a church were kept for days, violated by the soldiers and then murdered. It is said the number was so large that the blood flowed out the church door. Every effort is being made to falsify the facts, and pull the wool over the eyes of European governments. But the bloody tale will finally be known, the most horrible it seems to me that the nineteenth century has ever known.

"As a confirmation of the report, the other day several hundred soldiers were returning from the seat of war, and at a village near us one was heard to say that he alone, with his own hand, had killed thirty pregnant women."

The Armenians of Boston sent the following cablegram yesterday to Mr. Gladstone: "Armenians of Boston thank you for your sympathy and aid."

ODESSA, Jan. 2.—Journals in the Caucasus say that domiciliary visits and searches are still more daily in Armenia and that numerous arrests are made. The local prisons are crowded. The Bitlis prison is filled with Armenians—among them a priest more than 70 years old who was arrested for refusing to betray his son's hiding place. The Armenian Catholics have appealed to the Pope.

VIENNA, Jan. 2.—Despatches from Constantinople tell of numerous arrests throughout Armenia. The whole province is disturbed. Many troops have left Constantinople for various parts of Asia Minor in the last few days. The pretext was that their time had expired and they were going home but there is good reason to believe that they were destined for the military centre, notably Erzinghian. The recall of Abdullah Pasha, the most fearless member of the Commission of Inquiry, has been cancelled owing to the Porte's anxiety to dispel the unfavorable reports to which it gave rise.

A Sewer Gas Explosion.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—A building was wrecked and seven people were badly injured here last evening by an explosion of sewer gas. The cover was blown off a manhole at Harrison street and Fifth avenue, and the concussion which followed could be heard several blocks away. The Lincoln hotel, a five-storey tenement house, was the nearest building to the explosion. Its front walls were badly cracked, windows and floors were twisted out of place, and the structure looks as if it had passed through a severe earthquake.

Three Lives Lost in a Hotel Fire.

LANCASTER, Ky., Jan. 2.—Yesterday the Muller hotel was burned and E. A. Pascoe, his mother-in-law, Mrs. Lesters, and his little child, aged about three years, lost their lives. The other guests escaped. Mr. Pascoe assisted his wife to a window and she went down a ladder. He went back into the building after his child and mother-in-law, but succumbed to the smoke and flames and all three were burned. He was about 25 years of age and a restaurant keeper. The loss on the building is about $15,000.

Fatal Explosion in a Sewer.

NEWTON, Mass., Jan. 2.—In Newtonville, while sewer laborers were working in a trench, a terrific explosion occurred. Timothy Malloy and James Ford were thrown nearly twenty feet. Malloy was badly mutilated and died soon after. Ford was cut about the head and face, but will recover. The explosion is supposed to have been caused by Malloy's pick coming in contact with a dynamite cartridge left in the ground when the street was being constructed.

President McBride Assumes Office.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—The first meeting of the new executive council of the American Federation of Labor was held here yesterday. Ex-President Gompers turned over the records to President McBride. Only routine business was transacted. The headquarters of the Federation will be removed to Indianapolis in a few days.

Carnegie's Slavs on Strike.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 2.—Seven hundred Slav laborers struck at the Edgar Thompson steel works of the Carnegie Steel company at Braddock last night on account of a reduction in wages. The nine furnaces were banked and if the places of the strikers cannot be filled to-day 3,000 men will be thrown out of employment.

Electricity for a Railroad.

NEW YORK, Jan. 2.—A Baltimore special to the Tribune says: The first railroad in the country to substitute electricity for steam will be the Baltimore and Ohio, the old Maryland Central, which is now being extended to York, Pa. The power will be generated at Conowingo Falls, Susquehanna river.

THE COUNCIL CONTEST.

If the number of candidates is any indication of interest in municipal affairs, Peterborough is well favoured with aspirants, anxious to guard the civic interests. On Monday about thirty-five candidates were placed in nomination, and retirements reduced the number actually in the field to thirty. Of these nine were members of the council of 1894—Messrs. Hall and Kelly having retired in No. 2 Ward, and Mr. McIlwaine in No. 4 Ward. The people have certainly abundant material to select from; and in view of the diversity of qualification, it would be difficult to suggest selections to the electors, who must be left to their individual choice. From the thirty candidates the ratepayers should be able to select a council that would manage our affairs prudently and economically, as something that all will acknowledge is very urgently required. It should be fully recognized by the electors that the selection of councillors is a matter that needs careful consideration. No candidate should receive support on any other account than his fitness for the office he seeks—no personal or other consideration, outside of that mentioned, should influence a citizen in casting a ballot. While fitness alone should be the condition of receiving civic suffrages, there seems to be need for the electors to administer a severe letting alone to candidates who have not the first elements of qualification for the office they aim to fill, and teach ill-advised aspirants that the administration of the business of a town like Peterborough needs men of affairs, men of business training and business qualification, combined with personal qualities that can command public respect. Men that are selected as representatives of Peterborough should be representative men.

THE SCHOOL TRUSTEE ELECTIONS.

As will be seen by the report of the first stage of the elections on Monday, all the members of the School Board, whose term of office had expired by the effluxion of time—Messrs. (Dr.) Burnham, Edgcombe, Wrighton and McBain—were elected by acclamation. This should be satisfactory evidence that the people are well satisfied with the actions of these gentlemen—personally as well as with the course of the board generally, and that both are up to the public ideal of what representatives on the School Board should be. Though there may have been, as there always will be, in a community of free people, differences of opinion in regard to the advisability of some of their courses taken, yet on the whole the course of the board seems to have met public approval as being in the interests of education. Since the legislation, making councillors, as such, ineligible at the same time for appointment to the School Board, there has been an improvement in the character of the membership of the School Board. We believe there is evidence that the members of the School Board act with a fairness and ability that guarantee the protection of every interest concerned—neither religion nor politics being allowed to interfere with a proper and legitimate administration of our educational affairs—in the selection of teachers in late years, the personal claims of candidates for teachers or their friends have been ignored, and fitness for the duties of teacher regarded as the only condition of engagement. And in every other respect, such as economy of expenditure, so far as public requirements permit, and earnest attention of all committees to the special trust committed to them, the Board has, it seems, faithfully done its duty.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

The importance of these admirable organizations is our excuse for adding anything commendatory to the appeal of the energetic young president, published on Monday. In addition to the obvious advantages to be derived from farmers meeting together, comparing notes, and exchanging experiences, which is the most practically valuable information, it may be again pointed out that the amount of free literature, which is sent by the Ontario Government alone, is of the actual commercial value of $12 per year. All this comes in return for a membership fee of only 25 cents. If a farmer could strike a new variety of grain that would afford such a percentage of yield as an Institute member derives from a 25 cent payment, he would need to only till about a tenth part of his farm to equal his normal crop. The following is a list of the publications sent free by the Ontario Government to every member of a farmer's Institute: Report of the Agricultural College and Experimental Farm; report of the Ontario Agricultural and Experimental Union; report of the Dairymen's Association of Eastern Ontario; report of the Dairymen's Association of Western Ontario; report of the Ontario Creameries' Association; report of the Farmers' Institutes; report of the Dominion Sheep and Swine Breeders' Association; bulletins of the Agricultural College and Experimental Farm, and other reports and bulletins.

The meetings of the West Riding Institute will be held at Peterborough at 1 p.m. on Jan. 16th, and at Lakefield at 10 a.m. on Jan. 17th. The date of the East Riding meetings are Keene, at 10.30 a.m. on Jan. 18th, and Norwood at 10 a.m. on Jan. 19th.

The Liberals of Belleville are going to give Mr. Bowell a banquet, as a mark of popular esteem, and to honour his elevation to the Premiership of the Dominion. It will be irrespective of all party and politics. The "Ontario," the Liberal paper of the city, says: "The movement emanating from the Board of Trade and now well under way to tender the Hon. Mr. Bowell a complimentary banquet as an acknowledgment of the gratification felt by his native city upon his elevation to the highest position of honour and responsibility open to a citizen of the Dominion, as such, is one that should receive the approval and support of every citizen * * * Our opinion of Mr. Bowell as the first minister of the state has already been stated, but that in no way controverts the fact that he is Premier of the Dominion, and as such an honour to his native city." Such olive branches waved over the bitter field of party conflict should have an important effect in giving better government to the country.

CAUGHNAWAGA.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

A little more snow would make fine sleighing and consequently make times more brisk.

Mr. John Fitzpatrick, of Mount Pleasant, Michigan, who was visiting at his parental home, left on Thursday to resume his business in that town.

Mr. and Mrs. Oakes, Gravenhurst, are visiting friends and relatives in this locality.

Miss Lizzie McCarthy, Chicago, Ill., has returned home to spend her Christmas holidays.

Mr. Jas. Lonergan, teacher of S.S. No 6, was presented by his pupils with a book of Byron's poems, accompanied by an address.

A number of our young men and maidens attended the ball in Norwood on Friday night. All were highly pleased and pronounced it a decided success.

While Messrs. Jos. Harrison and Jos. Kitchen were out hunting one day recently, they were fortunate enough to secure four mink and one fox. The fur of the minks was of an excellent quality.

Knocked Senseless With an Iron Bar.

BELDING, Mich., Jan. 2.—John Taylor had a narrow escape from death Friday night when robbers knocked him senseless with a big bar of iron and then went through his clothes. They secured a loaded revolver, but lost $1,200 he had deposited in a Greenville bank a few hours before. He lives between this city and Greenville and as Treasurer of Eureka township had collected $1,200 in taxes on Friday. He went into Greenville and deposited the money late in the afternoon, returning home after dark. He was coming out of the barn when knocked down. He remained unconscious for nearly an hour. He will recover.

Albany's Dreadful Holocaust.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 2.—The list of fatalities in the Delevan house fire remains the same. Kate Crowley, one of the servants thought to have been burned, turned up, but another, Mary Fitzgibbons is missing and it is believed that she met death in the fire. This makes the death list foot up to 17. No attempt has as yet been made to search the ruins, the police disclaiming it to be their duty. The proprietors of the burned hotel have lost all and are taking no steps to look for the bodies. Yesterday the ruins blazed up again and it took some time before the fire could be subdued.

Desperate Characters Escape From Jail.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Jan. 2.—Five desperate criminals escaped from the old Buchanan county jail. They are Patrick Crowe, who shot three people in Chicago in one night and was in jail here for train robbery; Joe Dusty, under sentence of death for rape; James Owens, murderer, sentenced to be hanged in Atchison county; Harry Curtis, forger; and William Fullmer, housebreaker. So far the authorities have no trace of the fugitives. Thomas Hickman, the turnkey, is now in a cell, charged with aiding them to escape.

Adrift on an Ice Floe.

MENOMINEE, Mich., Jan. 2.—Three brothers, Frank, John and Martin Wesniak were out in a small boat fishing when the ice began to run. The men became frightened and abandoned their boat, trying to reach shore on the ice. A floe on which they were walking became detached and was carried out into the lake. Several tugs got up steam and started in pursuit. They were unable to reach the men and had to return. It is feared they have perished. All of them have large families.

Cost of Ensilage.

Mr. D. M. MacPherson, of this province (Ontario), has a farm of 120 acres and supports on that farm seventy head of cows and four horses. Last year he put up 700 tons of ensilage and gives us the following interesting figures of the cost of the same: Plowing, cultivation, seed, etc., $180, or $4.50 per acre; cost of harvesting, $262.90; total cost, $442. Forty acres were employed, making the total cost per acre $11.07, and per ton, 63 cents. The rent of the land, or what is the same, the interest on the value is not reckoned.

These are interesting figures, coming as they do from a man who has made the economic use of ensilage in the production of milk and beef a very exhaustive study. Mr. MacPherson states that the cost of cutting the corn in the field was double what it usually is, because of a severe storm which passed over the field a few days before cutting. The ensilage fed 140 head of cows and fattening cattle 210 days, at the rate of about fifty pounds per day. This year Mr. MacPherson thinks the crop of ensilage from the same acreage will amount to 800 tons. He is pasturing seventy cows on thirty-five acres divided into three fields, pasturing each a week at a time.

A MEDICINE

WITHOUT AN EQUAL.

Statement of a Well Known Doctor

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is without an equal as a blood-purifier and Spring medicine, and cannot have praise enough. I have watched its effects in chronic cases, where other treatment was of no avail, and have been astonished at the results. No other blood medicine that I have ever used, and I have tried them all, is so thorough in its action, and effects so many permanent cures as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—Dr. H. F. MERRILL, Augusta, Me.

Sardou has just read his new play before Sara Bernhardt and the Renaissance company. It is called: "Gismonde, Duchess de Athenes." The scene is laid in Greece in the fifteenth century, and is founded on a historical incident. The scenery will be faithfully reproduced from a Vienna manuscript.

THE HOUSEHOLD

HOUSEHOLD SURGERY.

Some Little Matters That All Mothers and Housekeepers Should Know.

There are many little matters pertaining to the injuries and accidents which are constantly occurring in every household which need to be reiterated continually until every intelligent person has learned them by heart.

The first is, that the whole aim of a modern physician in treating wounds of any kind is to give the parts rest from any form of motion, to keep the wound and all dressings absolutely clean in a surgical as well as a physical sense.

To this end the physician applies only water which has been boiled recently; he applies bandages and dressings which have been especially prepared, "against germs," and if he has to use instruments of any kind, he carefully cleanses them by prolonged heating or other means. He also most particularly cleanses his own hands by the use of powerful antiseptics.

The doctor's work done, he may or may not leave any definite instructions as to what the mother or wife should do to carry out this line of treatment so carefully begun. Because he knows so well what to do, he often seems to think that the friends should know also, and forgets to make provision for the future treatment.

Usually the case goes on all right until the first dressing is changed. This the mother will do, because the bandage is getting dirty, or because of a great desire to see "how it is getting along."

Either excuse is utterly absurd, and the latter especially has often proved fatal to the patient. So long as there is no severe pain in the part, and no fever, always let the dressing alone for, at least, one week, and usually for two weeks.

To change the dressing on a serious wound is a serious business; on a trivial wound it may be only very annoying in its results. Why?

Because, unless you take the same precautions as did the doctor in the first place, you will inevitably contaminate the wound with some form of impurity, healing will stop, and matter will form.

The severest and most extensive surgical wounds should ordinarily heal under the first dressing. How much more, then, a trivial cut or sore, providing that the first dressing is of the proper nature.

If it becomes necessary, on account of pain, fever or discharge, to change a dressing on a severe wound, first prepare your dressing or bandage by boiling it for half an hour in carbolized water, a teaspoonful of carbolic acid to a pint of water, to make the destruction of any germs certain.

Then, if possible, immerse the wound in the same solution, as hot as is comfortable, until the old dressings have been thoroughly softened, so that their removal is not difficult. With a portion of the prepared dressing, cleanse the wound of any discharge, if necessary, and then bind it up with the prepared dressing without touching it with anything else if possible. In this way contamination may usually be avoided.

The practice of doing up trivial cuts in their own blood, without washing, is usually a good plan where the cut has been made with a clean instrument. This is because the blood, fresh, is of itself a powerful antiseptic, and after coagulation it holds the parts firmly together, thereby, placing them in a condition of rest.

Court plaster is very seldom a proper dressing for any but the merest scratches because it retains and contaminates the secretions from the wound.

Where it is necessary to use it to bring the edges of the wound together, let it be done by using long, narrow strips across the wound, leaving plenty of chance for any secretion to drain away and be absorbed by the prepared dressing before mentioned.

What shall be done with sores that are matterating? These should have their dressing changed just as often as is necessary to keep the discharge absorbed by the dressings.

Here we would remark that cheesecloth, prepared as stated for dressings, is really the best dressing for household use, because it can be so readily sterilized, and is such a good absorbent and it does not mat together in a hard bunch like even the best of prepared cotton. It should always be applied in from six to twenty-four thicknesses, directly upon the wound, and usually covered by a sheet of oiled muslin, that it may more readily absorb the discharges.—The Household.

Easily Transformed.

The black satin waist is a convenience not to be despised. A young person forced into economy should invest in one.

Have it made perfectly plain, with high collar and full sleeves. Wear it unadorned in company, with a black silk or cloth skirt during the day time. A black satin four-in-hand will complete its stylish effect. For an evening at home it may be transformed into a gay little bodice. A stock of soft crepe in any of the new colors will finish the neck prettily. It may be worn over the black satin collar and should match the color of the outing bonnet. The stocks come in any number of pretty designs this season, and are made of velvet, satin or crepe de chine.

When one wishes the addition of something more elaborate than a velvet collar there is the fall of creamy lace or the bertha of black net spangled with jet. In fact the black satin waist may easily appear in a dozen different guises if its owner is an ingenious woman.

Look out for it.

A Disgraceful Scene.

At the nominations in number one ward on Monday a disgraceful scene was witnessed by the ratepayers present, between an ex-councillor and a nominee, which would have resulted in bloodshed but for the timely interference of a bystander, who poured oil on the troubled waters by inviting those present to the Grand Carnival of the Sons of Canada, on Friday, January 11th, which proposition was greeted with loud applause by the ratepayers present.

The Late Mrs. Hutchinson

Catharine S. S. Hutchinson, wife of Mr. Mr. William Hutchinson, died at the family residence, No. 20 Bolivar street, at 3 p. m., New Year's day, at the age of 57 years. The deceased has been a resident of Peterborough for the past five years, moving here from Ida, township of Cavan, in 1889. Mrs. Hutchinson was for many years connected with the Church of England, and was attended in her last illness by the Rev. J. C. Davidson, St. John's church. General sympathy is extended to the bereaved family in this time of their great sorrow. The funeral takes place on Thursday at 1 p.m. to the Ida cemetery.—COM.

The minimum size must not be less than three and a quarter inches by two and one quarter inches. The cards must not be folded. On the address side upon which the postage stamp used in prepayment must be fixed, nothing may be written, printed or otherwise impressed except the name and address of the person to whom the card is delivered, and the name and address of the sender of the card and the words "private postal."

Some Wrong, Some Right.

The prosecutions before the police magistrate on the 13th of December by the Inspector of Weights or Measures for this district, it will be remembered resulted on his withdrawing the cases on the defendants paying the costs, and promising to have the scales in Peterborough on Saturday last. The district inspector says he is very loath to prosecute, but that he sometimes finds one prosecution to be worth a score of notices and fifty threats. So it proved on Saturday, for with one exception, all who had been notified to produce their scales were on hand. In the majority of cases the scales were correct, four, however, were faulty, and two were confiscated as being worthless. We imagine that after this these officers will not have so much difficulty in carrying out the law, as the public have learned they mean business. We hope the new town council will look into this matter of weighing on the public market.

MOUNT ST. JOSEPH.

The Mother House and Novitiate of the Community of St. Joseph.

An important diocesan event took place this morning at Mount St. Joseph, the new mother house and novitiate of the community of St. Joseph, formerly known as "Inglewood," the late residence of W. E. Sherwood. This fine and beautifully situated building has been thoroughly renovated and prepared for its new purpose. The former drawing room suite has been converted into a beautiful chapel, with a handsome altar and fitting ornaments, the gift of the Bishop and clergy.

This morning at 8 o'clock His Lordship Bishop O'Connor, assisted by Ven. Archdeacon Casey, Father Scollard and Mr. Frank O'Sullivan, a student, performed the blessing of the house, the chapel and ornaments.

The whole place is admirably adapted as a Mother House and Novitiate of the community of St. Joseph, for the Diocese of Peterborough, both in the matter of beauty and salubrity of situation, and in the matter of finely appointed and substantial buildings.

SAD PARTICULARS CONCERNING GRACIE DIXON'S DEATH.

How the Little Girl is Supposed to Have Been Cremated in the Flames.

Mr. A. E. Dixon, to-day, received a letter from Mr. John Dixon, of Maple Creek, containing the sad particulars concerning the death of little Grace Dixon, daughter of his brother Isaac, at Maple Creek, last week.

Mr. John Dixon was on his way to Peterborough with his son Howard to spend the holiday season, but on his arrival at Swift Current a telegram was handed him apprising him of the frightful disaster that had befallen the homestead in his absence.

Mr. Dixon writes that the devouring element and not a thing was saved from the fire. Little Grace was missed, and nothing but her blackened remains were recovered from the ruins. The arms and feet were entirely consumed and the face was so disfigured as to completely efface the lineaments.

SWEPT EVERYTHING AWAY,

The little girl was a great favourite and her loss is felt not only by the family but by the whole neighbourhood.

Mrs. Dixon was making up the beds on the morning of the fire, and hearing a crackling noise in the next room entered to ascertain what was the matter. She was astonished to find the room in flames and hastened out to give the alarm. On her return the whole interior of the house was blazing so fiercely that it would have been certain death to any one attempting to enter. Missing her child the distracted mother strove through the flames to the little one, but had to retreat badly burned about the head and shoulders.

Miss Violet Dixon, of Peterborough, who was spending the winter with her relatives for the benefit of her health, hurriedly came from the house when the fire was first noticed and with hardly any clothes on remained outside standing in the snow until noticed and removed to the drive house. There was little or no protection here from the cold, however, and she was so greatly affected by that it is feared she may pass away at almost any minute. At present the members of the household are being most kindly looked after by their neighbors.

There was no insurance, whatever, on the house, which was valued, together with its contents, at $6,000. The theory regarding the origin of the fire is that Gracey must have been playing with matches and setting fire to something ren and hid herself in her fright. Though all the windows were broken in the rooms upstairs the flames and volumes of smoke which poured forth precluded the possi of entering.

The EXAMINER joins his many friends in wishing him a Happy New Year, and abundant success in his new area of action.

RUN DOWN BY A HORSE AND CUTTER.

Mr. Michael O'Brien Knocked Down and Seriously Injured.

An accident which almost resulted in a fatality occurred at a few minutes after two o'clock this afternoon on the corner of Simcoe and Water streets. Mr. Michael O'Brien, of Ashburnham, was in the act of walking across the crossing when he was accidentally run down by a horse and cutter driven by Mr. James Davidson. The shaft of the cutter struck the unfortunate old gentleman just below the temple and inflicted an ugly gash. He was picked up and carried into the police station in an unconscious condition, a continous trail of blood being outlined in the snow, along the whole of the intervening distance. Dr. Yelland was summoned, and stated that if the shaft had struck a little higher on the temple the result would have been a fatality; however, as it is, Mr. O'Brien though seriously injured may, with care, recover. The onlookers state that Mr. Davidson turned his head to look at a horse which was passing, and before he knew it his own horse, which was travelling at a fast trot, was upon the old man, who, hearing the approaching sleigh bells, stopped to ascertain if he was in danger, and the hesitancy almost cost him his life. Mr. O'Brien, who was carried into the police station by Officer McGinty and Mr. "Kit" Huffman, was afterwards driven over to his home by Mr. Davidson, as soon as he recovered consciousness and his head was bandaged.

Now is the time for bargains at Grafton's clearing sale.

Prompt and Satisfactory Returns.

The annual report for the Government, mailed to Ottawa on the night of the 31st ult., by the Temperance and General Life Assurance Company from its head office in Toronto, gives the history of its last and best year's business. Large gains were made in every advantageous feature of the Company's business, the gain in surplus for security to policyholders being $20,000.00 and not a dollar of interest in arrears or a dollar's worth of real estate on its hands. Dull times or no dull times, The Temperance and General is gaining in magnitude and strength year by year, each successive year's gains being greater than those of the previous year. d1t

ORDAINED TO THE PRIESTHOOD.

Consecration of Rev. Patrick Joseph O'Leary.

The beautiful church of St. Joseph's, Douro, was on Sunday the scene of a most interesting and solemn ecclesiastical function, the consecration of Rev. Patrick Joseph O'Leary, a native of Douro, grandson of Mr. Wm. Leahy, to the priesthood of the Catholic Church. There was a large congregation present, attracted by interest in the fact that the candidate for consecration was one of themselves, and that the consecration was the first that had taken place in the church.

The solemn ceremony, according to the rites of the Catholic church, was performed by Bishop O'Connor, assisted by Ven. Archdeacon Casey, Rev. Father Kellty, parish priest, and Mr. C. J. Phelan, as master of ceremonies.

Rev. Father Casey preached

THE SERMON

his subject being the priesthood, and his text was I Cor. iv, 1:

"Let a man look upon us as the ministers of Christ and dispensers of the mysteries of God."

The reverend preacher, after referring in congratulatory terms to the young man who had just been ordained to the high office of priesthood, and to the parish and parish priest, referred to the commission given by Christ to His apostles. Dealing with the power of the priesthood, it was shown that it was the wish of Christ that His name should be continued and he instituted the priesthood for that purpose. The Incarnation was the foundation of our holy religion, as the sacrifice on Calvary was the consummation of Redemption, and our Lord wished that it be perpetuated through his priesthood—"All power is given me, as the father hath sent me so I send you." This authority gave the priesthood power over the mystical body of Christ, the church, and over the real body, in the Holy Eucharist. The power of the priesthood over the mystical body was involved in the commission to preach the gospel to all men and to teach them the truth. The power of teaching of belief, and also instructing in actions was supplemented by the power through the mass of scantifying their souls. The child at birth fell under the authority of the priest in baptism and the soul lost to the grace of God could be restored by the priest who had power to pronounce the forgiveness of sins and in the hour of death the priest was ready to prepare the soul for death and judgment, as was shown by the text in St. James,—"If any man is sick let him bring in a priest of the church, let the sick man be annointed with oil and the prayer of faith shall save the sick and if he is in sin it shall be forgiven him." The priest had authority over the real body in the Eucharist. Reference to the Aaronic priesthood was introduced by the text of the Psalmist,—"Before the day star. I begat thee; the Lord hath sworn it: thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisidec." And as the king of Salem—place—offered sacrifices of bread and wine and Abraham acknowledged his priesthood, so with the priesthood of Christ, who, on the night before His betrayal, took bread and wine and said, "this is my body, this is the chalice of my blood of the New Testament which shall be poured out for the remission of sins unto many. "As Melchesidec was a type of Christ the priest, so is the sacrifice of Christ a type of His sacrifice according to the order of Melchesidec. According to Christ's own words there was present his body and blood under the appearance of bread and wine in the sacrifice of the mass, and he gave to His apostles and their successors, the priesthood, authority to do likewise—"do this in commemoration of me."

During the treatment of this subject the preacher brought out the point, that out of 500 million Christians more than 400 million still believed in what some are pleased to term the "idolatry of the mass."

Reference was made again by the preacher to the young priest who had had that power and authority given him by the ceremony; for St. Paul himself, though specially called, had to receive the laying on of hands before he went forth on his mission. The priesthood impressed upon the soul a character that neither time nor eternity could efface. To the faithful it would be a crown of glory in heaven and to the unfaithful the ignoming and punithment of the traitor Judas would attach. The preacher complimented the bishop, the clergy and the parish upon the young men being raised to the dignity of the priesthood and hoped that he might become holier and holier and that at last he would reap the great reward. After the bishop had spoken a few words of congratulation, the people came forward and received the first blessing at the hands of the newly consecrated priest.

THE OPERA HOUSE.

The Mark Bros.' Musical Comedy Co., which on Monday evening inaugurated a week's stand in Peterborough, is meeting with great success. The company is that formerly known as the Emma Wells Comedy Company, which has always been favourably received by a Peterborough public, and that the company is well remembered was evidenced by the fact that last evening a large number were unable to obtain admission to the opera house on account of the size of the audience which sought and obtained seats at an early hour. Those who came at all late were forced to stand, though every effort was made to accommodate the large crowd.

The personnel of this popular aggregation includes Mr. Tom Marks, the amusing and entertaining Canadian comedian, and Miss Myra Collins, a clever little soubrette, as well as Messrs. H. W. Marks, Alex. Marks, Fred Wilson, Miss Eugenie Scott, Miss Alma E. Lewis, and little Grace Scott. Mr. Lee J. Kellam who is also with the company, has composed a number of well known songs, including Baby's Lullaby, Pretty Violets, Kissing Through the Leaves, etc. A couple of patriotic songs which he composed and sang on Canada, took particularly well last evening.

Piano Tuning.

Mr. G Gumprich is in town. Order may be left at Messrs Taylor & Macdonald's or at the Peterborough Bookstore.

ST. LUKE'S CHRISTMAS TREE.

Great Merriment Amongst the Sunday School Scholars Monday Evening.

"A time to play."—The Preacher.

St. Luke's school house was filled to overflowing last night with children of the Sunday School and their friends on the occasion of the annual distribution of prizes and Christmas tree. The proceedings commenced with an excellent exhibition of club swinging by the Misses Kathleen Wilson, Long and Gillespie, piano and violin accompaniments being rendered by Miss Lulu and Mr. Alex. Wilson. This was followed by an entertainment by the "Marine Minstrels," consisting of songs, serious and comic, concluding with a short farce entitled "Big Indian," which provoked unusual merriment.

In distributing the prizes the Rector made a few introductory remarks in regard to

THE CONDITION OF THE SCHOOL.

There had been a steady increase in the number of children in attendance throughout the year, so that on the re-organization of the School on Advent Sunday four new classes had been formed. Inclusive of the Bible classes, teachers and officers there has been 210 names on the roll. The discipline of the school under the superintendency of Col. H. C. Rogers was excellent, the teachers and scholars were on the best of terms, and the library was well stocked with between six and seven hundred good books. The attendance of scholars throughout the year had been good, considering the long distances many had to walk. One scholar, Mary Lang, had neither missed a Sunday nor lost a mark for two years. Emma Payne had gained full marks for the year, and Arnold Drummond had attended every Sunday.

Eight scholars had only missed one Sunday, ten only two, whilst between fifty and sixty had attended at least 43 Sundays.

Following is a list of the

OFFICERS AND TEACHERS

with the first scholar in each class:—

Lt Col H C Rogers	Superintendent
E A Peck	Secretary-treasurer

" IXa, Miss Phillips	"
" X, Miss Lipsett	Lottie Mitchell
" XI, Miss Mills	Annie Ferguson
" XII, Miss Tivey	Carrie Whittaker
" XIII, Mrs. E. A. Peck	Arnold Drummond

After the distribution of prizes, the Christmas tree, beautifully decorated by the teachers, was stripped, each child receiving at least one present. Col. Rogers, as Santa Claus, was "to the manner born," and was hailed with shouts of joy by the little ones. Soon all the presents, useful and ornamental, were distributed, and after singing the doxology, the happy throng of children and elders dispersed.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

A fairly good attendance, an excellent programme, refreshments that were "out of sight," and a good time generally, were characteristics of yesterday's reception. The ladies were on duty both afternoon and evening serving coffee and cake. Miss Code, Miss Patterson and Mr. Stubbs favoured the young men with music during the early part of the evening. The programme nut was cracked shortly after 8 o'clock when the Misses Belleghem sang "I'm a Merry Laughing Girl." A reading by Mrs. Goldsmith received an encore, and of course one cornet solo from Mr. John Miller was not enough. Following his response to the hearty encore was a vocal duet by Miss Fawcett and Miss Miss V. Belleghem. Messrs. Corbin and Roadhouse gave an instrumental duet on autoharps and mouthorgans which received an encore. The young men expected something good when Miss Fawcett's solo was announced and they were not disappointed. A male octette, Messrs. J. Miller, Steers, Squires, Crowe, A. Miller, Mulligan, Corbin and Skeitch, sang "The Soldier's Farewe Mr. Mulligan's rendering of "The [illegible]athless Army" was famous. The [illegible] "he's all right." Mr. Gold[illegible] was encored, and Mr. Corbin's [illegible]ic song "Silence is Golden" w[illegible] encored. Mr. Alf. Miller sang "That [illegible] Love" in good voice, and Mr. Bennett called on T. H. Martin, who told the young men something of the work of the association, and invited them to the rooms and meetings. The last number, and one of the best on the programme, was a duet from Messrs. Steers and Squires. Miss Patterson, Miss Melrose and Mr. Schneider kindly assisted in accompaniments. The president and secretary of the Young Women's Association, with a number of ladies, made a short call. Their president responded to Mr. Bennett's words of welcome. We believe the few hours spent with us were enjoyed by the fellows, and we wish to say, thanks! to all who in any way helped to make the reception a success.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION.

A Sunday School Teacher Handsomely Remembered.

On New Year's Eve the members of the Sunday school class, in the George Street Methodist Sunday School, of Miss Belle Griffith, called upon her at her residence, 179 Antrim street, and favoured her with a most kindly recognition of her faithful services, in the form of a beautiful present and a warmly appreciative address. Miss Emily Noble read the following

ADDRESS:

To Miss Belle Griffith, Teacher Sunday School:

DEAR TEACHER,—We the members of your Sunday School class desire at this festive season to place on record our gratitude and appreciation of your constant, kindly, self-denying and Christian work in our behalf.

Be assured that the seed you have so assiduously and prayerfully sown finds deep echo in our hearts and in one accord we feel moved to thank you for all your kindnesses and to present you with this token of our love and esteem.

The intrinsic value is small. We present it that it might serve as a memento of our kind relations to each other; and we cordially wish you the compliments of the season and that God will ever have you in His keeping.

The presentation of a very pretty ladies' companion in leather and a perfume case was made by Miss Bertie Mark. Miss Griffith, though completely surprised, made a graceful and suitable reply in expression of her appreciation of the kindly thoughtfulness implied by the present and the touching expressions of appreciation of her labours referred to in the address.

Here's to 1895.

GENTLEMEN,—

We extend our hearty congratulations and well wishes of the season. We felicitate ourselves for the share that we, as Clothiers, have had, in contributing to the enjoyment of hundreds of satisfied patrons during 1894.

We herewith express our sincere acknowledgment for the many marks of favour shown the CITY CLOTHING STORE in the past, and for the generous support continued to be bestowed upon this firm by the people of Peterborough.

BEAUTIFUL SLEEP—is an expression used for sound sleep. Nothing is so gratifying to the nerves, heart, and head, as perfect sleep—a companion of good digestion and a healthy liver. A tired digestion fails to assimilate, or take care of, the food we eat. Something bracing or invigorating is needed for the liver, stomach, and intestines.

This is where you will find Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets do the most good. They are tiny, sugar-coated pills, scarcely larger than mustard seed, made of concentrated botanical extracts. These "Pellets" are easily dissolved in the stomach and absorbed into the blood, stimulating a flow of bile from the liver, and arousing to activity all the glandular secretions. Thus they act in nature's own way.

They're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or money refunded, in all Bilious Attacks, in Sick Headache, Constipation, Dizziness, and Indigestion.

It cures Catarrh in the Head — perfectly and permanently — Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

THE INCUBATOR.

The Causes of Many Failures in First Attempts.

A writer in the Australian Agriculturist finds these causes of failure with many in their first efforts with the incubator:

1. Want of care in attention to cleanliness of lamp, causing flues to choke with soot, or burner to be covered with oil, causing all the top of lamp to be clothed in flame.

2. Over anxiety to get to work instead of having the machine working for two or three days to see if all goes well before trusting valuable eggs to it.

3. Opening the egg drawer too often. Best leave it closed for three days, then turn eggs and allow them to cool for twenty minutes to half an hour each morning and turn without cooling in the evening.

4. Curiosity to see if eggs are chipping or hatching well. Don't open the egg drawer while chicks are breaking through the shell, unless you want to kill some of the chicks and injure the constitution of the rest.

5. And we have put it last so that it may be retained in the memory—position of machine. On the ground is the only really safe place. The higher up from the ground the greater vibration caused by traffic. Machinery of all kinds should be away from incubator rooms, and the incubator should never be placed in a draughty place as a change of temperature is felt more keenly in such than any other.

A Neglected Animal.

It is very probable that the time is not far distant when a greater amount of attention will be bestowed on breeding mules. Those breeders who take an interest in pedigrees, and a pride in keeping breeds and strains of blood pure, will not, of course take kindly to the sterile hybrid, but there is a good deal to be said for the mule as a beast of burden and draught. A mule of nearly 16 hands will grow fat on a diet that a horse would do very badly on; they are very hardy, and last much longer than a horse—thirty years is no very uncommon period for a mule's life, and a mule can do good work up to a great age. Mules are sometimes said to have a tendency to vice; but that is not a necessary characteristic of the animal.—London Live Stock Journal.

Shoeing Horses.

Speaking at the dinner in connection with the Isle of Man Agricultural Society, Mr. F Street, who acted as one of the judges of horses, suggested that lectures on horse-shoeing should be given in the island. In the horse-shoeing competition at the show, he said, they noticed animals whose feet had been made to fit the shoes, instead of the shoes being made to fit the horses' feet. The horses' feet had been rasped and rasped away to make the feet fit the shoes. To show what the judges thought of such work, they had cast out of the competition every horse whose feet had been rasped.

Cement Floors in the Dairy.

A cement floor in the creamery should slope gently to the centre or one side, where a drain and trap should be arranged for carrying away water. The building should have a tank in the upper part, which may be kept full of water, or connected with a spring so that a hose may be used on the cement floor to keep it clean, washing out every indication of spilled milk or cream. Thus there will never be a disagreeable odor about the place. A cask will do for a tank in the upper part of the building. The hose will be found exceedingly useful for washing carriages at the creamery door.

When Others Fail

Hood's Sarsaparilla builds up the shattered system by giving vigorous action to the digestive organs, creating an appetite and purifying the blood. It is prepared by modern methods, possesses the greatest curative powers, and has the most wonderful record of actual cures of any medicine in existence. Take only Hood's.

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable, and do not purge, pain or gripe. 25c.

ANIMAL LIFE.

In old age the height of man really diminishes.

Blue-eyed cats are said by Darwin to be always deaf.

The hog eats fewer plants than any other herb-feeding animal.

The tail of a bever is a regular trowal, and is used as such.

Carnivorous animals seldom produce more than two young at a birth.

The flesh of the boa constrictor is eaten by the aborigines of Brazil.

The eggs of the crocodile are scarcely larger than those of the goose.

In many tropical countries the scorpion grows to the length of a foot.

The strongest muscle in a monkey's body is found in his prehensile tail.

Certain parts of the hippopotamus' hide attain a thickness of two inches.

The skin is the only part of the human body that is not hardened by age.

The sword fish does not use its terrible weapon as a dagger, but as a flail.

Moles can swim with great dexterity, their broad forepaws acting as paddles.

Students of nature have never been able to explain the chameleon's change of color.

The greatest velocity attained by a whale when struck by a harpoon is nine miles an hour.

MEN OF LETTERS.

W. Clark Russell, the writer of sea stories, is such a sufferer from rheumatism that he can use neither his hands nor his feet, and dictates his literary work to his eldest son. He resides at Bath, England.

Two of the best known of Chicago literary workers, Opie Read, the well-known author of southern stories, and Nixon Waterman, one of Chicago's cleverest wits and brightest poets, are touring the country giving entertainments, consisting of readings from their own writings.

Mr. Gladstone can now be classed as a hotelkeeper. Last month he opened a hotel near the library he equipped with twenty-five thousand volumes at Hawarden and established a rate of twenty-five shillings a week for board and lodging and the use of the library. Readers and students have made it a success.

Froude was lecturing at Tremont temple in Boston on the night when the great fire of 1872 broke out. The manager of the course held in his hand a check for one thousand dollars—the net proceeds of two or three of the lectures. He proffered the check to Mr. Froude, but the warm-hearted Englishman immediately ordered it paid to the proper authority for the benefit of the sufferers by the fire.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

Beef and pork, salt fish, potatoes and hominy were the staple diet all the year round.

The mail of the whole country did not equal that of a single second-rate office now.

The only shoes were stout contrivances of strong hide, with wooden pegs or hobnails.

There were no pianos; the ladies of musical talent played on the spinet or harpsichard.

Buttons were scarce and expensive, and the trousers were fastened with pegs or laces.

The only recognized method of imparting information was by the liberal use of the rod.

All the population of a village assembled at the inn on "post day" to hear the news.

There were no thrashing machines. Wheat was thrashed out on the barn floor with flails.

The women's dresses were puffed with hoops and stood out two or three feet on each side.

A fever patient was forbidden to drink water, and smallpox was treated in a dark room.

The Storm in Quebec.

QUEBEC, Dec. 29.—The storm here caused the tide to rise tremendously high. The water rose level to the ground, the ice almost invading Dalhousie street and the examining warehouse grounds. The examining warehouse roof was lifted off, also Mr. Courdeau's leather factory, and the high chimney was blown down, smashing through a neighboring house roof. Fortunately the inhabitants had fled before the crash occurred. The roof of the Quebec and Lake St. John Railway Company workshop was lifted off and carried completely away. In certain streets in the city the snow is nine feet high.

A January thaw is always more productive of colds and coughs than a January freeze. Then is the time Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is needed and proves so extremely efficacious. Ask your druggist for it, and also for Ayer's Almanac, which is free to all.

Relief in Six Hours.

Distressing Kidney and Bladder disease relieved in six hours by the "GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN KIDNEY CURE." This new remedy is a great surprise on account of its exceeding promptness in relieving pain in the bladder, kidneys and back. If you want quick relief and cure this is your remedy. Sold by all druggists.

After LaGrippe.

After La Grippe obstinate coughs, lung trouble, etc. frequently follow. There is no remedy so prompt, and at the same time effectual and pleasant, as Milburn's Cod Liver Oil Emulsion with Wild Cherry and Hypophosphites, which is the latest and best combination of anti-consumptive remedies. Price 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

ITCHING AND PIN WORMS. PILES

No More Misery.

Gives Instant Relief.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affection, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—blood and matter form, excessive moisture is created. Females are peculiarly afflicted from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

PIN WORMS is an ailment entirely different as to cause from Itching Piles, yet its effects and symptoms are exactly the same. The same intolerable itching; the same creeping, crawling, stinging sensation characterizes both diseases. Chase's Ointment acts like magic. It will at once afford relief from this torment.

Every Man Should Insure.

The following from a Toronto Daily, is worthy of very careful consideration:—

The force of the obligation resting upon every man to carry a substantial insurance policy on his life was never better illustrated than in the death of Sir John Thompson.

If ever a man lived who could claim freedom from this obligation it was the late Premier. Before the fatal illness seized him he had every reason to expect a long life; his earning capacity was large; and he was, at one time at all events, justified in expecting that he would fall heir to a considerable fortune. But the expectations of fortune were swept away, death came in mid-life and pratically the only support left for the bereaved family is a paltry insurance of $6,000.

The moral of it all is that every man, no matter how circumstanced, should insure, and insure to the largest extent that his income will justify.

The Late Premier, SIR JOHN S. D. THOMPSON, was insured in the SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY of CANADA.

FARM AND GARDEN

GARDEN ROTATION.

Its Value is As Great Proportionately As in the Field.

A good rotation for the garden is this: Newly set strawberry bed the first season and the next the bearing bed of strawberries. After that the strawberry plants should be started elsewhere so that they can come into bearing as soon as the old ones have yielded their crops. Clover should be sown upon the old strawberry bed after the plants are raked up. The following spring the clover should be turned over in time to make preparations for various garden vegetables. If corn and potatoes are raised on any large scale they should be raised on a larger field separate from the garden, and they, by adding clover, make a rotation sufficient for all purposes. Two years of potatoes on one soil is sufficient. By the third year the bugs would be too plentiful to make things pleasant. Then give the land up to clover for one year, followed by two crops of corn. When the second crop of corn is harvested the potatoes can be planted again, and the rot, blight and bugs by that time will be exterminated. By this system of rotation we need less manure on our gardens. Some soils have too much manure now that is unused, uncomposted and unassimilated manure. By a rotation of crops this is used up better, and the land is cleaned out so that it can dispose of fresh applications much better. Besides, clover adds to the soil what it greatly needs, and it is something that our gardens very rarely receive. It may be impossible to work a small garden in a village in this way where land is limited, but where the farm is large enough and the owner is depending upon his garden for most of his profits, there is no other sound, reasonable course for him to pursue. He must adopt a rotation of crops as well as his brother grain and grass growers.—Germantown Telegraph.

Influence of Sunlight on Trees.

Trees, as a rule, develop best in the full enjoyment of light, air and heat, but their capacity for growth under opposite circumstances varies greatly with the species. The yew, for instance, will thrive and "make wood" rapidly in the densest shade; or, in other words, in situations where the oak would barely live and the larch, elder and birch would fall into rapid decay and early death. In open places, maples, sycamores, elms and several other species grow into healthy, rugged trees in a short time, while in shade, they "shoot up" slim and spindling, with scraggy limbs and thin poorly-colored foliage. Conifers such as the spruces and firs, have the greatest capacity for growing in the shade and preserving their foliage in rich, healthy colors despite the removal or partial shutting ont of the light. In this country sufficient data to enable one to catalogue forest trees according to their capacity to grow in partial darkness has not as yet been collected, but rules based on European experience have been carefully formulated and laid down as guides for those engaging in arboriculture. The leading botanical writers of the country are now agitating the subject of "Sunlight vs. Trees," and it is not at all improbable that the whole matter will, within the near future, be referred to the Forestry Branch of the Bureau of Statistics, so that a series of experiments and observations may be carried out by government experts.

The Spider a Friend.

Another natural enemy of the mosquito and nature's greatest check against the undue increase of insect life, is the spider. Spiders are, as far as man is concerned, the principal philanthropists of the insect world. Although there is a European spider (lathrodectus aculatus) with the reputation of giving a poisonous bite, and a New Zealand relative (kalipo), whose venom is supposed to have destroyed the lives of human beings—almost invariably natives—yet the majority of the outer araneidea is undoubtedly harmless. The tales of the extraordinary result of the bite of the tarantula, and its remarkable cure by means of music, after prolonged dancing, are inconsistent with scientific truth. The bite of the tarantula may be extremely painful, but I am unable to find any reliable evidence proving that it is dangerous.

Spiders live upon insects, and consequently spend the greater part of their time in catching their prey: where mosquitoes are plentiful, they form a great part of the spider's daily diet, and the web continues to do its work long after the owner's appetite has, for the time being, been appeased.

THREE RUNNING SORES
PHYSICIANS FAILED
BUT B.B.B. CURED

DEAR SIRS—After having used Burdock Blood Bitters for Scrofula in the blood, I feel it my duty to make known the results. I was treated by a skilled physician but he failed to cure me. I had three Running Sores on my neck which could not be healed until I tried B. B. B., which healed them completely, leaving the skin and flesh as sound and whole. As long as I live I shall speak of the virtues of B.B.B., and I feel grateful to Providence that such a medicine is provided for sufferers.

A SCALY ERUPTION
UNENDURABLE ITCHING
Suffered Three Years—Now Perfectly Cured by B. B. B.

GENTLEMEN—I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for Skin Diseases, from which I have been a sufferer for three years. I have used six bottles and am now entirely cured. I have been a sufferer as Donald Ramsden's Medical Discovery and tered one year with the best physicians in the land; the Canicura Remedies, but all to no good. I despaired one year with the best physicians in the land; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but could not remove it.

I then commenced using B. B. B., which came on larred blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and turned hard and scaly. The itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured, and I owe it all to B. B. B.

PURIFIES THE BLOOD

"I TELL ALL MY FRIENDS."

A Lady of Shelburne, Ont., Permanently Cured of Indigestion After Using Two Bottles of South American Nervine —Glad to Let Everyone Know It.

MRS. A. V. GALBRAITH.

With indigestion it is not only that one suffers all imaginable torments, physical and mental, but more, perhaps, than anything else, an impaired digestion is the forerunner of countless ailments that in their course lead to the most serious consequences. Let the stomach get out of order and it may be said the whole system is diseased. When the digestive organs fail in their important functional duties, head and heart, mind and body are sick. These were the feelings of Mrs. Galbraith, wife of Mr. A. V. Galbraith, the well-known jeweller of Shelburne, Ont., before she had learned of the beneficent results to be gained by the use of South American Nervine Tonic. In so many words she said: "Life was becoming unbearable. I was so cranky I was really ashamed of myself. Nothing that I ate would agree with me; now it does not matter what I eat. I take enjoyment out of all my meals." Here are Mrs. Galbraith's words of testimony to South American Nervine, given over her own signature:

"Shelburne, Ont., March 27, 1894.

"I was for considerable time a sufferer from indigestion, experiencing all the misery and annoyance so common to this complaint. South American Nervine was recommended to me as a safe and effective remedy for all such cases. I used only two bottles, and am pleased to testify that these fully cured me, and I have had no indication of a return of the trouble since. I never fail to recommend the Nervine to all my friends troubled with indigestion or nervousness.

"MRS. A. V. GALBRAITH."

The testimony of this lady, given freely and voluntarily out of a full heart because of the benefits she experienced in her own person, have an echo in thousands of hearts all over the country. South American Nervine must cure, because it operates at once on the nerve centres. These nerve centres are the source from which emanates the life fluid that keeps all organs of the body in proper repair. Keep these nerve centres sound and disease is unknown. There is no trick in the business. Everything is very simple and common sense like. South American Nervine strengthens the digestive organs, tones up the lives, enriches the blood, is peculiarly efficacious in building up shattered and nervous constitutions. It never fails to give relief in one day.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease).
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want;
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
Ward promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then went home, but stop, I miss,

They gave us every one, a kiss,
And said, "be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home.
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

DUST PARTICLES COUNTED.

A Mechanical Device That Registers the Atoms of the Air.

A machine has been contrived by an expert for counting the number of dust particles present in the air, and this has been used at various places, and the atmosphere tested. The machine allows a known quantity of air to be passed into a chamber where the atoms of dust are moistened and precipitated onto a counting stage divided into convenient squares. All that is necessary is to count the spots on certain squares, multiply by a factor, and an estimate is obtained of the number of dust atoms present in the volume of air in question. A cigarette smoker is said to send out 4,000 million of these minute particles at every puff. One cubic centimetre of air is a convenient quantity to take as standard, and it has been found that the air at Battersea Park contains dust particles in amounts varying from 48,000 to 116,000 per cubic centimetre; the Eiffel Tower air varied between 104,000 to as low as 236.

There are many questions which are raised by these observations on dust atoms, one of them being as to whether inhabited places have a warmer mean temperature than uninhabited places. The suggestion is that these dust particles, which are present in such large quantities in inhabited areas, serve as a covering to keep the earth's heat from radiating, and the bold speculation is made that possibly changes of climate in the earth's past history may be traced to the presence or absence of dust. Many are the interesting subjects for study therefore provided by the minute particles of aqueous vapor as they reveal themselves as dew, hoar frost, fog and mist.—English Mechanic.

Sad State of Affairs.

Rescuer (heartily)—There now, old fellow, you are safe on shore at last. It was a pretty close shave for you, but a miss is as good as a mile, you know.

Rescued Man (just put out of the water)—I don't know about that. I——

Rescuer—Oh, brace up, man. You're all right.

Rescued Man—No; I'm not. My wife recently presented me with twins, and I didn't have any voice in naming them. My wife's mother is staying with us, and she abhors tobacco smoke and is going to stay six months; likewise my wife's father. We differ in politics, and he often has fits, during which I am elected to hold him. Her sister is there, too. She is 37 years old and stage struck, and wants me to perch in the second story window and impersonate Juliet. The cellar is full of water, and—well, I fell into the river by accident, but, take it all in all, I guess you'd better fling me back again and let me drown.—Truth.

Clothes Made of Peat.

Underwear is now made in Paris of peat. This sounds like a joke, but there is nothing of the Munchausen order about it. It has been known for some time that peat has certain antiseptic qualities. A dead body which was buried in peat for over a century was found in a state of perfect preservation. Peat is used in the northern countries of Europe for surgical bandages, and the favorable results obtained by the Russian surgeons with peat bandages have induced the French army department to use it in the French hospitals. It has also been found that peat fibres in combination with other material possess wonderful absorbing properties. This has led Dr. Rasurel to use peat fibres for the making of underwear in the place of flannel. The new material has proven very effective, absorping perspiration and rapidly drying. Dr. Rasurel calls his fabric a "real hydraulic pump," and pronounces it an excellent preventive of colds. The new textile is already largely used in France.

TREES AND FLOWERS.

Washington, D.C., has 600 varieties of trees.

The largest flower is the "Rafflesia," named in honor of Sir S. Raffles, which is a native of Sumatra. The diameter often exceeds nine feet.

Edelweiss is rapidly disappearing in many parts of Tyrol. To save it the landtag has lately imposed a fine for selling the plant with the roots.

It is known that trees have attained the following ages: Elm, 335 years; cypress, 350; ivy, 450; larch, 570; chestnut, 600; orange, 630; palm, 650; olive, 700; oriental plane, 720; cedar, 800; lime, 1,100; oak, 1,-300; yew, 2,800.

A string bean with a blue pod was the sensation of the recent Crystal Palace fruit show. The first plant was obtained by accident from a job lot of French seed, but the grower has now fixed the type and can produce it regularly.

A new string sextet, by a boy of sixteen named Bernhard Kohler, recently created an extraordinary sensation at Cologne.

WANT TO INVEST PEKIN

Jap Citizens Do Not Take Kindly to the Proposed Armistice.

AN AGGRESSIVE MANIFESTO

Until the Plenipotentiaries Meet There Can be No Cessation of Hostilities—Liu Kun Hi Takes Charge of the Chinese Army—China Needs Money.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Information reaches Japanese Minister Kurino to the effect that the liberal party leaders in Japan had presented to the Japanese parliament an aggressive manifesto concerning the prosecution of the war against China, the main features of which is a thorough disinclination to consent to any policy which will lead to an armistice in advance of the investment of Pekin by the Japanese forces.

Minister Kurino is of the opinion that there is no immediate prospect of an armistice. He says there can be no abatement of actual hostilities until the assembling of the ambassadors empowered to formulate the plans for peace. The signing by these plenipotentiaries of a request for an armistice and consequent cessation of hostilities, thus forming the basis of a definite peace arrangement, it is thought by Japanese officials here will be the only method of bringing about a truce.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The Daily Graphic learns from Shanghai that Gen. Sung narrowly escaped being captured by the Japanese near Mew-Chwang.

A despatch to the Central News from Pekin says that Liu Kun Hi, the Viceroy of Liang Kiang, who has been appointed head of the Chinese armies, is preparing to start for the front to assume supreme command of the troops.

The old Japanese fleet, together with a new squadron of war vessels, is cruising off the Shan Tung promontory.

Col. von Hennaken's scheme for reorganizing the army is in abeyance, owing to the lack of money and his inability to reach the whole Chinese force.

THE TIMES ON TRADE.

Causes Leading to a Hindrance of Enterprise in the Past Year.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The Times says in its trade review of the last year:

"While the possibilities of a year ago were only partly realized, trade in the aggregate may be said to have turned the corner in a series of lean years. The hindrance of enterprise is mainly to be ascribed:

"First—To the depreciation of silver and the tariff wrangle in America, which when ended failed to give trade a continuous impetus.

"Second—To foreign competition, which, however, is not increasing, the main injury arising from ourselves, establishing manufacturers in countries of growth and damaging similar ones at home.

"Third—To the disappointing harvest and low grain prices.

"On the other hand, there have been evidences of sounder trading. The failures were fewer and the capital involved was lower than before in recent years. We enlarged our exports and imports on the whole, although adverse results of the extreme dulness are reported in some quarters. Hopeful views are now current. They are mainly directed to the early improvement of the American markets on a better assured basis, secured by the tariff settlement and a better financial position. There is expectation also of betterment in South America and of some recovery in Australia and the East."

Gladstone Severely Criticised.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—In an article headed "Should Gladstone be Muzzled," the Pall Mall Gazette regrets Mr. Gladstone's speech at Hawarden on Saturday last to the Armenian Association's deputation, and says:—"The question does not affect a handful of Armenians only, but it easily involves the peace of Europe. The foreign powers do not understand Mr. Gladstone as we do. They see in him a still possible premier, and his unbridled words will infinitely increase the difficulties." The St. James Gazette refers in a similar vein to Mr. Gladstone's utterances, and calls him "a grand old mischiefmaker."

The Sarnia is Safe.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—An Allan steamer passed Tory Island, inward bound, having in tow the Dominion line steamer Sarnia, Captain Couse, from Portland, December 13, for Liverpool. The steamer Sarnia was sighted several days ago in latitude 55, north, longitude 12, west, by the steamer Anchoria, from New York to Glasgow. The Sarnia had lost her rudder. She was taken in tow by the Anchoria, but the tow line parted and the Anchoria proceeded to her destination. The Sarnia as she passed Tory Island signalled "All well."

CLYDALE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

On Friday evening the 28th Dec., the community around Clydale, and especially the children of the Sunday School, enjoyed a rich treat. A tea, a tree and a good musical and literary programme formed the attraction of the evening. After tea the chair was taken by Rev. Mr. Bennett, the present pastor of the congregation, who gave an address, and then introduced the participants in the following programme, viz.:

Singing	Clydale Choir
Recitation	Carry Eddy
Recitation	Emily Walt

The Christmas tree was beautifully lighted with wax tapers, and from it was handed down something in the form of a book or toy for every child belonging to the Sunday school. For some the tree contained special gifts.

Miss M. Campbell and Miss Margaret Trotter received first and second prizes, respectively, for essays on the Infancy and Childhood of Christ.

Nellie Bush and Maria Garrett were examined in the afternoon, of the same day, on the whole of the shorter Catechism, were adjudged equal and rewarded accordingly. Answers to the whole of the questions were repeated by these girls with only two or three slight mistakes.

First and second prizes were awarded to Annie Bush and Lilly Storey, respectively, for answers given to questions on the Mothers' Catechism. The holder of the first prize repeated the answers from beginning to end without an error. Annie Bush received an additional prize for the accurate recital of the memory verses in the Sabbath school lessons from July to December inclusive. Annie has never been at the day school and yet she repeated the memory verses for the six months and repeated them accurately, even when only the subject of the lesson was announced, without regard to the order in which the lessons followed each other. BAILLIEBORO.

Double Installation of Forester Officers.

On New Year's night, a Forester entertainment was given here. The affair was under the management of Court Baillieboro C. O. F., and excellently was it managed. From six o'clock till about nine a splendid repast, consisting of oysters and other delicacies, was served to about 500 persons in Lucas' Hall. At the conclusion of the banquet, a most interesting open installation ceremony took place in the Foresters' Hall, which was crowded to its utmost capacity, many having to be turned away. The officers of Courts Bewdley and Baillieboro were jointly installed by H. Nesbitt, D.H.C.R., assisted by D.S. Harvie, as High Marshall; W. H. Morris, as H. V. C. R., and F. J. Jamieson as High Secretary.

The chair was occupied by Dr. Fisher, C.R., who has filled the position since the opening of the Court, till his successor, Mr. W. Waterman, was installed, who presented a pleasing entertainment consisting of addresses by the visiting brethren and selections by Miss Waterman and the Bewdley Quintette Club. The entire ceremony was a most interesting and profitable one and will give a fresh impetus to the already flourishing interests of Forestry in Baillieboro and district. MR. CREAMER'S MISSION.

It is Somewhat Impertinent, But is in a Noble Cause.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The Morning Post has a friendly leader on the mission of William Randall Creamer, M.P., who sails for America to-day to memorialize President Cleveland and Congress in favor of the arbitration of all disputes between England and the United States. The writer says: The movement lacks the truly representative character in which alone its value would consist. Neither are we convinced that Mr. Creamer's action is desirable. It might have been better and it certainly would have been more regular if the signers of the memorial had confined their representations to their own government. Congress might have been trusted to bring a similar pressure to bear upon their executive. The commoners who signed the memorial would not then have been guilty of what seems very like impertinence in venturing upon grounds where they have no locus standi, but the object is so noble and so obviously of mutual interest that we feel sure Americans will not misinterpret or cavil at the method.

Two More Arrests in Toronto.

TORONTO, Jan. 2.—A. C. Winton of 302 Dovercourt road and Samuel Wicks of 449 Marion avenue, have been arrested in connection with the civic investigation. The charge recorded against them was conspiracy, and the warrant under which they were taken into custody accused them with having in December of 1893 conspired with J. W. Porch to pay James Gowanlock and others, who were at that time aldermen of the City of Toronto, to use their influence for the Hersey Water Meter Company in the committees and at the meetings of the Council. Wicks and Winton were taken to No. 6 station, and were shortly afterwards bailed out on $4,000 each, their sureties giving $1,000 each and the prisoners themselves each $9,000 on his own surety.

Acquitted of the Charge of Murder.

PROMINENT PEOPLE.

President Casimir-Perier is an early riser, being at work on his letters and despatches every morning at 6.30. Nevertheless he often reads till one o'clock at night.

Prince Krapotkine, the most distinguished living refugee, has resided in England since 1886. His family held high rank in Russia befor the days of the Romanoffs.

Prof. Virchow, the most versatile of the living savants, filled up his summer vacation by attending five great international congresses. Yet he is seventy-three years old.

The empress of Austria has to give a written receipt for the state jewels every time she wears them and her majesty, as a result, usually contents herself with a private collection, which is worth about one million five hundred thousand dollars.

Persons who have met Mr. Gladstone say that his pictures give his face the appearance of a ruggedness which is foreign to it. He really looks feeble, but his clear complexion and the color in his cheeks indicate that his health is good. His hair is white.

An instance of the German emperor's kindly thought is shown in his sending a costly locket, symbolically embellished, to a little girl, the daughter of the station master at Freisack, who on his recent visit to that town presented him with a poem and a bouquet of wild flowers.

The Rothschilds smoke the most costly cigars that are made—the "Henry Clay Sobranos," which cost a dollar and a quarter apiece. These are wrapped in gold leaf and packed in little inlaid cedar-wood cabinets. These millionaire princes buy three cabinets at a time, containing forty-two thousand cigars.

Garments to Order.

W. J. Green, 145 Hunter street, will continue the sale of three dollar pants which are of special value (formerly four and five dollars) made to order by first class workmen. Trimmings just the same as more expensive material, in fact to call and inspect for yourself will satisfy anyone.

Cost of Feeding a Cow.

The cost of feeding a cow has now come down to $16 per year. This low cost has been made by one of the most successful dairymen whose income from each cow is never less than $60 a year. This low cost of feeding is due to the silo, and the high value of the product of the cows is due to liberal, good management and the high quality of the product. And it is generally the case that the man who succeeds in making a valuable product is the most economical in his business management—he makes at both ends, in fact.

The Best Meats for Children.

The following represent the best meats for children in the order of their digestibility: Cold mutton, mutton chops, venison, tenderloin, sirloin steak, lamb chops, roast beef, rabbit meat and chicken. Veal, pork, turkey, goose and duck should be excluded from the children's bill of fare.

How to "Set" Colors in Cotton.

Some housewives say that the colors of cotton fabrics will become "set" if salt and water is employed, three gills of salt to four quarts of water. The calico is dropped in the water while hot, and there remains until it is cold.

SUFFERING IN THE WEST

Extreme Poverty Exists in the Cherokee Strip in Oklahoma.

MISSIONARIES ASK FOR HELP

A Sad Tale of the Misery the Unfortunate Settlers Are Undergoing — Severe Weather and Lack of Even Ordinary Clothing Makes Their Situation Pitiful.

BOSTON, Jan. 3.—The circle of suffering in parts of the west is widening. It includes the Cherokee strip in Oklahoma, which was opened for settlement a year ago. The country is emphatically new. The missionaries of the congregational home missionary society, which is forwarding special correspondence relating to the situation, states there is special need of clothing. With the thermometer below zero, there were thirteen men at a religious service who were no overcoats and were known not to own any.

Some of the women were without wraps of any kind. A mother and daughter, alternately wore the same pair of shoes. Women have been found barefooted at home, not possessing any kind of a shoe. One home missionary writes as follows: "I have no means whatever. We have no members who are able to do anything. Out of my limited amount of $125 per quarter, I have divided with two or three of our families to keep them from absolute suffering. But I can do nothing more. I think the strip, which is only a year old, will be in much better condition in another year, as they will raise considerable crops. They will be of course, sod crops, but will help."

A meeting has been held to petition Congress for help, but they cannot wait for Congressional action. The missionary continues: "'It takes every cent of our ladies' society and all they can raise to get books, keep up the Sabbath school and purchase fuel for our church. The building is new and not yet furnished. The ladies recently purchased a stove. The blizzard struck us Christmas, since which time some families have suffered simply for want of clothing of any description."

The Home Missionary Society has already forwarded clothing to these sufferers and will gladly be the almoner of the public in so doing.

Suspected of Murder.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 3.—The Cleveland police believe they have the man who murdered Wm. H. Price, a prominent citizen, three weeks ago, while burglarizing his house. They gave their names as Charles P. Benz, a coachman, and Thomas Grant, a laborer, J. Johnson, a carpenter, and Harry Gruninger, a small merchant, were also arrested. Johnson, who was at one time a private detective and later a Detroit policeman, made a full statement yesterday. He implicate Benz and Grant. The broke into the house and were surprised by Mr. Price, who awoke. Johnson says one of them shot and wounded Mr. Price, who still pressed them closely, whereat the two shot several bullets into him and killed him. The detectives will not yet reveal who Benz and Grant really are.

American Cattlemen Indignant.

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—The packers and shippers of cattle and dressed beef for export in this city were much alarmed to read of the latest embargo action of the European authorities, the closing of Antwerp to American beef. They were indignant and determined to protest against the embargo as an outrage as well as vital blow at the cattle raising industry of the country. They declared that the sugar schedule in the Gorman-Wilson bill was responsible for the closing of the continental ports and that the pleuro-pneumonia excuse was only a subterfuge.

Increase in the U. S. Debt.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The debt statement issued yesterday shows a net increase in the public debt, less cash in the treasury during December 1894, of $31,320,770.4'. The interest bearing debt increased $40,095,100. The non-interest bearing debt increased $125,650,50. The total cash in the treasury was $782,734,269. The gold reserve was $95,244,445. Net cash balance $97,098,134.99.

Searching the Delevan House Ruins.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 3.—Workmen began yesterday to tear down the great walls of Delavan house preparatory to beginning a search for the bodies of the fifteen hotel employes who perished. It will be two or three days before the search of the ruins can be attempted as the walls cannot be lowered before that time. The debris is still smoking and several streams are in place.

Death in a Blizzard.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Jan. 3.—The body of James Carman who has been missing since the blizzard of Wednesday evening last has been found at the bottom of a snow bank near Antwerp. He was 78 years old.

PEACE NEGOTIATIONS

The Probability Now Is That They Will be Barren of Results.

CHINA'S GOOD FAITH DOUBTED

Japan Looks With Suspicion on the Overtures From the Enemy, and Will Probably Not be Satisfied With Anything Less Than the Fall of Pekin.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Danger threatens the peace negotiations between China and Japan and from present indications it is exceedingly probable that hostilities may be renewed with even greater vigor and the cry "On to Pekin" once more become the slogan of the Japanese forces. Despite a prevailing belief to the contrary, it is not unlikely that the Japanese government will decline to make further postponement of the actual commencement of the negotiations in order to await the arrival of Mr. John W. Foster, the Chinese advisory counsel, and it is even probable that arrangements for the settlement of the dispute will have become completed before Mr. Foster reaches Hiroshima, where the representatives of both the warring powers will meet. Mr. Foster will sail from Vancouver on January 6, providing he is not snowbound, and is due in Yokohama on January 19 or 20. Two days will give him ample time to reach Hiroshima, so that the Chinese cannot ask for a postponement after the 22nd instant.

The two Chinese ambassadors of peace are due in Shanghai on January 6 and are expected to reach Hiroshima on the 9th and the probabilities are that they will be asked to begin the negotiations without delay. The danger that threatens the settlement, which has seemed such a certainty, will arise at this point, for the Japanese government will refuse, without doubt, to agree to any temporizing on the plea that Mr. Foster has not arrived and that the Chinese ambassador cannot proceed without his assistance. It may be stated with some decree of positiveness that a direct declination by the Chinese envoys to begin the negotiations until Mr. Foster reaches Hiroshima will result in positive disagreement and the breaking off of the overtures, which will place the possibilities for peace farther away than ever and cause the Japanese forces to push their way with greater vigor toward the Chinese capital. In that event nothing short of the fall of Pekin is likely to put an end to hostilities.

It has been known for some time that the Japanese government is suspicious of the good faith of their enemies in the overtures for a suspension of the war. First came the Detering affair, in which Mr. Detering was sent to Japan ostensibly for the purpose of making the terms of peace, but really armed only with "a letter from the Chinese court," to use his own expression, directing him to make "inquiries" into the prospects for a settlement. When Mr. Detering's mission failed the overtures on which the present negotiations are based were made by China to Japan through Mr. Denby, the American Minister at Pekin, and Mr. Dun, the American Minister at Tokio. Japan expresses a willingness to treat with China if the Pekin government would send an ambassador, duly accredited and armed with full power to negotiate a peace treaty. To this the Chinese government sent answer that it could hardly agree to such a proposition until it knew the basis on which the Japanese wished the arrangement for peace to be made. Already inclined to look with suspicion on the Chinese professions of good faith, the Japanese government found this answer ample confirmation of its growing belief that the Chinese were attempting to ascertain what their enemies would seek to exact from them as indemnity, in order to be prepared with arguments to secure a modification, as it was for this reason that Viscount Mutsu, the Japanese Minister for Foreign Affairs, declined to have further dealings with Pekin on the subject until the peace ambassador was appointed.

After some delay China appointed not one but two envoys, and it was thought that the negotiations would begin in a very short time. But a few days ago the appointment of Mr. Foster was announced as counsel to the Chinese ambassadors, and it is believed that the Chinese will ask Viscount Mutsu to suspend the commencement of actual negotiations until Mr. Foster has arrived at the place of meeting.

The Japanese peace commissioners are not likely to give any formal recognition to Mr. Foster. He will certainly not be allowed to attend the sittings of the commission, provided he arrive at Hiroshima before its business is concluded, and if frequent requests for adjournment are made by the Chinese envoys in order that they may consult with him, the Japanese commissioners will probably refuse to proceed further unless these requests succeed.

Sir John Was to Have Visited Gladstone.

HALIFAX, N.S., Jan. 3.—It is learned that soon after Sir John Thompson arrived in England Mr. Gladstone, who had heard from Lord and Lady Aberdeen that he was coming over, wrote to Sir John Thompson, expressing the hope that he would pay him a visit at Hawarden Castle before leaving for Canada. Sir John Thompson accepted this invitation and proposed to pay the visit just before sailing for Liverpool. A letter since received from Mr. Gladstone alluded to the proposed visit and expressed how grieved and shocked he was on hearing of the great public loss sustained in the death of the late Premier.

Toronto's Mayoralty Fight.

TORONTO, Jan. 3.—Ald. Verral has retired from the mayoralty race. Mr. Carlyle, when spoken to as to his intentions, said that he was not yet fully decided. It has been intimated to City Clerk Blevins that Mr. Carlyle's retirement is almost a certainty. The talk around town everywhere is that the field should be left open to the Mayor and Mr. Fleming.

Buffalo's Liquor Licenses.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Jan. 3.—The report of the city excise clerk for the year shows that there are in this city licensed to sell liquor 2,446 saloons, 138 hotels, 74 storekeepers, 75 druggists, 16 taverns. The revenue from liquor licenses for the year was $939,555.

Premier Cecil Rhodes' Effort for Closer Commercial Relations.

CATTLE EMBARGO IN BELGIUM

Two Animals Exported From Canada Said to Have Been Affected With Pleuro-Pneumonia — The Case Being Investigated—Newfoundland's Position.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—All of the papers here contain cable despatches about the arrival at Halifax of H. M. S. Blenheim, with the remains of Sir John Thompson. Sad and tragic though it was it is generally felt here that the death of the late Canadian Premier will have the effect of creating new bonds of sympathy between Canada and Great Britain and will bring the two countries closer together than any event which has happened in recent years, while the expressions of sympathy which have come from all parts of the Empire show that the sorrows, as well as the joys, of one portion of it are beginning to be shared by the rest of the countries and dominions which own the sway of the Queen.

The High Commissioner.

Sir Charles Tupper is gradually, though slowly, recovering from the illness which put so sudden an end to his determination to accompany the remains of the late Premier to Canada. The High Commissioner is taking the greatest possible care of himself, and there is every reason to believe that he will soon regain his usual health.

Canada and the Cape.

It is understood that Premier Rhodes, of the Cape of Good Hope, is much impressed with the results of the recent Ottawa conference, and is disposed, so far as his colony is concerned, to carry them a step further. He would like very much to see closer commercial relations between Canada and the Cape and all the other colonies; and is reported to be not adverse to taking the matter up in the broadest possible way. According to recent advices from the Cape the question of steamship communication between the Dominion and that colony is receiving considerable attention. The matter has been submitted by Sir Gordon Sprigg to the Chambers of Commerce throughout the country for an expression of opinion, and if it is favorable there is little doubt that the matter will make another step in advance. Altogether the outlook is promising, and if communications have not already taken place between the two governments, it is very likely that correspondence will shortly be passing.

The Belgian Cattle Embargo.

Altogether about 3,000 cattle have been imported into Belgium from Canada this year. They were purchased in the Dominion, largely in the neighborhood of Montreal and Toronto, by Mr. VanLandegham, representing a Belgian syndicate. Only two suspicious cases have been discovered, one of which came by the Hispania at the end of November and the other by the Sicilia in the early days of December. The Belgian authorities have decided that the lungs of the two animals in question indicate pleuro-pneumonia, and consequently have prohibited further importations for the present. The matter is being investigated by the High Commissioner and specimens of the lungs have been submitted to well-known experts in the United Kingdom and on the Continent. Pieces have also been sent to Canada with the request that all the animals should be traced, in order that the fullest information may be placed at Sir Charles' disposal as to the sanitary conditions of the districts from which they came. Information of this kind will necessarily have much influence with the Belgian authorities, and it is hoped that in any circumstances it may be found possible to remove the restrictions which have been imposed upon the trade. The position is of course rendered somewhat more difficult than it otherwise would be by the attitude of the British Government in the matter.

Newfoundland's Position.

There is a general feeling in colonial circles in London that the best solution of the difficulties in Newfoundland would be its admission into the Canadian Dominion. At the same time, it is recognized that the Dominion, as a whole, is not likely to be very keen on the matter, in view of the present position of affairs in the Island. It is also remembered that negotiations have on more than one occasion been initiated by Canada, without any promising result, and the opinion prevails, therefore that if anything is to be done the advances ought properly to come from Newfoundland. If some satisfactory terms of union could be arranged, it is believed that the change would be beneficial to Newfoundland in every way; that it would inaugurate a new era of prosperity for England's oldest colony and at the same time promote the settlement of the many difficulties which have embittered the course of its internal and external political affairs for some years past.

THE MANITOBA SCHOOL CASE.

A Rumor That the Privy Council Has Reversed the Supreme Court's Decision.

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 3.—It is reported here on the highest authority that the Privy Council of Great Britain has reversed the decision of the Canadian Supreme Court of last February to the effect that the laws of Canada did not sustain the appeal of the Manitoba minority for remedial legislation to be put in force against the abolition of separate schools in March, 1890, by the Greenway government of Manitoba.

Quebec Bonds in Paris.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—It is announced here that a fresh issue of Quebec province three per cent. bonds of 300 francs each, to the amount of 1,094,227 pounds has been offered on behalf of the Quebec Government through the Credit Lyons of Paris at 407, 50 francs per bond. The Government pays off on January 20 the four per cent. bonds which were renewed to July 15th, 1895. The new three per cent. bonds will be redeemed not earlier than January 20, 1905.

THE BABCOCK TEST.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—I see a statement in your last week's paper in regard to the Babcock Tester, written by Fairplay.

Now Mr. Fairplay thinks that the Babcock Tester should not be credited for the building up of the quality of cheese, and also for getting more cheese out of the quantity of milk.

Now, I do think that it should be so credited, for this reason, that the milk is better cared for at home than before. You will say, why? Will I tell you? In the old system of paying it did not matter much in what shape the milk came to the factory, as long as it got there, and the farmers would simply milk, throw the milk into the can, let it stay until the next morning and then take it to the factory, and during the night the cream would rise to the top and form a leathery covering over the milk, which would prevent the gas and all other bad flavours from escaping. Now when that milk would reach the factory it would have a bad flavour, and the cheese maker would tell the patron about it and how to improve his milk, when the patron would answer in a gruff voice, "Your always talking and finding fault with something." When the cheesemaker was telling him for his own good. Now the cream that rises on the milk in the night when being taken to the factory gets into lumps and when the cheesemaker is taking a sample to test, these lumps cannot be drawn into the pipette and therefore the patron will lose a certain amount of butter fat. And so in the factories where the Babcock Tester is used the patrons find this out and they go to work and dip their milk and keep the cream mixed well through it so as to have a higher test and on doing this, they not only get a higher test, but improved the quality of their milk which improved the quality of the cheese made, and the cream being thoroughly mixed through the milk, stays in the milk all through the process and makes a richer cheese, and also makes a better average. But when the cream becomes hardened on the milk, it can never be mixed in with it again, and goes off in the whey, and that is one thing that helps to give a poor average.

Now, when paying by the Babcock Tester it does not matter much whether the patron waters or skims, he only gets paid what his milk is worth. Perhaps, Mr. Fairplay is one of those who would like to water or skim, and make a big haul if he could. A good many of your readers would judge that that is the reason why he did not want the Babcock Tester to be used.

If Mr. Fairplay only understands his business as well as Mr. S. R. Payne understands his, he would not enter into things he did not know anthing about. In using the Babcock Tester the best always comes to the top, and I think if Mr. Fairplay and Mr. S. R. Payne where put in a test bottle and whirled around that Mr. S. R. Payne would be on top.

This is all I have to say this time, Mr. F., hoping you will come out again next week, for we cheesemakers are not scared of you.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for space in your valuable paper, I remain

Yours truly,

C. & B. M.

Y.P.S.C.E. NOTES.

THE LOCAL SOCIETIES.

The New Year's consecration service held in the Y. M.C. A. Hall was fairly well attended. Rev. Mr. Trotter, honorary president, presided, and the George street Methodist society supplied the music. This service throughout was very impressive and took somewhat the form of an experience meeting. All felt that they had come very far short of the mark during the past year. But one very noticeable feature was the motto selected by many for the ensuing year. The meeting seemed to take on the spirit of Paul, and the watchword of the local societies during the coming year will be, "We shall press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." We would recommend this watchword to every Society in the county, and ere the time comes for our county convention, we will see wonderful results.

ST. PAUL'S SOCIETY.

This society held their monthly consecration meeting on Sunday evening immediately after the evening service of the church. Mr. Crowe, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., presided, and spoke in a very touching manner of the solemnity of the occasion. This was the last service of the year. This society will hold their next regular meeting on Sunday night after the evening service, owing to the week of prayer starting on Monday night.

THE JUNIOR EXECUTIVE.

The local Junior Executive will hold their monthly business meeting at Miss Mann's residence, George street, on Saturday evening, 5th inst., at 3 o'clock. Miss White of St. Andrew's Society, will read a paper on "How to Conduct a Junior Endeavour Meeting." As this will be the only notice given, will all interested note the hour and date.

ELECTION AND INSTALLATION.

Wesley L. O. L., No. 419, Elects Officers for the Ensuing Year.

(From our Own Correspondent.)

On Monday evening, December 9th, No. 419 held their regular meeting for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year. After business of a routine character had been transacted, the W. M. declared the offices all vacant and called on Bro. S. Stinson, C. M., to take the chair and conduct the election of officers. The following is the result:

Stephen Harrison, re-elected	W M
Geo Portsmouth	D M
Robert Northey	Chap.
Robert Nugent	Rec-Sec
Absalom Northey	Fin.-Sec
Stephen Nicholls	Treas.
Peter Nicholls, re-elected	D of C
Richard Harrison	Lecturer
Aldus Northey	1st Committee
Henry Graham	2nd "
Henry Sage	3rd "
Albert Northey	4th "
John Northey	5th "

Bro. Stinson duly installed the W. M., who in turn installed the remainder of the officers to their various positions of honour. After short speeches from the newly elected officers and the C. M., the lodge was duly closed, all the brethren joined heartily in singing God Save the Queen. The brethren then sat down to a supper, provided for them after which all returned home well pleased with the prospects for the future.

The L. O. District Lodge, of Lakefield, will meet in the Young Canadians' Hall, over the bank, in Lakefield, on January 8th, 1895, at 2 p. m. All the members of the district are expected to attend.

WEDDING BELLS IN SMITH.

A Popular Young Lady of the Township is Wedded by Mr. Arthur Jones, of Toronto.

On Tuesday, Jan. 1st, an interesting ceremony was performed at the home of Mr. Jos. Walton, Smith, it being the marriage of his daughter, Miss Mabel, to Mr. Arthur Jones, secretary-treasurer of the Imperial Produce Co., Toronto.

The bride was assisted by Miss Flora Peverett, Peterborough, and the groom by Mr. Fred L. Ratcliff, Toronto.

All the friends of the family were present, including Mr. Jno. Walton, North Dakota, and Mr. Jno. Westren, Toronto.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. McLeod, pastor Gilmour Memorial church, and the bride was given away by her father. A most interesting dejeuner was served at the conclusion of the evening.

For hoarseness, loss of voice, and all affections of the vocal organs, the favorite remedy with many clergymen, singers, actors, auctioneers, and public speakers is Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. As an anodyne-expectorant, its beneficial effects are promptly felt.

Aerial Navigation.

The world is destined to be forced into giving aerial navigation a respectful consideration, and to advance a step or two beyond kite-flying. There is to be a gathering in Vienna of the men of all nations, who are earnestly endeavoring to work out the problem of aerial navigation. Herr Kress, who has distinguished himself by his clever inventions, has succeeded in producing a flying machine, which he exhibited in a large hall. Immediately after he had placed the machine on a table it rose "like a bird," and flew to the end of the hall, amidst the vociferous applause of the spectators. It was said that such machines might be made to exactly resemble birds, in order to be shot at by sportsmen who desire to improve their shooting capacity.—Court Journal.

Non-Transferable Theatre Ticket.

The theatres in Japan have a novel method of pass-out tickets which are positively not transferable. When a person wishes to leave the theatre before the close of the performance, with the intention of returning, he goes to the doorkeeper and holds out his right hand. The doorkeeper, then, with a rubber stamp, imprints on the palm the mark of the establishment.

Cured of a Serious Disease.

"I was suffering from what is known as Bright's disease for five years, and for days at a time I have been unable to straighten myself up. I was in bed for three weeks; during that time I had leeches applied and derived no benefit. Seeing Hood's Sarsaparilla advertised in the papers I decided to try a bottle. I found relief before I had finished taking half of a bottle. I got so much help from taking the first bottle, that I decided to try another, and since taking the second bottle I feel as well as ever I did in my life." GEO. MERRETT, Toronto, Ont.

ZION—OTONABEE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

The annual tea meeting of Zion, Otonabee, Methodist church, was held Tuesday, and proved a great success in every way. Tea was served in the town hall from five until eight o'clock, and was partaken of by a large number, after which an adjournment was made to the church where a most excellent programme of readings, recitations and vocal and instrumental music, was rendered. Addresses were delivered by Rev. Mr. Howard, Keene; Rev. J. J. Rae, Peterborough, and Rev. Mr. Bear, Ashburnham. A large number from town attended the entertainment and report having a most enjoyable time.

THE PRINTING TRADES.

In 1892 it is said that a book, name not given, was printed from vulcanized rubber stamps.

Stereotyping in use main according to the present method was invented in 1779 by Tilloch.

The first book to have its leaves numbered was "Æsop's Fables," printed by Caxton in 1484.

Chinese printing is certainly as early as A. D. 583, books of that date being now in existence.

When Others Fail

Hood's Sarsaparilla builds up the shattered system by giving vigorous action to the digestive organs, creating an appetite and purifying the blood. It is prepared by modern methods, possesses the greatest curative powers, and has the most wonderful record of actual cures of any medicine in existence. Take only Hood's.

Hood's Pills are purely vegetable, and do not purge, pain or gripe. 25c.

THE SARNIA'S VOYAGE.

The ship's Surgeon Tells the Story of the Battle With the Waves.

BELFAST, Jan. 3.—The disabled Dominion line steamer Sarnia has been towed into this port by tugs. She was towed as far as Malin Head by the British steamer Norwegian, Captain Christie, which sailed from Glasgow on December 29 for New York. When the tugs made fast to the disabled vessel the Norwegian proceeded on.

Dr. Rocha, the Sarnia's surgeon, told this story of the voyage: "It was the worst passage I ever experienced. For the first four days it was like summer. On the fifth day there was a storm and on the sixth a terrific gale, in which the rudder was smashed. We continued to steam steadily with head to the north west. We were then five hundred miles from Ireland. Engineer Ekillhorn made a new rudder but the weather was so bad that he could not place it.

"On December 22, the gale moderated and at daybreak on the 23rd we sighted and signalled the Anchoria. Two hawsers were passed from the Anchoria, but on December 25 both snapped. The Anchoria lay by for three days, on the last of which the Hibernian was sighted, but was not signalled because the Anchoria intimated that she would again take us in tow. However, two hours after the Hibernian vanished the Anchoria signalled that her rudder was out of gear, and she sailed away despite the Sarnia's signal, 'Do not abandon us.'

"We were 150 miles from land. The hurricane came again on the 28th. We were in a very bad sea on the 29th, but on the morning of the 30th the Norwegian was sighted. She towed us to Inistrahull and the Blazer brought us to Belfast. The tug Gamecock, which was sent out from Liverpool to look after the Sarnia, has not been reported. During the storm 150 sheep were washed overboard and 25 bullocks were killed. Two large seas fell on the Sarnia on the 28th, wrecking the deck house and carrying everything moveable overboard."

ROW IN THE SOBRANJE.

Bulgarian Deputies Have a Wild Time in the Chamber—Revolvers Drawn.

SOFIA, Jan. 3.—A scene of great excitement occurred during yesterday's session of the Sobranje and bloodshed narrowly averted. An Opposition deputy accused Premier Stolloff of having diverted a portion of the funds which had been set apart for the suppression of brigandage to the subvention of political spies, whereupon M. Stolloff sprang to his feet and exclaimed in a voice harsh with passion: "You lie."

This exclamation immediately created a furore among the Opposition deputies, in the midst of which the President of the Chamber order the expulsion of the member who had made the charge against M. Stolloff. The ushers endeavored to eject the offending member, but the deputies of the Opposition attacked them with their fists and drove the ushers from the hall. Several of them were knocked down and badly beaten.

During the melee several deputies drew revolvers but they were disarmed before they were able to use their weapons. The Opposition members, who were at the disadvantage of being numerically the weaker party, finally withdrew from the Chamber after loudly hurling accusations of injustice at the President.

A NEW ERA FOR RUSSIA.

Emperor Nicholas Gives Abundant Evidence of a Reign of Tolerance.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The Daily Chronicle's Moscow correspondent says he has excellent authority for this story: "When the lists of officers nominated for promotion by the ministers of war and marine, were submitted to the Czar with the hitherto customary details concerning the nominees, His Majesty struck his pen through the column headed religion remarking that this in no way concerned him. There is good reason to believe that the same spirit of tolerance will overspread the country when the Czar fully assumes the reins of power."

A Canadian Among the Victims.

BUFFALO, Jan. 3.—Among the victims of the Delavan hotel fire at Albany was Miss Agnes Wilson, an employe of the hostelry. Miss Wilson was a native of Canada, her home being at Atwood, Ont., a small town about 150 miles from Toronto. Miss Wilson came to Buffalo from Canada about four years ago and was for some time employed at the Genesee. From the Genesee she went to the Delavan at Albany. Miss Wilson had visited her home at Atwood last summer, remaining there for some time. She was about 22 years of age. One of the guests at the Delavan reported as missing has since turned up leaving the total number of the dead at 16 instead of 17.

The Woollen Schedule Becomes Law.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The new woollen schedule of the tariff went into effect yesterday and as a result the withdrawals of woollen goods from the bonded warehouses were extremely large and the receipts from customs were the largest for any day since 1892. The amount of duties paid on these woollen goods was $1,097,657. The amount of woollen goods in bond is valued at over $4,000,000.

OUT OF THE ORDINARY.

A New York man is reported to have killed fifty-three rattlesnakes at one time recently in a den that he discovered.

A four-year-old Nebraska boy was burned to death recently by pulling a jar of hot plum butter over on himself.

Will Dunn's horse, in Marble Hill, Mo., during the drought, learned to jump out over the pasture fence, go to the creek to drink and jump back again to voluntary confinement.

Henry Goodrich, of Shirley, Me., was eating dinner the other day when he looked out of the window and saw a she bear and two cubs. He jumped up and banged the mother and one cub.

The often discussed actually happened in the case of Eben White, of St. Johns, Mich., recently. He was asleep under a tree when a chipmunk ran into his mouth and interfered with his snoring.

Johann Bergat, of Franklin county, Ky., was born in a poorhouse a little over a hundred years ago, worked as a traveling tailor during his mature years, and then went back to the almshouse, where he still makes trousers.

At Schillgallen in Germany lately an old gentleman of seventy-three, named Jurklies, who had already buried three wives, proposed to a fourth. She told him he was too old, whereupon he went into the neighboring forest and hanged himself.

FOREIGN PERSONALS.

Grimaldi, the clown, is said to be kept immortal by having a statue in London named after him.

"Blind Alsek," an old beggar of Sterling, Scotland, knew all the Bible by heart. If a person named chapter and verse of any part, he could from memory give the passage.

Mlle. Pauline, of Holland, is probably the tiniest woman on the planet. She is eighteen years old, weighs less than nine pounds and lacks four inches of being as high as a two-foot rule.

A first cousin of the grandfather of the new president of France, Mme. Duchesne (Perier), came to America in 1817 and founded in this country the Order of Ladies of the Sacred Heart.

The mother of Abdul-Aziz, the new young sultan of Morocco, bids fair to have as much sway as does the empress of China. She is a woman of great talent and boundless tact, and her son is said to consult her before taking any political step.

TABLE NOVELTIES.

For receptions and other gatherings small silver baskets are lined with fresh sprigs of mint and filled with cream peppermints and wintergreens.

A long silver bread tray, with fluted sides, in the centre of which are engraved the words "Our Daily Bread," is among the late fancies.

A new finger bowl consists of two bowls, one inside the other, the outer bowl being about six sizes larger than the inner one. The space between the bowls is filled with flowers.

One of the latest novelties is a reception plate, which is half plate and half tray. It contains a socket to hold a glass or cup, without spilling, with room for salads or sandwiches on the tray.

Fancy silver holders for Edam and pineapple cheeses are useful. They consist of a standard with several prongs which clasp the cheese firmly, and a little silver knob which screws in the top to lift the cheese after it is cut. On one side of the standard is a rest for the scoop.

DYING WORDS OF GREAT MEN.

Goethe—Let the light enter.
Tasso—Into Thy hands, O Lord.
Keats—I feel the daisies growing over me.
Herder—Refresh me with a great thought.
Alfieri—Clasp my hand, my dear friend; I die.
Addison—See with what grace a Christian can die.
Cardinal Beauford—What! is there no bribing death?
Sir Walter Scott—I feel as if I were to be myself again.
Frederick V. of Denmark—There is not a drop of blood on my hands.
Mirabeau—Let me die amid the sound of delicious music and the fragrance of flowers.—Christian at Work.

Thrown Down by a Dog.

Mrs. Dineen, while going to attend divine service at St. Peter's Cathedral, New Year's morning, in crossing the street at the corner of Charlotte and Aylmer streets, came in contact with a St. Bernard dog on the full gallop, which felled her to the hard icy sidewalk. The result was the fracturing of her collar bone. She is under the care of Dr. King.

After-Season Bargains.

The Peterborough Bookstore has decided to have the money. There must be no dull times in this live store. The Time to Prune Trees.

A gentleman who has had thirty years experience in pruning, pointed out the injurious effects of trimming maples at this time of year, and some are doing this, causing a great loss of sap—the life-blood of the tree. This gentlemen says June is the proper month for trimming maples and February for trimming fruit trees. It may seem a simple thing, as the owner of trees may imagine, to mangle off a few limbs of a tree and call it pruning, but pruning, like everything else, requires a knowledge of the business, and a knowledge of the right time to perform such surgical operations.

For Sweet Charity's Sake.

At the last meeting of the City Fathers, the following motion was adopted unanimously: "Moved by Councillor White, chairman of the Charity Committee, seconded by Councillor Roger, chairman of the Court of Revision, that in view of the depressed state of trade and the scarcity of bread and money in town, it is resolved that this council, headed by the Mayor, attend in a body the Grand Carnival of the Sons of Canada, on Friday, January 11th, and endeavour to secure some of the valuable prizes, which are on exhibition in the windows of the Peterborough Hardware Co. 1d

Died in Toronto.

On New Year's day Miss Eliza A., daughter of Mr. Benjamin Hasel, of Apsley, died suddenly at 28 St. Mary's street, Toronto. The young lady, whose sudden death will cast gloom over her home and amongst her many friends, had gone to the city on a holiday visit to friends, was afflicted with ulceration of the stomach, and the crisis arrived as described and death claimed her as his own. The remains were brought to Peterborough on Wednesday and taken north. The interment takes place at Apsley today (Jan. 3rd.) The deceased lady was a successful teacher, and was well and favourably known in Norwood and Madoc, where she filled satisfactory engagements. Her family will have the cordial sympathy of the community in their sad bereavement.

Railway Company, informing him that a meeting of the directors of the road would be held at Cobourg on Tuesday next, 8th of January, and notifying him to attend.

Mr. Gallilet also stated that Mr. Bowen, the contractor, had advised Mr. Cameron, the president, that his syndicate had completed all arrangements and will at once put up the $10,000 deposit as soon as approval of contract is signified to them.

The chief object of the meeting on Tuesday is to consider the new contract which is to be submitted to the directors, and to be approved of if satisfactory. "If it meets with their approval the C. N. & P. railway is a certainty, and work will be commenced at an early date.

Ramsay 'Round the World.

The popular and clever entertainer, Mr. W. E. Ramsay, will present his latest success, "A Trip Around the World" in Bradburn's Opera House, Wednesday evening, Jan. 9th. The entertainment is spoken of in the highest terms by both press and public and is said to surpass anything of the kind ever before attempted. The scenes of the different countries are remarkably realistic, while Mr. Ramsay's songs are all new and sung in Canada for the first time. 1d

Behind the Scenes.

A little scene took place at the opera house Tuesday evening which was not on the programme, but which was greatly enjoyed by the witnesses thereof. Half a dozen young "bloods" finding the door of one of the boxes unlocked, profited thereby to the extent of witnessing several acts of the play before they were discovered. Mr. R.W. Marks wished to assess them half a dollar for the use of the box, but the six young men preferred to slide out by the stage entrance. Later in the evening they came back to the opera house and threatened to kill the show for the rest of the time it remained in town, but that the threat didn't amount to much was evidenced by the packed house last night.

Another Crowded House Greets the Marks Bros.

Last evening the doors of the opera house had to be again closed on account of the tremendous crowds which sought admission, and for whom there was no seating accommodation in the hall. The sparkling Irish comedy-drama, "The Rose of Kerry" was presented in such a manner as to call forth rounds after rounds of applause. The company is an admirably balanced one and well deserving of the patronage of the Peterborough public. Comedy-drama is the forte of the cast and the utmost satisfaction is being given along this line. Situations abounding in fun crop up continually and give the specialists an opportunity of proving their merit. Nothing is said or done on the stage which could offend the most fastidious, and the performances are being patronized by the better class of theatre-goers. A word of warning may not be amiss, viz., either go early or have your seat reserved, for by eight o'clock standing room only will be available. To-night the beautiful comedy drama, "Esmeralda," will be presented. During the play several high class specialties will be introduced.

Miss Emma Robinson, Toronto, who has been spending the Christmas holidays with her parents, Albert street, town, returned home this afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Wright, Mr. Fife and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Wood, and Archie Wood, all of Peterborough, spent New Year's day in Campbellford, the guests of Mr. Fred. W. Wood.—Campbellford Herald.

Miss Ethel Burnham and Miss Louise Yokome returned to Toronto to-day to resume the study of the violin under Herr Klingenfeld. Mrs. Burnham accompanied her daughter for a few days stay in the city.

Mr. Sheriff, of the local branch of the Montreal Bank, leaves in the course of a day or two to assume a most responsible position with the firm of E. B. Eddy & Co., Ottawa. Mr. Sheriff will be greatly missed both in social and athletic circles. He played a straight bat at cricket, was the best quarter back the Peterborough Rugby team ever had on the field, and was a most promising curler.

The Schools.

The public schools re-opened this morning with a fair attendance, but the scholars in the two entrance classes under the tuition of Mr. Smith, as well as those in the Kindergarten department, had to be again dismissed until Monday, as the damage in the class rooms, occasioned by the recent fire, had not been repaired. These scholars will have holidays until Monday, by which time it is hoped everything will be in order. The attendance at the Collegiate Institute was very large.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES AND COUNCILLORS.

In yesterday's EXAMINER was printed an article generally approving of the record of the school board and suggesting that the status of the board had improved since the legal enactment prohibiting a member of the council being appointed a member of the school board. As this reference has been misunderstood somewhat by candidates in the present contest, and as the statement, being made incidentally, was not perhaps sufficiently explicit, it may be explained that the school law, as amended recently, provides that no High School trustee shall be at the same time a member of a municipal council. Of course this does not apply to members of a public school board, and it is perfectly lawful for the ratepayers, if they see fit to do so, to elect any member of a public school board to the council, or a member of the council to a public school board. The law thus recognises the people as supreme. The law mentioned prevents members of a municipal council appointing themselves—or one of themselves—to a position on the High School Board—all members of a public school board being elective, by the people.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER.

EXAMINER NEWS BOYS' COMPETITION.

List of the Lads who Found it Easy to Sell a Good Newspaper (The Examiner)—Winners of the Handsome Prizes.

On Monday evening last, hundreds of newsboys crowded around the EXAMINER office and excitement ran high amongst the little hustlers for was not that the evening upon which the EXAMINER'S newsboys' competition was to be declared closed and prizes awarded to the boys who had hustled hardest during the last two months and sold the most papers?

The list of prizes which were offered was a brilliant one. Never before had any paper in the Midland District held out such inducements to newsboys to business activity and the boys responded with a will to the liberal offer in accordance with which prizes were awarded as under:

1st prize—A solid silver watch to the boy who sold the largest number.

2nd prize—A suit of clothes, warm, heavily lined, to the boy who sold the second largest number.

3rd prize—A reefer overcoat to the boy who sold the third largest number.

4th prize—A boys' fur cap to the boy who sold the fourth largest number.

5th prize—A pair of winter boots to the boy who sold the fifth largest number.

6th prize—A warm pea jacket to the boy who sold the sixth largest number.

7th prize—A pair of spring skates to the boy who sold the seventh largest number.

8th prize—A ticket for the rink to the boy who sold the eighth largest number.

9th prize—A pair of boys' overshoes to the boy who sold the ninth largest number.

10th prize—A pair of boys' moccasins to the boy who sold the tenth largest number.

11th prize—A suit of warm underwear to the boy who sold the eleventh largest number.

12th prize—A dandy band sleigh to the boy who sold the twelfth largest number.

CONSOLATION PRIZES.

Each boy who sold an average of twelve DAILY EXAMINERS per day during the competition, ending Dec. 31st received a boy's good winter cap.

Winners of the first twelve prizes above mentioned were excluded from the consolation prizes.

Master G. W. Hall was the enterprising lad who headed the long list of competitors, and he now carries a handsome silver watch as a reward for the energy he displayed. The other prizes were won respectively by P. Wright, C. Cookson, H. Waram, G. Hardill, J. Rose, J. Ellis, Gilbert Harris, L. D'Russia, A. Brewer, E. Lane, and L. Dobson, who have all received the prizes as enumerated above.

The EXAMINER had a two-fold object in making the generous offer which it did to the newsboys. In the first place, while more people were given an opportunity of seeing what a most excellent purveyor of news the EXAMINER is, at the same time the competition served to bring out all the latent energy of Peterborough newsboys, and enabled the smartest of them to prove their stamina and abilities for hustling. The boys who entered into the competition, have awakened to the fact that for a hustler, it is an easy matter to clear sufficient money to keep them in clothing with enough left over to invest in all those odds and ends so dear to the boyish heart. This then was the main object of the competition—to develop this latent energy and ambition, which, when aroused, has in the past sent many a newsboy up to the top of the ladder of fame. The circulation of the EXAMINER has been boomed away up by the competition, but at the same time in after years many of these boys will thank the EXAMINER from the bottom of their hearts for the liberal offers which were made to induce as many as possible to enter into the competition and show what was in them.

WILL THE PETERBOROUGH CHEESE BOARD LOSE VICTORIA SECTION?

A correspondent writes to the Lindsay Post:—

SIR,—I noticed an article in the Post of Nov. 30th, calling attention to the importance of having a cheese market in Victoria. Now, I think this a question of importance to all interested in the cheese industry, as there are at present quite a number of factories in Victoria, but there are a great many more needed, as the farmers in many localities are not within reach of a factory and are anxious to have factories built amongst them, and those that have factories are increasing the number of their cows every year. This is a proof that it pays, and I am of the opinion that if we had a good cheese market in Lindsay that Victoria would advance more rapidly in the line of dairying, and this would enable us to manufacture the cheese at lower prices, as the factories are now at the expense of sending salesmen to Peterborough every two weeks. I think it will cost on an average $2 per factory each time, which would be saved if we had a market in Lindsay. Then we are obliged to sell it at lower prices—from 1-16th to 1-8th below Peterborough. Now, what shall we do—go on in the same old way, or have a market established in Lindsay. We will never get a market by talk alone; let us take steps in the matter, I would suggest that some one interested would call a meeting at an early date, to be held in Lindsay for the purpose of discussing the question, and so be ready to report at the Dairymen's Convention which will be held in January.

Yours, etc.,
E. THURSTON.

In Olden Times

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action; but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs, will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

Own a Good Piano.

It costs but a trifle more to own a good piano, like the "Rheimer," the "Morris," the "Heintzman" or the "Mendelssohn." The difference in cost is not for one day, or one month, or one year. It's worth five dollars a year for four years to have exactly what you want. Just think it over. Have a talk with Mr. J. W. Crosby, of 349 Water street, the agent for these four first-class instruments, and close the contract before he is called on the 'phone.

BEE-KEEPERS' ASSOCIATION.

To the Editor:

SIR,—Those who have travelled outside of our Dominion and take an interest in the development of the country, and note what is thought of Canada abroad, its climate, its agricultural, mineral and other resources, will find that we have reason to lament that it, for so long, has had the reputation of being a land of ice and snow. Those who are wise will take a lesson from the past, and make every effort to repair these errors. During a trip recently south and west in the United States, past convictions were confirmed. Many people with average intelligence have the idea that Canada cannot grow peaches, and some even thought that grapes could be grown only in isolated localities, while others again remarked that I came "from the land of ice palaces," and so frequently was this latter remark made, that in a feeling of resentment I framed the wish that the idea of having ice palaces could be buried so promptly and deeply that no one would ever have the energy to resurrect it on Canadian soil. I find this is the thought of almost everyone who has had this side presented, and I therefore venture to give publicity to the fact. Just as it is a common saying, "let a lie have a fair start and the truth will never catch up," so it is in connection with a winter and summer exhibition—the impression the former gives will never be wiped out by the latter. Those not interested in the development of our country will take greater notice of our ice than our Industrial Exposition. With a good deal of effort the North American Beekeepers' Convention has been secured for Toronto next year. We expect delegates from almost every State in the Union, and I am anxious to arrange for it during the time of the Toronto Industrial Exhibition, and, to show our friends what Canada can do, and we want the co-operation of all Canadians. I think Canada can still boast, quality and quantity considered, of the best honey exhibit ever held upon this continent. It is undoubtedly good, but next year we want to make it better. The Toronto Industrial will have the hearty co-operation of the Canadian Bee Journal, and between them we can have a honey exhibit that not only delegates from across the border will stare at, but will be interested in, and will call forth their admiration and wonder. We want a separate building in a central locality, or at least within easy reach of those going out of the grounds. We want a building not large, but attractive, and well lighted. All along the sides we want honey exhibits proper, giving every exhibitor an equal chance. In the centre, in a place conveniently arranged, we want a display of the many appliances used in modern bee keeping, exhibits of hives of bees, showing the economy of the hive, workers, queens, drones and brood in all stages. Perhaps in another, comb building going on, and in another, comb honey as it appears partially and entirely finished by the bees. With proper persons to explain all this, and a grand exhibit of honey, I am safe in saying there will be nothing more attractive upon the grounds. Small packages of honey must, of course, be offered for sale. This helps the bee-keeper who exhibits, and it helps the visitor, for he may be induced to buy in that way, and become a consumer, when otherwise he might never taste honey; and it will help dealers in town, for it creates a demand for honey which they can supply later.

I have seen expositions at Detroit, Columbus, Buffalo, and other places, but Toronto's is the best. The bee and honey department has perhaps not received all the attention it should; judging of honey should be done by means of a score card, as with cheese and butter, and heavier prizes have been offered on bees and honey in other places. I have no favours to ask from the manager, but he has often had my sympathy.

We certainly want to continue having at Toronto an exhibition which shall have for its leading feature the educational and the instructive, the pleasing and the wholesome. The solid business man does not want to have to the right and left of him men of no reputation, with catch-penny schemes, neither do they want side attractions which will overshadow their own valuable exhibits. On the other hand, modern ideas appear to require side attractions, and it is in the interest of the business man to have the public brought to the exhibition as long as the means adopted are above reproach. The Exhibition management will doubtless be pleased to give the preference to the desirable exhibitor, but when the best does not fill the space, the next best must step in.

Having a first-class display of honey, bees, and bee-keepers' appliances at Toronto, we will offer the delegates to the convention of the North American Bee-keepers a strong inducement to meet at that time. This year the society met at St. Joseph, Missouri. The Commercial Club-rooms were thrown open to us, the city entertained us at considerable expense and the press took a keen interest in the proceedings. There was a large deputation from Lincoln, Nebraska, anxious to have the convention there next year. The city offered a free hall, invitations were extended by several education institutions and other inducements were offered. I had to promise a suitable hall free of charge in Toronto, or lose the convention, and I hope Canada, Toronto and the Toronto Industrial will help us along the above lines.

Yours, etc.,
F. R. HOLTERMANN,
Pres. N. A. B. A.

DUMMER.

Obituary of the Late Mrs. Robert Kidd.

There died at her home in Dummer, on the 12th Dec., at the ripe age of 74 years, Mrs. Robert Kidd. The deceased was born in Devonshire, England, and was a daughter of the late Edward Johns, who came with his family to Canada in 1832. In 1842 she was united in marriage to Mr. Robert Kidd. Through the union there were 11 children, six of whom still live to mourn the loss of a faithful mother, viz., Mrs. Jas. McFee, of Lenox, Iowa; Mrs. Donald McNaughton, of Asphodel; Christina and William, who still live at home; Alexander, of Iowa; and Robert of Dummer. Mrs. Kidd leaves three brothers and one sister,—Mr. Jacob Johns, Cobourg; Mr. Henry Johns, Otonabee; Mr. Edward Johns, Belmont; and Mrs. Robert Johnston, Peterborough. A large concourse of of people followed the remains to the old Baptist burying ground, Dummer, where the faithful wife, the true mother and the loving sister was laid away to await the resurrection call.

NEW YEAR
NEW GOODS
NEW LEAF
1895

On looking over last year's business we find that we have everything to b thankful for, as it was one of the best years that, notwithstanding the hard times, we ever had, and that is saying a great deal.

Now, as this is the season for making good resolutions, we have resolved to surpass, if possible, last year's trade. To attain this end we have duplicated all our fall Cloths and added all the latest winter patterns we could find. We buy for spot cash and can afford to sell on a small margin. Give us a call and we will do the rest.

Our Gent's Furnishings and Underclothing Departments are both well stocked. We have a few choice Overcoats still left which we will let off cheap.

CHILDREN WHO SUFFER

from scrofulous, skin or scalp diseases, ought to be given Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, for purifying the blood. For children who are puny, pale or weak, the "Discovery" is a tonic which builds up both flesh and strength. What is said of it for children applies equally to adults. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, it sets at work all the processes of digestion and nutrition, rouses every organ into natural action, and brings back health and strength. In recovering from "grippe," or in convalescence from pneumonia, fevers, and other wasting diseases, it speedily and surely invigorates and builds up the whole system.

For all diseases caused by a torpid liver or impure blood, as Dyspepsia and Biliousness, if it doesn't benefit or cure in every case, the money is returned.

DEEDS OF STRONG MEN

AS RECORDED IN ANCIENT AND MODERN TIMES.

Latter-Day Athletes Far More Than a Match for Those of Old—Some of the Wonderful Feats Performed by Giants of the Present.

I have often heard it asserted, says a writer in the New York Advertiser, that the human race was degenerating in regard to personal strength and activity; that the ancients were physically stronger than the men of modern times. In searching through the records of athletes of ancient Greece, etc., I have been enabled to make some comparison between the strong men of that time and those of the present day, which, I think, shows conclusively that the present generation are far ahead of any authenticated record we can find of the ancient. The idea that the human race as a whole is degenerating is a popular delusion, founded on ignorance of the plainest and most undeniable facts. The idea that men are falling off in size is a mistaken one. There are good grounds for doubting that any man of former times ever performed a feat of strength beyond the powers of the strongest man of the present time. In popular estimation Samson (the original one) remains the typical strong man, and many will think it sacrilege to doubt his claim to be the strongest man that ever lived. Yet, what feat is recorded of him that has any undoubted definite value as a measure of strength? He killed a young lion with his hands. Polydamus also killed with his bare hands a huge and fierce lion, and so did Richard Cœur de Leon, according to history.

Another celebrated athlete who flourished about 500 B.C. was Milo of Crotona, a Greek town in the south of Italy. In his case also we have nothing recorded by which we can form any accurate idea of his strength. He was victor six times at the Olympic games, and among the things attributed to him are the following: Binding a cord round his head, he could break it by retaining his breath and swelling out his veins; with his elbow resting on his side he defied anyone to open his closed fist; standing on an oiled quoit he defied anyone to push him off it. The last is sheer nonsense, the first two indefinite. Samson or Sandow of the present day can bind chains around their arms, and by swelling their muscles can burst the chains easily, which I consider a much harder thing to do than breaking a cord—that would be child's play for them.

Milo was also credited with having carried a 4-year-old heifer through the Stradium of Olympia, killed it with a blow of his fist, and afterward ate it, all on one day. There are several men of to-day who are credited with the power to kill an ox with the blow of the fist. Now, unless the heifer was four times his own weight, it was no great feat to carry it, and if it was four times his own weight, then it was impossible for him to have eaten it in a day, even allowing a wide margin for offal. All these records, however, still leave us ignorant of how strong he was.

Coming to more recent times, we find Thomas Topman an Englishman, who exhibited about 1740. He was about 5 10 inches in height, and weighed in the neighborhood of 200 pounds, and was very strongly built. Topman's feats were feats of real strength, and he is the first performer that could bear comparison with those of the present day. Here are two of the best records of real strength recorded of him: He stood on a platform which had two parallel bars at a convenient height on his right and left, on which to place his hands. Below him on a lower platform were three barrels of water, weighing altogether about 1,836 pounds. These being bound together, a chain from them passed through the platform on which Topman stood, and was attached to a belt that passed over his neck and shoulders; he then lifted the whole by straightening his arms and legs. His other genuine record was lifting by seizing with his hands a frame on which rested a stone weighing 800 pounds.

It is my candid opinion that there are men living at the present time of greater personal strength than any Milo, Samson or Topman. We will now place the following records against Topman's lift of 1,836 pounds. In this country some twenty years ago several athletes gave their attention to devising harness for lifting heavy weights, with the following results: Dr. S. W. Winship lifted 2,600 pounds, John J. Lucus 2,700 pounds, A. A. Butts, 2,737½ pounds, and William B. Curtis, at present editor of the Spirit of the Times, 3,239 pounds—1,403 pounds more than Topman's. There is no doubt but that the apparatus of these athletes was superior to that used by Topman, but Donald Dinnie, the famous Scottish athlete, with apparatus inferior to Topman's, in that he had no supports for his arms, with mere straps, lifted 1,904 pounds. In 1884 Louis Cyr, a young Canadian, standing under a plank, with legs slightly bent at the knees, back bent forward, and his hands resting on a stool, pushed up with his back, arms and legs the plank with pig iron resting on it, weighing 2,550½ pounds, and a few years later the same athlete, using the same method raised 3,336 pounds.

In hand lifting there is less room for improved apparatus, and here again the modern strong men completely eclipsed Topman. Dr. Winship lifted 1,200 pounds, William B. Curtis 1,230, L. Lensing, 1,884, David L. Dowd 1,442½ pounds, and Jefferson of Boston lifted with his hands alone 1,571½ pounds, nearly double Topman's best lift.

There are generally from half a dozen to a score of athletes, each proclaiming himself the strongest man on earth. Here are some of them: Samson, Kennedy, Sandow, Cyclops, Ajax, Attila, the brothers Samson and Hercules and Louis Cyr, who, in the writer's opinion, is really the strongest man in the world to-day.

Making Money.

Where are we to look for new outlets? Inventors and discoverers are the saviors of society. The photographic art is modern enough to be a useful case in point. Photographers increased 41 per cent. from 1871 to 1881, and 59 per cent. in the following decade. New industries give rise to new wastes; and it was not long before it was discovered that the precious metal used in the developing solutions could be recovered, or that the yolk of eggs, whose white was employed in providing albuminized paper, need not be thrown away as valueless, but would realize handsome prices from pastry cooks. The history of waste products, indeed, is extremely instructive, and very pertinent to this article. In some cases by-products have become the main products. Gas-tar—truly an unpromising material—now yields numberless products, as any science primer shows. From even more unlikely sources scents are obtained. As Lord Playfair once said: "Many a fair forehead is damped with the huile de mille-fleurs without knowing that its essential ingredient is derived from the drainage of a cow-house." To the French belongs the greatest credit in discovering new means of making money. The Parisian chiffonnier is much sharper than his London brother, who does a queer trade in cigar ends and old hats, boots, etc., which are "faked" to look as good as new. It was a Parisian who first utilized old sardine tins, long regarded as worthless. He extracted the solder and utilized the tin in the manufacture of toys and for beating into furniture. Another Parisian, an old soldier, collected old crusts and made them into bread crumbs for cooks, and in time started a place of business, whence were supplied crontes au pot, so dear to connoisseurs in soups.—London Exchange.

"You seem to think a newspaper man knows everything," exclaimed the reporter. "Well," replied the self-satisfied man, "there's no reason why he shouldn't. I'm sure I am always ready to be interviewed."—Washington Star.

"Tell us," cried the group of maidens, "how to remain always young and attractive?" "That is easy," replied the sage without even lifting his eyes from his book. "Get a fortune and stay single."—Indianapolis Journal.

"Let me show you our new correspondence paper for ladies," said the stationer. "We consider this the greatest novelty of the season." "It's very pretty," said Mrs. Barlow, "but why is it specially for ladies?" "It has the letters P. S. engraved at the top of the inner sheet," said the stationer.—Harper's Bazar.

Every Man Should Insure.

The following from a Toronto Daily, is worthy of very careful consideration:—

The force of the obligation resting upon every man to carry a substantial insurance policy on his life was never better illustrated than in the death of Sir John Thompson.

If ever a man lived who could claim freedom from this obligation it was the late Premier. Before the fatal illness seized him he had every reason to expect a long life; his earning capacity was large; and he was, at one time at all events, justified in expecting that he would fall heir to a considerable fortune. But the expectations of fortune were swept away, death came in mid-life and pratically the only support left for the bereaved family is a paltry insurance of $6,000.

The moral of it all is that every man, no matter how circumstanced, should insure, and insure to the largest extent that his income will justify.

The Late Premier, SIR JOHN S. D. THOMPSON, was insured in the SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY of CANADA.

MEDICAL KINETOSCOPES.

Recent Uses of the Invention in the Study of Disease.

The invention of the kinetoscope, which is at present attracting a large amount of popular interest, resembles some of Mr. Edison's inventions in being really an improvement or an adaptation of discoveries of other men. This in no way implies that the fame of the American invention is undeserved. On the contrary, it is due to his genius that more experiments of scientists have been converted into things of real and lasting benefit to civilization. Sir Humphrey Davy discovered that carbon could be rendered incandescent in a current of electricity, and that oxygen consumed the carbon: but it remained for Edison to exclude the oxygen and to give the electric light to civilization. The main essentials of the phonograph were in use before Edison conceived the idea of making a practical use of the machine. The Muybridge photographs were the forerunners of the kinetoscope.

It has been proclaimed that the time is now at hand when books and theatres will become rarities, and the average citizen will be content to use the phonograph and the kinetoscope for his pleasure. Such a prediction is over-sanguine, as yet, for the reason that these inventions are not yet perfect. The beauty of concerted music or of rare singing are still marred by the electric whirr and the false sounds that issue from the phonograph's diaphragm. The splendid color and dazzling luster of the opera's stage are as yet beyond the grasp of the kinetoscope. Perhaps these things may come some day, but they have not come yet, and in the meantime the present generation is concerned chiefly with the things of to-day. The telephone, for instance, is of more immediate use to civilization than are the phonograph and kinetoscope combined.

Science has already found certain uses for Mr. Edison's later inventions, however. The phonograph counterfeits permanently many sounds that are useful to therapeutics; the normal and unsound heartbeats, "rales" in the lungs, certain vocal sounds depending upon special conditions of the throat of tonsils. It is of decided benefit to science to have permanent records that can always be of easy access without recourse to a special patient. In the same way the kinetoscope promises to be of great utility to medical science by reproducing physical action that can be studied in detail or comprehensively as the student desires. In this city some effort in that direction has already been undertaken, and more will be developed from time to time, especially in nervous disorders that bring on certain physical action that is often so violent and vigorous as to baffle any attempt at close study by means of the unaided eye.

The Muybridge photographs showed some years ago that the eye was unreliable for the detection of the absolute details of rapid animal motion. Instantaneous photography alone gives a correct representation of the different attitudes taken by men or animals in rapid action, and it is quite possible that the medical science may achieve fresh discoveries by the help of the kinetoscope. Thus in studying the muscular action that results from certain nerve disorders, it may be possible to trace the nerves which are affected. Even in less complicated cases, like lameness, a surgeon may be able to reach conclusions with greater quickness and certainty by securing the details of muscular action of the affected limb, as the speed of the kinetoscope may be regulated at will. Altogether, then, while the reproduction of grand opera for the multitude may be a matter of the remote future, the kinetoscope is something of more use to civilization than a mere pictorial toy.—Boston Advertiser.

When a Pumpkin Grows.

A. P. Anderson, a graduate student in the department of botany at the State University, has just completed some novel and very interesting investigations as to the growth of plants. In this series of experiments Mr. Anderson has been studying the growth of the pumpkin and its vine, making use of his new electrical device for measuring plant growth.

This work has been in progress for fully a week, and the interesting fact is revealed that the pumpkin itself does most of its growing after 7 o'clock in the evening and diminishes its activity as the sun rises and begins to act upon its leaves. From 9 o'clock in the morning until 3 o'clock in the afternoon the weight of the fruit diminishes, owing to the evaporation of water from the leaves of the plant. The general results show that when the fruit grows most the vine grows least, and vice versa.

The course of these experiments has been watched with great interest by the botanical department, as they cover a part of the science as yet very little known.—Minneapolis Times.

THREE RUNNING SORES
PHYSICIANS FAILED
BUT B.B.B. CURED

DEAR SIRS—After having used Burdock Blood Bitters for Scrofula in the blood, I feel it my duty to make known the results. All to no avail. I was treated by a skilled physician but he failed. I was then advised to use B. B. B., which could not be healed, until I tried them completely healed. ing the skin and flesh sound and whole. As long as I live I shall speak of the virtues of B.B.B., and I feel grateful to Providence that such a medicine is provided for sufferers.

A SCALY ERUPTION
UNENDURABLE ITCHING
Suffered Three Years—Now Perfectly Cured by B. B. B.

GENTLEMEN—I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for Skin Diseases, from which I have been a sufferer for three years. I have spent six bottles and am now entirely cured. I tried other remedies, such as Donald Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura Remedies, but all to no good. I consulted one year with the best physicians in the land; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but could not remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard dry scales. The itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured, and I owe it all to B. B. B.

"I TELL ALL MY FRIENDS."

A Lady of Shelburne, Ont., Permanently Cured of Indigestion After Using Two Bottles of South American Nervine —Glad to Let Everyone Know It.

MRS. A. V. GALBRAITH.

With indigestion it is not only that one suffers all imaginable torments, physical and mental, but more, perhaps, than anything else, an impaired digestion is the forerunner of countless ailments that in their course lead to the most serious consequences. Let the stomach get out of order and it may be said the whole system is diseased. When the digestive organs fail in their important functional duties, head and heart, mind and body are sick. These were the feelings of Mrs. Galbraith, wife of Mr. A. V. Galbraith, the well-known jeweller of Shelburne, Ont., before she had learned of the beneficent results to be gained by the use of South American Nervine Tonic. In so many words she said: "Life was becoming unbearable. I was so cranky I was really ashamed of myself. Nothing that I ate would agree with me; now it does not matter what I eat. I take enjoyment out of all my meals." Here are Mrs. Galbraith's words of testimony to South American Nervine, given over her own signature:

"Shelburne, Ont., March 27, 1894.
"I was for considerable time a sufferer from indigestion, experiencing all the misery and annoyance so common to this complaint. South American Nervine was recommended to me as a safe and effective remedy for all such cases. I used only two bottles, and am pleased to testify that these fully cured me, and I have had no indication of a return of the trouble since. I never fail to recommend the Nervine to all my friends troubled with indigestion or nervousness.

"MRS. A. V. GALBRAITH."

The testimony of this lady, given freely and voluntarily out of a full heart because of the benefits she experienced in her own person, have an echo in thousands of hearts all over the country. South American Nervine must cure, because it operates at once on the nerve centres. These nerve centres are the source from which emanates the life fluid that keeps all organs of the body in proper repair. Keep these nerve centres sound and disease is unknown. There is no trick in the business. Everything is very simple and common sense like. South American Nervine strengthens the digestive organs, tones up the liver, enriches the blood, is peculiarly efficacious in building up shattered and nervous constitutions. It never fails to give relief in one day.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease).
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want:
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then were home, but since, I miss.

They gave us every one, a kiss,
And said, "be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home,
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then to see comes, it seemed so funny,
To buy Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

RUSSIA'S ARISTOCRACY.

It Embraces a Million Noblemen and Princesses Who Are Shop Girls.

Russia possesses 650,000 nobles, without counting 350,000 whose titles are not hereditary. Among the Russian nobility there are many of foreign origin. The Russian social code recognizes four categories or estates (Soslovia), that is to say, nobles, priests, town dwellers and peasants. The character of their employment distinguishes these classes from one another. Each is dependent on the Czar for all its privileges; and the Emperor has absolute power to change the condition of his subjects from a high to a low estate. None of these classes possesses either a historical, a political or a social individuality. The Russian aristocracy is deprived of political importance, and it cannot boast of such chivalrous qualities as distinguished the French nobles. For the present, it lacks sufficient good sense or education to play any part in public life. Russian aristocrats all desire to be considered as direct descendants of the Boyars, merely because it is pleasant to be such, and thus get a position of social superiority. Their ambition goes no higher. The Boyars, like the feudal Western landowners, are the descendants of the men who of old composed the Russian Prince's army. The members of the Russian aristocracy have in great part retained their places at court, so that there can be encountered most of the old historic names. Children of both sexes inherit the titles of their parents.

The Russian aristocracy is distinguished by overweening pride and haughtiness, and at the same time there is often united to this, in a bizarre contrast, a certain snobbishness. Access to the circles of high society is very difficult; it is only possible to penetrate into them if well born and well connected. The Russians rarely abandon their titles, being too proud of them to quit them easily. A marriage between a poor gentleman and a rich stranger, or vice versa, is considered in this country as a shameful mesalliance, and the couple would not be received in the aristocratic salons of the capital. Tolstoi, as well as Prince Mascherasky, director of the newspaper Grajdanine, has given in his novel very exact and graphic descriptions of Russian high life. But with all their innate pride, the Russian great folk have never looked upon work as degrading. Thus if need be they will adopt with ease and without mauvaise honte any offices, any public charges. There is at St. Petersburg a prince who serves in the custom-house, and many nobles and titled men become professors, schoolmasters, even actors In a pastry-cook shop at Moscow some princesses of high blood serve behind the counter; others will become governesses, companions, housekeepers, telegraph clerks—in fact, will adopt any employment that may turn up.

Women Barbers.

If you ever happen to notice one of the barber shops conducted by women, of which there are a dozen or more scattered over town, you will find the same spirit of daintiness asserting itself which makes the undertaking establishment seem almost cheerful. This is particularly true of shops owned and managed by women, but is not so noticeable in the cases of men's shops where women are employed. Mrs. Marshall has a shop of her own on Cottage Grove avenue. There are some flowers in the window and a flowered sash curtain across it. There are pictures on the walls and there is a glowing baseburner instead of the dull cannon stove to be found in most of the smaller shops.

"I have been taking care of myself in this way for ten years," said Mrs. Marshall. "It is a kind of work that a woman can do quite as well as a man, and the number of women who are learning the trade is increasing."

Mrs. Marshall has a woman assistant, and both of them are kept busy. "Most of my customers are men," she said, "and I never hear any of them complain that the razor isn't sharp enough."

And didn't Delilah show what a woman could do in the barber line several odd centuries ago?—Chicago Tribune.

A Powerful Tug Boat.

A large screw-tug steamer, which, when complete, will be the most powerful vessel of the kind attached to the naval service, is being built for the English navy. She measures between perpendiculars 144 feet, with a beam of 27 feet 3 inches. When fully equipped she will have a displacement of 680 tons, and mean draught of 10 feet 9 inches, at which draught she will carry 80 tons of fuel. The machinery will be on the most modern description, and with natural draught she is estimated to develop 1,250 horse-power. The vessel is to be named the Dromedary, and will cost about $75,000.

Copper in the Soil.

Some people have been afraid that the continued application of Bordeaux mixture, or of other copper compounds, might have an injurious influence upon plant growth, possibly by killing the bacteria which give life to the soil. Prof. Galloway meets this objection to the use of fungicides by the statement that a number of experiments to throw light on this point have been made by careful workers, and the only conclusion which seems warrantable is that Bordeaux mixture is not at all likely to bring about the sterility of the soil.

Keep your blood pure and healthy and you will not have rheumatism. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives the blood vitality and richness.

Skin Diseases are more or less occasioned by bad blood. B. B. B. cures the following Skin Diseases: Shingles, Eyresipelas, Itching Rashes, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Eruptions, Pimples and Blotches, by removing all impurities from the blood, from a common Pimple to the worst Scrofulous Sore.

Mr. Bristin is of the opinion that possibly the man may have entered the house during the evening when both he, his wife and his daughter were out, and when his aunt were studying upstairs, or possibly the key may have been turned in the lock of the front door by means of a pair of nippers. A peculiar incident lies in the fact that last night Mr. Bristin had about $100 in bills in his trousers pocket and for the first time in his life removed his money and placed it in a more secure hiding place.

REMAINS LAID AT REST

The Body of Sir John Thompson Entombed at Halifax.

MAGNIFICENT BURIAL SERVICE

The Last Rites Conducted With a Pomp Worthy an Honored Statesmen, and in the Presence of a Distinguished Gathering—All Parts of Canada Represented.

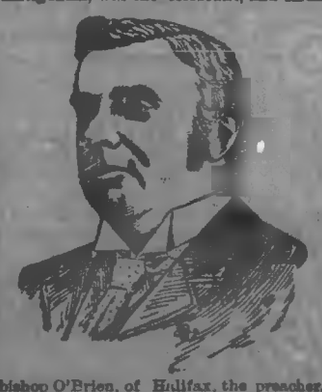
HALIFAX, N. S., Jan. 4.—All homage that earth can bestow has been paid to the mortal remains of Canada's late Premier, and the body was yesterday committed to its tomb. Services at St. Mary's Cathedral were the most solemnly impressive ever seen or heard in Canada, and were a fitting termination of obsequies held in Great Britain under the direction of Queen and Imperial Government. The day was beautifully fine, and from a very early hour the principal thoroughfares of the city were thronged with people struggling to gain points of vantage along the route, and if possible to obtain a view of the procession.

Many wore memorial badges, and nearly all were attired in black, endeavoring to embrace every opportunity to pay respect to Canada's illustrious dead. Public and private buildings were heavily draped in mourning and in nearly all tradesmen's windows were pictures of the late Premier, decorations of mourning, and in not a few, tombstones bearing suitable inscriptions were displayed. Thousands of strangers from all parts of Canada were present, Ontario and Quebec being very largely represented. Among the visitors were many members of Parliament, senators, judges, and other high officials. Every province was thus represented.

The remains were removed from the Legislative Council Chamber at 6 o'clock and taken in a covered coffin-sleigh to St. Mary's Cathedral, where it was met by Rev. Dr. Murphy and Father Moriarity in cotto and cope. Rev. Dr. Murphy read the Salve, Venite Sanctus Deus, and superintended the placing of the casket on the catafalque, which is placed just at the foot of the grand altar of the cathedral. The death watch from 6.30 to 10.05 was kept by the priests of St. Mary's.

Lady Thompson's family and the chief mourners arrived at the cathedral at 9.30 and were admitted through the side chapel. The party included Lady Thompson, her two sons and two daughters, John Pugh (Lady Thompson's uncle) and his daughter, Jos. Chisholm and Mrs. Jos. Chisholm (sister of Lady Thompson); Sister Lena, of the Sisters of Charity (also sister of Lady Thompson); D. Pominer, superintendent of the Intercolonial, Fred. Carter and wife, relatives of Lady Thompson.

The requiem mass and funeral service in St. Mary's church was conducted with all the pomp and splendour of the Roman Catholic Church. Bishop Cameron, of Antigonish, was the celebrant, and Archbishop O'Brien, of Halifax, the preacher. They were assisted by a staff of deacons and sub-deacons. At ten o'clock his Grace Archbishop O'Brien entered with his ministers and took his seat on the throne on the gospel side of the altar. Bishop Cameron with his attendants sat on the faldstool near the epistle side of the altar.



Afterwards they both proceeded to the centre of the altar, blessed themselves and the confiteor was said. Archbishop O'Brien then retired to the throne. Bishop Cameron mounted the altar and said the introit. After the collects the sub-deacon sang the epistle and the choir the "Dies Irae," which, as translated by Archbishop O'Brien, is pronounced by competent judges to be one of the most faithful renderings of the original sacred verse. Afterwards the celebrant continued the solemn service, including the Oblation of the Host, Oblation of the Chalice, and Preface, the latter being sung by the celebrant.

Archbishop O'Brien preached an impressive sermon from the text: "Having then conversed with you from my mouth until this day, behold, here I am. Speak of me before the Lord and His Christ, His anointed, whether I have taken any man's ox or ass, if I have wronged any man, if I have oppressed any man; if I have taken a bribe at any man's hand, and I will despise it this day, and will restore it to you, and they said: Thou has not wronged us nor oppressed us, nor taken aught at any man's hand."

In the course of his most eloquent discourse the Archbishop said: "A life such as that of the late Premier is not intended to be written in a family register, to be perused only by intimate friends. It is to adorn the annals of a nation and to be an example and an instruction to future generations. All through the history of the past we find that the Creator spoke of His creatures, not by revelation only, but also by the living example of those in whom general principles of many virtues which might be gathered from various sources, had been harmoniously blended. The concrete action of the lives was calculated to exercise a greater influence over the conduct of many than abstract principles, however explicitly implicated."

At the conclusion of the service the coffin was borne to the funeral car, standing at the main cathedral entrance, on Spring Garden road. It was decidedly striking in appearance. The dark drapery hanging about the sides almost concealed the wheels of the car. Thick tassels dangled at the corners and the rich drapery was caught up with silver case. In the centre of the car was the bier, on which the coffin rested, and over all at a height of eight feet was a large canopy, supported on columns of black and silver, and surmounted with plumes and crown. The funeral cortege then proceeded to Holy Cross cemetery where the interment took place.

The procession extended over a mile in length. As the cortege moved through the streets it was the most imposing and wonderful sight ever witnessed in Halifax, and will ever be remembered by those who saw it. Bishop Cameron, of Antigonish, conducted the services at the grave.

It took the procession half an hour to pass a given point. It was five minutes past noon when it started and fifteen minutes past one when it reached the cemetery. There were no carriages in the procession. The arch at South Park street entrance to the cemetery of the Holy Cross is 26 feet high, and the design and work are very neat. It is covered in black cloth and panels are let in, in gold, in moulding. Over the entrance is the word "Pax" (peace). The lot on which vault is situated was guarded by men of King's Regiment with fixed bayonets. Seven of the Dominion police walked in the procession. Lord Aberdeen walked alone, immediately after the chief mourners, followed by the General and staff. The pall-bearers were the Cabinet Ministers with the exception of Sir Mackenzie Bowell, who is ill, and Messrs. Caron and Angers, who are not in the city. Premier Bowell did not attend either service at cathedral or funeral, being confined to the house by serious sickness.

The Micmac chief and two other Indians in bead trimmed coats took part in the procession. The city council's floral offering was carried in procession by four sergeants. The wreath presented by the Queen rested on the coffin. Floral offerings were carried in two large cars which were draped in black, each car was drawn by four horses. Hon. J. M. Gibson represented the Ontario Government at the funeral.

The musical part of the funeral was supplied by the military bands of the 66th and 63rd H. G. A. regiments, the band of the warship Blenheim, St. Patrick's Society band, and the magnificent band of the King's Regiment, met the cortege at the gate of the cemetery and preceded the corpse to the vault.

DAIRYMEN IN SESSION.

Another Interesting and Instructive Meeting at Gananoque.

GANANOQUE, Ont., Jan. 4.—At the morning session of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association T. B. Carlow, President of the Association, was chairman. The first speaker was Professor Shutt, chief chemist at the Experimental Station, Ottawa, who on being introduced, proceeded with his lecture, "Science in the Dairy," which explained the component parts of milk, cheese, etc. On the termination of the lecture a general discussion of the subject took place.

The next speaker, Mr. John Gould, of Ohio, had for his subject "How to grow and save ensilage and corn." He treated the subject fully and pointed out the gain to be had by planting corn in drills instead of the method now followed by planting in hills. A question and answer discussion on the subject followed.

The afternoon session was commenced by Professor Dean, Ontario Agricultural College, lecturing on the subject of "Best methods of working a farm generally." Professor Robertson, Dominion Dairy Commission, followed on "Dairy Work," stating what methods if pursued led to success and what to failure.

In the evening the visiting farmers, their wifes and daughters assembled in Turner's opera house, the meeting partaking of both a social and instructive character. Mayor O. D. Cowan was chairman. Addresses were made during the evening by the Hon. John Dryden, Minister of Agriculture of Ontario, Mr. John Gould, of Ohio, Professor Robertson and Mr. Andrew Patullo, President of W. D. Association. The intervals between addresses were rendered pleasant by orchestral and instrumental music. At the end of the meeting three cheers were given for Her Majesty, and God Save the Queen was played by the orchestra.

Baby Farmer Sentenced.

TORONTO, Jan. 4.—The disgusting features of baby farming were shown up startlingly clear in the police court yesterday during the trial of the very much bewhiskered and spectacled William E. Lace on a charge of ill-treating children left in his charge at his "farm" on Gladstone avenue. The woman Mary Lace, who was sent to prison for eighteen months for manslaughter at the sessions, is the alleged wife of the prisoner. It was shown that Lace treated the children brutally and the magistrate fined him $100 and sent him to the Central for three months.

A Hamilton Slander Suit.

HAMILTON, Jan. 4.—Messrs. Furlong and Beasley, solicitors acting on behalf of Mr. Henry Kunts, brewer, have issued a writ against Alderman Wm. Hancock, claiming $5,000 for slander. The alleged slander consists in statement which Kunts claims was made by Hancock to several people that the latter (Hancock) had been offered $500 by Kunts to vote for the repeal of the by-law passed by the city council some time ago limiting the number of hotel licenses to be issued in the city to 70. Hancock denies that he said it was Kunts who tried to bribe him.

AN ISLAND OF DISTRESS

Letters From St. Johns Tell of the Acute Suffering of the People.

RELIEF FOR PEARY SUFFERERS

Widows and Orphans of the Last Crew of the Falcon Feel Keenly the General Distress—Contributions Sent to Their Relief Acknowledged by Mournful Letters.

BROOKLYN, N.Y., Jan. 4.—Letters from St. Johns, Nfld., acknowledge the Montauk club and other contributions recently forwarded from Brooklyn for the relief of the widows and orphans of the lost Peary auxiliary steamer Falcon.

Editor McGrath, of the Evening Herald, the principal paper at St. Johns, writes: "I must apologize to you for not writing to you before, but the great commercial disaster which has overwhelmed the country and a personal misfortune have so upset all of my affairs that I did not have a moment to spare till now. I received your letter anent the relief fund last week and communicated with Manager Cooke, of the Commercial Bank, a couple of days ago. He tells me he received your letter after the crash came in which his bank went down, and, as you may easily understand, had his hands full with his own affairs, apart from any outside matters. He handed me the cheques, and I propose asking the Rev. Mr. Harvey, LL.D., to undertake the work, giving him what assistance I can.

"I think, in view of the utter destitution now prevailing here, that an immediate disbursement of the amount among the families of the crew is imperative and my idea is to divide the money among them on New Year's eve so that they shall have at least a substantial New Year's gift. I have not talked it over with Dr. Harvey yet, but I think a barrel of flour to each family would be the most suitable present we could make. I feel that I am interpreting your desire perfectly in helping to alleviate the misery of these poor families which is accentuated a hundred fold by the destitution which exists all over the Island. It was in contemplation to start a collection here for this very deserving object but the financial disaster removed the possibility of that. The situation here is very grave and hundreds must perish for want of food this winter."

Henry Cooke, manager of the Commercial Bank of St. Johns, to whom the remittances were made, also writes: "You have heard of the failure of our bank. It was so sudden and unexpected that it has quite overwhelmed me with grief and I am simply crushed. My life-work of thirty years gone to dust in a moment, and I am a ruined man, with scarcely sufficient to purchase my daily bread. Can you imagine us in such straits?"

From Shoal Harbor, an outport of Trinity Bay, comes also by the same mail, a letter from another party on the Falcon last summer, Mr. Zachariah Bulter, who was with the Peary expedition last summer. Mr. Butler who is an intelligent man of mature years was formerly a shipmaster and his statements may be accepted as absolutely true to facts. He says:

"Hundreds of people are starving; no labor to be got in this present crisis. Thousands of people lost all of the money they had; bank notes are not any good at all. It was surprising to know what the loss of the Commercial Bank was. The suffering is terrible and as for my own part, I cannot tell what to do. I am suffering with the rest of the people, have a large family to support and flour is rising, which is the main support of the poor man. It is something wonderful to know what to do, or now to manage; it is beyond my comprehension how to act when I have the provisions consumed that I have in my house. Then I know not what to do and that will only last three weeks, the very furthest. No labor to be got anywhere."

CLOSED A SUCCESSFUL SHOW.

Poultrymen to Meet at Port Hope Next Year—The Officers.

NEW HAMBURG, Ont., Jan. 4.—The Ontario poultry exhibit closed a most successful show to-day. The annual meeting was held in the "William Tell" hall yesterday. After a spirited contest between Port Hope and Guelph, the former place was selected to hold the show next year.

The following officers were elected:—President, H. White, Port Hope; 1st Vice-President, Wm. McNeill, London; 2nd Vice-President, G. S. Oldrieve, Kingston; Treasurer, Geo. G. McCormick, London; Secretary, Thos. A. Browne, London; Delegates to Industrial Exhibition, J. Dilworth and W. Barber, Toronto; Delegates to Western Fair, J. H. Saunders and G. G. McCormick, London; Directors, Thos. A. Duff, Toronto, S. W. Clemo, Galt, Jno. Crowe, Guelph, Jno. Cole, Hamilton, W. C. Trew, Lindsay, W. T. Gibbard, Napanee, D. Rice, Whitby, A. Bogue, London, C. Massie, Port Hope.

The meeting was addressed by A. G. Gilbert, manager of the Poultry Department of the Experimental Farm, Ottawa; Prof. Mills, Ontario Agricultural College; C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture for Ontario; J. D. Moore, M.P.P., W. R. Plum, Geo. Clare and G. G. McCormick. Essays were read by C. F. Warner, Toronto, J. Dilworth, Toronto, J. Meyers, Kenuth, Thos. A. Duff, Toronto. The latter gentleman was warmly congratulated by Prof. Mills and C. C. James for his clever essay, "Poultry on the Farm."

About 300 attended the meeting in the evening when a variety programme of songs and music mostly by local talent and addressed by several of the above gentlemen admirably entertained the audience.

Thieves in the London Churches.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 4.—Every day brings to light further depredations of the gang of vandals who pillaged the city churches during the last few days. The latest church to be heard from is that of St. John the Evangelist, in the north end. The church was entered during the temporary absence of the sexton. The thieves scattered the poor box and by shaking it they managed to work the contents through the slit in the lid. There is reason to believe it contained a considerable sum.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 4, 1895.

THE DATE OF THE ELECTIONS.

Sir John Thompson is credited with having had the intention of having another session of parliament before the general elections. The Kingston News asserts that this policy will be pursued by the new Premier. It says:—"If the new Premier had a new policy to propound, an immediate appeal to the people would be appropriate enough. But as the vicissitudes which the party has undergone have not in any way whatever affected its principles—as it still adheres to the National Policy as firmly as in 1878—a dissolution because of a few personal changes in the Administration would be unwarranted and absurd. Parliament will therefore assemble as it would have done if Sir John Thompson had been spared, about the middle of February, the revision of the voters' list will meanwhile proceed, and whenever that huge and difficult task is completed, say in May or June, the Government will apply to the electorate for a renewal of its confidence." Coming from a Conservative source this ought to be reliable. Whether the News speaks by the book or not, the course it indicates is the one that should be pursued. To bring on the elections before the new voters' lists are available for use in the elections, would be a monstrous injustice. The old lists are not at all representative of the franchise strength of the country. Thousands have died since the lists were revised and thousands have come of age since that time, who would be disfranchised under the use of the old lists for the election. The lists prepared under the Dominion Franchise Act, at their newest and best, prepared as they are under the administration of officials appointed by the government, place the Liberal party at an obvious disadvantage, but this would be as nothing compared to the use of the old lists; and reckless as the present government is, it seems to lack the hardihood of bringing on the elections under the old and imperfect lists. Thus much for the probable date of of the coming elections. However, come when they may, the country is ready to pronounce its verdict in respect of the record of the present government, which the most daring partizan dares not say has governed Canada economically or honestly.

AN EXAGGERATED REPORT.

The despatch published in yesterday's EXAMINER stating that Hon. Mackenzie Bowell was seriously ill at Halifax, is flatly contradicted by a despatch received this morning, which asserts that the report is false, and that the venerable Premier is simply confined to his room with a slight cold. The EXAMINER is pleased to be able to congratulate the country upon the fact that the Premier, whose honours and office are so new upon him, is still likely to live to enjoy the one, and fulfil the duties of the other.

SIR Adolphe Caron slipped on some glare ice in Quebec on Christmas day, and as a result is suffering from a broken rib. Sir Adolphe had no idea of the seriousness of his accident until a couple of days ago, when the pain became intense, and Sir James Grant has accordingly ordered him to lie up for some days. The EXAMINER sympathises with the gallant knight on the head of a slip that resulted in the breaking of a rib, more than it could sympathise with him in the slip that resulted in the breaking of the eighth commandment. In the matter of this last-mentioned slip—not unassociated with the idea of "boodle"—Sir Adolphe has boasted that if he had the chance he would do it again. The gallant knight would hardly, in reference to his ice slip, express the same lofty sentiments, so eminently worthy of un chevalier sans peur et sans rapproche.

A NEEDLE'S TRAVELS.

It Took Twelve Years to Work Down From a Young Lady's Bosom to Her Toe.

The Colborne Express says: "We have frequently read of the freaks of needles in human bodies, but were always somewhat skeptical until last week, when an instance in our own village removed our doubts. A young lady of eighteen years had a needle broken in her breast when she was only six years old, but nothing was ever done to have it removed. At times she experienced pains which she attributed to the needle, or rather the point end of it, five-eighths of an inch long. She suffered no serious or acute pain, however, at any time until one evening last week when she was apprised on the street of what she believed to be a lively corn upon one of her big toes. On reaching home she decided to see the corn, and upon touching it the long-lost piece of needle presented itself to her great joy, and, if it may be told, the relief, mingled with amusement, of the members of the household."

You're an Easy Prey,

By restoring the normal action of the deranged organs and functions, it arouses every natural source and means of nourishment. Last Saturday evening there was considerable excitement at Mr. G. Duffield's jewellry store for a short time. Peter Hickerson had been suspected for some time of taking things from the store. He came into the store Saturday evening, and Mr. Duffield charged him with taking some goods which had been missed from the store. Hickerson tried to escape from the place but was quickly brought back and Constable Scriver was sent for. Hickerson promised to bring back the goods if he was not arrested. The constable accompanied him to his residence and most of the stolen goods were recovered.

A meeting of the electors was held on Wednesday evening, for the purpose of receiving nominations for reeve, councillors and school trustees. Messrs. J. B. Not to be a Daily Steamship Service.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The Central News says: "The rumor of a daily steamship service between New York and Great Britain is merely the revival of an abandoned suggestion that the steamship lines arrange their dates so to have only one vessel sail from or arrive at Southampton on the same day. There is not the slightest prospect of effecting this arrangement."

A Vicious Duel in Italy.

Everybody is Interested.

It is a mistake to suppose that only farmers are concerned in good roads. City merchants and manufacturers, who depend largely on the country for their patronage, are also interested, and ought to join in the movement.

A MEDICINE

WITHOUT AN EQUAL.

Statement of a Well Known Doctor

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is without an equal as a blood-purifier and Spring medicine, and cannot have praise enough. I have watched its effects in chronic cases, where other treatment was of no avail, and have been astonished at the results. No other blood medicine that I have ever used, and I have tried them all, is so thorough in its action, and effects so many permanent cures as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—Dr. H. F. MERRILL, Augusta, Me.

KILLED THE POLICEMAN.

A Chicago Officer Shot Down While Attempting to Arrest Two Thugs.

CHICAGO, Jan. 4.—The thugs who have been terrorizing the residents of the north side for the last month added another to their list of crimes by killing a police officer, Ted Duddles, last night. Two men were burglarizing the home of August Landervaler, a druggist at 297 Division street when Mrs. Landervaller who had been visiting returned and confronted them in the hall. Officer Duddles came upon the scene at that time and was fired at. The bullet went wild but before he could use his revolver another bullet struck him in the temple. He fell to the sidewalk and died in a few minutes.

The burglars made their escape but were recognized as John Carry and Lally, notorious thugs. About half an hour afterwards they were seen at Goose Island where they fired at two officers and then jumped over a viaduct and disappeared. Duddles had been on the force for fifteen years.

Struck Another Big Gas Well.

WINDSOR, Jan. 4.—The stockholders of the Ontario Natural Gas Company are jubilant. They have struck another "gusher." For a month past they have been drilling in a new locality near Ruthven. It was somewhat of an experiment and involved the value of several thousand acres of land the company has leased in that locality. A small pocket of gas was struck, after drilling through the rock the genuine article was found. The workmen heard a roaring sound away down in the deep hole. It was familiar to them and they knew what was coming so they sprang to one side. The next moment a huge quantity of stones and earth were hurled into the air striking the top of the derrick and fell back in a heap. Then the gas began to escape with a roar distinctly heard two miles distant. The flow will be 1,000,000 cubic feet daily and the pressure is estimated at 400 pounds. This is equal to any of the wells as yet struck in Ontario.

Both Legs Cut Off.

TORONTO, Jan. 4.—William Armstrong, a man 73 years of age, who lives with his wife and family at 9 Cumningham avenue, met with a fatal accident at the C. P. R. crossing near his house. The old gentleman was walking over to the switch-house to read the morning paper, as was his custom, and he failed to notice the approach of the yard engine going out to the Junction. Armstrong was knocked down and run over, both legs being cut off below the knee, his right arm broken, and several bad scalp wounds sustained. The engine never stopped in its course. Dr Lynd was summoned, and after receiving the necessary attention the injured man was taken to the General Hospital in the ambulance. It is not thought possible that he can recover.

The Disease Not in Our Cattle.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 4.—All of the live cattle that have arrived at Belgium ports from Montreal within the last six weeks have been slaughtered, with the exception of 100 head, which were quarantined for further examination. Suspicious symptoms, however, were not found among them, but it is believed that a number of cattle have arrived from the United States showing symptoms of pleuro-pneumonia, which has made the position of American cattle in Belgium difficult and uncertain.

Francis II. Buried in the Tyrol.

VIENNA, Jan. 4.—Francis II., the last King of Naples, was buried yesterday from the parish church at Arco, the Tyrol. The chief mourners were the Duke of Caserta, Francis II.'s nephew, and his sons. They were followed in the procession by several princes of the house of Tuscany, the Duke of Parma, Prince William of Hohensollern and a few Napolitan and Sicilian noblemen. The body was escorted by two battalions of Tyrolese cuirassiers.

Ringing Noises

In the ears, sometimes a roaring, buzzing sound, are caused by catarrh, that exceedingly disagreeable and very common disease. Loss of smell or hearing also result from catarrh. Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier, is a peculiarly successful remedy for this disease, which it cures by purifying the blood.

COUNTY HOUSES OF REFUGE.

The members of the Prisoners' Aid Association are urging the general adoption of the system of caring for the destitute poor of the country by means of houses of refuge or poor-houses. Up to the present time only 10 out of a total of 35 counties in Ontario have as yet adopted the system. They claims that it is not only the most humane, but that in the end it is by far the most economical method, and moreover, that in counties where there is a well managed house of refuge there is far less begging—in fact no excuse for it—far less pauperism and far less crime.

Other advantages resulting from the establishment of a poor house in the county, which is referred to by the Association, is the fact that the removal of the tramps and the simply destitute poor from the county jail prevents overcrowding of the latter and makes it possible to effect a better classification of the remaining prisoners. This they claim is a matter of much greater importance than is generally supposed, as it is found that both vice and crime is propogated by a lack of proper classification of the inmates of county jails.

When it has been decided to erect a county poor-house, plenty of time should be taken in selecting the farm, selecting the site and in deciding upon the character of the buildings.

The farm should be good land, not less than 100 acres, easy to till and convenient to a railway station or boat landing. The buildings should be erected on high ground where they can be easily drained, and where there will be an abundant supply of water both winter and summer. In making plans for the buildings, the aims should be economy, convenience, orderly administration, a complete separation of the sexes and a right classification of the inmates. The heating, ventilation and drainage is of great importance, and this should not be entrusted to any except good reliable parties or well-known firms.

One of the best county poor houses in Ontario is the one recently built in the County of Oxford, near the town of Woodstock. The total cost to the county, complete, was $30,368, less the Government grant of $4,000.

In the United States nearly every county has a county poor house. In the State of Ohio, for instance, there is a poorhouse in each one of its 88 counties. In the State of New York, with only four exceptions, every county has a poorhouse. In this State the poorhouses are under the supervision of a State Board, and this board now favors the adoption of the cottage system in the construction of county poor-houses. The cottage system is more expensive than the congregate system, but it is claimed that it is much safer in case of fire, it prevents the spread of contagious diseases, it is more home like, and it is the only system that provides for the absolute separation of the sexes.

A well managed county poor house is a regular hive of industry, and every inmate not too ill or too feeble is expected to do a fair day's work, and in this way contribute to their maintenance. As might be expected such a poor-house is not popular with the lazy, good for nothing tramp, and it is found that he gives a wide berth to the county where it is located.

Baronets in Low Station.

It has been discovered that among the men of the Royal Irish Constabulary there is a baronet. A writer in the World of this week gives his name. It is Sir Thomas Echlin, the seventh baronet of the name. Even he, however, low as his fortunes seem to have fallen, is better off than his uncle, Sir Frederick Echlin, the fifth baronet; or his father, the sixth baronet. The former was a pauper in receipt of parochial relief at Edenkerry, in Kildare, until he was granted a small pension from the Greatham Hospital at Stockton-on-Tees, while the latter was a superannuated peasant, living at Kilmeague, in the same country, who was supported by contributions from the three sons, the present baronet and his two brothers, the elder a private in the Life Guards and the younger formerly a footman and now a stationmaster.

The Echlins number a prelate and a judge of more than ordinary eminence among their direct ancestors, and their baronetcy dates from the reign of George I. Another baronet, it is said, is among the minor performers on the London stage, and yet another was quite recently a photographer in a London suburb.—London Daily News.

Early Visitor.

The story of Sir Edwin Landseer's model for the famous picture of the "Desert" is amusingly told in "Records of an All-Round Man." One morning before Sir Edwin was out of bed there came a knock at his door. Sir Edwin, rather surprised, called out, "Who's there?"

"Please, sir, have you ordered a lion?" was the reply.

"Ordered a what?"

"A lion, sir, 'cos there's one come to the back door, but he doesn't know whether you ordered him or not."

"Oh, very well, take him in," said the artist, who pitchforked on his clothes and hurried down, greatly puzzled as to what he should find.

A splendid lion at the Zoological gardens had just died and at the request of some friend was sent to Sir Edwin.

The grisly monarch, stretched at full length as he was upon the stones of the court, furnished the subject of Landseer's famous picture of the "Desert," exhibited in 1849.

Swore Himself In.

General Sir Evelyn Wood, in his reminiscences of the Crimean in 1854 and and 1894, tells a story of a fighting General who, during the conflict, was seen wherever bullets fell most thickly. When not visible, his voice was heard encouraging his men with "a vocabulary borrowed from 'the army in Flanders,'" which Sir Evelyn says will not bear repetition. "Years after he was appointed to the Aldershot command, and Her Majesty happened to ask, 'Has the new General yet taken up his command?' 'Yes, Your Majesty,' was the apt reply, 'he swore himself in yesterday.'"—Westminster Gazette.

Wonderful bargains in Overcoats at Grafton's clearing sale.

Badly Burned.

Mr. Richard Grey, inspector in the employ of the Canadian General Electric Company Works, was badly burned about the face by an explosion of gas in the lacquer oven yesterday. It seems that Mr. Gray was opening the door of the oven at the time, and Mr. Robinson who was standing near was also burned slightly about the face. Mr. Grey will be unable to resume his duties for a few days.

Young Women's Association.

A large number of young women and friends of the Association visited our rooms on New Year's Day. All seemed to feel at home and enjoy themselves. A very pleasing programme was rendered, and refreshments served. The Association wishes to tender their thanks to the Misses Fawcett, V. Belleghem, Ritchie, Sutton, Schneider, Pascoe and Pollock, who so kindly and cheerfully contributed to the pleasure of the the day, also to Mr. Schneider, accompanist, and to all who helped to make the reception a success. In the afternoon we received a call from Mr. Crowe, secretary of the Y.M.C.A., and a number of young men of the Association. We were glad to welcome the young gentlemen to our rooms. They gave us some very good music, which was appreciated by all present. We were also pleased to welcome the rector of St. John's Rev. J. C. Davidson, who called upon us, and in a few remarks expressed his good wishes for and sympathy with the work of the Association. He hoped in the present year a way might be opened up whereby we would be able to do more efficient work.

Train Delayed.

Conductor Stanton's train on the Midland was delayed at Tuftsville yesterday by the breaking down of the engine. Capt. John Halliwell, of Stirling, and Dr. McColl, of this city, were on the train. A Close Call.

Messrs. Thomas Fraser, of Hastings, and James Fraser, of Norwood, got a close call on Christmas afternoon. They left Hastings for Norwood and at James Beck's hill, both shafts broke at the cross bar, leaving the horse fast to the rig and nothing to guide it. For some 30 rods the horse ran, the rig swaying from one side of the road to the other, finally coming in contact with a bunch of young cedars, near Mr. W. Richardson's gate, sending James to one side and Thomas up into the trees. The clump of cedars, no doubt, saved their lives. The rig upset and was left some distance beyond in the fence corner, and the horse turned in at Mr. Beckett's, about a mile and a half miles from Norwood.

NORWOOD.

Death of J. W Clark—Brief Sketch of his Life.

John Whichelo Clark, eldest son of Dr. Clark, and a well-know citizen of Norwood, died on Friday last., Deceased had been ill for several months, and his death was not unexpected. He was one of the best known men in this section, having for several years occupied various public positions, such as treasurer of the village, secretary of the East Riding Farmers' Institute. In politics he was a Reformer, and for several years he held the position of secretary of the East Riding Reform Association. When he first came to Norwood he was employed in the store of W. E. Roxburgh; and after several years he opened a general business with A. McMillan, under the firm name of Clark & McMillan. Mr. McMillan retired from the firm a few years ago, and Mr. Clark continued the business alone until about a year ago, when he was forced to give up on account of financial embarassment. Mr. Clarke was a warm hearted fellow, much esteemed from his genial qualities. He was 57 years of age and was unmarried. The funeral took place on Monday at 10 a.m. from his father's residence, Queen street, to the Trent Valley Cemetery at Hastings. There was a large attendance of friends. Rev. J. F. Somerville, pastor of the Presbyterian church, officiated.—Register.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Big Houses Still Continue to be Drawn by the Popular Marks Bros.

The Marks Bros. played to another big house last evening and presented that beautiful comedy drama, "Esmeralda" in a manner most pleasing. Mr. Tom Marks and Miss Myra Collins took the leading parts, and they as well as the rest of the company won well merited applause time and again during the presentation of the play. Mr. Lee J. Kellam sang a song of his own composition on Canada's great men, which was greatly appreciated. A topical song also sung by him in which some local hits were made was well received. The specialties which were introduced were all up to the mark and proved quite a feature indeed. As well as the play this evening and to-morrow night there will be a grand Saturday matinee at 2.30 p.m. for ladies and children, which will without doubt draw large crowds of little ones.

THE AUBURN BRIDGE.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR, — Considerable feeling has been worked up in No. 4 Ward by the action of the Council in refusing to build a bridge across the river at Auburn. The objection some people have to building the bridge up there is that only the Auburn employees will benefit by it, and the Auburn people have got enough out of the town, having got a bonus of $2,500, and exemption from taxes for ten years. But in reply to this objection, it may be stated that the Auburn Company have done a lot for the town, employing about 200 hands, and paying about $150,000 a year in wages. Therefore, I do not see any reason why any person should kick at this, for they can all come to the sons of canada carnival on January 11th, and cross on the present foot path over the dam. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your space, I remain,

Yours sincerely,

1d S. O. C.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 75c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

TO THE ELECTORS OF WARD NO. 4.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—Having been honored with the nomination for Councillor for Ward No. 4, I beg leave to solicit your vote and influence. If elected I promise to use every legitimate means in my power to promote the best interests of this ward in particular and of the whole town in general.

Your obedient Servant,

M. H. QUINLAN.

The First Ball of the Season.

ANNUALS AT JUST HALF PRICE.

Our Great Sale of the Popular Annuals last year and the year before was a source of wonder and astonishment to all. How, in the name of business, perfectly new publications could sell for less than they usually cost to publish, was a conundrum. Most people were satisfied to buy without being able to solve the problem, and the Annuals did not lie long on our tables.

Now, we're ready to repeat the past—having just bought out the publisher's entire stock of these Popular Annuals, and secured the exclusive control in Canada of every copy left in the publisher's hands on the 1st day of January, 1895.

	Regular Price.	Our Price.
BOYS' OWN ANNUAL - - - -	$2.00	$1.00
SUNDAY AT HOME - - - - -	$2.00	$1.00
LEISURE HOUR - - - - . - - -	$2.00	$1.00

If you don't want to buy at these HALF PRICES, this don't concern you; but if you do, BUY QUICK, or you'll get left.

HOW ABOUT SCHOOL BOOKS?

Give the Boys and Girls clean new books for the New Year. Don't send them back to school with the old, torn, dog-eared books of last year. It will encourage them to study; help them to take a pride in their books and cultivate good order and taste. We keep the FULLEST stock, sell the LARGEST quantity, and always at the LOWEST notch.

TRESSIE MORRISON TIRED OF LIFE.

She Swallows Half an Ounce of Chloroform.

BUT THE PHIAL IS SNATCHED FROM HER LIPS.

The G. T. R. Station the Scene of the Attempted Suicide—Well Known About Town—Kept in Money and Clothes by a Young Society Man Who is a Clerk in an Office—Her Relatives Take Her to Port Hope.

At about half-past seven last evening Station Agent Hayden of the G. T. R., noticed a most peculiar odor pervading the rooms of the station, and as the oppressive smell appeared to be generated in the ladies' waiting room, he entered that apartment to ascertain what was the matter. His astonishment and apprehension may be imagined, when he perceived a young girl half lying on the seats holding a vial to her lips. He immediately which, as he feared, contained poison, and was labelled chloroform. Dr. King was immediately summoned, and on arriving stated that a sufficient quantity of the liquid had not been taken to ensure a fatal result. The usual restoratives being applied, the girl was roused from the stupor into which she had fallen, but was most reticent concerning her reason for trying to take her life. The arrival of the police placed a different complexion on the matter, as the girl was recognised as who had been "on the streets" here since last July.

SNATCHED AWAY THE BOTTLE,

ONE THERESE MORRISON,

When she found that she was unable to conceal her identity the girl, who was neatly apparrelled in black and apparently about 18 years of age, stated that her betryal and the consequent remorse had led her to attempt her life.

She has been a familiar figure on the streets since last summer when she came to Peterborough from Port Hope, having run away from home.

On being questioned as to her reason for leaving Port Hope, where she resided with her uncle, Mr. Dingwell, a prominent hardware merchant, of that place, she stated that

SHE WAS AN ORPHAN

and that the harshness of her uncle led her to leave his house. In an interview with an EXAMINER representative, the girl stated that her relatives were trying to force her into a marriage with a Port Hope young man and that to avoid what to her was a distasteful arrangement by her guardian, she fled. She represented herself to be an heiress of considerable means, having been left a fortune in trust by relatives with whom she had lived in Bermuda. As she worked in Peterborough at a number of hotels and in private families at times, the question was asked as to how this was the case if

SHE WAS AN HEIRESS.

Her reply was that her allowance was cut off as soon as she left her relatives in Port Hope by the conditions of the will. A number of other wildly improbable stories were also told of a like nature.

At the police station the girl made a statement to the Chief of Police in which she affirmed that she was in her normal state in Peterborough [illegible] when showing her to her room after she had registered, had entered with her and locking the door had wrought her ruin despite her cries and protestations. The names of whom she represented as having taken advantage of her youth were also mentioned.

A NUMBER OF YOUNG MEN,

This morning her relatives from Port Hope were present at the police court, when the girl was given a hearing. They state that she was always a most wayward girl, and that the very hotelkeeper whom she accuses of having accomplished her ruin was the man who went down to Port Hope to tell her relatives where she was. They came up to Peterborough at that time, but could not persuade the young woman to return with them, although they promised to forgive and forget her past actions.

Since that time her life has been one continual debauch, and it is probable that a overtook her and caused her to attempt suicide. This is not the first time that the girl has been possessed of suicidal intentions, as at one time in Port Hope she also took poison.

The scene in the police court was a tragic one this morning when the girl, with head thrown back and uplifted hand, cried out, "On my oath it is so," when questioned by the magistrate regarding her statement implicating some of the best known men in town. Notwithstanding this, however, her relatives place no reliance in what she said, as it appears that since childhood Therese has pursued a course which led her to indulge in prevarication of every description to of her actions. On being asked if she would go home and remain there the girl expressed her willingness to do so, providing her long suffering relatives would receive her.

A commercial traveller, who was in town, to-day, professed his willingness to enter the witness box any time, in order to clear those whom the girl implicates here, as having accomplished her ruin. He tells some stories concerning her previous career, which are positively appalling, when it is considered that the girl is only 18 years of age.

The noon train conveyed the unhappy girl back to her home in Port Hope, the magistrate allowing her to go with her relatives, after explaining to her the imprisonment penalty which could be imposed if a like attempt was again made.

The chloroform, which was used, was procured from a local druggist, who knew the girl as Miss Maybee, a good customer, who spent a great deal of money on perfumery. An ounce of chloroform was purchased from him by her, on Wednesday last, when the girl stated that she desired the drug to poison a cat, which had outlived its usefulness. The bottle was labelled chloroform and contained across the face of the label the words, "poison—caution," as well as the name of the druggist.

A young society man, who is well known about town and who is clerk in an office, is stated to have supplied the unfortunate young girl with sufficient money to keep her for the last few weeks. He boasted of the fact to his friends, but since the denouement he is sorry that he mentioned the matter, as in her statement to the police, "Tressie" implicates him, and in the face of his former assertions he can not now deny the fact.

LACROSSE.

The Port Hope Times devoted considerable space yesterday to writing up a sporting review of the past season. In reference to the lacrosse club it says:

"The premier organization of Port Hope is, unquestionably, the Ontario Lacrosse Club. From a very small beginning, some four years ago, by steady advancement under the keen eye of S. W. Paterson, the Ontarios are now in the enviable position of being one of the best twelves of the Dominion. Despite the unfavourable weather, that one would believe had conspired to ruin the club during the season, the people of Port Hope have had the pleasure of witnessing splendid exhibitions of the National Game, and in nearly every case, the additional satisfaction of seeing the Ontarios victorious. The splendid game with Varsity at the beginning of the season needs no recalling to the memory of Port Hopers, and the memorable contest with Peterborough stands out the greatest of the many great victories achieved by the Lady lacrosse exponents. The Mimicos, the thunderers of Peterborough, and other clubs, also experienced the prowess of the Ontario. * * * There is little stir now in lacrosse circles, but we may look for a good team this year, made up from this year's and the excellent junior Ontarios, an organization which was a credit to Port Hope."

HEALTHY EXERCISE—fresh air and proper food, help to keep a woman in good condition. It's insufficient for some, weakened or borne down as they are by the ailments and irregularities peculiar to their sex.

They're easily helped, though; there's a remedy in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—that will build up and cure every enfeebled woman. It's the prescription of a physician; has been tested in thousands of cases, and never found wanting.

The only risk that's taken is that of the manufacturers who promise to refund the money if no benefit is experienced.

This "Prescription" reaches the origin of the trouble. Dizziness, fainting spells, and nervous disorders, such as sleeplessness, chorea or St. Vitus's dance, depend upon the irregularities and displacements of the special structures, the "Prescription" cures by regulating and correcting these functions and organic changes.

MIND ACTING ON MIND.

DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY'S VIEWS ON THE SUBJECT.

The Novelist Talks Interestingly of Telepathy, Believing That Its Existence Has Been Scientifically Established — His Curious Personal Experience.

A writer like David Christie Murray, who has taken all life for the field of his art as a novelist, and draws upon the whole planet for his illustrations, must have had rich experiences in the domain which the Psychical Investigation Society has chosen for its own. But he does not overload his books with material of this kind, nor is his conversation much weighted with the burden of things between heaven and earth that we do not nsnally dream of. And yet when prompted to do so, he can speak on these subjects not only with knowledge, but also with eloquence. He is fitted to do this, first, by his fine mental organization, for he has been psychically sensitive since boyhood, and next by the many psychical experiences which have fallen to his lot during a long, active and adventurous life, lived among many people and many parts of the world.

One day recently Mr. Murray talked to a Toronto Pen and Scissors man on the special subject of telepathy, and after showing, from his own personal experiences, how mind may act upon mind at a distance, independently of the ordinary means of intercommunication, he went on to say:

"Here is a case in point. My eldest brother, who died in 1865, was at sea as midshipman on board a merchant vessel. He sailed under a drunken captain, who behaved to him with horrible cruelty. He got the seeds of consumption on that voyage. While he was at sea my mother was nursing her uncle, James Withers Marsh, and in the very hour of his death the old man, who had been tenderly attached to my brother, sat up and said aloud: 'Leave the lad alone. Have you no bowels?' My mother asked him what he was thinking of, and he said: 'That captain is ill-treating Jack horribly.'

"The first officer, a Mr. Mundy, took command of the ship when Captain Gregory died in delirium tremens, and was buried at the Azores. Mundy brought my brother home, and he was told the story of the old man's dying words. He produced his own note book and showed that on the day of the old man's death he had made an entry, because he intended to indict the captain for his cruelty on their return to a British port. What is most singular is that when he came to work out the difference of latitude he found the entry in his private log and the time of the old man's dying speech coincided to a moment. There are thousands of such instances reported, and it seems to me quite idle to dismiss them as mere coincidences. Coincidence has a very long arm, indeed, especially in drama and fiction. But I think it hardly reaches so far as that.

"Not very long ago," Mr. Murray resumed, "I had a very curious personal experience. Two people had been dining with me—one a very dear and ... personal friend, the other a ...tive stranger. When they had ... I distinctly heard a personal ...on within my own mind. I ...end that the words would ...ible to anybody else—that ...nd recognised the ... founldly conscious of it, and I wrote as if I was absolutely under his eye, and with an assurance of his sympathy and aid that, however conveyed, was absolute.

The near connection between physical aberrations and insanity has always been recognised, and Mr. Murray tells a story that strongly suggests this familiar truth.

"I know in Melbourne," he said, "an honorable and high-minded man—a man of letters and of marked ability—who assures me that his most constant companion was an inhabitant of Thebes when that city was in its glory. He professes an intimate acquaintance with the life of the city at that time and a knowledge from hearsay of many of its inhabitants. He is certainly not in the least degree mad on any other question, and I believe him to be a man of the strictest veracity. But, all the same, I should not like to share his belief.

"I think we have reached a stage," said Mr. Murray, "in which the existence of an occult means of communication is scientifically established, and I think that, looking at all the inquiries we have at work, we shall ultimately reach a reasonable explanation or hypothesis. It may be possible that the inward and spiritual essence of a man was at the earliest stage of man's history anchored to the body, as the earliest form of sentiment being was once anchored to the rock; and is it not just conceivable that such essence may be in the act of achieving a certain sort of freedom? But whatever explanation or theory we adopt I don't see how it can have any effect at all upon what are called spiritual truths."

HAS FIVE THOUSAND BEDS.

Turin's Huge Combination of Hospital, Benevolent Institution and Free School.

What is doubtless the largest hospital, benevolent institution and free school combined is in Turin, Italy, according to a consular report. It is called the Cottolengo, and is three stories high, in the form of a St. Andrew's cross. It has 5,000 beds, over 4,000 being constantly occupied. The connecting wing, forming the street front, contains the office, operating, waiting and other rooms. Numerous pavilions, cottages, schoolhouses and work shops occupy the grounds, separated by small but well-kept gardens and yards, giving plenty of air and light and adding cheerfulness to the conglomerate of stone structures. The whole being scrupulously clean, a pleasing, homelike effect is secured. Sixty years ago a poor monk named Cottolengo founded this institute on money solicited by begging. Its support is still obtained in this manner and by private, mostly anonymous, contributions from one day to another. No sick asking for treatment, nor any healthy person needing shelter have ever been refused admittance. If the latter is in extreme poverty and wants work and cannot get it outside it is given him here. Homeless boys and girls receive free schooling. They learn how to read and write, knitting, sewing, embroidering or a trade. So do men and women, the trades of carpenter, shoemaker, tailor, printer, bookbinder, baker and gardener being practically taught. The more skillful laborers are placed in the repairing department. There is constant work for the hospital; also work to fill orders coming from the outside. Deaf mutes, the blind, incurable idiots, fallen women and picked-up children are taken in and cared for. Anyone needing a roof over his head, so long as he is poor and destitute and not a criminal, finds a welcome home here, provided he is willing to work in exchange for shelter and a good meal. The Cottolengo is a city in itself, managed by a board of business men and physicians, ministered to by a priest and attended by a sisterhood. The question, however, whether the applicant be a Catholic or not has never been raised. How a gigantic establishment like this can be run without a fixed income seems to be a mystery. Still it is done, and it has worked well without a hitch for over half a century, growing steadily in the meanwhile in dimensions and in popularity.

THE WEALTHY AND INFLUENTIAL.

Lord Rosebery is a devoted father. He cut the cabinet meeting rather short in order to be with his little daughter at Dalmeny park on her fifteenth birthday.

Admiral Ito, the Japanese hero of the day, who is known among his devoted sailors as "the Lean Admiral," on account of his extreme thinness, has a daughter who is one of Japan's very few blonde beauties.

By the etiquette of the Russian court a princess entering it by marriage brings nothing in the way of a wardrobe except the clothes she wears. The magnificent trousseau being prepared in Paris is at the expense of the Czar.

A German journalist, who visited Bismarck recently, says that the ex-chancellor has aged very much in the last few months. He eats with difficulty, can hardly hold himself erect, and speaks only in a tone so low that it is hard to understand him.

The Emperor of Russia has four separate "services" of horses and carriages. Fifty horses comprise each set, and in one the horses are perfectly white, with blue eyes, and anything more magnificent in the way of trappings than their harness can hardly be conceived.

A January thaw is always more productive of colds and coughs than a January freeze. Then is the time Ayers' Cherry Pectoral is needed and proves so extremely efficacious. Ask your druggist for it, and also for Ayer's Almanac, which is free to all.

After LaGrippe.

After La Grippe obstinate coughs, lung trouble, etc. frequently follow. There is no remedy so prompt, and at the same time so natural and pleasant, as Milburn's Norway Oil Emulsion with Wild Cherry and Hypophosphites, which is the latest and best combination of anti-consumptive remedies. Price 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

Every Man Should Insure.

The following from a Toronto Daily, is worthy of very careful consideration:—

The force of the obligation resting upon every man to carry a substantial insurance policy on his life was never better illustrated than in the death of Sir John Thompson.

If ever a man lived who could claim freedom from this obligation it was the late Premier. Before the fatal illness seized him he had every reason to expect a long life; his earning capacity was large; and he was, at one time at all events, justified in expecting that he would fall heir to a considerable fortune. But the expectations of fortune were swept away, death came in mid-life and pratically the only support left for the bereaved family is a paltry insurance of $6,000.

The moral of it all is that every man, no matter how circumstanced, should insure, and insure to the largest extent that his income will justify.

The Late Premier, SIR JOHN S. D. THOMPSON, was insured in the SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY of CANADA.

WILL ALWAYS BE A DESERT.

The Sahara Generally Above the Level of the Sea—No Chance of Flooding.

One fifth of the whole African continent is desert, the area being estimated by Mr. Ravenstein at over 2,260,000 square miles, of which all but a small fraction is contained in the tract of land popularly known as the Sahara, says McClure's Magazine.

Except for some school children who know better, and school teachers who are instrumental in that being so, the misconception of the Sahara, which is widespread, would be practically universal. The average man pictures the Sahara as a vast sea of sand, for the most part below the sea level, across which the camel speeds before the poison blast of the simoon from oasis to oasis. Schemes for flooding the Sahara have come before the public occasionally, and we have read accounts of the vast inland sea which might be formed, rivaling the Mediterranean in size, giving a southern coast to Morocco and Algeria, and admitting steamers directly to the wealthy states of the Soudan.

The Sahara, as known to the geographer, corresponds badly with this conception, for, in fact, there is no risk of the "ship of the desert" ever being supplanted by the ships of the sea. Few parts are below sea level, and they are small and scattered. In the interior the desert is a plain high above sea level, covered with vast dunes of red sand in many parts; in others it is an elevated plateau with lofty mountain ranges of bare rocks intersected by stony valleys. It is arid, save where a spring bubbles up and gives rise to a small oasis of grass and palm trees. The Sahara proper is unknown except for a few trade routes regularly traversed by Arabs and occasionally by adventurous Europeans. These utilize the oasis as resting places, stepping stones, as it were, and keep up communication between the wealthy Mohammedan states round Lake Chad in the south and Tripoli, Tunis, Algiers or Morocco on the Mediterranean. Between the trade routes all is a bank of sand or barren rock. Exploration is only possible when water, as well as food, can be carried, and this condition has practically stopped all attempts at discovery for the present, on account of the great expense and the purely scientific nature of the possible return. A railway running from the French possessions on the Mediterranean across the desert to Timbuctoo, the scarcely known trade center near the Niger, is talked of. Such a line may be constructed in the future, but the difficulties are enormous; much greater than those overcome by the Russians in the Transcaspian line through the deserts of Central Asia.

A Romance Spoiled.

A cycling romance has been spoiled, and so has a cycling costume, in one of the pleasantest suburbs of South London. Last Sunday morning as a gentleman was wheeling his way along his favorite country lane, he gradually overtook a lady bicyclist attired in the rational costume which, for a wonder, became her well. Elegantly cut, faultlessly finished, the fair rider's attire, from hat to gaiters, spoke the lady—so far, at least, as style went—and the critical spectator was fast becoming a convert to the æsthetic claims of the new fashion, when the fair rider wobbled, hesitated and was lost in a ditch at the side of the road. Quickly he rushed to her assistance, helped her to her feet and dusted her carefully down, the while she thanked him in unnumbering accents for his courtesy. That voice! he thought, where had he heard it before? and he lifted his eyes to hers. Of course he had heard those tones—they were his cook's. He forgot all about the damaged bicycle, flung himself on his own trusty steed and fled home to his wife.

Inquiries showed that the errant domestic had a friend in service whose mistress was a bicyclist, and in the absence of her employers from town she had allowed the cook to borrow both bicycle and costume wherewith to cut a dash. But the turn of the wheel brought nothing but woe to its unhappy devotee. There is a vacancy for a cook in that suburban villa. No cyclistess need apply.—London Telegraph.

ABOUT BIRDS.

The offensive weapon of the ostrich is his leg. He can kick as hard as a mule, and it is a remarkable fact that his kick is forward, never backward.

Young doves and pigeons are fed with a sort of pap secreted by the parent bird. It is necessary to the existence of the squabs. They die without it.

An owl cannot move his eyes, as they are fixed in their sockets. The deficiency is atoned for by great freedom of motion in the muscles of the head and neck.

Eagles always drive away their young as soon as the latter are able to fly well. Business is never very good with the eagle, and he does not enjoy competition.

The humming bird, in protecting its nest, always flies at and pecks the eyes of its adversary. Crows have been found totally blind from the humming bird's bill.

Several kinds of birds are known to follow cows, horses and other stock about the pasture for the purpose of feeding on the insects disturbed by the feet of these animals.

Wild ducks, cranes, swallows and several other kinds of birds assemble in flocks as the time of migration approaches and seem to discuss the departure and the route.

THREE RUNNING SORES
PHYSICIANS FAILED
BUT B.B.B. CURED

Dear Sirs—After having used Burdock Blood Bitters for Scrofula in the blood, I feel it my duty to make known the results. I was treated by a skilled physician but he failed to cure me. I had three Running Sores on my neck which could not be healed until I tried B. B. B., which healed them completely, leaving the skin and flesh sound and whole. As long as I live I shall speak of the virtues of B.B.B., and I feel grateful to Providence that such a medicine is provided for sufferers.
MRS. W. BENNETT, Acton P. O. Ont.

A SCALY ERUPTION
UNENDURABLE ITCHING
Suffered Three Years—Now Perfectly Cured by B. B. B.

Gentlemen—I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for Skin Diseases, from which I have been a sufferer for three years. I have been a resident of the Cariboo Reserve, but all to no avail. I doctored one year with the best physicians in the land; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but could not remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard dry scales. The itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured, and I owe it all to B. B. B.

PURIFIES THE BLOOD

"I TELL ALL MY FRIENDS."

A Lady of Shelburne, Ont., Permanently Cured of Indigestion After Using Two Bottles of South American Nervine —Glad to Let Everyone Know It.

MRS. A. V. GALBRAITH.

With indigestion it is not only that one suffers all imaginable torments, physical and mental, but more, perhaps, than anything else, an impaired digestion is the forerunner of countless ailments that in their course lead to the most serious consequences. Let the stomach get out of order and it may be said the whole system is diseased. When the digestive organs fail in their important functional duties, head and heart, mind and body are sick. These were the feelings of Mrs. Galbraith, wife of Mr. A. V. Galbraith, the well-known jeweller of Shelburne, Ont., before she had learned of the beneficent results to be gained by the use of South American Nervine Tonic. In so many words she said: "Life was becoming unbearable. I was so cranky I was really ashamed of myself. Nothing that I ate would agree with me; now it does not matter what I eat. I take enjoyment out of all my meals." Here are Mrs. Galbraith's words of testimony to South American Nervine, given over her own signature:

"Shelburne, Ont., March 27, 1894.

"I was for considerable time a sufferer from indigestion, experiencing all the misery and annoyance so common to this complaint. South American Nervine was recommended to me as a safe and effective remedy for all such cases. I used only two bottles, and am pleased to testify that these fully cured me, and I have had no indication of a return of the trouble since. I never fail to recommend the Nervine to all my friends troubled with indigestion or nervousness.

"MRS. A. V. GALBRAITH."

The testimony of this lady, given freely and voluntarily out of a full heart because of the benefits she experienced in her own person, have an echo in thousands of hearts all over the country. South American Nervine must cure, because it operates at once on the nerve centres. These nerve centres are the source from which emanates the life fluid that keeps all organs of the body in proper repair. Keep these nerve centres sound and disease is unknown. There is no trick in the business. Everything is very simple and common sense like. South American Nervine strengthens the digestive organs, tones up the liver, enriches the blood, is peculiarly efficacious in building up shattered and nervous constitutions. It never fails to give relief in one day.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease),
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want;
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then were home, but stop, I pass,

They gave us every one, a kiss,
And said, "be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For man; weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home.
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, 'twas rumored so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befal.

BABY'S MOODS.

Everything seems dull and drear
When the baby cries;
Sorrow grows with every tear
From her weeping eyes.
Everybody's heart is sore,
Things get worse with every roar,
Life seems just a horrid bore,
When the baby cries.

But it's vastly otherwise
When the baby crows,
Grabbing off the gold-rimmed eyes.
From her grandpa's nose.
Everybody's cheerful then,
The air is full of oxygen,
And the whole world smiles again,
When the baby crows.

NATURAL HISTORY.

Some Curious and Interesting Facts About Animal Life.

The toad catches insects by darting out its tongue so rapidly that the eye cannot follow. The tip is covered with a glutinous secretion, to which a fly or other insect adheres.

The land tortoises of many countries bury themselves in the mud at the bottoms of streams and marshes on the approach of winter, and also at the coming of a protracted drought.

The hedgehog, badger, squirrel and some kinds of mice lay up a regular store of provisions for the winter. It is said that they eat only during mild weather, and in extreme cold remain torpid.

Animals that live in cold countries have a warm matting of wool of fine fur underneath their hairy coats, so that they are almost perfectly protected from the cold. This wool usually falls off in summer.

The whiskers of a cat are supposed by some naturalists to be provided with nerves down to the tip, while others believe that the base of the hair is better fitted out with nerves than most other parts of the skin.

The vital principle is strongest in the common tortoise. One of these animals has lived for six months after the removal of its brain, and the severed head has given signs of life three days after being cut off.

The stentor, or trumpet, animalcule, is shaped exactly like a trumpet, save that at the small end there is a globe which seems to answer the purpose of heart, stomach, liver, lungs, and all other organs.

The beaver has more skill than a government engineer. The dams constructed by beavers are never washed away, while every freshet witnesses the destruction of a portion at least of the government's works on the river.

The alligator never leaves fresh water, while the crocodile frequently travels long distances by sea. It has been seen 1,000 miles from land, and it is possible that these sea-going crocodiles have given rise to sea serpent stories.

In a wild state the elephant is a nocturnal animal. When domesticated his size and dark color make him a great sufferer from the heat. To relieve himself he draws water from his stomach by means of his trunk and squirts it over his body.

Several marine animals propagate by voluntary self division. A piece breaks off and floats away. For a time it shows no sign of life, but when it has recovered from the shock of separation it develops into a perfect animal.

The frog deposits its eggs in shallow water where the warmth of the sun promotes speedy hatching. The common snake often selects a bed of decomposing vegetable matter. The crocodile and the clumsy sea tortoise go ashore to lay their eggs.

The camel's foot is a soft cushion peculiarly well adapted to the stones and gravel over which it is constantly walking. During a single journey through the Sahara horses have worn out three sets of shoes, while the camel's feet are not even sore.

When the common earthworm is cut in two, to the tail there grows a head and to the head there grows a tail, and two animals are formed. As the wound heals a small white button is formed, which afterwards develops into rings and a perfect extremity.

The serpent moves by elevating the scales on its abdomen and using them to push the body forward. The windings are always horizontal. The artists who represent the sinuosities as vertical have never observed the animal in motion. It is impossible for it to move in that way.

CITY SIGHTS.

One of the conditions of membership in a New York club is that each member must give at least one hour a week to doing some good action.

The greatest theatre-goers in the world are the Italians. There are more theatres in Italy in proportion to the population than in any other country.

There may be little godliness about Chatham square, New York, but there seems to be the next thing to it, according to the adage, for a little way down Park row is a sign reading: "Society for the Encouragement of Wearing Clean Shirts."

An Able Conundrum.

Miss Ada Sweet has a genius for conundrums. The latest is not half bad. "What was the difference," she asks, "between William Shakespeare and Queen Elizabeth?"

You think a while and then you say: "I give it up; what was the difference between William Shakespeare and Queen Elizabeth?"

Then Miss Sweet answers: "Shakespeare was a wonder and Elizabeth was a Tudor!"

Now, what do you really think of that?

Salt rheum with its intense itching, dry, hot skin is cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, because it purifies the blood.

Burdock Pills, small, safe and sure, regulate the liver and cure constipation.

Skin Diseases.

Skin Diseases are more or less occasioned by bad blood. B. B. B. cures the following Skin Diseases: Shingles, Eyresipelas, Itching Rashes, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Eruptions, Pimples and Blotches, by removing all impurities from the blood from a common Pimple to the worst Scrofulous Sore.

Children Cry for Fitcher's Castoria.

Anæmic Women

Scott's Emulsion

ASHBURNHAM NOTES.

The new Nicholls park in the north part of the village is being prepared for its intended use. Two of the buildings have been successfully removed by Mr. Allan McCarthy. One was bought by Mr. Robt. Read, and has been placed opposite the boundary of Peterborough, so that the citizens of the town can see that there is more than one house in the village that is over the half story. The other house was purchased by Mr. Jas. Hourigan, and is en route to its destination. Mr. McCarthy bought these buildings from the directors, sold them to their new owners, and moved them to their new sites.

Mr. McCarthy has also purchased the Royal Oak hotel, and intends starting business in a short time.

Ashburnham has good streets and walks, plenty to eat, but her great want is something to drink—we want water—for fire purposes, for thirsty lawns, etc. It is hoped the new council will give us union. —[Com.

SUCCESS IN LIFE AND TUTTI FRUTTI.

Success frequently depends on small things. Without exception, the testimony of every successful man is that success really hinges often on the most trivial of circumstances. When Mr. Gladstone was a young man, he suffered to some extent from indigestion, and on investigating the cause of it, concluded that it resulted from eating hurriedly. He then decided that every bite of food he took would receive thirty-two chews before being swallowed. He carried this resolution out, and it established with him the habit of eating his meals slowly. To-day, he ascribes his long life and robust health very largely to this excellent habit, formed when a young man. Everyone, who exercises the same determination, could no doubt accomplish the same result, and banish indigestion for ever from the system. To all those who inadvertently at times eat too heartily or too quickly, we would say try Adams' Tutti Frutti. It is no doubt without exception the most efficient stomach corrective known to the medical faculty. The most eminent physicians and scientific men have endorsed it as something that will ensure perfect digestion. Among those may be mentioned R. Ogden Doremus, M.D., L.L.D., professor of chemistry, toxicology and medical jurisprudence; Cyrus Edson, M.D., Health Commissioner, of New York city, and president of the Board of Pharmacy of New York city and count; Egbert Guernsey M.D., and P. E. Doolittle, M.D. These men have been eminently successful in their calling in life, and have found out the great virtues of Tutti Frutti, and have made them known to the public. Tutti Frutti is a small thing, being put up in five cent packages; but it must not be judged by the smallness of its cost, but by its immense value to anyone suffering from indigestion. Many thousands who have had indigestion gnawing at their vitals have been cured by it, and therefore enabled to win success in life.

QUAKES IN ARGENTINE

The City of San Juan Almost a Heap of Ruined Buildings.

SEVERE SHOCKS IN ECUADOR

One Shock in Quito, Lasting Thirty-Seven Seconds, Caused an Immense Amount of Damage—Many Persons Perish in the Ruined Buildings.

PANAMA, Jan. 4.—The correspondent of the Star and Herald at Quito, Ecuador, writes under date of November 27: An earthquake to-day, lasting 37 seconds, did great damage. Pulcan church was destroyed. Fourteen bodies have been taken from the ruins. Many persons were killed and injured. The government is sending aid. Echoes from the recent earthquakes at San Juan and Rio Ja, in the Argentine republic, still continue to come in.

In Rio Ja the inhabitants are principally engaged in pulling down houses that are in a dangerous condition and in removing the debris. For some days after the earthquake the heat was intense and the ruined city was enveloped in a cloud of dust. During the greatest of the shocks pieces of furniture danced and leaped about as if a demon had possession of them. It was like the rolling of a ship at sea in a heavy swell. The dust clouds darkened the air and cries and lamentations were heard on all sides.

In the confusion members of the same family became separated and it was a long time before they were re-united. Nearly all of the houses tumbled down and those that remained standing have the walls or roofs cleft asunder.

In the city of San Juan the wine deposits were smashed, casks burst and the liquid flowed in torrents through the streets. All who had fled from the city and the farm houses in the departments that suffered the least are crowded with fugitives. New springs opened up and streams of water have suddenly been found. Of the 2,349 houses in San Juan, 486 are reduced to heaps of ruins and the others are more or less injured, many beyond repair. There are not twenty houses in the city intact. All the churches are down or are threatening to come down.

A Missing Woman Wanted.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Sergeant Harley, of bureau of information at police headquarters, received a letter from C. Thorneloe, of 5 Laurier avenue, Toronto, Canada, who wants to discover the whereabouts of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Annie Aiken, who left Clones, Ireland, several years ago. The woman's husband, who was a commercial traveller, is said to have died in a hotel in this city eight or nine years ago, and according to all accounts he was buried in a pauper's grave. Mrs. Aiken, whose maiden name was Brown, left Ireland two years after her husband's death, with her two-year-old child, to come to New York. Nothing has been heard from her. She is now about 48 years old. Mrs. Thorncloe writes there is some money coming to Mrs. Aiken, and that James Knox, of Austin, Texas, whose brother was editor of the Texas Siftings, is also her brother-in-law.

Lake Losses for the Year.

DETROIT, Jan. 4.—The local weather bureau has compiled the losses to lake marine shipping for the year 1894, due to weather conditions. The number of vessels that met disaster on the great lakes is 113 and the number of lives lost 68. Of these vessels 43 were total losses, entailing financial losses of $643,243, and 69 were partial losses with damages aggregating $349,787, making a total money loss of $993,030. These casualties do not include fires and collisions.

Nobility Dies in Exile.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—In an obscure grave in the little cemetery of St. Raymond, in Westchester, N. Y., one of sunny France's noble daughters, a noble woman by birth and culture, a descendant of King Louis XVI. and a marquise in her own right, found an exile's last resting place. The Marquise De Greville, known in later years simply as Mme. De Greville, died at her humble home at No. 1,330 Franklin avenue, Morrisania.

Ordered Stambuloff's Arrest.

VIENNA, Jan. 4.—A despatch from Sofia to the Neue Freie Presse says that a judge attached to the council of war ordered the arrest of ex-Premier Stambuloff last week on the charge of complicity in the murder of Finance Minister Beltcheff in 1891. The order was recalled in deference to the urgent representations of several foreign ministers.

Young Saunderson Committed.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Reginald Saunderson was committed for trial yesterday for the murder of Augusta Dawes, whose throat he cut in Holland Park road on the night of November 25. Saunderson, who is barely 21 years of age, is a nephew of Col. Saunderson, member of Parliament.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Jan. 4, 1895.

Little is doing at the present time in the local grain market. Prices are unchanged and receipts are small.

Wheat advanced in Chicago on heavy cash sales and reports of a decrease in the world's supply. Corn was weak in tone, but the prices held steady on account of the strength of wheat. Oats were steady.

At Buffalo the barley market opened stronger, most holders advancing prices 1 to 2c. Good demand. Reported sales of 6,000 bushels No. 2 Canada at 62 1-2c and several cars of western at range of quotations.

At East Buffalo sheep and lambs offering were 46 cars, of which 10 cars were Canadas. Market slow and weaker and on natives 20 to 25c lower and on Canadas 10 to 15c. When the break occurred in prices the trade became more vigorous and there was a fair clearance. Choice to extra Canada sheep, $3.50 to $3.75.

On Wall street the absolute depth of gloom was reached at the opening hour, but before noon the entire market was advancing. There was no news whatever on which to base a recovery; the stock market had simply been "oversold." Some of the most noteworthy advances were in the Granger securities.

The London stock markets were dull except for first-class home investments. Americans were flat throughout. The heavy falling in Canada Pacific and Illinois Central was mainly due to the closing of the account of large Paris operators and also to the rumor here that the dividend of the Illinois Central will be reduced.

NEW YEAR NEW GOODS NEW LEAF 1895

On looking over last year's business we find that we have everything to be thankful for, as it was one of the best years that, notwithstanding the hard times, we ever had, and that is saying a great deal.

Now, as this is the season for making good resolutions, we have resolved to surpass, if possible, last year's trade. To attain this end we have duplicated all our fall Cloths and added all the latest winter patterns we could find. We buy for spot cash and can afford to sell on a small margin. Give us a call and we will do the rest.

Our Gent's Furnishings and Underclothing Departments are both well stocked. We have a few choice Overcoats still left which we will set off cheap.

AUSTRIA ALSO KICKS

Unites With Germany in Protesting Against the U. S. Duty on Sugar.

WILL ADOPT RETALLIATION

Proceedings in the United States Senate—The Nicaraguan Bill—A Democratic Caucus Decides That a Special Message From the President is Unnecessary.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Baron von Hengelmueller, the new minister of Austria-Hungary presented to Secretary Gresham a formal protest from his government similar to that presented by the German ambassador in August last against the discriminating duty of one-tenth of one per cent. per pound on sugar coming from countries paying an export bounty thereon as provided by the Wilson tariff bill.

It is probable that Congress will be notified of Austria's protest. From the similarity in wording between the latest protest and that of the German ambassador it is evident that the two countries are acting in concert in the matter and it seems probable that Austria will still further follow Germany's lead by inaugurating a policy of retaliation against the food products of the United States.

There was a very lively and interesting discussion in the Senate yesterday over Senator Lodge's (R., Mass.) resolution calling on the President for information as to the withdrawal of American vessels of war from the Hawaiian Islands. The morning hour expired before any vote was taken, and the resolution lost its place on the table and went to the calendar, where it will be heard no more. Then Mr. Morgan (Dem., Ala.) finished his speech in support of the Nicaragua canal bill, defending it against the assaults made upon it by Mr. Turpie (Dem., Ind.) in his three days' speech. No action was taken, and the bill still remains the unfinished business. The pension appropriation bill was taken up but went over without final action and at 3.55 the Senate adjourned until Monday.

Satisfaction was expressed by the Democratic leaders of the House when the news reached the capitol that as a result of the deliberations of the Cabinet it was deemed inadvisable that the President should at this time send a special message to Congress urging the passage of the Carlisle banking bill. If the House caucus to be held on Monday should decide to support the bill as a party measure, a special message will be unnecessary. Should the caucus develop strong opposition to the measure and determination radically to amend it, it is that the President will immediately follow the caucus' action with a special executive message.

HARD TIMES IN BUFFALO.

The Destitution Among the City's Poor Greater Even Than Last Year.

BUFFALO, Jan. 5.—The poormaster reports greater destitution this winter than last. The number of families who are receiving poor relief at this date is 2,311 as against 1,977 same date last year.

There are, too, more applications for admission to the county poor house than in any previous year. Of course, there is increased population, but the poormaster says that the percentage of actual workingmen, who would do work if they could get any to do, and who are applicants for relief are greater than in any previous year.

An Embezzler Tracked to Canada.

BOSTON, Jan. 5.—A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Harry B. Spalding for the alleged embezzlement of $15,000 from the firm of Wheeler, Blodgett & Co., of 166 Kingston street. Spalding, who was formerly the confidential bookkeeper of the firm and had been twenty years in its employ, disappeared from Boston in September last. Spalding always spent money lavishly and it is said was a frequenter of pool rooms. Since the police began to work on the case they have learned that he went to Montreal, but there all trace of him was lost.

Escaped Murderers Recaptured.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Jan. 5.—The escaped murderers, Price and Counterfeiter Young, were captured on the desert near Gila Bend by Deputy Sheriff Prothero and party and brought here. Price was mortally wounded and Young was shot in the leg. Deputy Sheriff Prothero was shot in the arm. Information of the battle between the escaped prisoners and the sheriff's posse is meagre.

THE BELGIAN EMBARGO

Minister of Agriculture Angers is Confident There is a Mistake.

HEALTH OF PREMIER BOWELL

His Physician Says His General Condition is Excellent and There is No Cause for Alarm—A Well-Known Lumberman Dies at the Capital.

OTTAWA, Jan. 5.—Minister of Agriculture Angers, seen by a reporter in reference to the Belgian scheduling of Canadian cattle, was confident that there had been a mistake. He thought there would be no difficulty in proving that the animals complained of supposed to have been shipped by Mr. Roy, of Quebec, on the Hispania, were free from pleuro-pneumonia. Sir Charles Tupper, he said, had ordered the lungs of the cattle complained of to be immediately forwarded to the French expert, Sacard, at Paris, who was now making a report. Until that report was made they were in the dark.

Dr. A. F. Rogers is Sir Mackenzie Bowell's doctor in this city. A reporter asked Dr. Rogers as to the Premier's health before he left for Halifax. "The Premier's health," said the doctor, "immediately before he left was very much improved. His cold was better and the cough almost entirely gone. His general condition was excellent. Altogether the Premier was in excellent health save for the remnants of the cold for which he had remained in doors for three or four days before leaving. I feel certain also that the reports respecting any bad condition of the Premier's health, which have been sent from Halifax, are incorrect, as his general health is splendid, and I am certain he will be here in a day or two."

Jos. Smith, one of the oldest residents and a well-known lumberman of the city, died at his residence on McLeod street yesterday. He had been confined to his house for more than a year. He died of general debility. He was 73 years of age. For many years he and his brother Charles carried on a lumbering business under the firm name of J. & C. Smith. His brother died early last spring, and Mrs. Jos. Smith followed a week later. The late Mr. Smith left no family. His funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon.

Contractor Lester has about thirty teams working drawing ice for the ice palace on Nepean point. The ice is being cut on the Rideau between St. Patricks and Cummings bridge and is about 15 inches thick. The carnival snow shoe committee have sent out invitations to join in the allegorical drive on Friday, January 25th at 2.30.

CASE AGAINST A. R. U. DIRECTORS.

Nine Indictments Quashed—Decision Reserved in the Other Charges.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—The motion to quash the indictments for conspiracy against Eugene V. Debs and the other directors of the A. R. U. besides 60 others who are accused of stopping the mails and interfering with interstate commerce came up before Judge Grosscup in the United States court yesterday. On motion of Special Counsel Milchrist, the indictments against the following were nullified:—Pat. Horace, Barry Hart, M. E. McGlen, W. J. McDade, Arthur Moore, Edward O'Neill, H. J. Hollhan, William Rae and Frederick Stanley.

Attorney T. A. Harper, in opening for the defendants, claimed that all the indictments should be quashed because the word "feloniously" did not appear in any one of them; also because it had been held by Justice Harlan and others that men had a right to combine or conspire to strike. He also thought the indictments not specific enough.

Mr. Milchrist spoke for the Government. The only defendant present was Director William Burns.

Judge Grosscup reserved his decision until Tuesday when the cases are set for trial.

Creamer's Peaceful Mission.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—The Times says to-day in a leader on Commoner Cremer's mission to the American Congress: "We have no sort of belief in arbitration as a panacea which will get rid of war, but we cannot withhold our sympathy from the laudable efforts now making on both sides of the Atlantic." In discussing the value of the proposed arbitration treaty the writer says that the provisions will apply to questions of intermediate character, too large and complex for diplomacy, yet not involving those vital interests which no nation can entrust to any keeping but its own.

The Pasha Instigated a Massacre.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—The Standard's Athens correspondent says in a paragraph concerning Zekki Pasha, who, as the military commander at Erzingian, has been held largely responsible for the massacre in Armenia: "An exalted personage in Yanina, Turkey, declares that Zekki Pasha, long president of military court in Yanina, instigated a massacre of Christians there. The populace hated him owing to his cruelties."

Germans Must Not Serve in China.

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—The Post says that the German government will do its utmost to prevent Germans of any rank from serving in the Chinese army or navy. This course will be taken in harmony with Germany's policy of strict neutrality. The Post speaks usually with authority on foreign affairs. The present statement is made in view of the report that Col. von Hannekin was trying to officer a large part of the Chinese army with Germans.

Providing the Sinews of War.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—The Times correspondent in Buenos Ayres says that the Argentine Congress in secret session has sanctioned the expenditure of $3,000,000 for war material. Some $300,000 will be spent forthwith and the remainder if the government regard it as necessary in view of possible trouble with Chile.

Steamship Empress Ashore.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—The Dover mail boat Empress is ashore at Calais. The passengers and mails carried by the Empress were landed by small boats. The violence of the gale in the channel is unabated. The boats were unable to leave Calais Ostend and Dover.

WELLAND'S GRIEVANCE

Farmers of the County Deprived by the Customs of a Profitable Trade.

BUFFALO WANTS THEIR MILK

But On Account of the Duty on Cans What Might be a Very Profitable Business for the Country Cannot be Transacted—To be Made an Election Issue.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Jan. 5.—Efforts of leading farmers of Welland county to establish supply depots for the purpose of supplying milk to Buffalo milkmen have failed because of the attitude of the customs officials on both sides, but particularly those of Canada.

Milk is on the free list in the new American tariff, although dutiable at 30 per cent. coming to Canada. But both countries maintain a duty on the cans in which the milk is conveyed. Welland county farmers claim that they have a market in Buffalo for all they can supply and that the Buffalo dealers offer to furnish cans free.

The Hon. N. C. Wallace, Controller of Customs, has advised the representative of the Welland farmers that if American manufactured cans are used duty will have to be paid each time the cans enter Canada, and this means a payment of about 60 cents on each ten gallon can besides the entrance. The Controller of Customs advises that the Buffalo milkmen have their cans made in Canada, where tin plate is cheaper, have them stamped and registered, and that then there would be no difficulty. But the farmers reply that the Buffalo milkmen already have the cans and want only the milk; that if the cans were made in Canada the regulations as to duty would be the same each time the cans reached the American side, and it would only be then a question as to which Government collected the duty. The Canadian manufacturers might have some profits on the half hundred cans supplied, but the American government would reap the duty collected.

Meanwhile a profitable trade in milk is "held up" and the question is likely to be one of the principal features of the coming election campaign in the county.

TORONTO'S BOODLERS.

The Cases Against the Arrested Aldermen Adjourned for a Week.

TORONTO, Jan. 5.—Messrs. Verral and Maloney, who were arrested after Judge McDougall's report was made public, finding them guilty of corrupt practices while aldermen, were arraigned before Magistrate Denison yesterday, but as the Crown was not ready with its evidence the cases were adjourned for a week, bail being renewed. Verral is defended by Hon. S. C. Briggs, and Maloney by Mr. F. E. Hodgins. There was a large crowd present, eager to hear the expected trial.

The case against ex-Ald. Stewart was to have been investigated by Magistrate Denison, but the Crown's witnesses had not all been served with notice, and Mr. J. J. Wright is out of the city.

Mr. John Greer, for Stewart, objected vainly to an adjournment. The case will come up again on Wednesday.

In the case of Samuel Wicks and Alanson C. Winton, charged with conspiracy by offering a bribe to Ald. Gowanlock, Mr. G. G. S. Lindsey, for the defence, took objection to the information as not disclosing an offence, and also pointed out that the report of Judge McDougall contained no reference to his clients, and that it was before that tribunal and not the present one that the defendants should have been heard. His Worship declined to take the responsibility of snuffing out the investigation on any technical point off-hand, but preferred to take time to consider the points. He will decide on Monday.

Inspector Stark says that the detectives have carried out all the instructions and attended to all the warrants given them by the Crown Attorney. Mr. Curry, Crown Attorney, said that all the warrants that had been issued had been attended to by the police, and no other arrests need be expected immediately. He added: "Ald. Bailey is out of the city. I understand that W. M. Hall is in Denver, and ex-Ald. Hewitt is in New York."

THE HENDERSHOTT TRIAL.

Two Daughters of Prisoner John Hendershott Give Evidence.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Jan. 5.—The preliminary hearing of the Hendershott murder case commenced here in the city hall before Police Magistrate White and Justices of the Peace, Frank Hunt, Daniel Turner and Dugald Ferguson. The crowd was so great that the magistrates could not secure order and the hall was cleared.

The afternoon was taken up with the evidence of two daughters of prisoner Hendershott. The younger daughter testified at the inquest that she retired very early on the night before the tragedy, but she said that she was in this city that night and that her father, Welter and the deceased came to the city in the morning and that her father drove on to Sparta and Welter and W. Hendershott returned home about noon. She and Welter came to the city about six o'clock in the evening and met her father here and drove home. Trial adjourned until to-day.

West Algoma Conservatives.

PORT ARTHUR, Jan. 5.—At the West Algoma Liberal Conservatives convention at Fort Williams several nominations were made for the honor of opposing James Conmee, but all retired except J. G. King, Port Arthur, and Arthur Woods, Rat Portage. Mr. King was chosen on the first ballot but later retired, and Mr. Woods will run.

Trouble Among London Shoemakers.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 5.—There is trouble between Sterling Bros. and their shoemakers. The firm want to make a cheap grade of shoe, such as is turned out by Quebec firms, but the men will not agree to the scale and have inserted advertisements in the local press requesting shoemakers to keep away from the city.

Now is the time for bargains at Grafton's closing sale.

THE ELECTORS' DUTY TO THEMSELVES.

The municipality of London West has requested the Ontario Government to appoint some person to look after its financial affairs. This is the second Ontario municipality that has got into deep waters of financial trouble. A few weeks since a request of a similar character came from Arthur, and the investigation that followed disclosed a startling condition of affairs. The inference from these facts, as well as the larger turpitudes revealed by Judge Macdougall's search-light in Toronto, is that the people do not take sufficient interest in their local affairs; they trust too largely to their representatives. This trust would be right enough if the electors in the first place took sufficient interest and exercised sufficient care in the selection of representatives. As a matter of fact the people do not select their representatives. Certain sets of candidates place themselves in the field, and all the electors do is to make a choice from the material that presents itself—in many cases the choice of the lesser or least evil. If the electors would take a more active interest and make search for the best available candidates and place them on the council board, and after they were elected, would closely watch the administration conducted by such representatives, the moral pressure that would be exercised would serve to prevent council members from yielding to the temptation to practice reckless and mischievious methods. When a body of electors show themselves indifferent as to the members they elect and add to this indifference as to the course those elected pursue, it is obvious that they are to a very large extent to blame, if municipal matters go wrong. The electors have a very important duty to discharge next Monday, but that is only a beginning of their responsibility. The best of councillors are the better for being kept in touch during the year with the electorate. If they are doing right the sympathy of the electors will encourage them, and if they are tempted to extravagance or crookedness, the knowledge that they are closely watched will exercise a restraining influence.

FINANCE MINISTER FOSTER'S ECONOMY.

The Empire has a very modest way of indicating the unsatisfactory condition of the Dominion financial situation. After referring to the fact that Canada's exhaustless assets of natural resources enables her to borrow money on good terms, the chief Conservative organ says: "The other feature of the public accounts, while not unsatisfactory, indicate that we need all Mr. Foster's skill and economy (mark the word) during the next year or two to keep a balance between revenue and expenditure." This is equivalent to saying that only the man who got our finances into a muddle can get them out. A few facts from the Public Accounts (just issued) will serve to show Mr. Finance Minister Foster's "economy" in its true light. They show that Mr. Foster has overdrawn his bank account, run head and ears into debt, mortgaged his property, is short in his accounts for the past year, has expended on account of capital the largest sum expended in four years, and altogether has well-earned the title of spendthrift. The gross debt was increased during the year by $8,800,000, and the net debt by $4,502,000. The amount of the gross debt at the close of the fiscal year, was $308,-348,023, and the amount of the net debt, $286,183,020. There is a yawning gap of $1,310,232 between outgo and income in the ordinary expenditure of the year, the balance being unfortunately upon the wrong side of the ledger, vulgarly called a deficit. The Empire is very well justified in stating that Mr. Foster's "skill and economy" are needed for two or three years. His economy is shown by there being an almost all round increase in expense of administration—increase in cost of civil government—salaries of ministers and civil servants—increase in collecting excise and customs—in the post office services, etc. This is Mr. Foster's economy exemplified. The country is not pining for a much larger dose of such economical management.

INDEPENDENCE AT A DISCOUNT.

According to the Toronto News, the Conservative "machine" held a hole-and-corner convention at Parry Sound, for the purpose of putting up a candidate, and giving the go-by to Col. O'Brien, the sitting member, whose servitude to the party is not of a sufficiently slavish character to meet the requirements of the "machine." The new candidate has, the News says, not the ghost of a chance of being elected, but his candidature will serve to elect a Liberal, thus freezing out Col. O'Brien. Thus it seems that the machine element of the Conservative party would prefer to see even a hated "Grit" a member of the Riding, to an independent stalwart Conservative like Col. O'Brien. The party has no use for members of the House who dare to think for themselves, and will not on all occasions answer to the crack of the party whip, and take the party position on every vote. The kick of Col. O'Brien and D'Alton McCarthy against the methods and policy of the Government are but types of a more wide-spread, but more quietly conducted kick, amongst the members in the private ranks. These won't talk on the stump like Messrs. O'Brien and McCarthy, but they will speak by the ballot. We shall doubtless see more trimming of sails, as the elections approach.

For hoarseness, loss of voice, and all affections of the vocal organs, the favorite remedy with many clergymen, singers, actors, auctioneers, and public speakers is Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. As an anodyne expectorant, its remedial effects are promptly realized.

Dr. Low's Pleasant Worm Syrup removes worms of all kinds from children or adults.

INDIA has been bitten by the cobra of "protection." That country levies a tax of five per cent. on cotton. The consumers of cotton pay this, for the importer naturally adds the amount of the tax to his invoice price. Of course the native producers of cotton can advance their prices to the extent of the duty, but by a sensible arrangement, the price rate added by them is, by means of an excise tax, diverted into the public coffers.

JOHN BURNS GOES HOME.

He Sums Up Things in General Before Leaving New York.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—John Burns, M.P., who sailed for home to-day, delivered a farewell address at Clarendon hall last evening to 250 members of the Central Labor Union. He said he was so well pleased with his visit that he hoped to return next summer and remain three or four months.

The prevailing fault of this country, he declared, was that corporations run the community in the interest of monopoly, whereas communities should run the monopolies against the interest of the corporations.

He referred to the level crossings in Chicago, which he pronounced disgraceful, as they caused the death of at least one person a day, whereas in England, with the 20,000 miles of railroad carrying 48,000,000 passengers yearly, only 465 people were killed last year, or only 100 more than by the level railroad crossings in Chicago alone. No monopoly should be allowed to conduct such a death-dealing scheme.

Mr. Burns then condemned the telegraph and telephone poles in the principal streets of Washington. He denounced vigorously "men such as Pullman and Andrew Carnegie." He termed Mr. Carnegie's iron works at Homestead "the greatest fraud on earth."

ROBBED THE STATE BANK.

Two Men Get Away With a Big Sum in Broad Daylight.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 5.—The Ontario State Bank in the town of Ontario between this city and San Bernardino was robbed of between $4,000 and $5,000 by two men yesterday. The crime was committed when no one was in the bank except Fred Stammthe, cashier.

Two men entered suddenly, drew revolvers and ordered him to throw up his hands. He did. One of the robbers told him to go into the vault and he followed him. The one who entered the vault kept the cashier covered while he gathered all the money in sight. Then he backed out, shut the door and made the cashier a prisoner. The two men ran out and jumped into a buggy nearby and escaped.

American Trade Report.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Bradstreet's says: There has been no material improvement in general trade within a week. Jobbers and other wholesalers are sending out, or are about to send out, commercial travellers, and in many instances have not finished the yearly accounts and stock taking. In many instances trade revival is declared to depend on a settlement of the currency question. The most encouraging expressions of opinion are that merchants are hopeful. Among the more favorable conditions are reports that stocks of goods of all descriptions in the hands of jobbers, manufacturers and retailers, west and northwest, are generally smaller than usual at this season. Total bank clearings at 69 cities in the United States aggregate for the calendar year 1894, $44,995,000,000, 16 per cent. less than in the panic year 1893 and 26 per cent. less than in 1892, the year of the largest volume of bank clearings. Total exports of wheat, flour included, both coasts United States (the telegram from Portland, Ore., not yet received) amount to 9,684,000 bushels, against 1,814,000 bushels a week ago.

Trade in the Dominion.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—Bradstreet's says: A fairly good business is reported by Halifax jobbers, but they are not inclined to report the near future bright and collections are unusually slow. Some improvement in trade is reported from Montreal, although the fur business is disappointing. At Toronto business is quiet and the prospects are thought not favorable, although stocks of merchandise are generally smaller. There are 33 business failures reported from the Dominion of Canada this week, against 36 in the week a year ago and 27 two years ago.

Striking Clothiers Become Aggressive.

PASSAID, N. J., Jan. 5.—A crowd of destitute operatives until recently employed in the clothing factory at Bogart Heights, Bergen county, surrounded the house of the manager, M. Schtskin, on Wednesday night. Some of them were armed with knives and axes, which they brandished as they clamored fiercely for work. The infuriated rioters broke down the doors of the house and made its intimates prisoners. Officers finally dispersed the mob and captured five of the ringleaders, who were sent to jail for rioting.

Homestead Strikers Pacified.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Jan. 5.—At Homestead yesterday there was little or no excitement. A final conference was held between Manager Schwab and the striking shearman of the Carnegie mill and a settlement reached. The likelihood now of a strike of any proportions at Homestead seems entirely removed. At Braddock everything was quiet with no indication of an outbreak. The strikers have called a meeting for Monday, at which they will take action on the ultimatum issued by the Carnegie company.

An Insane Hospital Burned.

ANNA, Ill., Jan. 5.—The centre section and the south wing of the Illinois Southern hospital for the insane, comprising over half of the entire building, was destroyed by fire. All the patients to the number of 800 were, it is thought, removed to the other building. It is reported a female attendant named Inda Anderson has been burned as no trace of her can be found. Loss $250,000. The physicians, officers and employes in the burned building lost nearly all their personal effects.

You Get Strong,

If you're a tired out or "run-down" woman, with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. And, if you suffer from any "female complaint" or disorder, you get well. For these two things—to build up women's strength, and to cure women's ailments—this is the only medicine that's guaranteed. If it doesn't cure, in every case, your money is returned. On these terms, what else can be "just as good" for you to buy? The "Prescription" regulates and promotes all the natural functions, never conflicts with them, and is perfectly harmless in any condition of the female system. It improves digestion, enriches the blood, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and vigor. For ulcerations, displacements, bearing-down sensations, periodical pains, and every chronic weakness or irregularity, it's a remedy that safely and permanently cures.

Consumption—Low Condition

Wonderful Results From Taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Miss Hannah Wyatt
Toronto, Ont.

"Four years ago while in the old country (England), my daughter Hannah was sent away from the hospital, in a very low condition with consumption of the lungs and bowels, and weak action of the heart. The trip across the water to this country seemed to make her feel better for a while. Then she began to get worse, and for 14 weeks she was unable to get off the bed. She grew worse for five months and lost the use of her limbs and lower part of body, and if she sat up in bed had to be propped up with pillows. Physicians

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

A MEDICINE

WITHOUT AN EQUAL.

Statement of a Well Known Doctor

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is without an equal as a blood-purifier and Spring medicine, and cannot have praise enough. I have watched its effects in chronic cases, where other treatment was of no avail, and have been astonished at the results. No other blood medicine that I have ever used, and I have tried them all, is so thorough in its action, and effects so many permanent cures as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—Dr. H. F. MERRILL, Augusta, Me.

A MILLER'S STORY.

HE WAS GIVEN JUST ONE MONTH TO LIVE.

First Attacked With Inflammatory Rheumatism, and Then Stricken With Paralysis—Hope Abandoned and He Longed for Death to Release Him From Suffering—At Last He Found a Cure and Relates His Wonderful Recovery.

Sherbrooke Gazette.

The benefits arising from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are well known to the Gazette. It is a frequent occurrence that people come into the office and state that they have been restored to health by their use. It occasionally happens that extraordinary instances of their curative powers come to our notice, and one of these was related to us recently, so astonishing in its nature that we felt the closest investigation was required in order to thoroughly test the accuracy of the statements made to us. We devoted the necessary time for that purpose and can vouch for the reliability of the following facts, wonderfully passing belief as they may appear:

There are few men more widely known in this section than Mr. A. T. Hopkins, of Johnville, Que. Previous to his removal to Johnville, Mr. Hopkins resided at Windsor Mills, and was for three years a member of the municipal council of that place. When a young man, Mr. Hopkins was noted for his strength and his activity as a wrestler. His strength stands him in good stead for he works hard at his business, carrying heavy sacks of flour in his mill for many hours during the day and frequently far into the night. Active as he is, and strong as he is, there was a time not long distant when he was as helpless as an infant and suffered intolerable agony. About three years ago, while residing at Windsor Mills, he was attacked by inflammatory rheumatism. It grew worse and worse until, in spite of medical advice and prescriptions, after a year's illness he had a stroke of paralysis. His right arm and leg became quite useless. Sores broke out on both legs. He suffered excruciating agony, and had rest neither day nor night. He sought the best medical advice that could be obtained, but no hopes were held out to him by the physicians. "He will certainly die within a month," one well-known practitioner told his friends. He will be a cripple for life," said two other doctors. It is no wonder that, as he says, life became a burden to him, and he longed for death to relieve him from his sufferings. This was in August, 1892. About October of this year he heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and as a forlorn hope determined to try them. He did so, and before long was able to take outdoor exercise. He persevered with the treatment, closely following the directions, and is to-day nearly as strong as when a young man, and is able to follow successfully and without difficulty the laborious calling by which he gets a living.

Such was the wonderful story told the Gazette by Mr. Hopkins, who attributes his recovery solely to the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and he is willing to satisfy any person who may call on him as to their wonderful effects.

A depraved condition of the blood or a shattered nervous system is the secret of most ills that afflict mankind, and by restoring the blood and rebuilding the nerves, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills strike at the root of the disease, driving it from the system and restoring the patient to health and strength. In cases of paralysis, spinal troubles, locomotor ataxia, sciatica, rheumatism, erysipelas, scrofulous troubles etc., these pills are superior to all other treatment. They are also a specific for the troubles which make the lives of so many women a burden, and speedily restore the rich glow of health to sallow cheeks. Men broken down by overwork, worry or excesses, will find in Pink Pills a certain cure. Sold by all dealers or sent by mail, postpaid, at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont., or Schenectady, N. Y. Beware of imitations and substitutes alleged to be "just as good."

NEWFOUNDLAND AFFAIRS.

The Government Opposes the Resolution Asking for a Royal Commission.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Jan. 5.—Resolutions favoring the appointment of a royal commission to investigate the colony's affairs were presented in the Legislature. The Government opposed them and refuse to take action in the matter. The promoters of the movement will appeal to the Governor and to the British Government direct.

The loan from the Bank of Montreal amounts to $100,000 and is merely a temporary accommodation. The Governor has not yet signed the bill guaranteeing the notes of the Commercial and Union banks. The British Government is reported to be considering the propriety of interfering without the formality of receiving a request from Newfoundland.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Canon Hurst, formerly the Newfoundland agent of the Colonial church society has written to the newspapers enclosing a letter from Dr. Blot, Government Inspector of Schools in Newfoundland describing the misery prevalent in the colony. Dr. Blott says: "The fire of 1892 from which we still were suffering, was a slight disaster in comparison with the present one. Then we had ready help. Now we seem to stand alone. Some will say: 'The disaster of your own making and you must bear it alone.' This is only true of those who brought the trouble, who foresaw the crash and who grabbed all the gold and silver." Dr. Blot appeals for aid and Canon Hurst offers to receive donations.

Destructive Fire at Gravenhurst.

GRAVENHURST, Ont., Jan. 5.—Fire broke out in the brick blocks occupied by P. Shea, boots and shoes; H. H. Marter, furniture; L. J. Overn, harness; G. E. Clark, drugs; Dixon & Johnson, bakers; O'Neil & Co., dry goods and T. Martin, tinware and stoves. The fire was confined to the one block. The losses cannot be estimated as yet. The following are the insurances held as far as learned: P. Shea, $2,500 on stock in the British American and $1,000 on building in the Queen. H. H. Marter, loss covered in the London & Lancashire, amount not known. L. J. Overn, on stock, $1,000 in the Commercial Union. G. E. Clark, $1,000 on stock in the Eastern. W. O'Neill, on stock $1,000, in the Eastern, $1,000 in the British America and $500 in the National. Dixon & Johnson, no insurance, and T. Martin, no insurance. W. R. Tudhope, on building, $1,000 in the Commercial and $1,000 in the British America. The Canada Permanent Loan & Savings Co. have another insurance on the Shea block.

Changing the Centre of the Wool Trade.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—The Evening Sun prints an article in which it says that the wool men of this city have carried into effect a scheme which will make New York the centre of the wool trade instead of Boston. The plan is many sided, involving the building of an immense warehouse for the storage of wool, the forming of a wool exchange, the establishment of a bank which will be primarily identified with wool interests and the organization of a club which by bringing wool merchants into closer relations with one another will concentrate the trade in this city.

Will Hire Only American Sailors.

SOUTHAMPTON, Jan. 5.—The steamer Friesland, from New York for Antwerp, arrived here this morning and landed 184 firemen, comprising the American boiler-room crew of the steamer Paris, which sails for New York to-morrow. English laborers are greatly displeased at learning that henceforth the American line will sign their entire engine room staff in New York, instead of Southampton, as formerly.

Earthquakes Continue in Sicily.

ROME, Jan. 5.—Earthquakes have been felt repeatedly in Reggio di Calabria and Northern Sicily. The under secretary of the interior will make a tour of the provinces affected and will provide for the distribution of money, food and clothing among the homeless. The charity ball held here for the benefit of the sufferers was attended by many Americans.

Belgium to Annex the Congo.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 5.—It is reported in official circles that the government will lay before Parliament a proposal to annex the Congo state. The Times correspondent in Brussels says that the government has assured itself a majority for the Congo annexation bill. The Socialists will oppose it. France will offer no objections.

Tried to Kill His Family.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 5.—George Gordon, colored, shot his wife, six-year-old son and three-year-old daughter and then shot and killed himself last night. The boy was killed instantly but the woman and daughter will recover.

A Great Battle

Is continuously going on in the human system. The demon of impure blood strives to gain victory over the constitution, to ruin health, to drag victims to the grave. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the weapon with which to defend one's self, drive the desperate enemy from the field, and restore bodily health for many years.

SIR MACKENZIE'S ILLNESS.

Though Under Medical Treatment His Condition is Not Serious.

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—There was great excitement in the city over the reports from Halifax that Premier Bowell was seriously ill. Crowds gathered around the telegraph and newspaper offices while the evening papers issued extra editions. The excitment was, however, allayed on receiving a despatch that Sir Mackenzie Bowell was not seriously ill, although confined to his room and under medical treatment.

HALIFAX, Jan. 4.—Some alarming reports being current regarding the nature of Sir Mackenzie Bowell's illness, in consequence of which greatly exaggerated statements have been circulated, the correspondent called at the residence of T. E. Kenny, M.P., where the Premier is stopping, and was told Sir Mackenzie's trouble is elongation of palate, due to cold, from which he has been suffering. Relief was soon obtained and Sir Mackenzie is much better. It was said, however, that his illness would prevent his returning to Ottawa for a few days.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Jan. 5, 1895.

Street sales here were 150 bushels white wheat at 68c; spring is quoted at 60 1-2c; 500 bushels barley at 47 to 48 1-2c; 200 bushels of oats at 33 to 34 1-2c. Winter wheat firmer. Manitoba wheat firm at 73c asked west.

At Buffalo barley was in active demand, no low grades offering. Canada values were made at an advance on a sale of 5,000 bushels No. 2 at 63c or 1c higher, which clears the commission charges and leaves freight and duty only out of the Canada price.

Wheat offerings in Chicago were in excess of the demand and prices fell off 1-4c. Corn was dull and closed 1-8 to 1-4c lower. Oats were forced down 1-4 to 1-2c near the close by a heavy selling movement.

At East Buffalo in sheep and lambs the offerings were 53 cars; opened fairly active; Canadas closed higher; bulk of offerings sorry; some prime Canada lambs brought $4.65. The late sales were of superior class stock. Best quotations for choice Canada sheep not above $4.75 and sellers can realize about as well in the home market, considering duty.

Trading at the New York stock exchange was less active. The opening of the market was featureless, but soon afterwards the entire list moved up 1-4 to 1 3-8 per cent. The advance was soon checked by the engagement of $2,350,000 gold for export to Europe to-day. In the final dealings a steadier tone prevailed and a rally of 1-8 to 5-8 per cent. ensued. Speculation left off about steady.

There was a better tone generally in London, the Paris Bourse becoming firme again. Argentines were exceptionally flat on the continued rise of the gold premium. Americans generally were better, except Canada Pacific, in which a further fall is feared yet.

MR. CAHILL'S CANDIDATURE.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

SIR,—From reports it would seem as if Mr. Cahill has some idea of withdrawing from the council. It would be a very serious thing for the town to have such a thing happen. No doubt he feels that he has been "attacked" by some papers as well as by some people, and it could hardly be expected that in the face of the sharp criticism of the EXAMINER he should look forward with pleasure to an election. But for all that the people need him and I hope you will tell him so.

Yours, etc.,
LOW TAXES.

[Low Taxes seems to have a very imperfect idea of the function of a newspaper and to have read, with little care, the EXAMINER article dealing with the annual statutory financial statement, which "Low Taxes" assumes is deterring Mr. Cahill from remaining in civic politics. "Low Taxes" must have also a small opinion of the sound, hard common sense that has distinguished Mr. Cahill during an excellent representative record in the council of over twenty years, if he fancies that Mr. Cahill is to be frightened by the article in the EXAMINER referred to. In that article the financial situation was discussed with the most earnest desire to deal fairly with the matter. The favourable and unfavourable aspects were presented and if the conclusions arrived at were not what one would like to see, it is the fault of the facts. The EXAMINER in this matter, has not one word to retract, nor is it afraid to express its high appreciation of Mr. Cahill's past services, and is supporting him in the present contest and would much regret his withdrawal from the council. The affairs of the town are legitimate subjects for discussion and the EXAMINER intends to pursue its past policy of discussing them in the public interest. If, in the process, personal interests are affected, on account of connection with the matters dealt with, it may be unfortunate, but it can't be helped. The interests of the public are paramount. If "Low Taxes" expects the EXAMINER to follow the example of other papers and deal in vague generalities, when outspoken and fair criticism are indicated he is gravely mistaken. In conclusion the writer of the above letter, who sees fit to champion Mr. Cahill, has no ground for the insinuation that the EXAMINER has attacked Mr. Cahill. We simply criticised a public document as we had a perfect right to do. When the EXAMINER opposed the proposition to exempt the Peterborough Milling Company's property from taxation, "Low Taxes" lost an admirable opportunity of breaking a lance in the interests of low taxation. He was discretely silent.—[ED. EXAMINER.

NORTH MONAGHAN.

Death of Mrs. Archibald Lillico.

To-day (Saturday) Mrs. Isabella McDonald Lillico, relict of the late Archibald Lillico, passed away to her rest at the venerable age of 78 years. The deceased lady was a native of Perthshire, Scotland, and came to Canada in 1832 with her father, the late Donald McDonald, who settled in the 9th concession of North Monaghan. In 1836 she was united in marriage with Archibald Lillico, and the result of the union was the birth of six children, all living. Mrs. Archibald McGregor, Princess, Man; Mr. Richard Lillico, North Monaghan; Mrs. Wm. Fowler, town; Mrs. Joseph, Foster, North Monaghan; Mr. Archibald Lillico, and Mr. Donald Lillico, Bruce County. The deceased lady has only one brother living, Mr. John McDonald, also of Bruce county, who did not arrive in time to see his sister before death came. She has been a highly respected resident of North Monaghan for over sixty years—thirty-two years of which have been passed in widowhood. The deceased was an attendant of the Methodist church. The funeral takes place on Monday, Jan. 7th, at 1.30 p.m., from the late residence, lot 4, concession 12, to the Little Lake Cemetery.

Diphtheria in the Province.

From reports made by Ontario medical health officers, it would appear that diphtheria manifested itself in 110 municipalities in this province in 1894, there having been 369 cases and 104 deaths. Figures received by Dr. Bryce indicate, however, that the scourge does not prevail in Canada with anything like the severity it does in the United States. Since December 18th there have been in the city of Philadelphia alone 203 cases and 77 deaths.

It Might Have Been Fatal.

At noon to-day, what might have resulted in a fatal accident, occurred at the corner of Charlotte and George streets. Just as the Charlotte street car was coming along, the motorman noticed a man standing in the centre of the track, evidently unaware of the near approach of the car. He rang his bell as loudly as possible, but it did not have any effect on the person and as the car was going pretty fast and was near the man, the possibilities of having a charge of manslaughter preferred against him, caused the car man considerable anxiety. This, however, was soon removed, as the man, who had evidently just woke up or else had been in a stupor, got off the track and started north, but not before he had informed the bystanders, who had asked if he knew how close a shave he had had, that he was stupefied with the long list of prizes which was on the bill board at the corner and which the Sons of Canada are going to give away at their grand carnival, on Friday evening next. The prizes are to be seen in the windows of the Peterborough Hardware Company. 1d

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Items of Interest to Local Sportsmen.

CURLIANA.

The Peterborough curlers were victorious, yesterday, both in Lindsay and Peterborough, securing in the four rinks, which played, a majority of eight points. This wins the Peterborough—Lindsay cup for the local curlers for the season of 1894-5, as it was agreed last year, when the series resulted in a draw that the result of the first game, this year, would determine the ownership of the cup for 1894-5 and by the way the local men started out yesterday it looks very much as though the cup would come to Peterborough for 1895-6 as well. The result of yesterday's matches was as follows:

In Peterborough:

LINDSAY.	PETERBOROUGH.
RINK NO. 1.
Tommy McConnell,	C Rutherford,

Majority for Peterborough, 8.

On the local rinks the home men were at one time leading by ten points, but the visitors nearly evened things up in one end by scoring 5 points in one rink and 4 on the other.

In Lindsay defeat stared the Peterborough men in the face at one time, their opponents leading by 21 shots. With a long pull, a strong pull and a pull altogether however, they managed to pull up out of the hole quite handily.

Rinks skipped by Judge Weller and Mr John McClelland, played off for the Kendry cup last evening with the following result:—

L M Hayes,	J T Tucker,
Sherin,	R LeBrun,
John Burnham,	James Ames,
Judge Weller, skip..20	Jno McClelland, skip..21

Mr. Ames, as vice-skip, played a most remarkable game, taking into consideration that this is only his second year on the ice, and that he never before assisted in the management of a rink. Great things are predicted of him before the season closes by the older curlers.

A scratch match was played between the following rinks last night:—

C Rutherford,	Wyllie,
R H Fortye,	W Johnston,
R B McKee,	D Davidson,
R S Davidson, skip. 8	W G Ferguson, skip..12

The two rinks which played so much last season for gifts for the poor and other similar trophies and whose curling was always watched with the greatest interest through the season, met again yesterday afternoon for the first time this year and played for the brooms. Mr. Harry LeBrun's rink won by three points. The personnel of the two rinks is as follows:—

C LeBrun,	W H Meredith,
P Henry,	W H Robinson,
[illegible],	Geo Hatton,

"Athletic Life" is the title of a new monthly journal issued in Toronto in the interests of athletics. The objects, which the proprietors have in view, is best stated in their own language. In the introductory they say:—"Our aim is to have a complete record of all games and pleasures, authenticated and under their proper heading, and to assist and encourage their development. In this we have been fortunate enough to secure the co-operation of recognized authorities in the different branches of sport, and with their assistance we shall seek to encourage all correspondence, under its own heading, as will serve to develop the different pastimes, and to discuss various modes of precedure or suggested improvements. With this object in view, we have sought and obtained the sanction of some of the most influential clubs, to publish, under "their auspices" and as their "official organ." To those who have acceded to our request we tend our hearty thanks.

We propose to devote sufficient space under the various headings to publish information as to club meetings, officers, notices, etc., as will be interesting to the participators in that particular game, and what the officers want to say to their own club members, or what they want to say to the other clubs devoted to the same sport, they can say through these columns.

To this, by special request, we have added a "Military Department," the objects of which will be found fully set out under its heading."

Pure, wholesome sport develops both body and mind, it is good for both old and young, its use is for male and female, it develops morality, and raises the standard of mankind generally.

For the initial number the editor has been successful in securing articles from the pens of Prof. Goldwin Smith, James Hedley, F. M. De la Force, Q. D. McCulloch, W. H. Bunting, Col. T. Sturm Cane, and other writers of note in the respective subjects to which they devote themselves. The price of the magizine is most reasonable, being only $1 per annum.

Own a Good Piano.

It costs but a trifle more to own a good piano, like the "Rheimer," the "Morris," the "Heintzman" or the "Mendelssohn." The difference in cost is not for one day, or one month, or one year. It's worth five dollars a year for ten years to have exactly what you want. Just think it over. Have a talk with Mr. J. W. Crosby, of 342 Water street, the agent for those four first-class instruments, and close the purchase before the end of the year.

ANNUALS AT JUST HALF PRICE.

Our Great Sale of the Popular Annuals last year and the year before was a source of wonder and astonishment to all. How, in the name of business, perfectly new publications could sell for less than they usually cost to publish, was a conundrum. Most people were satisfied to buy without being able to solve the problem, and the Annuals did not lie long on our tables.

Now, we're ready to repeat the past—having just bought out the publisher's entire stock of these Popular Annuals, and secured the exclusive control in Canada of every copy left in the publisher's hands on the 1st day of January, 1895.

	Regular Price.	Our Price.
BOYS' OWN ANNUAL - - - -	$2.00	$1.00
SUNDAY AT HOME - - - - -	$2.00	$1.00

HOW ABOUT SCHOOL BOOKS?

Give the Boys and Girls clean new books for the New Year. Don't send them back to school with the old, torn, dog-eared books of last year. "LIBERTY, BENEVOLENCE AND CONCORD."

Joint Installation of Four Courts of the Canadian Order of Foresters.

There was a grand rally of the members of the Canadian order of Foresters, in Court Peterborough Hall, Simcoe street, last night. The capacious rooms were filled to overflowing and a strong feeling of fellowship and "concord" pervaded the proceedings. Not for some time has such a Foresterie gathering been witnessed in Peterborough.

The election of officers for the ensuing term having taken place in Courts Peterborough, Little John, Langton and Young Peterborough, respectively, an invitation was sent out by Court Peterborough to unite in holding a joint installation, which was unanimously accepted. Accordingly the officers and members of the four courts all met together in the same hall last night, and were duly and legally installed into their respective offices.

The interesting ceremony of installation was performed by D.H.C.R. Henderson Nesbitt, who discharged the heavy duties of his official position with becoming dignity and skill. He was well assisted by Bro. R. Q. Dench, of Lakefield, D.D.H. C.R., Bro. R. Robertson, of Court Peterborough, acting High Marshall, Bro. W. S. Cox, of Court Littlejohn, acting, H.V.C.R., and Bro. J. Fanning, acting H.S.

Throughout the evening Bro. D. Harvey, C.R., of Court Peterborough, elected for the second term, discharged the duties of his office in a prompt and business-like manner, and handled the gavel with credit to himself and the brethren.

At the close of the installation, speeches were delivered by the officers-elect of the several courts, each fittingly acknowledging the confidence that had been reposed in them by their respective courts. Speeches were also delivered by D.H.C.R. Nesbitt and Dench, the latter being unusually happy and witty in his remarks. A number of the P. C. R's and past officers of the Courts were also called upon for speeches, who responded with spirited and encouraging remarks, evincing the pleasure it gave them to be present and participate in the general cordiality and fraternal spirit which prevailed among all the members present.

About ten o'clock, the business of the evening having been accomplished, the courts were closed down, the Chief Ranger having, however, on behalf of Court Peterborough, requested the members to keep keep their seats, and extended an invitation to the visiting brethren to partake of their hospitality. Refreshments were then passed round and heartily indulged in by all present. There was an abundance of coffee, sandwiches, cake, etc., and the members of the visiting courts went away voting their hosts of Court Peterborough, "jolly good fellows."

AT THE OPERA HOUSE.

As the time draws near for the departure of the Marks Bros'. Comedy Company from town, the crowds which seek admittance at the doors becomes larger daily. Without doubt, the troupe is the most popular theatrical company, which has held the boards of the Opera House in years and the Peterborough public will gladly welcome the Marks Bros. to town on the occasion of their next annual visit.

"The Little Duchess" was the title of the play, which was presented last evening and the large audience was delighted with the finished manner in which the different members of the cast assumed the characters portrayed. Miss Myra Collins made a cute "Little Duchess," and received a great deal of applause for her clever interpretation of her part. Mr. Tom Marks, as Peter Robbins, also did exceptionally well, last evening. The other members of the cast ably seconded the efforts of the two stars and in consequence the "Little Duchess" was presented in a manner highly satisfactory to the audience. The performance this evening will close the Company's engagement in town and a large house is expected and fully deserved.

A BRIDE WHO IS KNOWN IN PETERBOROUGH.

The Wills-Robinson Nuptials in Port Perry—A Quiet Wedding.

A quiet little wedding took place at Port Perry, on Wednesday, 26th inst., one of the contracting parties being one of Ingersoll's young men in the person of Mr. William H. Wills, to Miss Ada Robinson, a popular young lady of Port Perry. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Sycamore, of McMaster Hall, Toronto, in the presence of a few of the relatives of the contracting parties. The bride was assisted by her sister Miss Lillie Robinson, and Mr. Ranes, of Peterborough, performed a like service for the groom. After the ceremony was over the happy couple left on the noon train for their new home in Ingersoll, arriving there on the 9.15 train, where they were received by a large number of their friends, who had assembled at the residence of the groom's parents. After the usual congratulations they all sat down to a sumptuous spread, prepared by Mrs. Wills. After all had done justice to the good things provided, games and other amusements were indulged in until a late hour. All join with us in wishing the young couple happiness and prosperity in their new home. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful gifts.

THE CHILDREN'S NIGHT.

The Annual Entertainment and Awarding of Prizes to St. John's Sunday School Scholars.

Last night will be a memorable one to the scholars of St. John's Sunday School scholars it being the night when the annual Christmas entertainment was held. Eight o'clock was the hour appointed for the fun to begin, and long before that time the children and their parents began to crowd into the school house.

Promptly at the hour appointed Rev. C. B. Kenrick took the chair and called upon Mr. R. M. Roy, the veteran entertainer, to perform some of his numerous conjuring tricks. This he did for fully three-quarters of an hour, and the children were greatly amused, and if they had their wish he would not have been through yet.

Miss Dollie Comstock and Miss Nellie Hall followed with a very interesting dialogue entitled "The Sale of the Baby." The cymbalette drill by Miss Dollie Comstock and Miss Mabel Montgomery met with loud applause, and the two young ladies deserve great credit for the efficient manner with which they went through their work.

Mr. Kenrick then took the platform and stated that the most important event of the evening (the presentation of prizes) would take place. Two boys carried a large table of books, etc., forward, and some sixty prizes were given to scholars who had attended 42 Sundays or more. The result of the examination which was held on Wednesday was also given and the following were awarded prizes for proficiency.

Infant class—Possible marks, 125—E. Byers, 121; Ellie Duggan, 98; A. Donnel, 84.

Primary Grade—Possible marks, 100—M. Duggan, 98; W. Dean, 85.

Junior Grade—Possible marks, 100—Lizzie Armstrong, 90; Birdie Dawson, 81.

Middle Grade, highest grade in use—Possible marks, 100—Fred Sawers, 81; Percy Earle, 71.

Mr. Kenrick also took advantage of the occasion and made the half yearly presentation of prizes to the choir boys. The possible marks were 132:—Maitland Boswell, 120; Fred Sawers, 127; Ollie Earle, 118; Percy Earle, 117.

The entertainment was concluded by the very delightful Christmas cantata, entitled, "Santa Claus' Mistake," by the children of the Mission Band under the supervision of Miss A. McCallam. The parts taken by Misses Hazel Dean and Addie Armstrong are deserving of special mention. They rendered several sweet little songs, and were loudly applauded by the audience.

They're the cheapest, because guaranteed to give satisfaction. Remember, that Dr. Pierce's Pellets are pleasant to take, pleasant in action, perfect in effect. Keep this in mind and you solve the problem of good health and good living.

If you're suffering from Catarrh, the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy ask you to try their medicine. Then, if you can't be cured, they'll pay you $500 in cash.

A VOLCANO INDICATOR.

TELEPHONE TO BE USED IN MEXICO FOR THAT PURPOSE.

An Original Plan Devised Whereby the People of the Volcanic Zone May Be Forewarned of the Approaching Perils of Life There.

Senor Francisco Estrada, professor of physics in the state college of San Luis Potosi, Mexico, has submitted an original plan to the government for foretelling earthquakes in the volcanic zone of Mexico, by means of the telephone, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Since the strong earthquake which visited the Valley of Mexico on November 2 last, killing eighteen persons, he has made a special study of this class of disturbances and their preceding signs. He has been making a long study of means of prediction for these destructive disturbances, and is sure he has made a discovery of value, which value can only be appreciated by the inhabitants of the volcanic regions. In the course of his very interesting report the author says:

"With the telephone and the more recent invention, the microphone, and with daily simultaneous observations, taken in the volcanic zone, which comprises Vera Cruz, Puebla, Mexico and Guadalajara, I believe it possible to definitely prognosticate earthquakes and volcanic eruptions, as the result of the great interior changes of the earth, which change the geological construction of our land. The noises that trouble our long-distance telephones that use the earth to complete the circuits, noises hitherto unexplained, I believe from my repeated observations are originated from two principal causes, atmospheric electricity and undergrounnd electrical currents, which come from depths more or less great. In the first case they are easily distinguished by exterior signs, such as storms, thunder, lightning, etc., but there are times when, the air being perfectly still, singular noises like murmurings, sand storms, blows or the rubbing of a rough body upon the instrument are heard at the telephone. As this instrument is the most sensitive known, I judge it is suitable for the recognition of the approaching seismological phenomena, which cause such great terror to the inhabitant of volcanic zones. I propose the rational study of these phenomena by the following plan:

"Construction of various telephone lines; let one connect the central government meteorological observatory with the base of the volcano Popocatapetl, being grounded in one of the deepest cracks or crevasses, selecting among them one containing a thermal spring, connecting the other end of the line at the observatory with the metallic tube of one of the deepest artesian wells in the city. Another line should run from Puebla to the same mountain and then connect Guadalajara with the volcano of Colima, and later lines should be run to the peak of Orizaba, the Cofra de Perote, and the Jorutle volcano. I would place at least two telephones and one vertical galvanometer at some convenient spot midway in the telegraph lines from Vera Cruz to Puebla, from Puebla to Mexico City, to Guadalajara, and Guadalajara to San Blas, or some other Pacific port that has a telegraph office to take daily observations with the telephone. In each one of these branches or sections, and with all the lines connected as often as possible without interfering with this service of the wires, the placing in the observatories at Mexico, Puebla and Guadalajara of a simple microphone composed of a carbon pendulum suspended on a tin spiral wire so arranged that it will close an electric circuit at the slightest motion, and set an electric bell to ringing, in order to record the slightest movement of the earth. If properly handled by these means the eruption of any volcano and earthquake might be foretold many days in advance."

A January thaw is always more productive of colds and coughs than a January freeze. Then is the time Ayers' Cherry Pectoral is needed and proves so extremely efficacious. Ask your druggist for it, and also for Ayer's Almanac, which is free to all.

BITTER-SWEET.

A couple once, that had lived in quiet,
Quarreled and split, about their diet.

He said: "'Tis lamb," "'Tis mutton!" she cried
"And good mutton, too, and naught beside."

And finally, as things grew worse,
They applied to law and got a divorce.

When seven long years had passed away
They chanced, in good humor, to meet one day.

And then they agreed the hatchet to bury,
Again to love and again to marry.

They were married then that very night,
With hopes of happiness full and bright.

But at breakfast she said, with a sort of jeer:
"That was mutton, you know, my dearest dear!"

GET RID OF SMALL PESTS.

A State Entomologist Gives Some Points to Housekeepers.

Those notorious household pests, buffalo beetles, moths and ants, have furnished material for a report by State Entomologist C. H. Fernald, of Massachusetts, which will soon be made public. The following abstract from the report is given by the Boston Transcript:

"I have tried many methods for the destruction of the buffalo beetle and find no more successful way of keeping a house free from them than by a very careful watch for the beetles on the windows in February and March, a frequent inspection of all woolen clothing not in constant use, a daily examination of pieces of red carpeting on the floors which are liable to be infested, and carefully excluding the beetles from flowers brought into the house. It is desirable before putting down a carpet to saturate the cracks with benzine and cover the floor very carefully with carpet paper or even with newspapers in such a way that the larvæ cannot find access to the carpet from beneath. The beetles usually lay their eggs and the larvæ attacks the carpets under their exposed edges, and these parts may be protected by washing over the edges and a few inches of the under sides with a solution of corrosive sublimate in alcohol in the proportion of sixty grains to one pint. The alcohol quickly evaporates, leaving the corrosive sublimate over all the fibres of the carpet where the application has been made. It must be remembered that corrosive sublimate is a poison, and cannot be safely used where children play upon the carpet.

"The larvæ of the pitchy carpet beetle is often found feeding on carpets in the same manner as the buffalo carpet beetle, and sometimes associated with it. There is but one generation in a year, as indicated by those which I have bred, for larvæ found in June did not transform to perfect beetles until the following May. The remedies for this pest are the same as for the buffalo beetle. It is desirable, where rugs are used instead of carpets, to take them up and shake them out of doors frequently during the spring and summer. If carpets are used and they become infested it is well to lay wet cloths along the edges and to use a hot flatiron on them. If this is done properly it will force the steam down through the carpet, killing not only moth but also any carpet beetles that may be feeding beneath. All garments liable to be attacked by carpet beetles or clothes moths if not to be used during the summer should be thoroughly shaken and then packed away in tight paper bags or in pasteboard boxes, with a strip of paper pasted around the edge of the cover so as to leave no cracks. Small red ants often infest dwelling-houses and become an intolerable nuisance. The important thing is to find their nests, for it is then a comparatively easy matter to destroy the whole colony. It may be that the removal of a board where they come into a room will expose their headquarters, when a little kerosene poured over it will destroy all the inmates. If they come from some ant hill outside the house they can be destroyed by making holes a foot apart in the hill and pouring a tablespoonful of bisulphide of carbon into each and stamping down. The bisulphide of carbon quickly evaporates and, permeating the ground, destroys all in the colony."

No Help There.

His clothes were much the worse for wear, and he had a hungry (and especially thirsty) look in his eye as he approached a gentleman who was on the point of entering his clubhouse.

"Excuse me, sir," he said, "but could you help me to get something to eat? I haven't had anything for three days."

"Do you live in New York?"

"Yes, sir. I have lived here all my life."

"Ah, poor man! I don't see how I can help you, then! If you had been a non-resident I could have asked you to dine with me at the club."—Life.

ITCHING PILES AND PIN WORMS.

No More Misery.

Gives Instant Relief.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly distressing and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, both old and young. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the suffer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—bleeding and inflamed, and if extensive moisture is exuded. Females are particularly afflicted from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and anguish. These are only a few of the every other symptom of Itching Piles as irritation is very great at the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

PIN WORMS is an ailment entirely different as to cause from Itching Piles, yet its effects and symptoms are exactly the same. The same intolerable itching; the same creeping, crawling, stinging sensation characterizes both diseases. Chase's Ointment acts like magic. It will at once afford relief from this torment.

LAST DUEL IN ONTARIO.

THE LATE HON. MR. JUSTICE WILSON ONE OF THE PRINCIPALS.

The Folly Which Cost Robert Lyon His Life—The Preliminaries of the Combat and Its Fatal Ending—His Friend's Life-Long Regret.

In Canada duelling was almost entirely confined to the profession of arms. The last duel that took place in Upper Canada, however, was between civilians, although it was probably the outcome of the spirit which so long pervaded some of the military settlements in Canada.

After the fall of Napoleon and the conclusion of the American war of 1812-18, the British army was reduced to a place-footing and several of the regiments were disbanded in Canada, lands being allotted them in proportion to rank, and tools and rations being provided the men under certain regulations as to settlement, etc. Perth, now the county town of the county of Lanark, was one of the most important centres of one of these military settlements. Many of the officers of the gallant Glengarry Fencibles and a number from other regiments settled here, who, together with the soldiers from all branches of the service, gave a decidedly military flavor to the social life of the little community. Isolated from the rest of the world, living almost entirely within themselves under semi-military laws, like the Bourbons forgetting nothing and learning nothing, the settlement for the first twenty-five years of its existence presented a curious anomaly, an Old Country village of the last century in the backwoods of Canada. It was known as the half-pay officers' paradise. The distinction of class and the precedence of rank were as rigidly insisted upon in their log houses in the bush as if at a grand review on Hounslow Heath or at a levee at St. James' Palace.

Proud, arrogant old fellows they were, these half-pay officers, but brave and gentle and manly withal. If they had faults they had greater virtues, which have so impressed themselves on our national life that much is due to them that Canadians are a loyal and a manly people. In the early thirties there were two young men engaged in the study of law in this quaint old town, who were not only sought after by ambitious mammas for every social rout and party, but were looked upon by the people at large as being lads of peculiar promise in their profession. They were both of good family, Robert Lyon being a son of Captain Lyon of Richmond, a neighboring settlement, and the father of John Wilson was a Scotch gentleman of scholarly tastes, but slender means, who had made many sacrifices to give his son a profession. Some of the oldest residents of Perth yet remember them and speak of the inseparable friendship that existed between them, and the manly light-hearted natures of the lads. Lyon was a student in the office of his kinsman, the father of the late William Radenhurst, and Wilson in that of the Hon. James Boulton, two leading offices in the Ottawa valley. In the spring of 1833 the two students were sent by their respective principals to Bytown, then an unimportant village, on some legal business in which both offices were interested. Whatever it was that occurred between them in Bytown which was the first cause of the subsequent tragedy, the outside world will never accurately know. Tradition speaks of a half-laughing, half-serious remark by Lyon, in which a lady's name is thoughtlessly used in the confidence of late hours, pipes, and wine. The remark is taken seriously by Wilson, who wrote in confidence to a lady in Perth, a relative, regarding its truth. In a short time the inevitable result followed, and Lyon returned to Perth to receive only a haughty stare from the lady whose name he had thoughtlessly spoken and a practical dismissal of his suit from Miss——, his fiancee. Half maddened with these, to him, inexplicable insults, he demanded an explanation. Wilson's relative refused to divulge her informant's name without his consent. Wilson came forward manfully and admitted his share in the affair and said he was justified under the circumstances. There was a casual meeting before the court house, some hot-tempered words were exchanged, a blow given by Lyon was received on the cheek by Wilson and they were separated. To understand what follows one must consider the situation of the parties. Lyon, connected by blood and marriage with the principal families of the settlement, genial, dashing, and debonair in his manner, strikingly handsome, an athlete who easily surpassed all his companions in feats of strength and skill, would undoubtedly have the sympathy of the little community which was their social world in the quarrel between the former friends; while Wilson, of little social influence, of a shy, sensitive but proud temperament, had few of those more superficial qualities which make a man popular. What feelings agitated the breast of the proud, sensitive boy—for Wilson was not twenty-one—during the days that followed the encounter at the court house, one can only imagine. How his cheek must have tingled as he thought of what the half-pay officers.

THREE RUNNING SORES
PHYSICIANS FAILED
BUT B.B.B. CURED

Dear Sirs—After having used Burdock Blood Bitters for Scrofula in the blood I feel it my duty to make known the results. I had skilled physician but he failed to cure me. I had three Running Sores on my neck which could not be healed until I tried B. B. B., which healed them completely, leaving the skin soft, fresh and whole. As long as I live I shall speak of the virtues of B.B.B., and I feel grateful to Providence that such a medicine is provided for sufferers.

A SCALY ERUPTION
UNENDURABLE ITCHING
Suffered Three Years—Now Perfectly Cured by B.B.B.

Gentlemen—I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for Skin Diseases, from which I have been a sufferer for three years. I have used six bottles and am now entirely cured. I tried other remedies such as Donald Kennedy's, Dr. Medical Discovery and the Cuticura Remedies, but all to no good. I consulted one year with the best physicians in the land; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but could not remove it. It came as red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard dry scales. The itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured, and I owe it all to B. B. B.

PURIFIES THE BLOOD

"I TELL ALL MY FRIENDS."

A Lady of Shelburne, Ont., Permanently Cured of Indigestion After Using Two Bottles of South American Nervine —Glad to Let Everyone Know It.

MRS. A. V. GALBRAITH.

With indigestion it is not only that one suffers all imaginable torments, physical and mental, but more, perhaps, than anything else, an impaired digestion is the forerunner of countless ailments that in their course lead to the most serious consequences. Let the stomach get out of order and it may be said the whole system is diseased. When the digestive organs fail in their important functional duties, head and heart, mind and body are sick. These were the feelings of Mrs. Galbraith, wife of Mr. A. V. Galbraith, the well-known jeweller of Shelburne, Ont., before she had learned of the beneficent results to be gained by the use of South American Nervine Tonic. In so many words she said: "Life was becoming unbearable. I was so cranky I was really ashamed of myself. Nothing that I ate would agree with me; now it does not matter what I eat. I take enjoyment out of all my meals." Here are Mrs. Galbraith's words of testimony to South American Nervine, given over her own signature:

"Shelburne, Ont., March 27, 1894.
"I was for considerable time a sufferer from indigestion, experiencing all the misery and annoyance so common to this complaint. South American Nervine was recommended to me as a safe and effective remedy for all such cases. I used only two bottles, and am pleased to testify that these fully cured me, and I have had no indication of a return of the trouble since. I never fail to recommend the Nervine to all my friends troubled with indigestion or nervousness.
"MRS. A. V. GALBRAITH."

The testimony of this lady, given freely and voluntarily out of a full heart because of the benefits she experienced in her own person, have an echo in thousands of hearts all over the country. South American Nervine must cure, because it operates at once on the nerve centres. These nerve centres are the source from which emanates the life fluid that keeps all organs of the body in proper repair. Keep these nerve centres sound and disease is unknown. There is no trick in the business. Everything is very simple and common sense like. South American Nervine strengthens the digestive organs, tones up the liver, enriches the blood, is peculiarly efficacious in building up shattered and nervous constitutions. It never fails to give relief in one day.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease),
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want;
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only the rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then were home, but step, I miss.

They gave us every one, a kiss,
And said, "be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home.
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To buy Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

But the magnates of his world, would say. No gentleman will submit to a blow! How must his blood have boiled as he realised the fruitlessness of returning a blow against an athlete like Lyon! How he must have thought that every man looked upon him, with their old-fashioned ideas, as a coward, and every woman as a traducer! Oh, if they only knew that he had a right to send that letter, a right to know as to the truth of Lyon's words! It must have been in this frame of mind that he consulted some companions as to what action he should take. Queer counsellors they were, brought up with the old ideas of their fathers, who forgot that the world had changed since they were young men and talked as blithely about pinking or winging their men as if old George III. were yet on the throne. They determined that Wilson had received a deadly insult and that his outraged honor demanded satisfaction, and a challenge was sent to Lyon. It is a noticeable peculiarity of the history of duelling that it is almost invariably the friends that seem to think that the only thing to wash out what they grandiloquently call dishonor, is blood. There can be little doubt that both Lyon and Wilson, despite their unfortunate quarrel, sincerely liked each other in their heart of hearts as much as ever, but they, in the language of the Code, were in the hands of their friends.

A venerable and much respected lady, almost the last link that connects the earliest settlement with the present, told me the story the other day. "I was only a girl at the time," she said in her gentle Scotch voice, "and had just come out." And the dear old lady, the belle of other days, paused and seemed to travel back over the long sixty years to the time when her beautiful white hair was golden and her wrinkled cheek was ruddy with youth and health. "I knew poor Mr. Lyon and Mr. Wilson. Everyone was surprised when they heard of the duel, for only the second and the surgeon knew, I believe. Everything was conducted properly, you know," said my informant, drawing herself up, more erectly if possible than before, on the chair whose back she would have scorned to touch and looking as if the only impropriety there could be about a duel was the manner in which it was carried out. "Mr. Julius Lelievre, a son of Captain Lelievre, an officer in the French navy who had left the French service with his ship, so it was said, in the last war, and joined the British, was Mr. Lyon's second; Mr. Simon Fraser Robertson, son of Captain Robertson, acted for Mr. Wilson, and young Mr. Reade, son of staff-surgeon Reade, was the surgeon. Young Mr. Reade went into the army and became a surgeon-major. He distinguished himself lately in the Crimea and in the Mutiny.

"The meeting took place just beyond the town line on the right bank of the Tay. There was a large elm tree on the spot which is there yet. Mr. Lyon was what is called a crack shot, but both missed at the first fire. Efforts were then made by Mr. Robertson and Mr. Reade to bring about an understanding or reconciliation, but both gentlemen were proud and Mr. Lelievre, it is said, would not agree to an amicable settlement and the pistols were reloaded and the principals were again placed on the ground. At a word, both pistols exploded together and Mr. Lyon fell heavily backward, shot through the heart. The ball entered below the levelled right arm and he was dead before Mr. Lelievre and Mr. Reade got to him. Mr. Wilson and Mr. Robertson at once gave themselves up to the authorities, but were acquitted by the jury at the ensuing assizes at Brockville. Mr. Lelievre at once left the country and died a few years ago at Sierra Leona on the west coast of Africa. Mr. Wilson practiced law at London, Canada West, and as you know became the Hon. Mr. Justice Wilson of the Common Pleas, but the death of poor Mr. Lyon, I know, was a life-long, heart felt sorrow to him until the day he died, a few years ago, crowned with years and honor."

This was the last duel in Ontario. It excited much interest throughout the country and the tragic pathos of Lyon's death showed the terrible nature of the custom divested of its mediæval vanities and fantastic nonsense. It served to extinguish forever the few embers of the old duelling spirit that still fitfully smouldered throughout the Canadas. It died with dignity, however, and, painful as it may be, the thought of those two proud gallant lads facing death on that June morning long ago, not with the hideous desire to kill but in compliance with the belief that honor demanded that a custom that was virtually obsolete before they were born should be carried out, makes one hesitate before laughing at the code of honor as only silly and ridiculous. It sometimes had at least the dignity of tragedy.

Of all the brief life stories of the early time chiseled on the marble slabs in the old burying-ground in Perth, where our forefathers sleep the long, long sleep, there is none sadder than that told under the old shattered yew tree by a stone scribed:

ABANDONED BY HIS FATHER.

In a Miserable Home with no Fire and Nothing to Eat.

The Agent of the Children's Aid Society informs the EXAMINER of a sad case which was brought to the attention of the Society a few days since, concerning a sick child living in the South Ward. On investigation it was ascertained that the case was one, indeed, which needed attention.

The case proved to be that of a little boy, between four and five years of age, living in a miserable hovel with his mother who had been abandoned by the father. There was no fire in the hut, and the child had nothing to eat, and nothing to cover it, as it lay there sick.

A doctor was called, and on his recommendation the suffering little one was removed to the Nicholls' Hospital.

Here is a theme for sermons from every pulpit in town. Too much cannot be said of the grand work which the Society is doing, of which the above case is but an instance.

The only way to cure catarrh is to purify the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood and tones up the whole system.

AN EXPENSIVE COUNCILLOR.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—As a life-long resident of Peterborough, and having considerable material interest in the town, it is natural that I should also take an interest in the election of representatives to manage its affairs at the Council Board. No. 2 Ward is the most heavily assessed and the most important ward of the town, and therefore it is a matter of the first importance that its representatives should be of a corresponding character. Among the candidates that are now this year, Mr. C. W. Sawers is mentioned. Without adverting to his ability generally, I may be permitted to suggest that, judging by his past record, he is likely to prove a very expensive representative, if elected. During his first term in the council, did he not unload upon the town the old property now constituting the town buildings? A most unfortunate affair as these building have proven a constant bill of expense and are, for sanitary and other reasons, decidedly unsuitable and unsatisfactory—narrow, "cabined, cribbed, confined," cut up into all sorts of shapes, and fatally unsanitary. Witness in reference to the last condition what a death roll of officials that have been compelled to pass their office hours in their precincts—Town Clerk McDonald dead, Collector Cummings dead, and Town Clerk Cobb dead. If, as I believe, Mr. Sawers is responsible for foisting these buildings upon the town, he is evidently a very unsafe and expensive man to have on the council board. Town buildings that cost as much as these, should last a century, which these will not do; and when the people have to pay for new buildings, they will better appreciate Mr. Sawers' masterly manipulation of the ropes. The electors should ascertain before voting for Mr. Sawers, if there is any indication that he has improved in his qualifications in the respects named, since he last sat in the council. I have discovered none. If he wishes to look out for number one, I shall look out for,

Yours truly,

Jan. 5th, 1895. NUMBER TWO.

Dinner for a Regiment.

The experiment of cooking dinner for 7,500 men belonging to the guards in a single field kitchen at the Urunchebergs Station, near Berlin, took place the other day just before those troops left for their headquarters. The affair was completely successful; 35 hundred weight of beef, 15 hundredweight of hams were cooked in eight iron kettles with a capacity of 640 litres each. Four tons of coal were used.

His Chance to See.

"I am going home," sadly remarked the man who had left the theatre in the middle of the play.

How to Take the Daily Bath.

The women who say and think that a daily bath is debilitating should remember that all unusual exercises are weakening, and that it is only by gradually accustoming one's self to them that strength is gained and maintained. Any one who fears the effect of a daily tub bath should begin by taking a daily sponge each morning. Then she should take first two, then three and so on increasing numbers tub baths at night. She will have the night's rest to recover from the effect, and she will soon not only be able to take a tub bath at any time, but she will feel actually uncomfortable without it."

The Religions of China.

The eyes of the world are at the present time centered upon China. Particular interest is taken in the "Flowery Kingdom" by Christians. It is claimed that defeat in the present war would wonderfully open up the way for missionary work, China being now about the most unfruitful field for missions. Apropos of the progress of Christianity in the Empire, it might prove interesting to glance at the other great religions that hold sway there. Christianity counts for little so far, as not much has been accomplished, relatively. The state religion of China is Confucianism, which, though is rather a moral code than a religion. It is exclusively the belief of the higher class, and emanates from Confucius, who was born in 535 B. C.

Taoism is another religion of the country, and consists in the belief in a multitude of spirits, who are supposed to influence the destiny of man. Buddhism is the great popular religion of China, and has had a foothold there since the first century of our era. It alone has nearly a million of priests. A strange thing about it all is that there is a bond of harmony between these three faiths, the adherents of each of them frequently being found at worship in the same temple. For example, the Confucians, or high caste, will worship in the Buddhist, or lower-class, temples, using the Taoist, or heathen ritual. This is more than can be said of a great many Christians, especially when we consider the great difference which exists between all heathen religions.—New York World.

Italian Shops.

The shops in Italy are a startling surprise to travelers. There is a dazzling window display that is impossible to resist, and the traveler enters the shop to see the magnificence that must be beyond it. Nothing is there but a small dark room in which the family of the shopkeeper lives. The whole stock in trade is in that one window. Behind it sits the owner, his wife or clerk, peering out at the passers-by like a spider watching for the unwary fly. The twinkling dark eyes light easily be mistaken for sparkling jewels, as they flash out from among the beautiful wares.

English Journals Wondering What to Do With Newfoundland.

MAY AGAIN BE A CROWN COLONY

Sir Terrence O'Brien, Governor of the Island, Favors This—An Investigation Reveals Terrible Destitution in the Island—People in Actual Starvation.

LONDON, Jan. 7.—The English journals, in commenting on the state of affairs in Newfoundland, say that if Canada will take in the almost bankrupt and isolated colony immediate union would be the best solution of the present deadlock. The home Colonial Office is believed to favor the idea of Newfoundland becoming a province of the Dominion, but Sir Terrance O'Brien, the governor of the colony, is in favor of a return to the status of a crown colony. It is being urged that the proposed imperial commission be given the power to examine the finances of Newfoundland with a view to union with Canada.

The Chronicle, commenting on Newfoundland's demand for the appointment of a royal commission, says: "The commissioners must be nominees of the British Government and entirely removed from the local influences. Newfoundland's ways for years past have been nothing short of disgraceful. It is time we knew exactly what has been done with the money obtained from British investors by fair promises and under the protection of the British flag."

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Jan. 7.—The investigation which has been begun into the condition of the working classes of St. Johns, reveals that many cases of destitution, several hundreds of people actual starving. Lady O'Brien, the wife of Governor O'Brien, of this place, has issued a call to the ladies of this city to meet Monday to discuss the situation, the outcome of which will probably be the establishment of soup kitchens in different parts of the city and other practicable means of relief.

The populace is enraged against the Government which it is claimed is taking no steps whatever to provide assistance for the needy. Meanwhile the belief in the efficacy of a Royal commission is being becoming general and the Government has assured a deputation of citizens that they will do all in their power to secure the appointment of such a commission to look various matters connected with the administration of he province. A meeting of influential citizens was held last night at which it was arranged for the holding of a public meeting on Wednesday next under the auspices of the clergy of the several religious denominations.

The bill providing for the winding up of the affairs of the suspended Commercial Banks passed through all its stages in the Assembly on Saturday. The bill contains the objectionable clause which gives the Government partial control of the liquidation of the bank.

Sir Ambrose Shea, governor of the Bahamas, arrived here on Saturday. In an interview he said that he considered the appointment of a Royal commission absolutely necessary. He intended to remain for several days in this city, but was summoned to London on his arrival here, and it is rumored that this fact has probably some connection with the appointment of a commission.

There is no employment. Everything is frozen up and the position is one of waiting till the Government helps in some way. The mail steamer which left on Saturday, took 500 barrels of flour and other provisions to distribute as relief among the starving people along the coast. The clergymen of this city are engaged from morning till night relieving destitute cases, but the sources of relief will soon be exhausted. All the mercantile concerns are closed except two or three and they may go under. The unemployed fishermen, stevedores, coopers and laborers, numbering some thousands, are in a pitiable condition. They have been without work three weeks and it will be three months or more before employment can be given them. When spring opens hundreds will flock to the western provinces of Canada if they escape starvation. The scheme to have a royal commission is stubbornly opposed by the Government.

Now is the time for bargains at Grafton's clearing sale.

THE GLOBE BURNED OUT

Toronto Visited by an Unusually Destructive Conflagration.

A LOSS OF OVER HALF A MILLION

The Globe and Several Important Commercial Buildings Burned to the Ground—A Fireman Killed by Falling Walls, and Six Receive Bad Injuries.

TORONTO, Jan. 7.—One of the most disastrous conflagrations which have occurred in this city took place yesterday morning when the large building occupied by the Globe newspaper, on the corner of Yonge and Melinda streets, together with N. Rooney's drygoods house adjoining, Harry Webb's resturant, on the opposite corner, S. F. McKinnon & Co.'s new building, on the corner of Jordon and Melinda, were almost totally destroyed and several other buildings badly gutted. One fireman lost his life fighting the flames and six others received serious injuries.

The unfortunate fireman was Robert Bowery, aged 34, who resided at 264 Parliament street.

Chief Ardagh received a bad gash in the forehead, besides injuries to his back.

Robert Foster, fireman, of Salisbury avenue, had his left leg broken, left arm injured and received serious internal injuries.

Harry Saunders, fireman, of Portland street, leg broken and foot badly crushed. He was taken to the hospital where it was found necessary to amputate the broken leg.

Chas. Smedley, fireman, of Nassau street, received serious internal injuries.

Frank Forsyth, fireman, of Richmond street, badly cut about the head and received internal injuries.

James Davidson, fireman, received slight injuries to his hand.

The fire broke out in the boiler room in the basement of the Globe building, and quickly spread. It was first discovered about 3 o'clock by the nightwatchman, who, on going to the boiler room, was confronted by the flames. He lost no time in giving the alarm. The central section of the fire department was hurriedly on the scene, but so great was the headway made by the flames, that a general alarm was at once sounded, and soon the whole department of the city was at work upon the burning building.

An attempt was made to reach the top stories of the building with the hose, and the large Ariel truck belonging to the city was placed in Melinda street. Firemen attempted to ascend the ladder, which reached the top of the building, but so fierce and hot were the flames that they were driven back and the attempt had to be abandoned.

While the men were employed lowering the ladder and making ready to remove the truck from the dangerous vicinity the accident which resulted so disastrously occurred. The north wall of the building fell with a terrible crash. Robert Bowery and Robert Foster were standing on the side of the truck nearest the building when the walls fell and the two men were buried beneath the debris. The others, who escaped injury, hastily released them and they were removed to the hospital, where Bowery died a few hours afterwards.

On Jordan street next to the Globe building stands the building of Brough & Caswell, printers. Chief Ardagh and a number of firemen had taken up their position in the office of the firm when the south wall of the Globe building fell upon the roof, crashing through. It was here that Chief Ardagh received his injuries. He was at once taken to his home in a carriage. Smedley, Forsyth, Saunders and Davidson were dashed down the elevator shaft and were seriously injured. This building was totally destroyed.

A southwest wind was blowing at the time and the flames were carried across Melinda street to the lunch rooms of Harry Webb. These rooms which have almost a provincial reputation, were badly destroyed. The roof and upper storeys were completely burned, but the great damage was caused by water, the building being thoroughly soaked.

Adjoining the Globe to the south was the wholesale clothing house belonging to Nicholas Rooney. This building is a complete wreck.

From the west end of the Globe building the fire was communicated across Jordan street to the large new building and S. F. McKinnon & Co., on the southeast corner of Jordan and Melinda streets. From the top storey of this building the flames spread downward through the seven stories, working complete ruin as it went. The building was almost destroyed before the walls showed any signs of falling, and it was the hope of the firemen the substantial walls would enable them to keep the blaze within their boundaries and thus prevent its westward spread. Millions of sparks were carried to the west and fell on the roofs of houses as far distant as Dundas street, but the snow which covered the city extinguished them before they could work any injury.

The flames then communicated to the building occupied by Reuben, Sadler & Haworth, leather beltings, on Jordan street, adjoining the building of Brough & Caswell. This was also totally destroyed. Millar & Richards, type founders, also on Jordan street, are heavy sufferers. The building though badly gutted, was left standing. An immense amount of damage, however, was done to the stock by water.

In the rear of Harry Webb's building stands the grocery store of Michie & Co. The roof of this building was burned, but the damage done here was comparatively trivial.

In the Globe building, occupying the first and second flats, was the Toronto Lithographing Company. This firm was also a heavy loser, as their stock, among which were some very valuable stones, was entirely destroyed.

The firemen worked hard to save the buildings, but were unable to render adequate service, owing to the height of the buildings and their inability to play upon the upper storeys. The pressure was not strong enough to force the water to the top of the buildings. The members of the city council come in for a good deal of censure in this respect, as Chief Ardagh has continuously pointed out the necessity of procuring steam fire engines, but his request was as continuously refused. The disaster of yesterday, however, will no doubt open the eyes of the new council to the requirements of the department.

The Losses by the Fire.

The losses and insurance on the property destroyed are:—Globe printing and publishing Co., loss on building, $60,000; plant, $50,000; library files, etc., $10,000. Total loss about $130,000. Insurance in various English and Canadian companies amount to $94,000.

Toronto Lithographing Company, in the Globe building, has an estimated loss of $150,000, with insurance in various companies to the amount of $65,000.

Harry Webb, caterer, Yonge street, estimated loss on contents, $17,000, with insurance amounting to $91,500.

Nicholas Rooney, dry goods, Yonge street, estimated loss, $75,000, with insurance amounting to $55,000.

S. F. McKinnon & Co., estimated loss on building at from $80,000 to $100,000, and on stock $30,000 to $110,000, with insurance on both building and stock to the amount of $120,000.

Michie & Co., estimated loss, $1,000, covered by insurance.

Brough Printing Co., Jordan street, loss on plant $20,000, with insurance amounting to $13,500.

Alexander Manning, estimated loss on Harry Webb's building, $10,000, covered by insurance.

F. M. Bell-Smith, artist, loss on pictures in Webb's building, $5,000; insured for $1,200.

Canadian Photographic Journal has a loss of $1,500.

Williamson Rubber Company, damage $4,000 by the falling of McKinnon's building, covered by insurance.

After the fire several of the city newspapers came forward and offered the Globe company the use of their plants, so as to turn out the edition of the paper as usual.

The offer of the Empire was accepted, and to-day the chief organs of the two great political parties are issued from the same office. One of the worst features of the Globe's difficulties is the total loss of their mailing lists.

It is rumored in the city that a direct result of the Globe's loss will be union of the Mail with the Liberal organ. This is said to be highly probable, as these two newspapers combined would prove a union of great financial if not political strength.

MRS. SMUCK IS WANTED.

A Valuable Witness for the Defence in the Hendershott Case.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Jan. 7.—Three witnesses were examined at the investigation into the Middlemarch murder on Saturday. Charles Welter, cousin of the younger prisoner and brother-in-law to prisoner, John Hendershott, was on the stand for four hours. His memory has not improved since the inquest and nearly every answer was prefixed by "I don't remember," or "As near as I can remember." The only new matter elicited from him was that he had seen a branch cut from the fallen tree at John Hendershott's; on one end was what looked like a bundle of hairs. This branch had been cut in two and witness placed the pieces for safe keeping in a room in John Hendershott's. He afterwards informed his solicitor, Mr. McDonald, of the find. What had become of the chips, or where they were now he could not say.

When Mr. Donahue desired to question Charles Welter as to prisoner Hendershott's defrauding the Ancient Order of Foresters out of sick benefits, Mr. McDonald objected to all this class of evidence going on. After a long argument it was decided to admit all evidence as to Hendershott's attempts or alleged attempts to defraud insurance companies.

The other witnesses examined were Mrs. Welter, wife of the former witness, and their hired man, George Craig. The latter was as stupid, slow and unwilling a witness as his mistress was bright, quick and apparently willing to tell all she knew. Nothing new was elicited from either witness.

At the conclusion Mr. McDonald said that his most important witness, Mrs. Peter Smuck, a cousin of one prisoner and sister-in-law to the other, who is said to have seen the two men in the woods when the tree fell, had been spirited away. He asked that if the Crown officers had her in safe keeping they would undertake to produce her as a witness and he would be content.

County Crown Attorney Donahue and Detective Murray warmly repudiated Mr. McDonald's insinuation and promised to do all they could to find the lady and have her give evidence.

The court did not sit to-day, being election day. The investigation will again be proceeded with to-morrow.

The Premier in Montreal.

MONTREAL, Jan. 7.—Sir Mackenzie Bowell arrived here from Halifax and spent yesterday in Montreal. A consultation was held between Dr. Rogers, of Ottawa, the Premier's physician and Dr. Birkett, a Montreal specialist on throat diseases, regarding the Premier's health. The doctors, after a thorough examination, decided that the Premier had no organic trouble, and was in a very healthy condition. He is suffering from a form of largryngtis which causes the irritation in his throat and frequent attacks of coughing. They are of the opinion that with care the Premier will fully recover within two weeks and in the meantime they have ordered perfect rest. Sir Mackenzie returned to Ottawa in the morning.

Escape From a Burning Building.

OTTAWA, Jan. 7.—Four persons narrowly escaped losing their lives in a fire in a three-storey stone building, on Duke street, on Saturday. They were Mr. Tousiemonde, a Belgian wood-carter; his wife and two children. The husband saved his family with great difficulty by pushing his way down a flight of stairs which was completely enclosed in flames and so far burned as to threaten giving way at every step. He then broke through one of the large front windows on the ground floor. The property is owned by Mr. J. C. Brennan, and the loss will amount to at least $6,000.

MONDAY, JANUARY 7, 1895.

ANOTHER specimen of the "economy" of Hon. Mr. Foster and the Government, of which he is Finance Minister. On Nov. 30th, the debt per head of Canada was $32.20, while the debt of the United States was $15.06 per head. If this is to be considered one of the fruits of economical government, the dictionary will have to be revised. In 1878, when our present rulers took charge, the debt of Canada was $174,267,268, or $42.80 per head of population, while the debt of the United States was [illegible] per capita. Are we to be placidly content with rulers who are piling up debt at such a rapid rate, and is it not time that such ruinous extravagance should be superseded by honest and really economical government? This can only be accomplished by placing a Liberal government in power. The present government has had a chance of showing what it can do, and the outcome has not been satisfactory. If Liberal journals call attention to such deplorable conditions, they are accused of, decrying the country. A burglar might as well claim that no reference should be to his exploits, on the ground that such reference would be casting a stigma on the police force.

THE body of Sir John Thompson has at last been laid at rest with honours such as have never before been associated with the burial of any Canadian. Without analysing the value of these honours closely, one good effect may be suggested. They serve to bring into greater prominence a man whose influence for good upon the country, and especially upon the maturing generation of Canada, has not ceased with his death. In these days of venality it is a great deal for a statesman to leave behind him a character for integrity in the midst of temptations that greater men, in one sense, have not always resisted. And it is a greater credit to Sir John Thompson than the solemnly splendid funeral honours clustered around his grave, that the fathers of this and future years, can point their sons to Sir John Thompson as an example of integrity and patriotic devotion to duty, worthy to be followed. As a statesman his record is an example that his late colleagues might, with the greatest benefit to themselves, and with the greatest advantage to the country, well emulate.

A POLYGOT petition" is what the World's Woman's Christian Union is causing to be prepared. It is a petition written in many languages, calling on all nations, kindreds, peoples and tongues to withdraw everything that in any degree savours of governmental countenance or endorsation of the manufacture of intoxicating liquors or the traffic in them. Miss Willard's proposition is a novel one. The peoples of the Eastern nations who regard intoxicating beverages as an abomination, will surely wonder greatly that those who profess to civilize, as well as to conquer, should find it necessary to ask them to sign such a petition.

SOME very important amendments to the old constitution of the state of New York passed into operation on the first of the present year. Book-making, pool-selling, and every species of gambling become criminal offences.

CANADIAN WHEAT MARKETS.

One of the most satisfactory features of the grain situation is the advance in the price of Manitoba wheat. Unfortunately, as the farmers in the west have disposed of nearly all their holdings, the benefits that have accrued from the advance have been lost to them, the middle men being in this case the parties who profit by the rise in the market. In Ontario the offerings of wheat are not as large as they were some time ago, and there is talk of higher prices for wheat in our own Province before long. It is a well-known fact that a great deal of wheat has been fed to animals in Ontario during the past year, and there are those in the grain trade, well conversant with the situation, who say that there is no more wheat in Canada now than will suffice for home consumption before the next crop begins to come to market. If this prediction is anywhere near the mark we should see higher prices for Ontario wheat this winter. A lot of winter wheat flour has lately been received at Montreal from St. Louis, and, while the present unsatisfactory state of the flour and grain trade in the United States continues, it will be difficult to advance the price of wheat here.

HAIRPINS IN THE TROLLEY.

On an electric car the other day there was a rather entertaining sight. The passengers paid nothing extra to see it and some of them forgot to get off at their homes, so absorbed were they in the occurance.

Three young ladies furnished the amusement.

Did you ever notice, said one, that a hairpin will stand up on end if you put it on the floor of an electric car just over the meter.

Oh, it won't either, her companions shouted in a chorused giggle.

I can prove it, said the first.

And she did. Taking a hairpin from the bright knot at the top of her head, she stood it on the floor and it performed such antics as to set the passengers in an uproar.

The reader who does not believe the story can easily demonstrate its probability. Let her take a hairpin and try it, or let him borrow one and he will discover a most interesting experiment.

You Get Strong.

If you're a tired out or "run-down" woman, with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. And, if you suffer from any "female complaint" or disorder, you get well. For these two things—to build up women's strength, and to cure women's ailments—this is the only medicine that's guaranteed. If it doesn't cure, in every case, your money is returned. On these terms, what else can be "just as good" for you to buy? The "Prescription" regulates and promotes all the natural functions, never conflicts with them, and is perfectly harmless in any condition of the female system. It improves digestion, enriches the blood, brings refreshing sleep and restores health and vigor. For ulcerations, displacements, bearing-down sensations, periodical pains, and every chronic weakness or irregularity, it's a remedy that safely and permanently cures.

NOT KNOWN IN DUNDAS.

Two Strangers, Found Dead in Stamford, Conn., Thought to be Canadians.

STAMFORD, Conn., Jan. 7.—William Fashton, 30 years old, who belonged to Dundas, Ont., and a woman, thought to be his wife, were found dead near the crossing of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railway, a mile from the station, on Saturday. The woman's body was bruised, and there are two deep gashes in her head, as though made by a blunt instrument. The crossing where the couple were found is a lonely spot, and it is thought they were murdered. The couple stopped at a hotel in Greenwich a few nights ago, and it is said Faston had considerable money about him. This was not found when his clothes were examined.

HAMILTON, Jan. 7.—In reference to the press despatch from Stamford, Conn., stating that William Fashton, of Dundas, Ont., and a woman supposed to be his wife had been murdered near that place, enquiries made in Dundas reveal the fact that no man by the name of Fashton had lived there for many years past and it is probable the murdered couple were from Dundas county, Ont., and not the town of Dundas, as stated.

CECIL RHODES' HONORS.

Radicalism in England Are Not Pleased With His Appointment.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—A special London cable to the New York Times says: The selection of Cecil Rhodes as a solitary figure in the first rank of the New Year's honors jars angrily on the English Radicals. No doubt he has a much stronger claim to be privy councillor than four-fifths of that body, and if he had been one of a half dozen awarded that distinction little would have been said. To isolate him at the top of the list was a tactical error and the Radical papers have said so with complete frankness. It will not mitigate this feeling to know that he is in Constantinople, being received by the Sultan with extraordinary honors, and to hear that he is seeking the consent of the Porte for some daring company promoting schemes not specified but understood to be connected with Egypt and the expansion of the British empire in South Africa. "Is that the kind of work which Liberalism delights to honor?" asks the Daily Chronicle, and it answers grimly. "We think not."

BAD YEAR FOR EMIGRANTS.

A Great Drop in Emigration from Britain to Canada—Decrease to the U. S.

LONDON, Jan. 7.—There was an astounding drop in emigration to Canada during the past year. The total number of emigrants who went out to Canada in 1894 was only 28,731 against 50,381 in 1893. This is much the worst record of any emigrant receiving country.

Emigration to the United States, however, during the same period declined twenty-five per cent. as compared with 1893. The Australia emigration has been about stationary.

THE NEGOTIATIONS WILL FAIL.

Japan Withholding Her Terms Till Her Army Gets Into Pekin.

LONDON, Jan. 7.— The Times hears from its correspondent in Pekin: "The Chinese peace envoy to Japan had a farewell audience with the Emperor on Saturday. Japan refused to conclude an armistice. Mr. Denby, the United States minister, believes that the present negotiations will be fruitless as the Japanese will withhold the terms till their army shall have occupied Pekin. Japanese landing parties are exploring the bays on the east coast of Shang Tung."

Clara Ford and Her Revolver.

TORONTO, Jan. 7.—It is stated in police circles that some startling evidence is being prepared to be presented at the trial of Clara Ford in March for the murder of Frank Westwood. R. Vise, a tailor on Queen seeset, with whom Clara Ford formerly worked, is said to have stated that on one occasion he found a revolver in Clara's coat. On asking her why she carried such a dangerous weapon, she is said to have replied: "That revolver has helped me out before this. When I was on the other side I was persistently followed by a man who annoyed me until I killed him. If it hadn't been for that I would not be working here for you for $4 per week. I would go to the States again if I dare." This statement, if proved to be true, may tell strongly against her at her trial.

Destructive Fire at Toronto Junction.

TORONTO JUNCTION, Ont., Jan. 7.—About half past nine Saturday evening the fire alarm was sounded and a fire was found to be raging in the factory of the Canada Wire Mattress Co. All the efforts of the town brigade, assisted by two detachments from the city, were powerless to arrest the destroying element and the factory with the entire contents and machinery was destroyed. The flames communicated with the Weston road bridge which was considerably damaged, but was saved. The Stanley house, the Electric Light Power House, the Queen City Flour Mills and Dominion Art Woodwork Mnfg. Co., were in imminent danger from the flying embers which were blown about by the strong gale. Amount of insurance unknown.

Stricken With Paralysis.

QUEBEC, Jan. 7.—While speaking on a bill respecting the Speaker of the Legislative Council in that House at 1 o'clock Saturday the Hon. Mr. Starnes was stricken with paralysis on the left side. At the moment of the mishap Hon. Mr. Starnes was somewhat excited over a measure introduced in the Council. He sat down and told Hon. P. Garneau that he was ill, at the same time calling Hon. Dr. Marcil to his side. Hon. Mr. Starnes is 78, and has represented the District of Salaberry eight years; he is an ex-Speaker of the Council under Mercier. Hon. J. A. Chapleau visited Mr. Starnes as he lay on a couch, with Father Carre, S. J., at his side.

Know When Icebergs Are Near.

The captain of an ocean steamer in most cases finds out when his vessel is approaching an iceberg from the man down in the engine-room. That sounds queer, but it is a fact, nevertheless. It appears that when a steamship enters water considerably colder than that through which it has been going its propeller runs faster. Such water usually surrounds the vicinity of bergs for many miles. When the propeller's action, therefore, is accelerated without the steam power being increased word is passed up to the officer on the bridge that bergs may be expected and a close lookout for them is established.—Washington Star.

MR. AND MRS. BOWSER.

A BRIGHT CHAPTER CONTAINING 30 MINUTES OF FUN.

The Amiable Couple Indulge in a Spelling Match That Causes Trouble—Some of the "Examples"—He Only Spells "Three Out of Four."

"Well, by George, but what a man that was," exclaimed Mr. Bowser as he looked up from his paper the other evening.

"What is it, dear?" queried Mrs. Bowser.

"Why, a husband and wife living in Iowa attended a spelling school. It seems that she spelled him down, and he was so mad about it that after he got home he killed her."

"Is it possible?"

"If I'd been a neighbor of that man, do you know what I'd have done? I'd have seen that he was strung up to a limb before the officers of the law got hold of him. Where's the dictionary?"

"On the lower shelf of the bookrack in the library. What word is it you want to find?"

"I just thought of something. Wait a minute. Now you take the book and give me a lot of words to spell. I don't claim to be way up in orthography, but I scrape along with most of 'em."

"Please let it go till some other evening," replied Mrs. Bowser, fully realizing what would be the result.

"Never mind about some other evening. I feel particularly good to-night, and I'll bet you two to one that you don't catch me on any common word."

"But if I do, won't you——"

"What's the matter with you? It's come to a pretty pass when you and I can't sit together for half an hour without a row. Hold on. I'll give you 20 words, and then you may give me 20. I shall beat you way out of sight, but we'll only laugh over it. All ready now. As a starter I'll give you 'casuistry.'"

Mrs. Bowser spelled the word correctly, and he skipped about to "feldspathose," "spagyrist," "rondeau," "quantitative" and various other words with a catch in them. When he had finished with the 20 words, she had missed three, but he patted her on the shoulder and said:

"You needn't be ashamed of that record, my dear. Now you take the book and give me some regular old sockdolagers, and if I don't make old Noah Webster look pale then I'm a goat."

Mrs. Bowser looked all around in a helpless way, but as there was no escape she turned over the leaves and gave out the word "primordially." Mr. Bowser tackled it with a smile of self-confidence, but missed. She then gave him "pleuritical," and he missed again. He hit "maneuver" all right, but went all to pieces on "inexplicability."

"You have missed three out of four," she said, "but if you wish to——"

"Three out of four," he shouted as he struck his favorite attitude. "Mrs. Bowser, don't try to make out that I'm a dolt. I may have got slightly mixed upon that first word, as I hadn't seen it for three or four days, but I know I spelled the others correctly."

She knew he hadn't, but she let it go and gave him "humectation," "fossiliferous" and "cataclysm."

"You missed them all," she said as she closed the book.

"What! I missed every one?"

"Yes, dear. You missed six out of seven words, but you needn't feel——"

"Six out of seven words? Never!" he shouted as his ears grew fiery red. "I may have mixed that first word, but as for the others I know I had 'em right. Why, woman, do you suppose I was born in a swamp and brought up in a barn? That's the way with you. If we ever start out to have a pleasant evening, you hunt for some excuse to spoil it."

"You don't want me to say you spelled the words right when you didn't, do you?" she asked.

"But I did spell 'em right," he persisted. "You were simply determined to come out ahead on the record. Mrs. Bowser, I am thankful that the Lord did not make me with your disposition."

"I have to decide according to Webster," she quietly replied.

"And who is Webster?" he loudly demanded. "Because old Noah Webster went at it and collected a lot of words and spelled them to please himself, does it follow that his spelling is correct? Have the rest of us got to follow him like a flock of sheep? I say I spelled six of those right, Webster or no Webster!"

"But you said I missed three. Why don't I claim I spelled the whole 20 correctly?"

"As a fact, Mr. Bowser, as a matter of truth and fact, you missed about 14 words, but I didn't want to hurt your feelings. If you hadn't betrayed your jealous feeling, I shouldn't have said a word about it. I know, and you know, that I can spell 40 words to your one. But we'll end the matter right here."

"You might try again. I think you were a little excited."

"Not another try. When you saw me feeling good-natured and happy, you made up your mind to sit down on me and spoil the evening. You have succeeded. I take back what I said about that Iowa husband. I can now understand that some sort of a low-down trick was played on him, and the man struck home. Excuse me, Mrs. Bowser, but I have some writing to do in the library. If I shouldn't see you and old Noah Webster again this evening, I bid you good-night and pleasant dreams."

Foolish Destruction of Spiders.

It is customary to kill the ordinary house spiders, partly because of the erroneous impression that they bite, partly on account of the fact that they spin webs and accumulate dirt. While admitting that cobwebs are undesirable in our homes, would urge that they are beautiful from a scientific point of view and are unobjectionable when upon the outside of the house. They are at any time easily swept away, and there is no occasion to hurt the harmless makers of them; nor is there any reason for so doing, especially when we realize that they only visit us when in search of the insects upon which they feed. It is no exaggeration to say that, had nature provided neither spiders nor any equivalent check upon insects, there are many parts of the globe inhabited to-day in which mankind could by no possibility live. There are millions of spiders in the world, and their incessant war upon mosquitoes and other small creatures is an inestimable benefit to the human race.

Vast Armaments of Europe.

Thirteen million bayonets prop up the czar's throne. That is the full strength of the Russian army on a war footing. Germany comes next, but after a long interval, with 3,700,000 soldiers; Italy has 3,155,000 and France 2,850,000, excluding 350,000 auxiliaries Austria's fine army, which in quality is reckoned scarcely second to Kaiser Wilhelm's, contains a maximum of 1,794,175 men. England at home and in her colonies can mobilize a force of 662,000. The little martial republic of Switzerland can summon 486,000 soldiers to her banners in an emergency, and even poverty-cursed Spain boasts of 400,000. Austria, of all the powers, has the most burdensome military establishment. Her annual expenditures on her army are $265,000,000, while Russia's, with an army seven times as large, are only $186,000,000, and Germany's $113,000,000. In proportion to size England's army is, perhaps, the most costly. Her 662,000 men require $89,000,000 annually for their support, or only $36,000,000 less than the amount which provides France with an enormous host of more than four times England's numbers.—Boston Journal.

"Have Another Prayer or Two!"

A good story of poor Villiers', the war correspondent, whose death in the war in the East is reported this week, was told me by Captain Charles Reade, R. N., a nephew of the novelist of that name. Captain Reade happened to be in a certain town in England one evening and found that Villiers' was to lecture there on his experiences as a war correspondent. The lecture was under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association. The proceedings were opened with prayer and then Villiers' began his address. When he had got half way through he said, "Ladies and gentlemen, the most interesting portion of the evening's entertainment has now arrived—an interval of five minutes. I am going out for a minute or two. While I am away you enjoy yourselves: have another prayer or two!"

A Man With a Long Head.

A Texas military company were out to the range recently, practicing at rifle-shooting. The lieutenant in command suddenly became exasperated at the poor shooting, and, seizing a gun from one of the privates, cried angrily, "I'll show you fellows how to shoot!" Taking a long aim, and a strong aim, and an aim altogether, he missed. Coolly turning to the private who owned the gun, he said, "That's the way you shoot." He again loaded the weapon and missed. Turning to the second man in the ranks he remarked, "That's the way you shoot." In this way he contrived to miss about fifty or sixty times illustrating to each soldier his personal incapacity, and finally he accidentally hit the target. "And that," he ejaculated, handing the gun back to the private, "is the way I shoot."

ON MOUNT SINAI.

LIFE AND CUSTOMS OF THE CHRISTIAN COLONY THERE LOCATED.

Impressive Sights to Be Seen in the Rugged Religious Community—The Precious Library in Charge of the Chief Monk—How the Monks Spend Their Lives.

The present condition of the convent on Mount Sinai is thus described by a recent writer in the Guardian: "It is an impressive thing thus to come upon a Christian colony and a Christian church in the rocky heart of the Sinaitic peninsula; a colony which can trace its ancestry to the earliest days of Byzantine Christianity, a church which bears witness to the faith of Justinian and Theodora, of Cosmas and Damian, of Catherine of Alexandria, and Catherine of Russia. The convent itself is a mass of buildings, heavily fortressed; there were days when it had to defend itself against Moslem persecution and Bedouin marauders.

"The monks within, some twenty or thirty in number, are uncouth and unkempt to the last degree. Hardly a sign of the effects of the religious life can be seen in their faces, many of them repulsive enough. But no visitor can fail to remember with gratitude their kindly and unaffected welcome. Their feelings toward the English church are most friendly, and if an English priest is among the travelers he is taken within the screen and allowed to kneel before the altar, and to take part in the celebration of the liturgy. The church is a fine basilica, richly but tastefully decorated and well cared for. Its chief artistic treasure is the superb mosaic work in the apse, of the seventh or eighth century, representing the transfiguration, to which the church is dedicated. As a rule there are three services daily, announced with chiming of bells and beating of the gong, at four and six a.m., and two in the afternoon (vespers). The eucharist is celebrated generally twice a week, and on saints' day.

"Beyond attending the services, the monks do not seem to have much to do. Study, of course, they never dream of. There is a great deal of baking of bread and brewing of date wine always going on, as well as some lazy whitewashing; there are the olives and vines in the garden to be looked after; but for the most part the inmates live a life of serene and vacant idleness. Of the chief officers the prior seems to be a nonentity, the mosa prominent person being the steward, who undertakes the services and the internal economy of the house. Next in importance comes the secretary, a young man in deacon's orders, with some pretensions to education, possessed of a good-natured heart and a minimum of bad French.

"The precious library is under his charge, though he knows nothing at all about it, and handles the MSS. in a way that is harrowing to one's feelings. But things are better now than they were once. The books are housed in three rooms with glazed windows; they are labelled, numbered, and most of them catalogued. Their contents have not yet been completely explored; but the latest researches warrant the belief that the principal treasures have been exhausted, and that another Codex Sinaiticus is not likely to be discovered in a waste-paper basket."

With Invalids.

Wonderful bargains in Overcoats at Grafton's clearing sale.

No. 8 Company.

The members of C Company are requested to return to the armoury their uniforms and all accoutrements, including rifles, on or before the 10th inst. It is imperative that every rifle be returned. Special attention is required to be given to this order.—W. H. HILL, Capt. 5d2

Sousa's Peerless Band.

The EXAMINER has received from Mr. D. Blakely, manager of that peerless musical organization, Sousa's Band, a beautiful half tone portrait of the great leader, as well as a similar picture of the band. Those who were so highly delighted with the perfect performance of this band on its last visit to Peterborough will be greatly pleased to learn that Sousa and his band will visit the town during the coming season.

Out on Suspended Sentence.

Shearer, the man who was found guilty of the theft of a coat from a comrade in the back woods, was before the magistrate for judgment. It will be remembered that Shearer when being tried pleaded justification for the theft, as his own clothes had disappeared while he slept. The magistrate was of the opinion that practical joking had a good deal to do with the affair and on payment of costs allowed the prisoner to go on suspended sentence.

Interred in the Little Lake Cemetery.

The funeral of the late Mr. John A. Jamieson, which took place yesterday with Orange honors, was one of the largest which has been seen in Peterborough for years. The pall bearers were comprised of three members of the local True Blues lodge, and three members from Emily L.O.L. No. 41. Interment took place at the Little Lake Cemetery, Rev. W. R. Young performing the funeral ceremony at the grave.

Prostrated by Heart Failure.

Mr. Wm. Fair, a well-to-do farmer of Millbrook, who for a number of years has acted as local agent for the McLaughlin Carriage Co., and Coulthard-Scott Co., of Oshawa, was there on Friday transacting some business with the above named firms, and while in the Coulthard-Scott Company's works about noon was prostrated with heart failure, and for a time life was thought to be extinct. He was conveyed to the residence of Mr. Walter Coulthard, where he is being cared for, and showing indications of ultimate recovery.—Toronto Mail. Mr. Fair is the father of Mr. Robt. Fair of town, who, this afternoon, received word from his sister that the report of his father's illness was greatly exaggerated as he was able to proceed to his home, in Millbrook, the same evening.

For Young Men.

Countless are the stories told of the young man who never seems to know when it is time to terminate his evening call on a young lady. In one, the girl is represented as asking if the milkman's waggon has passed; in another, the master of the house comes to the head of the stairs and inquires if the morning paper has come, or invites the visitor to stay to breakfast. These things may look sarcastic, but his conduct warrants it. There is no girl who is well and wants to keep so who wishes to sit up all night with an ordinary young man. She can get all the information he has to impart in two hours and every hour he stays after that is a dead loss. Some men ignore or know nothing of the polite little hypocrisies of society. They rise to go at ten o'clock, perhaps; their hostess says, "Oh, don't fancy—it is early yet," and they take her at her word and remain for two or three hours longer; and all the time she is on nettles. She knows she will be the laughing stock of the whole family and wishes him a hundred miles away. She can only yawn behind her handkerchief and pray for relief and when the stayer does go, she runs up stairs three steps at a time, and gives a sigh anything but complimentary to the young man who has so long outstayed his welcome. This is written on behalf of the girls who have become pale and hollow-eyed from being kept up until the early morning by their tactless wooers who, it is hoped, will profit by the hints thrown out.

The Voting.

Who prances home with head held high,
The light of triumph in his eye,
And shouts "good wife, how's that for high!"
The successful candidate.

The voting in the different wards to-day was most steady, with little or no attendant excitement. When the polls were opened there was a slight rush for ballots but after the first half hour the stream was a steady one. Quite a large number of ladies exercised their franchise, and the contest was so keen that any vote that could possibly be polled was looked after. The results of the day's voting will be made known at the different wards to-night and will be duly bulletined at the EXAMINER office.

Who wanders home by back way streets,
And churlishly his good wife greets,
And swears that sour are office sweets!
The defeated candidate.

A Grand Treat in Store.

Mr. W. E. Ramsay's description of "A Trip Around the World," which he is to give in Bradburn's opera house Wednesday evening, Jan. 9th, beautifully illustrated by scenes of all the different countries, promises to be quite a treat. Probably no person in Canada is so capable or so well fitted for giving such an entertainment as the popular artist. In his travels he has selected scenes surrounded with the romance and history of past ages; castles whose towering battlements centuries ago looked down on scenes of war, cathedrals built by ambitious monarchs, the houses of kings and queens, mountain scenery, the tropics teeming with vegetable and animal life; the home of the Esquimaux and the land of the Midnight Sun. Aside from this Mr. Ramsay will also introduce several of the latest London songs. Prices 25, 35 and 50 cents. Seats on sale at street railway office. 1d

Miss Dexie.

"Miss Dexie, a Romance of the Provinces," is the title of a story now in the press of WILLIAM BRIGGS, the Toronto Publisher, to be issued shortly in a neat paper-covered edition. The author, who writes over a non de plume, is a Nova Scotia lady, who has contributed a number of short stories to the provincial press and to the New England papers. "Miss Dexie," the heroine of the tale, is the daughter of American parents, who removed to Halifax while the Civil War was in progress. She is lively and clever, has an almost embarrassing number of admirers, and is really embarrassed with two lovers, neither of whom, however, finds the key to the young lady's heart. The story of their attempts at love-making is told in interesting style. The scene is laid partly in Halifax, is removed to Prince Edward Island, where the peculiar sect of the McDonaldites or "Jerkers" are met with and described, and finally is transferred to Maine, where the real romance begins. Here Miss Dexie meets her fate, and enters into the married relation to face the question "Does it pay to marry for love?" Dexie is a really fine character, likely to please well the average reader, and we don't pot the romance will find many admirers.

Mr. Rae Sunday night. If they did not hear, they certainly have heard of, the sermon, in which the duty of bachelors in relation to marriage was pretty plainly pointed out.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 75c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

A PRETTY WEDDING.

The Lingwood-Atwood Nuptials Take Place in Lakefield.

On Wednesday last one of the prettiest weddings that has taken place in Lakefield for some time, was celebrated at the Church of St. John the Baptist, the Rev. Geo. Warren officiating and tying the knot between Mr. F. Houchen Lingwood, of Kingston, Ont., nephew of Mrs. G. W. B. Strickland, and Miss Emily Grace Atwood, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Atwood, of Lakefield. Miss Atwood has been for so many years the indefatigable organist of St. John the Baptist Church, that the congregation naturally took an unusual interest in the wedding. Long before two o'clock, the hour fixed for the ceremony, the church was filled to overflowing and Messrs. Fred and Charles Amys, who acted as ushers, had their hands full in finding seats for all. The church being still dressed in its Christmas decorations, looked extremely pretty, and gave additional effect to what would have been in any case a very pretty wedding. At 2 o'clock Mr. Lingwood, accompanied by Mr. Evan Atwood, as best man, Mr. W. Traill, and Mr. Hugh Lempriere (groomsmen) entered the church and took up their positions. Immediately afterwards the bride, who looked extremely pretty, came up the aisle leaning on the arm of her father and followed by her bridesmaids, the Misses Katherine, Annie and Florence Atwood. The bride was beautifully dressed in cream Bengaline, with an embroidered net veil and carried in her hand a bouquet of natural white flowers.

The bridesmaids were attired in cream tall, shirred hats of the same material and wore natural flowers.

The beautiful marriage service of the English church was then read by the Rev. Mr. Warren in his usual clear and impressive manner. A reception was held immediately after at the residence of the bride's parents, where light refreshments were served, and the many beautiful and costly presents inspected.—Lakefield News.

SNOW PLOWING.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—I live on Bethune street, but I have not seen or heard of the snow plough this season—certainly it was not on our street on Saturday between Brock and McDonnel. How is this? I object to paying taxes for something I am supposed to receive a benefit from, but so far have not.

Yours truly,

THE ENTERPRISE OF AMITY.

On Sunday morning, for the first time in 50 years, the Toronto Globe was visited with fire, and the fact that the tremendous loss of plant, machinery, etc., didn't prevent the usual visit of the Globe this morning to its tens of thousands of readers is a proof of our contemporary's indestructible entity and enterprise. The "Pheonix rising from its ashes" isn't a circumstance to the Globe, which appeared as usual this morning with a fifteen column report of its own destruction, very amply illustrated. "The voice was the voice of Jacob, but the hands were the hands of Esau"—the Globe was printed from type set up in the Empire office, which vied with the other city papers in extending material comfort to their cremated contemporary. The fact that to-day's Globe was written and printed in the Empire office, only affected it appearance, it had no effect upon its political sentiments. Politics was strictly excluded from the pretty little idyllic picture of the lion and the lamb lying down together in the Empire fold. In the editorial pages of the respective journals to-morrow the lion will again have become a roaring, ravening beast, and the lamb a full-grown ram, full of fierceness and fight. The EXAMINER tenders its sincere sympathy with the Globe in its time of trouble, with warm congratulations upon its remarkable enterprise and vitality. The body of the Globe was burned; its spirit still lives. Long may it live!

THE EAST NORTHUMBERLAND PROTEST.

The Cobourg Sentinel-Star, which would naturally be in the confidence of the Conservative member-elect and of the party, has the following in reference to the forthcoming trial of the petition:

The trial of the petition against the return of Dr. Willoughby as representative of East Northumberland in the Legislature will be tried at Cobourg next Tuesday, Judges Street and McMahon presiding. The bill of particulars contains over 100 charges of the usual nature. Dr. Willoughby, the respondent, was examined before Judge Ketchum last week by Mr. Webb, the defeated Liberal candidate. We are informed that an attempt to void the election will be made under a new section of the Act, which provides that where a candidate engages an agent or canvasser who has within eight years been reported for corrupt practices, the election shall be void. It is practically admitted that certain parties who had been so reported, actively assisted the doctor's candidature; but the point will turn on the legal construction placed upon the clause and the word "engage." The "thoroughbreds" of East Northumberland on both sides, will likely be up in force to near the trial.

WHEAT OUTLOOK.

The Minneapolis Journal has collected the opinions of leading brokers on the wheat situation. The past is reviewed and prospects for 1895 are discussed.

From Toronto "X" writes:

In the Province of Ontario our last crop was 21,000,000 bushels. This does not vary much from the past five years' average. Prices have ruled low for all kinds of grain and farmers have been free sellers. At present, price paid to farmers is 55 to 57c. Stocks held by millers and dealers are one-third to one-half less than a year ago. There is nothing in sight to cause higher prices.

Pardridge, the great speculator, says:

With a visible supply larger than ever known before, amounting now to nearly 90,000,000 bush., all of it at points of accumulation where it will cost an immense amount of money to carry it through the winter; with the fall sown crop going into the winter in good condition; with Argentine harvesting a liberal crop, most of which to compete with our surplus in the markets of Western Europe, and with Black Sea ports still open, because of unusually fine weather, I can see no hope of any radical improvement in wheat values, but rather look for dragging markets and lower prices.

NOT SNOW PLOWING.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—The snow ploughs failed to visit some of the streets in the western part of the town on Sunday morning in time for the convenience of those attending the morning service at 11 in the churches. Now is the time, at the beginning of the snow season, to bring the contractors to the point of promptly attending to this important service.

Yours, etc.,
SNOW WADER.

The Young People's Association of St. John's church will meet this evening for the election of officers.

The Sewing Society's meetings of St. John's Ladies Auxiliary will be resumed to-morrow afternoon at Mrs. Boswell's.

A report of Rev. J. J. Rae's excellent sermon on "It is not good for man to live alone," is held over for to-morrow's issue.

"As Pants the Hart" was the title of an anthem which was well rendered in the Murray street Baptist church last evening, Rev. Mr. Trottel, the pastor, conducted both services.

Mr. Manning and Mr. Yennie sang a duet in the George street Methodist church last evening during the collection of the offertory, which was greatly appreciated. It was entitled "Hope Beyond."

Mr. Pady, of McMaster University, conducted the services in the Park street Baptist mission yesterday. In the evening a very large congregation was present and heard a most instructive discourse preached from the text "The Master is here and calleth."—John xi, 28. An anthem entitled "The Master is Calling for Thee" was sung in good voice by the choir at this service.

The Charlotte street Methodist church was crowded last night—the draw seats having to be brought in use—to listen to a sermon, delivered by Rev. J. J. Rae, on the subject "It is not good for man to be alone." The preacher showed that the association of the sexes in marriage was the divine plan and that the experience of the past proved that the highest development of manhood and womanhood was only reached in the marriage relation properly constituted and properly lived up to by the respective parties. Some attention was also paid to those who remained unmarried owing to qualities of disposition and actions that failed to commend them as wives or husbands, and also to those who for conscientious motives preferred celebrity, so as to devote themselves unhampered by home ties to works of charity, etc. The sermon was an admirable one, well thought out aptly illustrated and eloquently delivered. In the morning the anthem, "Thy Saviour's Voice," was sung, in which Mr. A. L. Davis and Miss Pollard took the solos in excellent voice. At the evening service the anthem, "O Lord How Manifold," was rendered. The duet, "Forever with the Lord," which was sung during the offertory by Miss Fawcett and Mr. A. L. Davis was greatly appreciated.

"AN EXPENSIVE COUNCILLOR."

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—I am informed that Mr. Sawers took strong exception to the phrase in my letter of Saturday as to his having "unloaded" upon the town the property now constituting the town buildings. I assure Mr. Sawers that this expression was not in any way intended as the slightest reflection upon his honesty or integrity, for, as I believe, he had no proprietory interest in the buildings and could have no direct personal interest in disposing of them to the town. I meant to imply that Mr. Sawers, as a councillor, was in favour of the transfer, and in his official capacity, to the extent of his influence, helped in procuring what I still consider undesirable property for the purposes of the town. If any other person than Mr. Sawers has misconstrued the words I used, I sincerely regret having employed them, and so far as such misinterpretation goes, heartily retract them.

Yours truly,
"NUMBER TWO."

LOSS OF POWER and vital force follow loss of flesh, or emaciation. These come from impoverished blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery enriches the blood, stops the waste of strength and tissue, and builds up healthy flesh. Nasty Cod liver oils add fat but not wholesome flesh. Thin, pale, puny and scrofulous children are made plump, rosy and robust by the "Discovery." They like it, too.

WHAT THE DRAMA COST

RUNNING A THEATRE IN THE EARLY YEARS OE THE CENTURY.

When Kemble Lived $4,000 a Week Was Required to Run Drury Lane—The Salary Paid to the Stars of Long Ago—A Profitable Investment.

If one were asked off handed, to express an opinion in regard to the relative cost of running a theatre during the early years of this century and to day it is safe to predict that, unless he had just looked up the matter, even an experienced manager would say at once that the amount of money spent and handled in a first-class playhouse to-day would far exceed that spent a century ago. Just as many students of the playhouse find that each age has seen its playhouses meet its special requirements, and that each generation had had the same enthusiasm, the same faults to find, the same degeneration of the theatre to deplore, so it seems that, after all, the expense of running a theatre bears the same relative proportion to the community in each age. A very excellent proof of this was found the other day in a book published half a century ago, long since out of print, and never very widely circulated, on the "Life of the Duchess of St. Albans," whose first husband was Thomas Coutts, the rich banker. There a full list of the expenses of running Drury Lane in 1803, when John Philip Kemble was the manager, is published. Mr. Kemble, as leading actor of the company, drew a salary of $200 a week, with an additional $70 as stage manager. The latter was paid all the year round, the former during the theatrical season; it made an average income during his control there of $10,000 a year. Mrs. Siddons received $200 a week during the season, or about $6,000 a year. Leading men like Banister, "Handsome Jack," alike devoted to Garrick and to Edmund Kean, drew a salary of $85 a week. Thomas King, the original Sir Peter Teazle, drew $80. Alexander Pope, whose first wife was the beautiful Miss Younge, and who is better known as a gourmand than an actor, received $65. Wroughton, who was for years proprietor of Sadler's Wells Theatre, had $75; Charles Kemble, $50; Byrne, the ballet master, $40; John Palmer, the original Joseph Surface, $45; Powell, the prompter, had $30, with many emoluments; the famous Grimaldi had but $20.

The Drury Lane company was quite large—it numbered forty five people, besides the extras—so that the salary list footed up to the weekly amount of $2,660, fully equal to the largest salary lists of to day. The extra people received from $6 25 to $10 a week, which compares well with the price paid to-day. Indeed, the above figures compare more than favorably with the salaries in England to-day. English leading men in the provinces receive salaries to-day ranging from $17.50 to $62.50, the figures being larger, of course, in London, and in this country the price ranges all the way from $50 to $300, with notable exceptions, usually paid to English actors, like the $750 that was paid Charles Coghlan when he came here to star under John Stetson's management and the $500 that was paid Leonard Boyne last year, when he staged "The Prodigal Daughter," and played the hero. Boyne's salary in London was $125. Leading women in England get from $30 to $40 in the provinces, more in London. English comedians get from $12 to $30 a week, soubrettes from $12.50 to $30, heavy men about the same figure as soubrettes, but heavy women receive from $30 to $40 a week. Many responsible utility people in England to-day do not get over $6.25 to $10 a week, less than was paid in Kemble's time.

The total expense of running the Drury Lane Theatre in Kemble's time was $4,294 a week. It is doubtful if any theatre in this country to-day costs more. It is difficult to compare the expenses to-day with those of Drury Lane at the time mentioned, as so few playhouses have a stock company, but $3,000 will cover most of the salary lists to-day, simply because salaries, though large, are few in number, while the expenses of a well known theatre in town, of a position ranking with Drury Lane, are, outside of the salaries, $3,000 a week. Some years ago, when the Boston Theatre had a stock company, the expenses were $600 a day, or, rather, a performance, or $4,200 a week.

It is interesting to note that the valuation of the Drury Lane property was $600,000, and that it was a profitable property. The rent was figured at only 5 per cent on the investment, instead of 10 per cent, as is done in these days. The season was only 33 weeks, so that the rental was about $1,000 a week.

Of course it is only fair to note that there was but one other licensed theatre, Covent Garden, at the time, and that, of course, rather overbalances things, in making comparisons of this sort. Still, it may surprise many to find that, so far as the expenditure of big money in the theatre is concerned, we are not in advance of our great-grandfathers, especially when it is considered that this does not include any money for scenery or the author's fees, which latter were pretty considerable at that time, as many original plays were produced.

The expense of lighting the theatre—candles were used—of heating it, of servants and of printing the bills of Drury Lane, was $500. It would have been interesting to note the cost of lighting alone, to compare it with the cost of electricity—about $95 a week—but, unfortunately, no record of that item alone appears. Remarkable as these figures may seem to many, it must be borne in mind that they are the expenses on a very profitable investment.—Chicago Herald.

She Kept Them All.

Miss Old—Did you keep your presence of mind at your wedding? Mrs. Newed—I kept all the presents.

Points on Atmosphere.

When doctors disagree, it is time for the intelligent laymen to give a little thought to their own conditions and ascertain if possible by careful and prudent experiments just what is best for them. One class of physicians will advocate cold rooms, abundance of out-of-door air and what would seem to be almost fatal exposure, and will insist that this is the conducive to health and that the patient will thrive under such heroic treatment. A medical man claims to be able to cure consumption and all pulmonary troubles by keeping the patient for a goodly portion of the day in an atmosphere of intense cold. In midwinter the sufferer is put by an open window and inhales the sharp outside air for hours at a time. This is all very well and no doubt a good thing, but from this state of affairs people who have neither the experience nor the facilities take their cue and imagine that extreme cold, if applicable in this way, must necessarily be so in others. They seem to lose sight of the fact that these invalids are put upon wheel carriages, tucked up as snugly as a baby in a cradle and wheeled in by these open windows. They may sleep there or sit there as long as they are comfortable, sometimes perhaps longer than the sick one desires, but, under no circumstances, are these people even for an instant exposed to the atmosphere in any dangerous way.

But, on this theory, somebody thinks that sleeping in a cold room, or sitting in one, has its points of grace, consequently we find extremely delicate people going into cold rooms and getting into beds that are just about as comfortable and safe as icehouses. To inhale prodigious quantities of cold air is one thing, and may be beneficial, but to retire in a room with a temperature at zero, in a cold bed with the blankets and wraps in an absolutely congealing condition, is quite another. With an abundance of hot-water bags and warm blankets, it is possible to get into a cold bed and finally become comfortable; but when, after a night's rest, one rises in the morning and comes suddenly in contact with the freezing air of such an apartment, even though one goes immediately into a warm room, it is little short of suicide. Under ordinary circumstances, it is better to sleep in a room as nearly as possible of the temperature of the one occupied during the day. Children should not be permitted to sleep in very cold rooms. They are restless, and almost always get more or less uncovered, and get colds that start a long train of ills. All things being equal, the use of a moderately warm room with fresh air brought in by a tube from out of doors is much the safer and wiser method of procedure.—New York Ledger.

Origin of the Word Doyley.

The word doyley, now a familiar one with ladies, is derived from the name of Robert D'Oyley one of the followers of William the Norman. He received a grant of valuable lands on the condition of the yearly tender of a tablecloth of 5 shillings' value at the feast of St. Michael. Agreeably to the fashion of the time the ladies of the D'Oyley family were accustomed to embroider and ornament the quitrent tablecloth; hence these cloths, becoming curiosities and accumulating in the course of years, were at length brought into use as napkins at the royal table and called doyleys.—New York Recorder.

FRENCH GIRL'S FEAT.

She Changed Her Clothes in a Coach and Nobody Was Shocked.

"Savoir-faire," of the French Frenchy, is without a synonym in the English language. It properly belongs to a race that intuitively follows the old adage, "What's worth doing is worth doing well." They are adepts in the art of diplomacy. Under trying circumstances they are cool and collected.

"I had taken a train in this city for a trip to Philadelphia," said a Washington man, "and after an hour's stay in the smoker went into one of the regular passenger coaches. Casually looking over my fellow-passengers, I happened to let my gaze rest on a demure, dainty little woman across the aisle from me, but whose seat was in alignment with mine. She was intently perusing the pages of a paper-covered French novel. A little later she dropped the book and produced from her traps—she was surrounded by boxes, hand-bags and shawl strap bundles—a steamer schedule of the Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, the French line to Havre.

"To all appearance she was unconscious of the existence of her neighbors. She had removed her hat, a tasty toque, and was attired in a skirt, beneath which there peeped forth a trim little foot incased in a soft slipper.

"As we neared the Quaker City she became nervously animated. Laying aside her steamer schedule she resurrected from some unseen hiding place a blouse of soft, rich material. She then tripped down the aisle to the ladies' lavatory, and a moment later returned with the silk garment, the blouse having taken its place. Resuming her seat she buttoned the blouse with deft fingers, fixed a gold brooch in place at her throat, and as quickly girded her petite figure with a leather belt.

"By this time I became interested in her movements, and wondered what she would do next. I was not long left in the dark. With refreshing nonchalance she tossed over her head a street skirt of like fabric to the blouse. In some mysterious manner this was secured under the belt as the alpaca gown dropped to the floor. Then it was that every person in the car was watching her.

"I knew the next scene in the transformation act would be her most trying ordeal—the substitution of something more than insubstantial slippers. The circumscribed space between the seats of a day passenger coach is hardly the place one would select for such calisthenic exercise as I knew my fair fellow-traveler was about to indulge in. Time, place and surroundings disturbed her not. A pair of stout walking boots were brought forth, and the exchange soon made, and with the assistance of a silver button hook, firmly fastened. During this operation her skirts were so carefully arranged about her ankles that not the smallest bit of hosiery was displayed, nor could a close observer, had one been present, get a glimpse of lingerie.

"The whole thing was so deftly done, so quickly accomplished, with grace and ease, while the principal performer was evidently ignorant of the contiguity of half a hundred amused people, that I could not help but admire the lovely little creature, so independent and self-contained."—Washington Post.

Able to Transfer Lunacy.

A series of very wonderful experiments which have just been concluded by Dr. Luys, of Paris, whose observations and discoveries in connection with magnetism and electricity in relation to hypnotism made a profound impression upon the scientific world some time ago, has led to a remarkable result. The latest discovery, says the London Telegraph, establishes the fact that cerebral activity can be transferred to a crown of magnetized iron, in which the activity can be retained and subsequently passed, on to a second person. Incredible as this may seem, Dr. Luys has proved its possibility by the experiments just referred to. He placed the crown, which in reality is only a circular band of magnetized iron, on the head of a female patient suffering from melancholia, with a mania for self-destruction, and with such success was the experiment attended that within a fortnight the patient could be allowed to go free without danger, the crown having absorbed all her marked tendencies. About two weeks afterward he put the same crown, which meanwhile had been carefully kept free from contract with anything else, on the head of a male patient suffering from hysteria, complicated by frequent recurrent periods of lethargy. The patient was then hypnotized and immediately conducted himself after the manner of the woman who had previously worn the crown. Indeed, he practically assumed her personality and uttered exactly the same complaints as she had done. Similar phenomena have, it is reported, been observed in the case of every patient experimented upon. Another experiment showed that the crown retained the impression acquired until it was made red hot.

It is one of the easiest things in the world to cure a corn. Do not use acids or other caustic preparations, and don't cut a hole in your boot. In Bed 5 Months—Had Given Up All Hope of Getting Well—A Remedy Found at Last to which "I Owe My Life."

Science has fully established the fact that all the nervous energy of our bodies is generated by nerve centres located near the base of the brain. When the supply of nerve force has been diminished either by excessive physical or mental labours, or owing to a derangement of the nerve centres, we are first conscious of a languor or tired and worn-out feeling, then of a mild form of nervousness, headache, or stomach trouble, which is perhaps succeeded by nervous prostration, chronic indigestion, and dyspepsia, and a general sinking of the whole system. In this day of hurry, fret and worry, there are very few who enjoy perfect health; nearly everyone has some trouble, an ache, or pain, a weakness, a nerve trouble, something wrong with the stomach and bowels, poor blood, heart disease, or sick headache; all of which are brought on by a lack of nervous energy to enable the different organs of the body to perform their respective work.

South American Nervine Tonic, the marvellous nerve food and health giver, is a satisfying success, a wondrous boon to tired, sick, and overworked men and women, who have suffered years of discouragement and tried all manner of remedies without benefit. It is a modern, a scientific remedy, and in its wake follows abounding health.

It is unlike all other remedies in that it is not designed to act on the different organs affected, but by its direct action on the nerve centres, which are nature's little batteries, it causes an increased supply of nervous energy to be generated, which in its turn thoroughly oils, as it were, the machinery of the body, thereby enabling it to perform perfectly its different functions, and without the slightest friction.

If you have been reading of the remarkable cures wrought by South American Nervine, accounts of which we publish from week to week, and are still sceptical, we ask you to investigate them by correspondence, and become convinced that they are true to the letter. Such a course may save you months, perhaps years, of suffering and anxiety.

The words that follow are strong, but they emanate from the heart, and speak the sentiments of thousands of women in the United States and Canada who know, through experience, of the healing virtues of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, a prominent and much respected lady, writes as follows:—

"I owe my life to the great South American Nervine Tonic. I have been in bed for five months with a scrofulous tumour in my right side, and suffered with indigestion and nervous prostration. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I cannot recommend it too highly."

Tired women, can you do better than become acquainted with this truly great remedy?

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease).
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke: kind and fair.
Our grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want;
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then were house, but stop, I miss,[
They gave us every one, a kiss,
And said, "be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home,
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

The Hohenlohes Intermarried With All European Reigning Families.

It would be surprising indeed if the new chancellor were not free from prejudices of race, for, according to the New York Tribune, there is no family in Europe the international relationship of which is more extensive than that of Prince Hohenlohe. Queen Victoria's step-sister married a Prince Hohenlohe, and it was her Britannic majesty who, on the premature death of the Princess Feodore, assumed charge of her children, one of whom, Princess Adelaide Hohenlohe, married to the late Duke of Augustenburg, is the mother of the present Empress of Germany. The Hohenlohes are, therefore, treated as cousins by the reigning family of England, as they are also by the royal house of Prussia, and there was no more popular member of the British court than the late Prince Victor Hohenlohe, who for so many years filled the office of constable of Windsor Castle, and who, after distinguishing himself in the British navy, in which he attained the rank of admiral, married into the English aristocracy and spent the major part of his life in his adopted country. Prince Hohenlohe is married to Princess Leopoldine, of Baden, while another member of the Hohenlohe family is matrimonially allied to the reigning house of Wurtemberg. Prince Constantine, as grand master of the household of the Emperor of Austria and controller of his court, may be regarded as standing at the head of the Austro-Hungarian aristocracy. Prince Kraft Hohenlohe is married to the laughter of the Marquise d'Imecourt, one of the most influential and grandest members of the aristocracy, and sister of the popular cavalry general, the Marquis de Gallifet, while one of the sons of the new chancellor has sought a bride in Greece, in the person of Princess Charicles Ypsilanti, a name than which there is none more illustrious in the annals of modern Greece.

There are Hohenlohes who are married to Spanish grandees, and there are others who are wedded to patricians of Rome and Naples; while the chancellor and his brother Constantine, at Vienna, are married to Princesses Sayn-Wittgenstein, a house which may be considered as far more Russian than German. It was the Russian mother of Princess Hohenlohe, by the way, who was the principal cause of the famous composer, Liszt, becoming a priest. Infatuated with Liszt, she went to the length of securing a divorce from her husband, Prince Nicholas Wittgenstein, in order to marry him. By the time she had secured her freedom, however, the heart of the fickle composer was interested in another direction to such an extent as to render it impossible for him to marry Princess Wittgenstein without provoking not only a scandal but even incurring personal danger at the hands of the relatives of his new inamorata. Sorely perplexed and disinclined, moreover, to bind himself with the inconvenient chains of matrimony, Liszt appealed in his difficulty to his friend and chief patron, Cardinal Hohenlohe. The latter, being desirous of avoiding the terrible mesalliance of a lady of his family with a man of such humble birth as the pianist, induced him to become a priest and thus to create an unsurmountable bar to any matrimonial projects on the part of the princess. Although bitterly disappointed, she remained Liszt's friend to the last, and it was at her palace at Rome that he was accustomed to reside when in the eternal city. Her salon there used to be crowded with authors, artists diplomats and church dignitaries, Cardinal Hohenlohe among the number, and while drinking her caravan tea and puffing away at her large Havana cigars, which she was accustomed to smoke, she would chatter at ease in Polish, German, Russian, French, English, Italian or Spanish. She survived Liszt for several years, and it was to her that he bequeathed the major part of his possessions.

George O. Sharpe, of Elyria, O., claims his grandmother, Mrs. Crittenden, who lives with G. H. Sharpe ten miles southeast of Cleveland, is the oldest woman in Ohio. He gives her age as 133, and says she is healthy and cheerful and does not look to be over seventy years old. She is somewhat deaf, but can see well and gets around with comparatively little attention. She does considerable reading, but attempts only light work. Sharpe says her mother, in Scotland, whose home was eight miles from Aberdeen, was 146 years old when she died.—Chicago Tribune.

DREYFUS' DEGRADATION

The Treacherous Officer of the French Army Disgraced in Public.

DECLARED HE WAS INNOCENT

His Protestations Met by the Onlookers With Cries of "A Mort le Traitre"—The Documents He Gave to Germany, He Said, Were Only a Bait.

PARIS, Jan. 7.—The final degradation of Captain Albert Dreyfus, who was recently sentenced to deprivation of his military rank and title and confinement in a fortress for life for having divulged Government secrets, took place at 9 o'clock Saturday morning on the parade ground of the Ecole Militaire in the presence of 5,000 troops and a number of newspaper men and others. Some time before daylight detachments from all the regiments in the district of Paris were on the march to the parade ground. The troops formed a square facing the main entrance to the parade ground, where was stationed a band composed of drums and bugles. The 89th regiment had Captain Dreyfus in charge.

At precisely 6 o'clock the prisoner was let out from the left wing of the square, He was accompanied by a squad of artillery soldiers. He was pale, but with a firm step he marched, with his sword in his right hand, to the centre of the square, where he was awaited by Gen. Darras. He halted before the General and stood at "attention." The adjutant of the Republican Guard then pronounced the verdict of the court-martial which had condemned Captain Dreyfus.

When the verdict was being read Capt. Dreyfus flushed somewhat, but otherwise showed no sign of losing his composure. After the reading of the verdict General Darras addressed the prisoner, saying: "Dreyfus, you are unworthy to carry arms. In the name of the people of France, we degrade you."

The Adjutant then walked up to Dreyfus and took from him his sword, which with a quick, sharp movement he broke across his knee, casting the pieces upon the ground. He then cut the buttons and insignia of rank from the uniform of the condemned captain, and threw them also upon the ground. At this point of the proceedings Captain Dreyfus was for a moment moved by a sense of his humiliation, but he quickly suppressed his emotion, and shouted in a loud voice: "Vive La France!" Continuing he said: "You have degraded an innocent man. I swear I am innocent."

He seemed about to speak further but his voice was drowned by the rolling of the drums, which was not loud enough, however, to drown a ringing shout from the crowd in the rear of the soldiers of "A mort le traitre!"

The ceremony up to this time had lasted only four minutes. The drums then beat and the degraded man began his march along the four sides of the square, in what is known as "Le Parade de Execution." The scene was very impressive and many of the younger soldiers turned their heads away. Captain Dreyfus' march was firm and soldierly, with a quick, short pace, and when he reached the delegation of officers from the reserves, raised his hand and said: "Tell the whole of France that I am innocent."

Turning to the left from the position of the reserve officers he came before the members of the press, to whom he said in a firm voice: "I declare that I am innocent."

The end of the march was reached at 9.30, after which the condemned man was turned over to the civil authorities. A large crowd had gathered at the entrance to the parade ground and from them came not one word of sympathy, but the cry of "A mort le traitre!" was taken up by them and repeated until the miserable man was out of hearing of his tormentors.

It is stated that when Captain Dreyfus spoke to the officers of the reserve, protesting his innocence, the latter retorted "Down with the Judas," "Silence, traitor," etc. Dreyfus became greatly excited at this, and turned again appealing to the officers, but the soldiers escorting him quickly seized him and forced him to continue his march.

Before the ceremony of degradation began the vast space in the Place de Fontenoy facing the courtyard of the Ecole Militaire was crowded with men and women. Many persons climbed the base of the hexagonal granite monument erected to the memory of the Parisians who were killed in 1870, and others hired dollar places upon stepladders and maintained their positions throughout in the biting wind.

Captain Dreyfus, upon reaching the prison depot said to the governor of the institution:

"My innocence will be recognized some day. I have confidence that Providence in its own time will reveal the real culprit."

The Matin prints a report that Dreyfus said to one of his guards just before his degradation: "I did hand over documents to Germany but they were only a bait. If I had been able to keep it up I should have got eventually documents of capital importance from the Germans." The Matin remarks that this report is generally disbelieved.

The Queen Enquires for Mr. Bowell.

MONTREAL, Jan. 7.—The Governor-General on Saturday received a cable message from the Queen enquiring as to Premier Bowell's health. His Excellency sent a message in reply, stating that there was nothing serious in the Premier's condition.

TO BUILD A NEW ROAD.

The Manitoba Government Making An Effort in This Direction.

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 7.—As there has been no railway construction in this province the past three years and some sections are suffering for want of railway communication, the Manitoba Government has decided that something in that line must be done. The Canadian Pacific is practising rigid economy; the Northern Pacific is in the hands of receivers; the Hudson Bay Railroad is still in a state of incubation: none of these can be induced to make any extension. It is, therefore, proposed to build an independent line from this city northwesterly to the Dauphin, a distance of 200 or 300 miles, and an act of incorporation of the company will be passed at the coming session of the Legislature.

It is understood that legislation will also be passed authorizing the construction of a line southeasterly from Winnipeg to the boundary line, there to connect with roads to Duluth. These two links being connected, both opening up vast sections and stretches of fertile and timber lands, the line will then be pushed on northwestward along the route originally intended for the Canadian Pacific Railway, through Great Saskatchewan valleys to the base of the Rocky Mountains, there connecting with a line to be built with the aid of the British Columbia Government through Yellow Head Pass to the Pacific coast, thus making another continental line from Duluth via Winnipeg to the coast. It is understood that Premier Greenway's trip south was for the purpose of interesting capitalists in this new great scheme.

An Untruthful Report.

MONTREAL, Jan. 7.—The Canadian Pacific Railway Company officials deny the story that the company's workshops are to be closed down and that several thousand workingmen will be thrown out of employment. Several retrenchments will be made owing to the decrease in the earnings, but the workshops will not be closed down.

Death of an Abolitionist.

CHATHAM, Ont., Jan. 7.—The Rev. Dr. King, famous in slavery days for helping escaped slaves from the United States to Canada, died here Saturday, aged 89 years.

There'll be a Big Jump in Salt.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 7.—The salt manufacturers of the province met here on Saturday. All the firms in the province were represented and it seems likely that the price of salt will shortly take a jump. "The price at which salt has wholesaled for a considerable time has been ruinous to us," said one of the delegates. Steps were being taken to form an association to look after the interest of salt manufacturers and to maintain better prices. Mr. Gray, of Seaforth, presided, and Mr. T. H. Carter, of Courtright, was secretary.

Horses Drowned in Allumette Lake.

WESTMEATH, Ont., Jan. 7.—Mr. Wm. Wright, of this place, while crossing the Lower Allumette Lake with an empty sleigh, the horses, a valuable team, broke through the ice and were drowned. A few hours afterwards Arthur Lawless was crossing near the same spot with a load of oats and without warning the team, sleigh and load disappeared through the ice, he barely had time to spring from his load on to firm ice. The ice is nearly eight inches in thickness but owing to the severe cold is full of cracks.

Put Paris Green in Their Food.

SCRANTON, Pa., Jan. 7.—Mrs. Michael Worman, of Forest City, was arrested and committed to jail, charged with attempting to poison her husband, his father and mother and a boarder by putting paris green in their food. She confessed her guilt. Mr. and Mrs. Worman had been married but three months. The woman says she was forced by the parents to marry the man against her will and hated him intensely.

A Montreal Woman Suicides.

MONTREAL, Jan. 7.—Miss Peniston, a well-known Montreal woman, committed suicide on Saturday by shooting herself through the head with a shotgun. Miss Peniston since the death of a favorite brother, who was killed while racing a few months ago, has been subject to fits of despondency, and it was in one of these fits that she killed herself.

Rough Weather on the Continent.

PARIS, Jan. 7.—Bad weather is reported from all parts of the continent. In the North of Spain there have been heavy storms and floods for the last three days. In Oviedo and Burgos a deep snow has fallen. At Civita, Vecchia, the gale destroyed six hundred feet of the breakwater yesterday.

Fatal Coasting Accident.

OYSTER BAY, L.I., Jan. 7.—A coasting contest between coasters from Oyster Bay and East Norwich, which came off at the latter place on Saturday night, resulted in wholesale injury to the East Norwich participants. Their sleigh, carrying eleven men, collided with a tree and six of the men were injured, two at least fatally.

Shot While Resisting Arrest.

BUFFALO, Jan. 7.—Police Officer Regan Saturday shot and mortally wounded an Indian named Patterson who resisted arrest in the infected district. Patterson and the officer in exchanging shots emptied their six-shooters. Three bullets took effect in the Indian's body.

ROMANCE OF A BULLET.

It Recalls the Eventful Days of the Siege of Paris.

This advertisement was printed in one of the newspapers recently:

"LOST—On Friday evening, in 23d st., near 7th ave., a lady's gold watch and chain, with a bullet set in silver, a small glass cross and a medal; the finder will be rewarded at Priest's drug store, 23d st. and 7th ave.

There is nothing remarkable about the watch, chain, cross or medal, but the bullet has a romance which the loser of the trinkets told to a Sun reporter. It begins away back in the time of the Franco-Prussian war. At that time the person in question was studying art in Paris. In her own words the romance of the bullet is as follows:

"When the siege of Paris began, I, like a number of other American women, offered my services as a nurse. There were enough of us, I am proud to say, to maintain a hospital of our own. About the last of October or the first of November, 24 years ago, our ambulance drove up one day to the tent over which I had charge, and they lifted a handsome young Zouave out of it. He had been shot in the calf of the leg. The surgeons immediately laid him upon the operating cot and began probing for the bullet. I was bathing his head and trying to relieve his pain. When they finally cut the bullet out I took it, washed it, and, as is customary, handed it to the wounded man. With a cheerful smile he said:

"'Won't you keep it, mademoiselle? As soon as I get well I can go out and get another.'

"I thanked him, and promised that I would keep it and wear it. I had a silver band placed around it, with three little silver chains, so that I could wear it on my watch chain."—New York Sun.

AFTER DIVES HAS DINED.

A Thrifty Frenchwoman Collects Enough to Furnish Her Boarding-House Table.

An illustration of keen French thrift, beside which yankee methods resemble almost oriental extravagance, is the catering done by a little French boarding-house keeper, says the New York Evening Sun. She supplies small rooms and two meals a day to lodgers of modest means, who boast of her table. It is, indeed, quite royally spread, and literally from the kitchen of millionaires. A year ago it occurred to her, as she went to market in the early morning, that the garbage cans sent out from the areaways of fine houses betrayed a lamentable wastage of good food. She was visited by a great idea and acted upon it by having interviews with the cooks of several uptown mansions. The result was that for a small consideration these cooks consented to permit her the privilege of making what selections she wished from the plates and dishes returned to the kitchen from the mistress' table, after the cook had made certain reservations. Here was a wealth of material beyond the dreams of any boarding-house gourmand. The little French woman rarely goes to the regular market, but once a day makes her rounds to the kitchens. She carries a basket lined with zinc and divided into compartments, and a fork. Her selections from the plates and dishes are made with the utmost discretion, and in her own kitchen every scrap is turned to the most tempting and wonderful account. Her expenses have been greatly reduced, and her boarders look forward to her meals with great anticipation.

Worry.

Worry is killing. It is bad management that kills people. Nature will let no man overwork himself unless he plays her false, unless he takes stimulants at irregular times, smokes much or takes opium. If he is regular and obeys the laws of health and walks in the way of physiological righteousness, nature will never allow him or any person to work too hard. I have never yet seen a case of breaking down from overwork alone, but I admit that it is necessary above all things to cultivate tranquility of mind.

Try to exercise your wills in regard to this—for will counts for something in securing tranquility—to accept things as they are and not to bother about yesterday, which is gone forever; not to bother about to-morrow, which is not ours; but to take the present day and make the best of it. Those women who will continually peer into what lies beyond never have any present life at all—they are always grizzling over the past or prying into the future, and this blessed to-day, which is all that we are sure of, they never have.—Sir Andrew Clark.

"Little" Japan.

Possibly it is because Japan is a pet of the American public that she is so frequently spoken of as "little Japan." Among the nations of the earth Japan is not specially little either in area or population. The area of Japan, 147,655 square miles, is larger by 27,000 square miles than that of the United Kingdom. Furthermore, there are 41,000,000 people who are subjects to the Mikado, against 38,000,000 in the United Kingdom, taking latest census reports in both cases, Japan's population is larger than Italy's by fully 10,000,000, while her area is 37,000 miles greater. No one speaks of Italy as "little Italy," although she is not so populous as Japan. Japan has nearly ten times the area and almost twenty times the population of Denmark. Japan is not a "little" country save as compared with such unwieldy masses as the Chinese Empire or such a giant as the United States. That she is big enough to hold her own and more she has evinced in battle to the amazement of her great antagonist.—Boston Transcript.

It costs but a trifle more to own a good piano, like the "Rheimer," the "Morris," the "Heintzman" or the "Mendelssohn." The difference in cost is not for one day, or one month, or one year. 1895

On looking over last year's business we find that we have everything to be thankful for, as it was one of the best years that, notwithstanding the hard times, we ever had, and that is saying a great deal.

Now, as this is the season for making good resolutions, we have resolved to surpass, if possible, last year's trade. To attain this end we have duplicated all our fall Cloths and added all the latest winter patterns we could find. We buy for spot cash and can afford to sell on a small margin. Give us a call and we will do the rest.

Our Gent's Furnishings and Underclothing Departments are both well stocked. We have a few choice Overcoats still left which we will let off cheap.

WANT WORK OR BREAD

Newfoundland's Unemployed Become Angrily Demonstrative.

MAY DEVELOP INTO A RIOT

The British Cruiser Tourmaline Ordered to be Prepared for Emergency—All Bills Dealing With the Financial Position of the Island Assented to.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Jan. 8.—A mob of several hundred of the lowest elements of the city paraded the streets carrying a flag on which was inscribed "Work or Bread."

Thousands of the more respectable workingmen tacitly approve of the parade, though not participating in it. They advise waiting another week, as to give the Government another chance to provide for their relief.

The mob is bound for the legislative building, where it will formally demand work or relief. They threaten to break open the stores and help themselves if they are refused. Rioting is expected and the warship's crew have been ordered to be prepared.

The mob proceeded to the British cruiser Tourmaline, now in port here, and a deputation representing them interviewed the captain, demanding bread or work, and asking whether he would prevent their obtaining food by force. In reply the captain promised that he would write to Governor O'Brien and other executive authorities about their representations. He then advised them to return to-morrow, when he would be prepared to give them an answer. If work or food is not forthcoming to-morrow the consequences, it is apprehended, will be serious.

Governor O'Brien last evening gave his assent to all the bills dealing with financial questions which the colonial legislature has just passed. The bill removing the disabilities of politicians convicted of bribery has been reserved for the British Imperial Government's assent. On the arrival here of the steamer Sylvia from Halifax the Bank of Montreal's officials now have received $250,000 in specie, besides paper sufficient to establish a circulation of $1,000. Their bank will open a branch house here to-morrow.

TORONTO'S BIG FIRE.

The Globe Saved Its Mailing Lists—Injured Men Doing Well.

TORONTO, Jan. 8.—Workmen are busy clearing away the debris from Sunday's big fire. On breaking into the vaults of the Globe and Toronto Lithographing Company the books and papers of both companies were found in good condition. The mailing lists of the Globe have been recovered. It is expected the Globe management will shortly begin the work of rebuilding.

The firemen who were injured are progressing as favorably as could be expected. They are, however, all confined to their beds and suffering great pain from their bruises. By the physicians' order no one is allowed to see Chief Ardagh. It will likely be a month before he will be around again. Foster, Forsythe and Smedley will all from present appearances recover without permanent injuries, but the physicians at the General Hospital hold out little hope of saving Saunders' leg, which was so badly smashed by falling brick and mortar on Jordan streets.

The remains of Robert Bowery, the victim of the fire, were buried to-day in St. James' cemetery. The city council, firemen and Orangemen attended in bodies.

Winton and Wicks Discharged.

TORONTO, Jan. 8.—In the police court yesterday the case of Samuel Wicks and Alanson C. Winton, charged with conspiracy in connection with furnishing water meters to the city, was taken up. The evidence of Mr. James W. Porch was taken, as was that of Mr. A. T. Johnston. Mr. Porteh said Wicks told him he could get the city to adopt the meter for $500, $300 for "Jim," $200 for himself and $100 for witness. "Jim" was Ald. Gowanlock, chairman of the Water Works Committee of 1892. The meter was adopted, and witness got $50 and the agency. Mr. Johnston said Winton wanted to leave some money in his hands in 1893 to be paid to Wicks, but no money was put up. This was all the Crown's evidence, and his worship discharged the defendants, saying there was not sufficient evidence of a conspiracy, and besides the action was not commenced within two years, according to the statute.

The Two Canadian Railways.

MONTREAL, Jan. 8.—Railway men are considerably interested over the visit here of Chairman Caldwell, of the railway conference, recently held in Chicago, in connection with the formation of a new transcontinental railway association. The representatives of the other lines have had, it appears, some difficulty with the Canadian Pacific Railway which has taken objection to certain provisions of the new agreement and the object of Mr. Caldwell's mission is to come to some agreement if possible with both the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk, that will assure perfect harmony in the working of the new association. Mr. Caldwell had an interview with the Grand Trunk representatives and the matter was fully discussed. He will meet the Canadian Pacific representatives to-day and subsequently a joint conference will be held, at which it is expected an agreement will be reached.

JAPANESE BARBARITY

They Have Fallen From Their High Position in the Eyes of Europeans.

ATROCITIES AT PORT ARTHUR

Details of the Affair as Given by a Correspondent to the London Times Show Their Barbarous Treatment of Their Enemies—Peace Negotiations.

PARIS, Jan. 7.—The Paris edition of the Herald prints a despatch from Shanghai saying that China's peace envoys to Japan have been instructed not to surrender any territory. China is merely willing to concede the independence of Corea and to pay an indemnity. The failure of the negotiations is regarded in Shanghai as a foregone conclusion. Generals Chiang and Chen, of Port Arthur fame, whom Li Hung Chang reported to the government as having died heroic deaths facing the foe, have turned up without a scratch. A rigorous inquiry doubtless will be made.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The Times publishes advices from Kobe under date of Dec. 3, giving alleged details of the massacre at Port Arthur. The Times correspondent states that the slaughter was carried out with every revolting feature of primal barbarity. Four days were spent in murder and pillage and from dawn to dark horrible mutilation of every conceivable kind and nameless atrocities were perpetrated. Prisoners were tied together in groups riddled with bullets and then hacked to pieces. Boats crowded with fugitives of both sexes and all ages received volley after volley of bullets. The streets were strewn with corpses showing ghastly mutilation.

The correspondent of the Times also said that the mutilations were carried on in every form that Oriental cruelty has ever invented. The soldiers were apparently unchecked in their deeds of blood by their commanders, who, totally losing their European veneer, showed absolute unconsciousness of the effect of these brutalities on their western visitors. They did not forget to be effusively attentive to them and did not appear to suspect that their guests were filled with indignation and disgust. The Times says editorially that it is impossible to doubt that the general in command could have stopped the barbarous mutilation if he felt so disposed, but his failure to prevent it has cast an indelible blot on the Japanes arms and has gone far to destroy the admiration which Europe was so liberally extending to the Japanese. It will scarcely be thought either that the Japanese government has hitherto shown sufficient sensitiveness in the matter.

Italian Fights With Madhists.

LONDON, Jan. 8.— The Central News hears from Cairo: "Reports of serious fighting in the vicinity of Kassala continue persistently. The Italians under Gen. Baratieri are said to have defeated 150,000 Madhists; they sustained heavy losses. No confirmation of this account can be obtained. It is stated that Egypt contemplates helping the Italians by making a strong attack upon Dongola. No final decision has been reached however. A despatch from Rome says that the government will send 600 new troops to Massowah.

Madame Jonlaux on Trial.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 8. — Mme Jonlaux is being tried for the poisoning of her three husbands for the purpose of securing their insurance money. Mme Jonlaux denied that she committed the murders but admitted that she gambled and thus incurred debts. Her first husband burdened her, she said, with debts amounting to 200,000 francs. More than 250 witnesses will be examined.

Sir Henry Ponsonby Dangerously Ill.

OSBORNE, Isle of Wight, Jan. 8.—General the Right Hon. Sir Henry Ponsonby, G.C.B., private secretary to Queen Victoria, was stricken with paralysis at Osborne cottage and is now in a critical condition. Sir Henry Ponsonby was born in 1825 and was formerly equerry to Prince Albert, the Prince Consort.

The Birr Scandal Again.

DUBLIN, Jan. 8.—Kathleen O'Donovan and Annie Desmond, the servant girls who officers of the Birr Garrison assaulted in their bedrooms last summer, revived the scandal a short time ago by suing Captain Sheppard of the Birr Garrison for assault and battery. The jury disagreed and the captain was discharged.

ABERDEEN MEANT IT

He Has Withdrawn His Patronage From the Ottawa Carnival.

A LETTER TO SIR JAMES GRANT

As the Carnival Was Not Postponed Out of Respect to the Memory of the Premier the Governor-General Will Not be a Patron—The Directors Hopeful.

OTTAWA, Jan. 8.—His Excellency, Lord Aberdeen, wrote Sir James Grant, M.P., withdrawing his patronage from the Ottawa carnival. His Excellency wanted a postponement of the affair, and in his letter says that the feelings of those opposed to the carnival are as much entitled to consideration as those of opposite opinion. His Excellency's closing sentence is that "it would be inappropriate to hold the carnival so soon after the public funeral of the eminent Canadian whose loss was mourned by the empire.

The letter received by Sir James was as follows: "Montreal, January 5, 1895. Dear Sir James: "I duly received your letter mentioning that the committee had decided that the Ottawa carnival should not be postponed. In order to prevent any uncertainty as to my own position in the matter, I write to say, that, since in my last letter, I mentioned that in the event of the carnival being deferred, I would be prepared to take part in the celebration, it follows of course that, as there is not to be any postponement, I shall not be able to attend or to give my patronage. I am sorry that there should have been a division of opinion, and also that any inconveniences should be caused to any persons concerned in the affair, but it will, I think, be admitted that the feelings of those who are opposed to the holding of the carnival at present, are as much entitled to consideration as the views of those who are of an opposite opinion.

"A point which I hold ought to be especially kept in view is that a distinction should be drawn between the customary recreations and entertainments of ordinary life, and a series of festivities of an exceptional and abnormal description, not merely local in its character, but intended to attract visitors from various parts of this continent. It is this aspect of the matter which has made me feel that it would be inappropriate to hold a carnival at Ottawa so soon after the public funeral of the eminent Canadian whose loss has been mourned not only by the whole Dominion, but by the empire.

"I remain, yours sincerely,
"(Signed) ABERDEEN.
"To Sir James Grant."

The feeling here over the action taken by his Excellency is such that will tend to make the carnival more successful than it otherwise would be. Sir James Grant in an interview said that the carnival was to go on and would be a success.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell returned to the city yesterday. He is in good health apart from his throat trouble.

Floods in Pennsylvania.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 8.—The Alleghany and Monogahela rivers are rising rapidly. The indications are that much damage to property will be occasioned by the high water and heavy loss. Both rivers are full of huge cakes of ice and running like torrents. A great quantity of wreckage is noticed among the ice, indicating destruction of fences and small buildings. On the B. and C. railroad a huge landslide occurred this morning near Connellsville and through traffic was temporarily suspended.

CLEARFIELD, Pa., Jan. 8.—There is a big flood in the Susequanna river here. The ice, which was one foot thick, broke up and went out without gorging. The river is rising rapidly and great damage is feared.

Died From Fright.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Jan. 8. — Mrs. Bailey Jonston has been literally frightened to death. A "root doctor" visited her and told her that she was filled with lizzards, whereupon she immediately took to her bed and death followed. Before she died her children accused their father of having conjured the old woman. Bailey's son attacked his father and the old man, in defending his own life, slew his son.

Two More Victims of the Delavan Fire.

ALBANY, Jan. 8.—The bodies of two of the victims of the Delavan fire were unearthed in the cellar and were directly under the attic where the 15 servants are supposed to have been trapped. There was nothing found near the bodies to serve as a means of identification. It is supposed that the remains of all the victims will be found near the same place

TUESDAY, JANUARY 8, 1895.

MR. FOSTER SHOULD DO SOMETHING.

Canada in its financial year ending June 30th, 1894

Increased its gross public debt $8,300,000;

Expended $770,973 more than in 1893;

Had a falling off in revenue of $1,798,9[illegible], and Acquired a deficit of $1,210,322.

This is quite a record for Mr. Foster. His patent apparatus for producing surpluses and spreading prosperity like an epidemic among the people, appears to be greatly out of order.

Bad as the figures for 1894 are, it is admitted that 1895 will be much worse Already in the half year that has passed the country has run behind over two million dollars, and it will do no better, if as well, in the next six months. We shall have in Canada for 1895 the biggest deficit in our history, with the possible exception of 1865, when the ordinary expenditure was excessive because of rebellion charges.

Mr. Foster should do something. Surely he is no fly on the wheel. Let him retire into his chamber, and envolve some plan whereby the country can, by legislation, be so lifted out of its present rut that the cry of men for "work or bread" shall no more be heard in the land, the wheels of industry will fill the air with their hum, and the public treasury will overflow with surplus wealth.

Being a Conservative statesman, and therefore superior to providence, he can doubtless do a little thing like this. But he should not delay too long. Believers in him have called unto him, and he has not answered. Perhaps he is talking, or he is pursuing, or he is on a journey, or peradventure he sleepeth and must be awakened. Whatever the cause, he is not acting, to the great amazement of his people. Let him stretch out his hand before it is too late; for there are those among his worshippers, who are beginning to look upon him as the Israelites did upon the useless god of Baal when they slew his priests until not one of them escaped.—Montreal Herald.

HELPING THE FARMERS.

One is not surprised at the fact of the United States Government imposing a duty upon the tea cans in which Welland county farmers take milk to Buffalo, but one would think that the Dominion Government would be above the pettiness of imposing a duty upon the returning empty cans. The Government should give the farmer one little chance for his life, and as a matter of compensation allow him to sell his milk in a first rate market, without destroying all the profit, as well as a profitable industry. The N.P. promised the farmers an all-sufficient home market at high prices for their products, and since it creators have failed to provide that home market, they deliberately add insult to injury. The farmers are in no position to subscribe to campaign funds, and they are foolish, therefore, to expect any consideration in the way of tariff legislation at the hands of the Government. The farmers of Welland County in this milk matter are between the devil and the deep sea — if they should wish to put water enough in their milk to offset the duty on the empty cans, the Buffalo authorities will be down upon them, and if they don't do it the duty takes off all the profit and destroys the business. This is a very lively encouragement of a lacteal, and, ergo, infant industry.

THE Goderich Signal says that the Christian Guardian, up to date, doesn't show any evidence of increased editorial vigour under the new management." It's rather soon to expect much improvement as the new editor has not yet been installed. When the old stalwart, Dr. Dewart, wipes his editorial pen for the last time and places it upon the rack, a change will doubtless ensue, but as to its being an improvement it is very much a matter of opinion.

THE Cobourg World says:—The Canadian contractors should stop their subscriptions to election funds. An American named Onderdonk, from Chicago, has been awarded a contract for building several miles of the Trent Valley Canal — because he offered to do it cheap. We are not allowed to buy good English cloth cheap. Why not put a heavy duty on cheap Yankee contractors? Will he "divy" with the Government?

WONDER if the Dominion Government would tax a philanthropist entering Canada, because he is the vessel holding the milk of human kindness.

THE revised American tariff says that milk can be imported free. The Dominion Government says it can—t.

THE nearest parallel to the fabled dog in the manger is the real customs officer in a Welland county farmer's milk can.

You Get Strong.

If you're a tired out or "run-down" woman, with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. And, if you suffer from any "female complaint" or disorder, you get well. For these two things—to build up women's strength, and to cure women's ailments—this is the only medicine that's guaranteed. If it doesn't cure, in every case, your money is returned. On these terms, what else can be "just as good for" you to buy? The "Prescription" regulates and promotes all the natural functions, never conflicts with them, and is perfectly harmless in any condition of the female system. It improves digestion, enriches the blood, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and vigor. For miscarriages, displacements, bearing-down sensations, periodical pains, and every chronic weakness or irregularity, it's a remedy that safely and permanently cures.

MINERS SEEKING RELIEF.

Nearly Two Thousand Families in Want for Food and Clothing.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 8.—A delegation of miners arrived here last night from Nelsonville for the purpose of making an appeal to the people through the governor for assistance. It being late when they arrived they decided not to try to see the governor till morning. They said that unless aid is furnished at once many of the miners will die of starvation. According to their statement there are 1,800 miners in the immediate vicinity of Nelsonville who with their families make a total of nearly nine thousand persons who have no means of obtaining even the most common necessaries of life and are suffering for want of food and clothing.

In the five counties in that coal section they estimate that there are about fifty thousand persons who are in actual want and must have aid. They say the great national strike of last summer impoverished them and as work has been very slack since then they have not been able to recover.

HAS SIR WILLIAM RESIGNED?

A Report That the Leader of the Imperial Commons Has Left the Ministry.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The Pall Mall Gazette has received a report from Monte Carlo, at which place Arnold Morley, Postmaster-General, and Shaw Lefevry, president of the Local Government Board, are sojourning, that Sir William Harcourt, Chancellor of the Exchequer, has resigned from the Ministry.

The report has it also that a meeting of the Cabinet has been called for Thursday and that a dissolution is imminent.

The report is discredited in all quarters. It seems to have had its origin in the fact that the Ministers are returning to London to resume their councils preparatory to the opening of the next session of Parliament on February 5.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The Pall Mall Gazette's Monte Carlo story intimating that Sir William Harcourt has resigned and that a dissolution is imminent is officially denied here.

ON THE DARK ROAD!

A St. John, N.B., Lady Who was Nearing the Grave.

SHE DECLARES THAT PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND SAVED HER.

The case of Mrs. William Irvine, of St. John, N.B., was a sad one, and caused her family and friends great anxiety for a time. Overwork, watching, loss of sleep and intense agony from kidney trouble made life almost unbearable. Effort after effort with medicines and doctors' prescriptions proved futile. The grave and its terrors were becoming more realistic, and death's hand seemed to be firmly fastened on the victim of disease.

There flashed a bright inspiration—Paine's Celery Compound!—a thought of a medicine that had wrought wonders for others. The marvellous life-giving medicine was used, and the results are briefly set forth in Mrs. Irvine's letter as follows:

"I think it a great pleasure as well as a duty to put on record what Paine's Celery Compound has done for me. I have been troubled for the last ten years with kidney complaint, and have tried a great many preparations and doctors' prescriptions, but with little or no benefit.

For the last six months I have had a great strain upon my system from night-watching and overwork. I was breaking down; my friends said, "I was going fast to death." I resolved to try your Paine's Celery Compound, and used four bottles. My kidney troubles disappeared. Nervousness and sleeplessness are troubles of the past, and my general health is greatly improved. In a word, I am cured, and I wish you to publish this so that the world can read it.

A HOUSEHOLD OF DEATH.

A Heartrending Story of Affliction in a New York Family.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—William R. Robinson, 79, who lived in a cottage on West Clarkson street, Flatbush, lay dead there this morning. In a coffin by his side was the corpse of his daughter Eugenie, aged 35. On Wednesday last another daughter Mary, 25 years old, was buried from the same room. The only surviving member of the family is the widow. She is ill in bed and in a wild delirium caused by the misfortunes that have come so suddenly upon her. The doctors say they do not believe she will leave.

Mary died from pneumonia. She was sick but a few days. Her father died on Saturday morning of heart disease, brought on the doctors say, by the shock attendant on the death of Mary, who was his favorite child.

At the time of his death Eugenie was in bed suffering from pneumonia. When she heard of her father's death she lapsed into unconsciousness. She was dead five hours afterwards. Through all these hardships Mrs. Robinson had borne up bravely. Even after Eugenie died, she held up. Father and daughter had been prepared for burial, and lay side by side in the parlor. The widow went in to look at them. The sight was more than she could stand. She fainted and when the attack passed away she was delirious. She has been in that condition and at the point of death ever since.

The Montreal Charter Bill.

QUEBEC, Jan. 8.—In the Legislative Assembly yesterday the Montreal charter bill was further discussed. The clause referring to the power to impose an additional tax upon telegraph, telephone and electric light poles and also on each mile of wire was passed. "Several years ago, I caught a severe cold, attended with a terrible cough that allowed me no rest, either day or night. A friend, learning of my trouble, sent me a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which I began to take, and very soon I was greatly relieved. SALTED SUICIDES.

A CURIOUS JUDICIAL PROCEEDING IN OLD-TIME FRANCE.

People Who Killed Themselves Were Tried by Jury and Their Corpses Sentenced to Ignominious Treatment by Order of the Court.

The embalming of human bodies is at present done by the undertakers, and there are few physicians, probably, who, if called upon to perform the operation, would be able to do so without consulting their books and reading up on the subject. In olden times the case was different, and in France especially, before the revolution, says a writer in the Revue Scientifique, medical men were frequently called upon to embalm cadavers, although the operation was applied almost wholly to one class of subjects, i. e., to suicides. But why were the cadavers of suicide embalmed, and what was the process used?

"Suicide," says Beccaria, "is an offense which it seems can be submitted to no punishment properly so called, since such punishment could be inflicted only upon an insensible or lifeless body, or upon innocent persons. Now, any punishment that might be meted out to the inanimate remains of the culprit would produce no other impression upon the spectators than that which they would experience in seeing a statue flogged."

And yet, according to the custom of Brittany, which was also general in France, if anyone killed himself intentionally, he was hanged by the feet and then dragged like a murderer and his personal effects sold to whomsoever wished to purchase them. In some cases he was tied face downward to a hurdle, dragged through the streets behind a dung cart driven by the public executioner hanged for three hours by the feet from a gibbet erected in the public place, and then thrown into the sewer. It was also ordered that all remembrance of the deceased should be obliterated and suppressed forever.

But before any such proceeding took place, the cadaver was accorded a fair trial before a judge, whose duty it was to begin by making an official inquiry into the circumstances attending the act of suicide, the place where it occurred, the life and habits of the deceased, etc. This having been submitted to the king's procureur, the nearest of kin and the heirs of the suicide were summoned by trumpet to come forward and provide him with a defender. In case they failed to make their appearance, the judge appointed a counsel for him, whose duty it was to defend his client to the best of his ability by cross-questioning the witnesses for the prosecution and offering all the excuses possible in extenuation of the offense. If the accused was found guilty, he was punished in the manner above described; but if he was adjudged innocent, that is to say, if threat of suicide was decided to have been committed in a moment of insanity, he was buried in consecrated ground.

In either case, however, it was necessary to preserve the cadaver for the entire length of the trial, which sometimes lasted for several months, so that in case the accused was found guilty he might not escape punishment. Hence the necessity of embalming, or "salting," as it was called.

It appears from the old records that the operation and materials used were as follows: The viscera of the cranial, thoracic and abdominal cavities were removed and the spaces stuffed with tow that had been soaked in a solution composed of one ounce of camphor, two ounces of Socotrine aloes and one gallon of alcohol. Deep incisions were then made in different parts of the body and the latter was packed in salt in a wooden box, which, having been covered and nailed, was formally delivered to the jailer for safe keeping.

This method of preserving cadavers seems to have been successful enough in a few instances in which the case against the accused, having been put upon the docket, was not reached for several years, and not disposed of until the offensive state of the remains called attention to the necessity of legal action in regard to them.

Speech of an African Prince.

Prince Ademnyiwa, of Jebu Remo, in West Africa, was lately entertained at lunch by the lord mayor of London at the Mansion house, then taken in a state coach to the Guildhall, where he sat through a session of the common council, and made speech to it in English, which the council directed should be entered on its record. Here is the speech: "The Right Honorable Lord Mayor, My Lord and Honorable Members of the Corporation: I feel I shall not be doing justice to myself and people if I were to leave this court without returning you my hearty and sincere thanks for the honor paid me in allowing me here and to seat next the lord mayor. I have been made, while seating here, to believe the more that knowledge is power; that free liberty of speech is the great boon of the English nation; that the secret of your greatness is the Bible, and that I was not mistaken when I advised my cousin, the king of Jebu Remo, an independent native state, West Africa, to accept a British resident, and place the country under her majesty's protection, and that he will be left to his independence to manage the internal affairs of his kingdom. I again return you my sincere thanks, and wish you God's blessing. Good-by."

They Live at Intervals.

"Remittance men" is the term applied in British Columbia to sons of Englishmen sent there to learn farming. "They go about in knickerbockers, big shoes, cloth caps and eyeglasses, painting things red as long as their remittances last. For two weeks before the next check arrives they keep quiet, because they have no money for making a noise."

The Queen's Bath in Madagascar.

Since the great African island has lately caused a great deal of talk it will not be uninteresting to give some account of the strange ceremony practised at the Malagasy national festival every year, as related by nearly all the travelers who have visited the land of the Hovas. The "Fandroana," or royal bath, was first instituted by King Ratambo, and is held annually, by royal proclamation, from the 22d of November to the 10th of January. During this time no business is allowed to proceed. The people of the kingdom meet the Queen in the Silver Palace on the first day of the festival, and a red cock is then brought by the head priest or sacrificer of the Court. Its neck is wrung, and its blood, being caught in a banana leaf, is carried to the Sovereign, who touches with it her forehead, neck, stomach, armpit, finger nails and toe nails. The rest of the assembly follow the example.

Next the people assemble again for the royal bath in the great palace. This the Queen takes in one of the sacred corners of the hall, in a silver bath, being screened from view by "lambag," held by her attendants.

Amid the firing of cannon and the joyous shouts of her humble subjects, Her Majesty then passes along the balcony, and from a horn in her hand sprinkles the crowd with the water she has just been using for her ablutions, exclaiming at the same time, "Masina, aho!" (I am purified). This sprinkling is said to typify an abundance of rain during the coming year.

To be absent from the ceremony would be to incur the royal displeasure, so that the French Plenipotentiary Minister himself, M. le Myre de Vilers, who is now on his way to Madagascar, had to submit himself, in 1886, to this strange ordeal. Every wife, also, must be with her husband at the time, or it is considered that she is as good as divorced. The new year is then supposed to have begun, and for several weeks there is a great deal of visiting and feasting.—Tit-Bits.

Lady Aberdeen's Bridal Tour.

A picture of Lady Aberdeen in her bridal robes, compared with a sequence of photographic portraits of the Countess from the time she was a tiny Miss Muffett, three years old, hugging a pet dog, up to the time she was a young lady of eighteen, shows the deepening and strengthening of her individuality in a degree that is the delight of those students of character who says that more important than any voluntary expression of personality is the involuntary tale told by a series of pictures.

It is quite in keeping with the fine, large, deep, sympathetic eyes that are the handsomest feature of Lady Aberdeen's face, that she should not lose sight of the cause of humanity with which she is so thoroughly at one, even on her bridal tour, when she found time and room to make a cloak of her great-heartedness for some of the suffering of God's creatures.

The Earl and Countess went to Egypt for their honeymoon; before they returned they had become the guardians of five Egyptian lads, one of whom they found suffering from persecution because of his having accepted Christianity, and the other four were on sale in the market-place and about to be captured by a slave dealer.—Azelin Grant n Jenness Miller Monthly.

The War Scare.

Jimson, meeting Timson the other morning on the 'bus, coming to the city, after passing the usual courtesies, comes out with the following:

"Apropos of the war scare, I have arrived at the conclusion, after grave consideration, that if a colored waiter should drop a platter containing a roast turkey, the act would be productive of a grand combination of evils; namely, the downfall of Turkey, the overthrow of Greece, the breaking-up of China, and the humiliation of Africa!"

WORDS OF WISDOM.

Do Not Use Medicine for the baby; Pure Lactated Food is the Best.

Dear mother, is your child ailing? Is it getting thin and weak, and decreasing in weight? If it is, be assured the trouble is with its present diet—its form of nourishment or food is sadly lacking in bone-forming and flesh-producing elements.

Your child requires not medicine, but a health-giving diet to build it up. Pure Lactated Food does the good work in a way that no other agency can accomplish, and hundreds testify to this effect every month. A father who has seen the happy results given by Lactated Food writes as follows:

"We commenced using Lactated Food for our baby two months ago. He then weighed 12¼ pounds and was four months old, having but very little life or activity. I think we were starving him, as we could not find any food that would agree with him. We had tried fully half a dozen different prepared foods. Our baby was fast losing in flesh and my wife took him to Dr. ——— who prescribed Lactated Food. He gained 12¼ pounds in less than two months and now weighs 21 pounds and is as lively as a cricket. This is certainly the result of using your Lactated Food."

Christmas Carols.

The first Christmas carol, as Milton and Jeremy Taylor have said, was sung by the angels on the plains of Bethlehem. This custom has prevailed in most Christian countries and is perpetuated in England and on the continent. Calabrian minstrels still leave their mountains during the last days preceding Christmas for Naples or Rome, saluting with their wild music the shrines of the Virgin Mother, to cheer her until the birth hour of the infant Jesus, now near at hand. The first Christmas carols were hymns in honor of the nativity. They afterward assumed a more secular character, many of them being songs of revelry accompanying the festivities of the season.

This Could Happen Only in Hamilton.

Two teamsters came into collision in the street with their vehicles.

First teamster—My dear sir, I'm very sorry for this accident. Will you kindly excuse me?

Second teamster—Pray do not mention it, my dear sir. The fault was as much mine as yours.

After getting their wagons clear of each other they bow politely, and with a pleasant "good day" proceed about their business.—Hamilton Spectator.

NEW YEAR NEW GOODS NEW LEAF 1895

On looking over last year's business we find that we have everything to be thankful for, as it was one of the best years that, notwithstanding the hard times, we ever had, and that is saying a great deal.

Now, as this is the season for making good resolutions, we have resolved to surpass, if possible, last year's trade. To attain this end we have duplicated all our fall Cloths and added all the latest winter patterns we could find. We buy for spot cash and can afford to sell on a small margin. Give us a call and we will do the rest.

Our Gent's Furnishings and Underclothing Departments are both well stocked. We have a few choice Overcoats still left which we will let off cheap.

Young Women's Association.

An interesting and encouraging annual meeting of the Board was held yesterday afternoon. Reports were submitted and will be presented at the annual Association meeting next Saturday evening, when it is hoped many who are interested in the work will be present to hear what has been accomplished during the past year.

As this is the week of prayer, Bible class this evening will be omitted.

Purchase of Stock.

Mr. W. J. Hall, the well-known and enterprising purchaser of bankrupt stocks, made another important deal yesterday at the sale of the stock of the estate of Mr. John Cameron, grocer. Mr. Hall had the entire stock, valued at about $5,000, knocked down to him. In the past Mr. Hall's dealing with bankrupt stock has resulted in opportunities to the public to secure good goods at less than regular prices, and the last purchase offers another excellent opportunity.

The Ice Harvest.

Under the management of Mr. A. Mercier, the Point St. Charles Ice Company began operations yesterday morning. The cut of ice is likely to be good; at present it is eighteen inches in thickness. The company has orders from three large American meat concerns for the supply of 600 tons of ice to be be stored chiefly in the C. P. R. ice houses at Havelock for use in the refrigerator cars passing over the O. & Q. division of the C. P. R. The ice as it is cut is loaded on flat cars at the foot of Lake street.

Hood's Calendars.

Beautiful faces are always features of Hood's Sarsaparilla Calendars, and they were never more charming than they are this season. Hood's Sarsaparilla Calendar for 1895 is heart shaped, and is ornamented with representations of "Summer" and "Winter." A sweet little face which peeps out from a dainty cap, with the snow flakes falling all about, represents the season of ice and snow, while the sunshine of summer lights up another face at the left. The design was made by one of the most gifted water colour artists in the country, and the work of the lithographer is seemingly perfect. Hood's Calendar, as usual, presents all the desired information about the lunar changes and other astronomical events. Ask your druggist for a copy, and if his supply is exhausted, send six cents in stamps for one calendar, or 10 cents for two, to C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Councillor Dawson Captures the Turkey.

Mr. Adam Dawson, the civic war horse of No. 3 Ward, has been awarded the monster turkey, offered by Messrs. J. B. Oke & Co., as a prize to the candidate in the municipal elections who should poll the biggest majority over the next lowest competitor. To the victor belongs the—boodle—said Mr. Dawson's friends—and he has many—think that this turkey is the first boodle he has captured since he entered public life. Anyway Mr. Dawson enjoys the benefit of the liberality of Messrs. J.B. Oke & Co., and he has the bird; and while the turkey is all Oke, that is not to say that it is at all tough, though a wag remarks there's no knowing how soon it may be tough if it gets into the company of our civic fathers, which it is very likely to do. It is proposed, now that Mr. Dawson has the turkey, that the other councillors who headed the poll in their respective wards, contribute the remaining materials for an aldermanic blowout—one purchasing from J. B. Oke & Co. the oysters for dressing, another the fruits for desert, and another the etceteras. No more appropriate way could be devised for entertaining the members of the new council and permitting them to become acquainted.

TO THE ELECTORS OF NO. 1 WARD

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN.—Although I was unsuccessful yesterday, I prefer occupying a position of retirement to being elected by a sacrifice of my honest convictions. Death of an Old Citizen.

On Monday one of the oldest residents of Peterborough passed away in the person of Patrick Tanguey, who had reached the ripe old age of 80 years. The deceased was a native of Limerick, Ireland, and came to Canada over fifty years ago. He was well known and respected in the town, where he spent so many years of his life. He leaves behind him four daughters and one son, Patrick, at present residing in Clinton, Iowa. The daughters are Mrs. Bartholomew Sullivan, Ennismore, and Mrs. Thomas Fitzgerald, Mrs. Daniel Fitzgerald and Mrs. W. Merrill, all of town. The funeral takes place on Thursday morning at nine o'clock from the family residence, 108 Victoria Avenue.

The Sewer Award.

The majority of the ratepayers are disappointed that the award in the sewer arbitration will not be made until after the elections. Judge Ketchum, the arbitrator, has notified the council that he will not be able to prepare the report for some time yet, and asking for an extension of the time limit. This, needless to say, has been granted, as one of the reasons given is that the volume of evidence is so great that the reporter has not been able to transcribe it all yet, but the principal reason for asking for this is that he wishes all parties interested to attend the sons of canada carnival on Friday evening next, and secure some of the prizes which are on exhibition in the windows of the Peterborough Hardware Company. 1d

A Treat in Store for Everybody.

Mr. F. E. Ramsay, who is making a tour of Canada this season with a new entertainment entitled, "A Trip Around the World," will appear in Bradburn's opera house, Wednesday evening, Jan. 9th. Mr. Ramsay will also introduce several of the latest London songs and sketches heard while in Europe, while Mrs. Ramsay will play the national airs of the different countries as they pass through. Mr. Ramsay's coming will be looked forward to with interest. Prices 25, 35 and 50c. School children will be admitted for 10 and 20c. Seats on sale at Street Railway Office. 1d

OMEMEE.

The election of municipal officers for the village created unusual excitement, and as a result every available vote in the corporation was polled. It, however, passed off quietly and, notwithstanding that each candidate and his friends worked from start to finish, when the result was known congratulations all round were the order, and this ended the contest. Dr. V. C. Cornwall, who has been reeve for eight years was defeated by T. A. McPherson, merchant, by 11 votes. The vote for reeve was: Cornwall, 77; McPherson, 88; majority for McPherson, 11. The village councillors are: R. K. Goodfellow, Ed. Adams, Jos. Naylor and Geo. H. English.

OBITUARY.

The Late R. H. Stevens, of British Columbia.

The sad intelligence was received to-day of the death of Mr. R. H. Stevens, a former well-known resident of Peterborough, which occurred in Vernon, British Columbia, on Sunday, Dec. 30th. Mr. Stevens had only been sick for a short time, and his death was very unexpected. Deceased left Peterborough in March, '93, and for a year resided in Manitoba. In April last he removed to British Columbia, and in company with his sons William and Harry engaged in farming operations. He was favorably impressed with the country, and purposed residing there permanently. A severe cold developed into more serious complications, and on Sunday, Dec. 30th, he passed away in the 56th year of his age. Mr. Stevens was well known in Peterborough and was highly respected. He was a consistent member of the Methodist church and the summons found him ready. The message which was received here speaks of his death as a "glorious translation." The sympathy of the community will be cheerfully given the members of the sorrowing family, two of whom Miss Bessie and Louie Stevens, are amongst the most respected members of George street Methodist church.

DENUNCIATION OF FLIRTING.

A Male Flirt is an Ulcer on the Face of Society.

On Sunday evening a congregation of unusually large proportions assembled in the Charlotte street Methodist church to hear Rev. J. J. Rae deliver a sermon on "It is not well for man to live alone." He took his text from Genesis 2, 18: "And the Lord said it is not good for man to be alone." He introduced his subject by stating that man was created in the image of God, but that before he could fully come up to the standard of the True Image, he must first take the Bible as his Guide and the experiences of those contained in the book and be divinely filled with the Holy Ghost. Man could not get along without a helpmate and to such an end God created woman.

Women, he said, had a great many qualities and experiences which men could not have and also that woman was

THE BUILDER OF MAN.

As an illustration of the benefit of being married he instanced the fact that the majority of criminals in gaols are unmarried.

Old maids and old bachelors, he pointed out, had to stand the brunt of no immoderate amount of ridicule, but there were old maids and old bachelors who did more for the good of mankind in general than many of the married people. They generally set as their standard some good work, generally in the line of missions or charity, and in this way often benefitted mankind to a very great extent.

He believed that the Divine intention was that the soul of man should blend with the kindred soul of woman, and so fulfil the words of the text. It was not always the woman that had good looks, fair features, etc., that was best suited for a man's partner, but traits of nobility in character, geniality of disposition and Christian forbearance, should be more sought after, and would be more capable, therefore of fulfilling

THE DIVINE INTENTIONS.

There were some men, he knew, who gave as an excuse for not being married, that they were only able to support and keep themselves, but he believed such men to be too stingy, worthless and shiftless to be willing to divide their spoils on earth with a partner. Some preferred a single life on the ground of poverty, but taking the lives of some of the greatest men it would be seen that they started in poverty, married in poverty and yet attained positions amongst the most eminent.

Marriage had a tendency to make men live more pious and honorable lives before God and man. Woman had the forbearance and thought to keep man in all worldly and spiritual things and thus to help him to attain his purpose in life. Married life demanded supreme affection in all its branches. In order to make both man and woman enjoy the happiness of life it was most necessary that they should unite.

The pastor then turned his attention to the

PASTIME OF "FLIRTING"

Male flirts were caustically dealt with, being apostrophized as ulcers on the face of society. They were admitted into all classes of society, were well treated everywhere, had opportunities of meeting with the most refined and beautiful of the fair sex, but that there was never in any instance one jot of purity or true manhood about them. The young ladies who indulged in flirting he thought should be classed as mere butterflies. He cautioned young men from marrying any such, as such a marriage would inevitably be attended with most dire results. He believed that a true marriage was made by God, and carried his confidence in the opinion that there could never be a reformation in character accomplished after marriage. There was no similitude between flirtation and true affection. The two influences were as far asunder as the poles.

In concluding Mr. Rae urged the young men and women to be most cautious in selecting their companions, as upon this inevitably depended the future happiness of their lives. Mr. Rae will continue the sermon next Sunday evening.

INSTALLATION OF OFFICERS.

Those who will Sit in the Principal Chairs of Lansdowne Lodge.

The officers of Lansdowne Lodge, Sons of England, were installed last night by F. L. Somerville, D. D. The attendance was large, and the meeting throughout was very interesting. A number of brethren from Exeter Lodge, Lakefield, were present to witness the installation ceremonies. Before the installation took place, two candidates were initiated into the secrets of the order.

The following officials were installed:—

Geo Carpenter	W. P. President
David Curtis	W. President
Bert Roberts	W. V. President
E A Peck	W. F. S
W J Squires	W. R. S
F J R Mitchell	W. T
Dr Pigeon	Surgeon
Rev H Symonds	W. Chaplain
Bro Wyatt	Inner Guard
D Coveny	Outer Guard

After the ceremonies were concluded those present adjourned to the dining room, and in true English style did justice to a repast prepared by Bro. Wm. Taylor and his staff of caterers, and "Daddy" can shine along this line as well as in his many other accomplishments. After the refreshment intermission was over the members returned to the lodge room, and a pleasant hour was spent in speechmaking and in singing. Bro. F. L. Somerville, D.D., presided over this portion of the programme. He congratulated the lodge on the general display of fraternity that existed, and also congratulated them on their advancement during the past year.

The past year has been a very successful one for this lodge. They succeeded in placing a large amount to their credit in the bank, and have also added a large number to their membership. Lansdowne Lodge is one of the largest lodges in the society, being about fourth as regards membership, they having a membership of close on three hundred.

This lodge proposes organizing a band, and in the very near future they will have a musical organization that will not only do justice to the lodge, but will be a credit to the town.

A number of members propose going to Lakefield to-night to assist in the installation ceremony at Exeter Lodge.

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action; but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs, will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

A brief resume of the result of the elections in town may be of interest to the public. Yesterday a little more interest was taken in the contest than was thought of a day or two previous to polling. In the morning it was apparent that there was an effort to elect candidates committed to certain definite courses of policy, such as the repeal of the license reduction bylaw, and some other more or less definitely defined objects, which time will show whether or not they receive the attention and treatment expected. On the whole there has been a considerable change in the complexion of the council. There are seven new members. In Ward No. 1, a new councillor has been elected in place of Mr. White, who has been a faithful councillor. He has been replaced by Mr. Sproule, who made a good run last year, and a better one this. Mr. Sproule has had experience as a member of the School Board, and should make a good councillor. It was at one time thought in some quarters that Mr. Cahill would have a close run, but, on the contrary, he headed the poll, an example of the uncertainty of the popular mind, for he was almost defeated last year. Mr. White is another example; while last year he made a good run, this year he is defeated. Mr. Best always makes a good run, and is regarded as an honest councillor, though, perhaps, looked upon as having too rather high an opinion of his own opinions. The public like to see a public man amenable to reasonable influences that the electors bring to bear.

In No. 2 Ward, Messrs. E. H. D. Hall and T. Kelly were not candidates. Mr. Hughes, who was a member of last year's council, was defeated, and there are three new men—Messrs. Denne, Mills and Phelan—with their mark to make and we shall be able to form a better estimation of their capabilities at the end of the year. Mr. Hughes was doubtless honest in his views and intentions, but he evidently failed to command the sympathy of the ward.

In No. 3 Ward Mr. Roger and Mr. Sutton, members of last year's council were, with Messrs. Hughes and White, sacrificed to their opinions and course on the temperance question. Mr. Roger was a good councillor, though his own ward evidently felt that he was too extreme upon one question. A large number stayed with him in the reduction of licenses, and until he brought in his proposal to place a "secret service" fund at the disposal of the Chief of Police. There seemed to be an opinion that it was not wise to adopt this course. But for this Mr. Roger would perhaps have been re-elected, and it is to be regretted that his services were not retained, for he was in other respects a good man, especially as chairman of the Court of Revision, in which he was effective in securing equitable adjustments. Mr. Sutton was straightforward and honest, voting for what he believed to be right, regardless of personal consequences. He prefers being defeated on his merits than to being elected by any sacrifice of his convictions. Mr. Dawson is the old member of the ward and seems to have a grip like a senator upon the position. Messrs. Clinkscale and John Sawers are new men, with a record to make.

In No. 4 Ward Messrs. Brady and Mason are the old members returned. Mr. Mason is the only member of the old council, actively identified with the license reduction bylaw, that was returned. Mr. Brady headed the poll, and in his first year in the council he showed a disposition to treat questions fairly and honestly and practically. Mr. Stone is the new man in this ward, and is in one respect an important member, being the only lawyer on the board. He has abundant energy and capacity and should give good service to the electors.

In Ashburnham the only change in the personnel of the council is the substitution of Mr. Craig—a change which, it is understood, strengthens the anti-union sentiment in the council.

ST. JOHN'S YOUNG PEOPLE'S ASSOCIATION.

Election of Officers and General Business—Church Decorations.

A large attendance of members was present last evening at the first regular meeting since the holidays of St. John's Young People's Association. Mr. Harry Long, the people's church warden, was present and in the name of the wardens and congregation thanked the Association most cordially for the work it had undertaken in providing the means and labour for the Christmas decoration of the church. The edifice, he stated, had never looked prettier, He wished the society every success along the lines upon which it was working.

Miss Ciara Hodgson in a few words thanked Mr. Long on behalf of the society for his kind wishes.

The election of officers then took place and resulted as follows:

President.—Miss Annie Sproule.
Vice-President—Mr. Thos. Baker.
Secretary—Mr. Walter English.
Treasurer—Miss Perry.
Programme Committee.—Miss Ciara Clark, Mr. Hilliard, Miss Vink, Mr. Roadhouse, Mr. Harold Clinton, Miss Jenkins.
Lookout Committee—Mrs. Rubidge, Miss Burley, Mr. Callender, Miss Comstock, Miss Fawcett.
Fatigue Committee—Mr. Roadhouse and Mr. Callender.

A most interesting programme was rendered in which Miss Jenkins, Miss Burley, Mr. Callender and Mr. Roadhouse participated.

JAPAN'S BUSY RULER.

NOT A MERE FIGUREHEAD EMPEROR AS IS SUPPOSED.

Personally Directs the Present War and Is Imbued With Western Ideas of Progress —His Wives and Palaces—Fondness for Duck Hunting.

There is no ruler in the world so interesting to-day as the Emperor of Japan. He has moved from his capital, Tokyo, 400 miles westward, to his naval station at Hiroshima, and he has practically taken control of his army. He has his parliament and his cabinet with him and he is directing the naval and military forces by telegraph. There is no monarch in the world who is less understood and of whom the world knows so little. You hear little said about him in Japan, and the information which I got had to be worked for and it only came in response to many questions. Among others whom I interviewed on the subject was his majesty's grand master of ceremonies, Mr. Sannomiya. He told me that the emperor was the hardest worked man in Japan, and that he had directions to bring all telegrams that came concerning the rebellion in Corea directly to him, no matter what hour of the night they came. He said his whole day was devoted to work, and that he had his fingers on nearly every branch of the government. I heard the same from other Japanese statesmen, and the change in Japan is no more wonderful than the change which has taken place in the character of the emperor.

The present Emperor of Japan was kept in a sort of a glass cage, figuratively speaking, during the first third of his life. He was 43 years old last November, and was put on the throne at the age of 15. This was when the Shogun was still commander-in-chief of the army, and was practically the ruler of Japan.

His palaces are now a combination of Europe and Japan. They cost $3,000,000, and the walls of many of the rooms are sliding ones, made of immense plate glass doors in lacquered frames. They are so arranged that a great number of rooms can be thrown into one, and many of the parlors are large. Some are ceiled with the most magnificent embroideries, and there is one room which has a ceiling of gold-thread tapestry, the cloth covering of which cost $10,000. Many of the floors are inlaid, and they are all covered with the finest and softest of white mats, on the top of some of which are magnificent rugs. I don't know how many rooms there are in the palace buildings, but they run well up into the hundreds. There is one dining-room that will seat one hundred people. There are ballrooms and drawing-rooms, libraries and studios, and there are bedrooms finished in both foreign and Japanese style. The banqueting hall takes 540 square yards of matting to cover it. Its ceiling glows with gold and its walls are hung with the costliest silk. There are six imperial studios in the palace, and the throne chamber has a ceiling paneled with the Japanese crests. It is here that the emperor receives the foreign ministers, and he talks to them through interpreters. They bow three times when they come in, and also bow three times when they back out, and the receptions as a rule are very stiff on the part of both the mikado and the foreigners.

The Emperor of Japan, according to the people most closely connected with him at Tokyo, has by no means an easy office to fill. Japan now contains more than 40,000,000 people, and there are a baker's dozen of political factions, many of which are anxious to create trouble. The changing condition of the people makes plenty of work. You can never tell who is going to fly off on a tangent, and the newspapers have to be carefully watched. The emperor keeps his eyes on everything. At least I was told so. He rises early, and breakfasts about 7 o'clock. He uses a knife and fork whenever he takes foreign food, but he prefers the chopsticks at his Japanese dinners. He eats both kinds of food, and in very small dishes, taking it with every meal. He likes sweets, and is by no means averse to liquors. He usually eats his breakfast alone and also his lunch. His dinner is served in table d'hote style and with all the European accompaniments. Contrary to the regular practice in Japanese families, his wife often sits down at the table with him, and also the crown prince. The latter begins as soon as his breakfast is over. From 9 o'clock until 12 he receives his ministers and discusses matters of state. After this he takes his lunch and then spends a little time in reading newspapers. He watches closely the Japanese press, keeps track of current public opinion and, I venture, changes his actions somewhat to suit it. All the papers are looked over for him and the passages which he should see are marked. Ordinary misstatements or criticisms he passes over, but if a newspaper becomes at all dangerous he gives an order to his censors and the newspaper is stopped, while its editors are liable to be thrown into prison. He has also the leading foreign papers, and the articles of these which treat of Japan are translated for him, and he keeps track of public opinion all over the world. He takes our illustrated papers, and the articles relating to the pictures in them are sometimes translated. He does a great deal of work in the afternoon, but toward evening goes out for exercise. He is a good horseback rider and is fond of fine horses. He has about 300 in his stables, and these are of all kinds, including a number of fine hunters. The emperor is fond of hunting, and he has large game preserves where there are deer and wild pigs. There are plenty of pheasants, and his majesty is said to be a very good shot.

"There is one kind of game," said the man connected with the government, who gave me the above information, "which the emperor is especially fond of, and that is duck-netting. There are lots of wild ducks about Tokyo, and the emperor has great duck-ponds and duck ditches in his palace grounds into which the ducks come and are caught by means of decoys. The ponds cover acres, and they have embankments about them which are cut up by by little canals running out from the pond. These canals are so lined with trees and embankments that a man can easily hide along them. The pond is studded with decoys and grain is scattered about in the canals as bait. The ducks light and go up into the canals, where the emperor and the nobles are concealed, each with a net in his hand. They throw these over the ducks and they catch them in large numbers. It requires great skill to throw the net properly, but the emperor has caught scores of ducks in a single day.

The Mikado is by no means a poor man. He receives about $2,500,000 every year to keep up his palace and his household establishment, and he has a large private fortune. Mr. Sannomiya, his grand master of ceremonies, told me that he knew all about his investments, and that he was a good business man. He has a great deal of money in public land. He is not extravagant in his living, and the customs of Japan are such that he does not have to entertain as extensively as the monarchs of Europe. He has magnificent turnouts, and rides about in great state. He opens parliament in person, and at the back of the senate chamber, behind the president's chair, there is a little alcove where he sits, and whence his address is read to the members. He has the appointment of a large number of the members of parliament, and the constitution is so adroitly worded that he is still the almost absolute ruler of Japan.

The Emperor of Japan is entitled to be considered the most aristocratic ruler on earth. The royal family of Japan has a genealogical tree which reaches to heaven, and their traditions state that the emperor comes from the gods. There have been 139 emperors of Japan and they all belong to this family. The first one governed Japan just about 2,500 years ago. He was on the throne long before Julius Cæsar aspired to be the Emperor of Rome, and 900 years before Alexander the Great thought he had conquered the world. The Japanese have the history of all their emperors from that time down to this, and they will assure you that the mikado is a lineal descendant of the first emperor, whose name was Jimmu Tenno.

SCRAPS OF SCIENCE.

Iron rusts more rapidly in wet than in dry weather because it has, or seems to have, a better affinity for oxygen when the latter is combined with hydrogen.

Prof. Bonney says that a fall of fifteen to twenty degrees Fahrenheit in the average temperature would be sufficient to account for all known glaciation in the northern hemisphere.

The temperature of the earth advances one degree for every fifty-one feet of descent. It is supposed that at a distance of thirty miles below the surface metals and rocks are at white heat.

It is interesting to note that while the death rate among children has been perceptibly lessened, that among adults has increased. Nineteen-century progress and research protects the life at one end, only to overtax and snap it off suddenly at the other.

It is not generally known that when a person falls into the water a common felt hat can be made use of as a life preserver. By placing the hat upon the water, rim down, with the arm around it, pressing it slightly to the breast, it will bear a man up for hours.

Desiccated milk began to attract attention more than half a century ago. It was then called lactoline, and, according to accounts of the period, an addition of nine parts of water would reduce it to fresh milk. The modern condensed milk is an improvement upon this earlier product.

Serum for the treatment of diphtheria has been obtained so far in France from old hack horses. The French government now proposes to give the Pasteur institute the first choice in the selection of horses condemned as no longer fit for the French cavalry service, the price to be paid being the average price of the other animals sold.

No More Misery.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affection, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst on getting warm in bed. It is terrible in the extreme; this frequently is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer cannot refrain during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—blood and pus form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and anguish. Them and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation of any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

MUSIC AS A MEDICINE.

Influence in Alleviating Pain and Producing Sleep—A Clergyman's Experience.

Not till the last two or three years has an attempt been made to bring music within the range of practical therapeutics, and to test its effects by systematic clinical investigation, says Chamber's Journal. This fact has been taken in hand by the Guild of St. Cecilia, under the energetic and discriminating direction of Canon Hartford of Westminster. Already the society has made a considerable number of trials and Canon Hartford has recorded their results in the medical journals. As a type of these results we may quote Canon Hartford's account of a visit to the London temperance hospital and the St. Pancras infirmary: "The choir of the guild—comprising three vocalists, soprano, contralto and baritone, and three instrumentalists, first and second violins and harp—visited the hospital above mentioned. Several of the patients appeared to be suffering much, notably one whose leg had been crushed in the railway, another afflicted with dropsy, and who were shedding tears with great nervous depression. The music lasted half an hour, and when it was over enquiry was made of the patients. One and all said it had soothed them, the patient who suffered from dropsy remarking that the pain had kept off while the music was being played, and returned when it ceased."

At the St. Pancras infirmary there was a patient suffering from melancholia, to whom they played a lullaby. After the performance she told a nurse that she liked it very much. "On this the superintendent came to me and said: 'This is the first time she has spoken in a fortnight.' Shortly afterward a male patient suffering from delirium tremens was brought into the ward. On hearing the first notes of the music he became quite calm and attentive though his attendant had been half afraid to bring him on account of outbreaks of violence." The following day Canon Hartford returned to the hospital and found the three worst cases very much brighter, and they spoke with gratitude and very warmly of the benefit derived from soft music.

Canon Hartford draws a distinction between the class of music which should be given to alleviate pain and to produce sleep. In the latter case the music should be, of course, very soft and monotonous. There should be a constant repetition of similar phrases, and no striking or unexpected effects should be allowed. To distract the mind from pain—mental or physical—the music should be of a more attractive order, but still soft. Whether in all cases soft music is better as a medicine than lively and exhilarting airs has not yet been clearly determined. Probably it varies with each particular case, but at any rate, with soft music one does not run the risk of injuriously exciting the patient, which might possibly be done by music of a lively character. The softness must be extreme. Canon Hartford remarks on the difficulty of getting singers who can sing very piano, and proposes to have them trained with this particular object in view.

NATURAL HISTORY TALKS.

A Queer Little Animal With Very Queer Little Eyes.

There is a queer little animal called the chameleon who has so many odd things about him that it would take a long story to tell them all. First there are his eyes. They are very large and round and stick out like big beads from the side of his head. And he has the ability to turn them in all sorts of different ways, so as to see all about him. He can turn one up and the other down, or one forward and the other back, and so see the smallest insect in any direction. It cannot escape those wonderful eyes when the chameleon is looking about for a dinner.

The skin of the chameleon is loose and he can swell it out into queer shapes, and he has some peculiar property of this skin whereby he can change it from one color to another, generally becoming the color of the tree or ground upon which he is walking. Then his feet are of such peculiar shape that he can easily hold on to the branches of the trees upon which he is walking. And in this business of climbing and walking trees he is much assisted by his tail, which is long and prehensile like a monkey's, enabling him to hold on while climbing from branch to branch.

The chameleon has also a queer tongue. It is nearly as long as his body, thin and sticky. Whenever he perceives a good fly or bug he darts out this long, funny tongue and captures his dinner without turning from the spot where he stands.

This strange little animal lives in Africa. For many years little was known about him, but on account of his odd traits and queer habits very curious stories were told about him in the olden times. And the little fellow himself was regarded with an absurd awe, just because nobody understood him.

Christmas in Paris.

In many of the churches quaint and artless carols, with no less artless accompaniments coming from another age less fickle than our own, are brought into the service of the midnight mass. After the mass is over the reveillon is still held, even by those who no longer go to mass. This reveillon—the good old custom of the after midnight supper following the midnight mass at Christmat eve—dies out with difficulty from any Frenchman's imagination. Its material signs are blood sausage, truffled turkey and pate de foie gras. Its moral sign is a temporary thawing of the ice of religious neglect, even when the fete is held by wild young men in restaurants. In the early Christmas morning when the dawn is not yet creeping up you will be roused, and roused again by the rattle of carriage wheels and snatches of Christmas song at the hour when Paris is usually the quietest. No matter who the singer is, the song of Christmas day is there.

How to Cure a Corn.

It is one of the easiest things in the world to cure a corn. Do not use acids or other caustic preparations, and don't cut a hole in your boot. It is simply to apply Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor, and in three days the corn can be removed without pain. Sure, safe, painless. Take only Putnam's Corn Extractor.

FULL OF ENCOURAGEMENT
FOR ALL WOMEN.

In Bed 5 Months—Had Given Up All Hope of Getting Well—A Remedy Found at Last to which "I Owe My Life."

Science has fully established the fact that all the nervous energy of our bodies is generated by nerve centres located near the base of the brain. When the supply of nerve force has been diminished either by excessive physical or mental labours, or owing to a derangement of the nerve centres, we are first conscious of a languor or tired and worn-out feeling, then of a mild form of nervousness, headache, or stomach trouble, which is perhaps succeeded by nervous prostration, chronic indigestion, and dyspepsia, and a general sinking of the whole system. In this day of hurry, fret and worry, there are very few who enjoy perfect health; nearly everyone has some trouble, an ache, or pain, a weakness, a nerve trouble, something wrong with the stomach and bowels, poor blood, heart disease, or sick headache; all of which are brought on by a lack of nervous energy to enable the different organs of the body to perform their respective work.

South American Nervine Tonic, the marvellous nerve food and health giver, is a satisfying success, a wondrous boon to tired, sick, and overworked men and women, who have suffered years of discouragement and tried all manner of remedies without benefit. It is a modern, a scientific remedy, and in its wake follows abounding health.

It is unlike all other remedies in that it is not designed to act on the different organs affected, but by its direct action on the nerve centres, which are nature's little batteries, it causes an increased supply of nervous energy to be generated, which in its turn thoroughly oils, as it were, the machinery of the body, thereby enabling it to perform perfectly its different functions, and without the slightest friction.

If you have been reading of the remarkable cures wrought by South American Nervine, accounts of which we publish from week to week, and are still sceptical, we ask you to investigate them by correspondence, and become convinced that they are true to the letter. Such a course may save you months, perhaps years, of suffering and anxiety.

The words that follow are strong, but they emanate from the heart, and speak the sentiments of thousands of women in the United States and Canada who know, through experience, of the healing virtues of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, a prominent and much respected lady, writes as follows:—

"I owe my life to the great South American Nervine Tonic. I have been in bed for five months with a scrofulous tumour in my right side, and suffered with indigestion and nervous prostration. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I cannot recommend it too highly."

Tired women, can you do better than become acquainted with this truly great remedy?

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(In addition was poor Pa's disease),
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Uncles spoke so kind and fair.
Each Uncle said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want;
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Pape,
To push us forward when of age.
They then went home, but stop, I miss,
They gave us every one, a kiss,
An' said, "be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home,
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

A MEXICAN FETE.

CELEBRATING THE FEAST OF SAN LORENZO IN NEW MEXICO.

A Weird Performance in Which Grotesque Dancers Pay Tribute to the Saint—Ludicrous Features of the Ceremony.

Shortly after sundown the fete of San Lorenzo was inaugurated. It was an opening performance, as weird as a witches' dance, with a fiend from the Inferno fiddling out the accompaniment, says a Bernalillo dispatch to the New York Advertiser. Fagot fires were lighted in every square of the narrow, dusty streets, and soon the town was all ablaze with the yellow glare that cast fantastic shadows upon the walls of the little cubes of mud, the abode houses of a sun-kissed clime. A shot was fired, and there emerged from one of the low buildings a string of as peculiarly-garbed men as one might see in a year's travel through foreign countries. They came tripping out in single file, about twenty in number, swaying their lissome bodies in rhythm with a two-string fiddle and a guitar that was sadly out of tune, the while executing a dance that was never seen upon any stage. The costume was really a wonderful affair, the headdress being markedly striking in design and finish. In shape something like the French chapeau, it served the double purpose of a mask and headgear, extending to the mouth and enveloping the greater part of the head. It was gayly tinseled and tasseled and fairly shone with beads and all the ornamentation which the Mexican fancy can suggest. The lower part of the face was concealed by a silk handkerchief of brilliant color, leaving a small aperture for breathing purposes. Down the back floated vari-colored streamers, and capes of rich material drooped gracefully from the shoulders. In one hand they carried scroll work that looked like the substantial side of a paper rack, and with the other they rattled their prettily decorated castanets in tune with the monotonous movements of the dance. Some of the dancers were distinguished in an original and startling way, which, to the American onlooker, lent ridicule to the whole insane proceeding. Over their velvet trousers were drawn abbreviated balloon pantalettes of the style so affected by the comic paper cartoonists in their sketches of the aunties of colored society.

Around the flaming fagot fires they formed and amid a silence as profound as a graveyard at night they circled these tributes to the saint, never changing the step, but varying the movements of the body at command of the leader. Sometimes they would bow and scrape to the flames, and then fall to the earth and squirm and wriggle like so many horrid snakes. It was a weird scene. The glow from the fires dreadfully accentuated the painted faces of the Indians, who stood stoically silent, with no manifestation of approval or displeasure. They formed a lurid background to a decidedly dramatic ceremony. The senors themselves, mantled in their scrapes, were an interesting part of the stage group, and the gaunt and sallow faces of the senoras seemed to reflect the spirit of superstition that swayed the scene. The dancers never appeared to grow tired. It was "Oh, on with the dance" all the time, until a diversion was created by the sudden appearance of an evil spirit in the makeup of a bull. This fellow wore horns, and the greater part of his body was incased in the hide of the animal that shows so much antipathy to red.

National Disinfection.

A practical unanimity of opinion may be said to prevail at present among physicians and chemists that the following methods of disinfection have proved the most effective and trustworthy: All fabrics which will not be injured in the process are to be boiled in water for at least four hours, and fabrics which will not stand this treatment require to be subjected to the action of dry heat for a much longer time. Furniture, etc., may be treated with a four-tenths per cent. solution of carbolic acid. All articles which have been in actual use by a patient are to be burned, the walls of the room must be thoroughly rubbed down with bread, which is afterward to be burned, and the sputa and excrements of the patient treated at once with chloride of lime. German authorities advocate the employment of steam and heat, maintaining that these are cheap and efficient agents, being also highly penetrable and at the same time are dangerous to but few household articles. Of the three chemical agents destructive of disease germs viz.: carbolic acid, corrosive sublimate and chloride of lime, the last is the least expensive and dangerous.

Criticism.

Professional art critics are by no means the only people whose opinions of pictures are worth hearing, as many an artist has found out. Michael Herlihy had his little shop insured in a popular company and the agent presented him with a highly colored lithograph representing the burning of a block of buildings.

Mr. Herlihy surveyed the picture for some moments, muttering to himself the while. At last he turned a dissatisfied face upon the agent.

"It's mighty purty," he said, "but it's mesilf doesn't call it complate, sorr, not by anny manes."

"Indeed," said the agent. "What is wanting, Mr. Herlihy?"

"There's the buildins, all roight," said Michael, "an' there's the foire ingines, an' the ladders, an' the horses, an' the shmoke an' cinders. There's the payple runnin' an' the foiremen climbin' oop and doon. But," said Mr. Herlihy, turning his back on the painted conflagration and confronting the insurance agent with an expression of strong discontent, "who iver in the wcide wurrld saw a blither av that koind goin' on, an' not a bit av dog anywhere to be sane on the sthrate, sorr? Who's the man 't painted that picther. Oi'd like t' be tould?" concluded Mr. Herlihy waxing scornful. "He's got a few things to l'arn before iver he'll be an artisht, Oi'm thinkin'!"—Youth's Companion.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

Toronto's Mayor's Big Tumble—The Mayors in Other Towns.

TORONTO, Jan. 8.—The contest for the mayorality in the city was an exceedingly close one. The interest taken in the election was not so great as last year, but the supporters of Mr. R. J. Football As a Rough Spot.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—The Evening Sun prints the following editorial: "Some time ago the ruffianly methods of one man, Hinckey of Yale, raised such a commotion, that the very existence of football as a game seemed to be threatened. Some statistics, compiled by the Young Men's Christian Association athletic authorities are of a reassuring nature. The figures were obtained from persons in a posittion to know and whose truthfulness could be relied upon. It seems that out of a total of 1,119 players, 65 were disabled for a week or longer, 10 were temporarily disabled and only one injured permanently. This goes to show that taken all round football is not more dangerous than other games, or as dangerous as many. But the fact remains that an eye ought to be kept on any man like Hinckey, who, of malice aforethought, makes himself conspicuous by brutality upon the gridiron. Of itself football is all right.

Decision in Debs' Case.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—Judge Grosscup announced yesterday that he would render his decision in the proceedings to quash the indictments for conspiracy against Eugene V. Debs and others to-day. He indicated by his words that he would deny the motion to quash and told counsel to be ready to go to trial. Debs and the other officers and directors of the A. R. U., with the exception of McVean, will go to jail and a writ of habeas corpus will be applied for before Judge Woods. If he denies the writ the case will be at once taken to the Supreme Court. In the latter case the conspiracy trial is certain to be postponed.

Three Sailors Drowned.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 8.—Three of the crew of the wrecker Samson lost their lives when the schooner was driven against the rocks at Point Bonita lighthouse. They were Divers Baker and Dolan and Wheelman Johnson. When the schooner went ashore Baker and Dolan got into the small boat, and while waiting for the others the boat was swept away by the sea. Johnson with three others clung to the rigging, but became exhausted and was washed off into the sea. The other three swam ashore when the tide went down.

A LIQUOR CASE IN THE POLICE COURT.

A Witness Placed Under Arrest for Perjuring Himself in Court.

A large number of witnesses were subpoenaed to attend the police court this morning in the case preferred against a down town hotel keeper of selling without a license.

A number of young men acknowledged being in the hotel on Sunday, Dec. 23rd, but denied taking any intoxicating liquors.

One witness, however, in his testimony stated that he had taken several drinks of liquor on that day, in the hotel, and implicated a boarder at the hotel as one who had served up the drinks and also named others who had partaken of drinks with him. Those thus implicated denied this fact. On being cross-questioned by Mr. E. B. Stone, counsel for the defense, the witness was only able to swear that he himself drank beer. What the others called for he couldn't say. He had paid for the drinks to the same boarder who served the liquor.

The statements of this witness were borne out in part by the following witness, who was also present in the hotel on the day in question and had several glasses of ale, and had paid for them. He was not sure who the others were who had also called for drinks. The liquor had been sold to him by the boarder mentioned by the previous witness who had also taken the money. He identified him.

At this juncture County Crown Attorney Wood applied for a warrant on a charge of perjury for the boarder in question, and he was immediately placed under arrest.

Other witnesses followed who had bought drinks, but of what these drinks consisted they could not swear.

By a local dealer, Town Solicitor Edwards proved that on an average four gallons of spirits a week were sent to the hotel in question, but never consigned to the proprietor, being always ordered in the name of some other person.

Mr. Timothy Cavanagh, who was the hotelkeeper in question, was found guilty and the order of the court was that he be confined in the county gaol for four months with hard labour, it being his second offence.

BARNARDO HOMES.

The December issue of Night and Day is one of exceptional interest, and its widely-varied contents well illustrate the numerous lines of effort which "Dr. Barnardo's Homes" now take up. In the opening article Dr. Barnardo runs a friendly tilt with Lord Meath, the Bishop of Wakefield and others, who have recently advocated the establishment of a Special Home for Feeble-minded Boys. Dr. Barnardo's experience, on the contrary, leads him to urge strongly the claims of boarding out as the best method of dealing with the feeble-minded. Another branch of social economics is dealt with in an article entitled "Facts versus Theory," which defends the operation of free shelters, carried on under a careful system, against certain criticisms of the "C. O. S." As Dr. Barnardo has given through his Free Shelters over 110,000 night's lodging and 160,000 free meals, he speaks not as one without authority. We notice an announcemene of a Children's Entertainment in connection with the "Young Helpers' League" for 12th of January, in the Royal Albert Hall. An interesting article analyses the emigration work of the year. 724 trained children have been sent to Canada, bringing the total number of emigrants from the Homes up to 7,295, of whom it is claimed that over 98 per cent. have been successful. "Personal Notes" are illustrated, as usual, from photographs, and furnish a mine of interesting matter to all who watch the development of social efforts for the uprasing of the sunken. We notice that the needs of the homes are this Christmas more than usually urgent, and contributions sent in to 18, Stepney Causeway, London, E., will be equally opportune and helpful. Nearly 5,000 boys and girls are under the care of the Homes, and eight new candidates are admitted daily.

The case is still on at the hour of going to press.

DOURO.

Resolution of Condolence Passed by Nassau, L.O.L.

The following resolution of condolence was passed at the last regular meeting of Nassau L.O.L.:—

To the relatives and friends of our late brother, Daniel Anderson, Douro.

We, the members of L.O.L. No. 457, Nassau, desire to place on record our heartfelt sympathy with the relatives and friends of our late brother in the loss they have sustained through his death. While the unseen hand of Divine Providence passes through our community taking from our midst loved ones here and there and the stroke seems hard to bear, yet He who knoweth all things knoweth what is for our good and His own glory, and whilst we cannot understand all things, yet it is our duty to consider God doeth all things well. Our brother was taken from our midst while in the bloom of youth, and we miss him, yet we trust that what is our loss is his gain—loss of earth, more of heaven. It is ours then to prepare to meet him in glory. This life is but short, eternity is everlasting, death is but a stepping into and then over the river of Jordan, and landing safely on Canaan's fair shore, and we can only reach it by ascending the ladder of faith, hope and charity, borne in the arms of our best of friends, the Lord Jesus Christ. May He help us, therefore, as the members of one common brotherhood, to be faithful unto death, and then go home to meet our dear departed brother, and be forever with the Lord.

Signed on behalf of the lodge,
H. S. ARMSTRONG,
ED. KEMP,
ROBT. CAMPBELL.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Jan. 8, 1895.

Little is doing at the present time in the local grain market. Prices are unchanged and receipts are small. Flour is firm with little change in prices. Straight roller is quoted at from $2.60 to $2.75.

Stocks of barley show considerable depletion during the week, the visible supply being placed at 2,881,000 bushels, as against 3,098,000 last week and 2,156,000 on January 8, last year. Some increase is observed at Milwaukee, but all other reporting points are lower.

In Buffalo barley stocks are 1,544,261 bushels, a decrease from last week's showing of 179,214, but the quantity now in store exceeds last year's supply at this date by 670,849. The local market is quiet, sales principally of Canada lots to arrive and small lots, but maltsters regard prices as too high and the recent advance has restricted trading.

There was a strong selling movement in wheat in Chicago, which in spite of cables and a decrease in visible supply caused a drop of 1-2 to 5-8c from Saturday's close. The weakness of wheat and an increase in the visible supply of corn produced lower prices for the latter, the close being 3-8 to 1-2c lower. Oats shared in the general weakness and lost 1-4 to 3-8c.

What with 450 cars of cattle and hogs and 125 cars of sheep and lambs the yards at East Buffalo were overcrowded, and it was impossible to put all the stock in position. In the cattle and hog market trade dragged and values were lower, but a distinctly different feeling parvaded the sheep section. There were 29 cars there of Canadas and an active trade at 10 to 25c higher than the best prices of last week.

The tendency of prices at the New York stock exchange was upward. At the opening London came in as a buyer. Chicago Gas led the list at the start on semi-official statements that the company would declare its regular dividend. The other prominent stocks moved up 1-4 to 1 3-4 per cent. and the improvement was most pronounced in Sugar, the Grangers, Manhattan, Louisville and Nashville, Big Four and New England. In the late trading the best figures of the day were generally current.

The London markets were uncertain. The rumored resignation of Sir William Vernon Harcourt and of complications in the Cabinet had no effect on stocks, however. Americans had a strong spurt on small buying in the bear market on rumors about currency proposals by President Cleveland.

A Quebec Church Burned.

DANVILLE, Que., Jan. 8.—Fire broke out yesterday in St. Augustine Episcopal church. On arrival of the fire brigade under Captain Brown it was found impossible to save the church, and the brigade turned their attention to saving the parsonage and other surrounding buildings, in which they were successful. The church, which was a beautiful brick structure with cut granite facings, was erected about forty years ago. It is a total loss, with all its contents, nothing being saved. The Rev. Thomas Blaylock is the pastor. It is thought it caught fire from the furnace and had been smouldering all night. Cost of church, $12,000; insurance, $3,000.

Sicily Continues to Shake.

ROME, Jan. 8.—Heavy earthquakes continue to shake Northern Sicily. The roofs of churches and hospital at Spadafora San Martion, province of Messina, were demolished yesterday. Losses of property are reported from several other towns.

The Fire Loss for the Year.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—The Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin estimates the fire loss of the United States and Canada for the month of December at $10,331,000 and the total for the year at $123,246,400.

Own a Good Piano.

It costs but a trifle more to own a good piano, like the "Rheimer," the "Morris," the "Heintzman" or the "Mendelsshon." The difference in cost is not for one day, or one month, or one year. It's worth five dollars a year for ten years to have exactly what you want. Just think it over. Have a talk with Mr. J. W. Crosby, of 342 Water street, the agent for those four first-class instruments, and close the purchase before the end of the year.

TRADE RELATIONS WITH SPAIN

An Opportunity Which, If Seized, Would Prove of Prime Importance to Canada—The Japanese Treaty—How It Affects This Country.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—Lord Jersey's report has been written, published, commented upon and apparently dropped. At least little or nothing has been heard of it for the last few weeks. The decision of the Government in regard to its recommendations has not yet been made known, and it is not believed that the report has yet been under the consideration of the Cabinet. Possible some reference to the Ottawa conference, and to its recommendations, may be made in the Queen's speech at the opening of Parliament on the 5th of February, but the action of the Government would be very much stimulated if Lord Jersey's report could be kept prominently before the public in the meantime. It is believed in Colonial circles that the representatives of the Colonies will be requested by their governments to press the matter either individually or jointly upon the colonial office.

A Treaty Important to Canada.

The treaty recently concluded between Great Britain and Japan is likely to be of much importance to Canada. The relations of Japan and the Dominion must necessarily become closer every year with the development of steam communication between the two countries and the consequent expansion of trade. It is true that the treaty itself does not come into operation for five years, but tariff concessions are to be extended to Great Britain almost immediately, and as the articles include many of those which Canada exports, the result ought to be an immediate extension of Canadian trade. The colonies can join in the treaty or not as they wish, and Canada therefore has the opportunity of saying within two years whether she desires to become a party to it.

An Opportunity—Will We Take It?

The irritation which now exists in several countries in regard to the commercial policy of the United States seems to afford a desirable opportunity to Canada to extend her trade relations. This applies particularly to Spain and the Spanish West Indies. At the present time Canada enjoys most favored nation treatment both in the West Indies and in the peninsula, in common with many other countries, and just now, at any rate in the former, the duties upon Canadian exports are lower than those from the United States. If this state of things could be made permanent, or perhaps be embraced in a more far-reaching treaty, the arrangements would be very beneficial to the maritime, as well as to the other provinces of Canada, and the Dominion would thus be able to reap the reward of the efforts her merchants have been making in the last few years to extend their business in that direction.

A Study in Emigration.

The emigration from Europe in the present year has not been altogether satisfactory so far as Canada is concerned, at any rate in point of numbers. It is generally admitted, however, that the cream of the emigration that has taken place has gone to the Dominion. The causes that have led to the falling off in numbers are to be found in operation both in Canada and in Europe. Although the Dominion has apparently weathered the depression in a much more satisfactory manner than most other parts of the world, the communications that have appeared in the papers and the letters that pass between friends and relations in the various countries are stated to indicate that times are not altogether brilliant in Canada, and this feeling has been accentuated by the low prices that have prevailed for produce of all kinds. These things naturally have an effect upon the emigration movement. Then, again a large number of people have returned from the United States, and no doubt in their accounts of the state of things in that country, they have also included Canada to a certain extent.

The condition of agriculture and trade generally in Great Britain and in Europe has undoubtedly been bad, but in view of the depression elsewhere there have not been the inducements to emigrate that could formerly be held out. But above all, the classes of people who particularly desire to emigrate are those who have not the necessary funds to do so or those of the mechanical or laboring classes, whose emigration in any case has not been encouraged for some time. Therefore everybody connected with emigration has had to exercise great discrimination and to recommend only those people to go to Canada who were likely to become satisfactory and contented settlers. It will be readily understood that to encourage indiscriminate emigration at a time like the present might lead to an aggravation of the unemployed agitation and to congestion, which would have disastrous effects upon legitimate and desirable emigration for some years to come. It cannot be said that the prospects for emigration to Canada are brighter for next year. There can be no doubt, however, that Canada is becoming better known in the rural districts of the United Kingdom and of Europe all the time and that when the movement begins again—there are always cycles of good years and bad years—Canada will get her share.

CUT ON THE CANADA PACIFIC.

A Move Which Will Throw Five Thousand Men Out of Work.

MONTREAL, Jan. 9.—Nearly five thousand men, it is estimated, will be thrown out of employment owing to the decision of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company to cut down expenses. Five hundred men are now out of work here and more dismissals are expected. The cutting down process will apply to all departments.

Mr. C. W. Spencer, general superintendent of the Eastern division, and several of his lieutenants have been in close conference for the last three days, and J. B. Elliott, master mechanic of the road, whose headquarters are at Carleton Junction, is in town, and spent the whole morning with the general superintendent. The Committee of Ways and Means is still in session and every possible reduction is being made.

Over twenty per cent. is the reduction on the pay roll which Mr. J. F. Mundle, local freight agent, expects to accomplish this month. That he will do this, there is little room to doubt, as a glance at the freight sheds showed at once. The assistant foreman who has acted all the summer as foreman in full charge of all the sheds, is now filling in his time as timekeeper, while his predecessor in the last mentioned position is engaged as checker at one of the doors.

The freight sheds at Hochelaga have been closed altogether and the pick of the men employed there were brought into the Dalhousie Square sheds. This will not only effect a saving in labor, but will cut down the charges against the company for cartage very materially. The greatest reductions have been made at the locomotive works where the staff have been cut down fully fifty per cent.

The C. P. R. and the Dominion Alliance.

MONTREAL, Jan. 9.—Representatives of the Dominion Alliance and the Canadian Pacific Railway met again yesterday and came to an agreement respecting the case of Smith, the dismissed C. P. R. agent at Toronto. A memorandum was agreed upon whereby the C. P. R. repudiates the expressions used by Assistant Superintendent Brady in asking for Smith's dismissal. The Canada Pacific Railway, acknowledging that cause for dissatisfaction has existed, claim the responsibility of dealing with and will deal with the matter in such manner as they consider deserving in the premises. The C. P. R. claims that, if for no other reason, Mr. Smith's discharge was justifiable on the ground of neglect of duty.

A Strike at Springhill Mines.

SPRINGHILL MINES, N.S., Jan. 9.—A serious strike is imminent here. There is a grievance between the miners and the company. Since the fire only one slope has been working, which has not afforded work for all the men. The company have made arrangements for the men to work twelve hours a shift and a half instead of eight hours and paid accordingly. The men refused to appear at the early hour of six, but appeared at seven o'clock. On appearing their lamps were refused and the men call it a "lockout." Some of the men outside were discharged and the coal haulers knocked off work. The men refuse to work to-morrow. If this grievance continues for a time destitution and suffering are unavoidable. Mr. R. Drummond is expected to-day.

Stage Workers Go on Strike.

HAMILTON, Jan. 9.—Some time ago the mechanics employed at the Grand Opera House formed themselves into an association in sympathy with similar unions in Toronto and cities in the United States. A few days ago Alf. Hewitt, a member of the association, was discharged by Manager Reche of the Grand and since then trouble has been brewing. Hewitt reappeared on the stage to assist the manager of the Faust Company in handling the scenes. Mr Reche ordered him to leave the house whereupon nearly all the stage hands went on strike. It is said that Mr. Whitney, lessee of the Grand, is having trouble with employes in other opera houses on his circuit and will make a determined effort to stamp out the rebellious element.

A Successful Canadian Railroader.

BUFFALO, Jan. 9.—The Courier says that it has good authority for saying that S. R. Callaway is to be elected president of the New York, Chicago and St. Louis railroad. Mr. Callaway began his career in the auditor's office of the Grand Trunk in Montreal in 1863. He was subsequently chief accountant, secretary and treasurer of that road, and from 1869 to 1871 was chief clerk to the superintendent of the Great Western and later on private secretary to the general manager of the same road. Since 1874 he has been connected with American lines, being from 1881 until 1884 general manager of the Chicago and Grand Trunk.

Prosecuting a Divine Healer.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Rev. Dr. John Alexander Dowie, who is well known in Toronto as an advocate of divine healing, is in serious trouble. The State Board of Health has ordered an investigation of his three homes for healing. While complaints only stated that people were fleeced of their money the city and state officials saw no reason for interference so long as the dupes were satisfied. Dr. Dowie is not only charged with obtaining money under false pretences, but also with violating the medical practice act and the law which forbids maintaining hospitals without state sanction. On the criminal charge he will be tried on January 15th.

A Missing Chief of Police.

HAMILTON, Jan. 9.—Chief of Police Hugh McKinnon has not been seen in the city for the past week and enquirers at his office are told that he is out of town. A week ago he was given permission to go to Toronto for a day. Whether he is still in Toronto and is working on a case is not known. There is much talk about his continued absence and on his return it is not unlikely the commissioners will ask him to explain matters.

ASSAILED BY THE MOB

Angry Crowds of Unemployed Storm Newfoundland's Legislature.

STORES SMASHED FOR FOOD

The Threatening Aspect of the Famished Multitude Breaks Out Into Uncontrollable Fury—Gov. Greene Addresses the Mob at the Legislature.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Jan. 9.—The prosecution of the directors and manager of the Commerce Bank continue. The investigation before City Magistrate Conrey discloses that the directors owed on June last over $200,000 or about seven eighths of the whole indebtedness to the bank.

There is an agitation going on by the present Opposition party for a royal commission and crown colony agitation, inspired by Morine and other oppositionists. The Herald makes daily incendiary appeals to unemployed workmen. These appeals resulted last evening in attempts to loot two stores on Water street. Opositionist journals appeal to the people to help themselves. Disturbance were quelled by four police. There is no fear of further rioting. What has taken place was purely political.

The Bank of Montreal's established branch here advances the Government sufficient funds for the immediate necessity of the public service. Any exaggerated reports of immediate extreme want are unreliable. The necessities of the people will be met by private and public funds.

The Mob Hard to Control.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Jan. 9.—Disorder prevailed here all day and serious bloodshed was narrowly averted. The unemployed assembled early in the morning and marched to the man-of-war Tourmaline, whose captain had promised them that he would use his influence with the authorities in their behalf. When the crowd appeared he referred them to the Governor. The men then marched to the Government House, where a deputation waited upon the executive. The latter informed them that the Government was considering measures of relief and advised them to call on the city representatives for their immediate wants. The mob then went to the legislative buildings, but were refused admission. They burst open the doors and surged into the corridors. The police on guard attempted to drive them out, but were overwhelmed and forced to retire. Police reserves were summoned and after a desperate struggle managed to eject the intruders.

In the afternoon the crowd reassembled and returned to the Government House where it complained to the Governor of its treatment during the morning and reiterated its demand for relief. The Governor repeated his advice of the forenoon and said he was powerless to act without the co-operation of the Ministry. Then the crowd once more made its way to the Legislative buildings. The hour for the convening of the session was near at hand and knowing the determination of the mob, those inside on being informed of its approach immediately began preparing to prevent its entry. The doors were barred and the whole available police force were stationed around the building. The crowd swelled in dimensions momentarily and soon the whole of the grounds in front of the structure was a solid mass of humanity, in the midst of which floated a large flag bearing conspicuously the words, "Work or bread," while ejaculations of similar import were made by the crowd. By this time the mob seeing that no attention was being paid to its demands inside the building made a rush for the doors.

The police were powerless to stem the tide of the infuriated mass and many officers were injured. One sergeant was thrown over the steps leading to the main door and seriously hurt while an officer had his cheek cut open with a stone. Finally Premier Greene appeared on the balcony and in a speech expressed regret at the condition the colony and the destitution prevailing among the people. He promised that employment would be given within three days and begged the crowd to have patience and confidence in the Government. He promised to resign if work was not provided within the time specified. This did not satisfy the crowd who told him plainly that they would break into the stores and get food. This threat the mob immediately put into effect.

Marching down into the city, the rioters made an attack upon the premises occupied by Edwin Duder, who was recently compelled to assign. The crowd found the place empty and met with similar results in other stores. Johnston's store, near by, then received the mob's attention. In this establishment a large quantity of provisions were found. Just as they were being carried out a large force of police appeared on the scene and drove the mob away after a severe struggle, during which the police were forced to draw their swords in defence. A body of mounted police arrived shortly afterward and the combined forces managed to keep the crowd at bay until darkness came, when the rioters dispersed. Four of the leaders were arrested.

The streets are crowded with people. A guard from the warship Tourmaline is doing patrol duty in front of the principal buildings, as it is feared that other raids may be attempted.

Premier Greene presented a pitiful picture when he appeared on the balcony of the legislative building to address the angered crowd. He has been ailing since he accepted office and the worries over the present turbulent condition of the colony has reduced him to almost a skeleton.

Work of a Mischievous Small Boy.

HAMILTON, Jan. 9.—Andrew B. Britton, a lad, who gives his address as 783 Dovercourt road, Toronto, is in jail here on a charge of throwing missiles at a train and doing bodily harm. Two other boys named Chas. Mitchell and Jno. Moore, both of Toronto, were allowed to go as it was proven Britton was the culprit who threw a stone through the window of a G. T. R. coach near Waterdown and hit a passenger cutting his head. The injured passenger was bound for New York and refuses to lose time to prosecute. The Toronto authorities will be communicated with in regard to Britton's record before the magistrate will sentence him.

THE KINGSTON ELECTION.

On Monday J. P. Gildersleeve, returning officer, received the writ for the Kingston election for the Legislature. It is dated the 5th and calls for the nomination on the 31st, and the election on the 28th inst. The registration system will come into force for this election. Hon. Mr. Harty is, of course, a candidate, and his old opponent, Dr. Smythe, will again contest the seat. It will be remembered that Dr. Smythe was returned for Kingston by the narrow majority of 1, at the general elections in June, and the record of the election courts which unseated him disclosed how even that little majority was obtained. Dr. Smythe's chances have not improved since that time; on the other hand they have grown less. At that time there was a bare fighting chance of defeating the Mowat Government, and Dr. Smythe had the benefit of all the prestige arising from that possibility. Now, there is no such chance; the Government is firmly reinstated in power for another term, and the electors of Kingston will probably think that they have nothing to gain in electing Dr. Smyth, and will not probably be forgetful of having the honour of being represented by a member of the Government in the person of the Commissioner of Public Works. Then, the Opposition party had a leader under whom they were proud to fight. They had the esprit du corps that comes from having an acknowledged and capable head. Now the Opposition party has no leader, or at least one if he is so recognised, who is a veritable Jonah, as was found in his very first attempt at leadership. Having in mind the result of the London election, Dr. Smyth will, no doubt, devoutly pray to be delivered from Mr. Marter and his running mate, Mr. Howland. Dr. Smyth has the chances decidedly against him and no one will be surprised to see Hon. Mr. Harty returned by a handsome majority, on January 28th, —while everbody will be surprised if Dr. Smyth receives his dainty little majority of 1.

THE re-election of Mayor Kennedy of Toronto by a majority of only 14, as against a majority of 4,800 a year ago, shows how greatly he has fallen from public favour, or how greatly his opponent, Mr. Fleming, has advanced in public confidence. Mr. Fleming made a splendid fight; though only a few days in the field, he came perilously near defeating Mr. Kennedy. Mr. Fleming was bitterly opposed; with one or two exceptions the whole press of the city was against him and unanimously they tried to bring party influence into the field, and in a strongly Conservative city like Toronto, that should be a weapon lethal to the chances of a Liberal like Mr. Fleming. But the electors refused to accept the party issue and divided their suffrages so evenly that there is only fourteen of a difference between the number of ballots marked for Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Fleming, and under the recount that will take place, this difference may disappear or be placed upon the other side.

Y.P.S.C.E. NOTES.

JUNIOR EXECUTIVE.

The junior executive of the town held a meeting on Saturday evening. A paper prepared by Miss White, superintendent of St. Andrew's Society, on "How to conduct a junior prayer meeting," was read, which was very instructive. This subject was thoroughly discussed. Other matters pertaining to this portion of the work were also considered. The subject for the next meeting is "Benefits derived from the Pledge."

Most of the local societies held their meeting on Sunday night on account of this being the week of prayer.

ST. PAUL'S SOCIETY.

The society held their weekly meeting on Sunday night, immediately after the evening service of the church. Mr. Archie Wood presided. Mr. Simpson gave a short address on the topic. The meeting took more of the form of a prayer service. It was requested that this society pray for the young men's work of the town.

OUR TEMPERANCE COMMITTEES.

It is with regret that we notice how little is being done for the cause of good citizenship among our societies. Monday was election day and the hotel men were out to a man raking in the votes to outdo the supposed temperance candidates. One would imagine that Satan had given the temperance party of our town a sleeping draught to keep them quiet until the election was over. What are our Young People's Societies for? We are organized for the purpose of assembling together and considering our own personal safety. Or is our motto for "Christ and the Church" only a mith. It is all very well to our own spiritual welfare at first but how many of us are professing Christ, and have time and again prayed Him to use us for the advancement of His kingdom on earth. The question that naturally arises is this? Are we to be merely as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal, or will we come to the serious realization that there is much to be done, and a work to be done only by enthusiastic young followers of the Lord Jesus Christ? Come Endeavourers, let us up and be doing. We have talked and planned enough, let us now do some of the unpleasant but really essential portion of this work.

You Get Strong.

If you're a tired out or "run-down" woman, with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. And, if you suffer from any "female complaint" or disorder, you get well. For these two things—to build up women's strength, and to cure women's ailments—this is the only medicine that's guaranteed. If it doesn't cure, in every case, your money is returned. On these terms, what else can be "just as good" for you to buy? The "Prescription" regulates and promotes all the natural functions, never confines with them, and is perfectly harmless in any condition of the female system. It improves digestion, enriches the blood, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and vigor. For obstructions, displacements, bearing-down sensations, periodical pains, and every chronic weakness or irregularity, it's a remedy that safely and permanently cures.

WARSAW.

Address and Presentation.

A prayer and praise meeting was held in the Warsaw Presbyterian church recently. The service was conducted by Mr. W. Hyde. At the close of the meeting, before the dispersal of the people, Mr. Hyde requested all the members of the choir to take their places, and also the elders of the church to come forward. In a short address Mr. Hyde spoke of our organist, Miss Charlotte Edwards, who is about to attend the Norwood High School, and stating the general feeling of sorrow that we could no longer have her with us at our Sabbath services. An address read by Miss May Campbell, was accompanied by a presentation on behalf of the members of the church. The address read as follows:

Dear Miss Edwards,—

On the eve of your departure to school, we, the members of the Presbyterian church, Warsaw, wish to show you in a slight degree our sincere love and esteem for you, and heartfelt appreciation of your services as organist, the position of which you have so faithfully and ably filled for two years.

You have ever been present at our weekly prayer meetings and Sabbath services, and brightened our meetings by your music, which we ever felt confident would be of the best when you presided at the organ.

We learn with a mixture of sorrow and gladness of of your entering on, or rather furthering, your education at the high school, and we as a church wish you success, and ask you to accept this toilet and manicure case and writing folio as a remembrance of the once happy time spent as our organist.

Mrs. John Wasson and Mr. Alex. Smith presented the gifts to Miss Edwards. Her father, Mr. Samuel Edwards, in reply stated that his daughter had always felt it a very pleasant duty to attend and preside at the organ, that she would always have the interest of the church at heart, and was happy to have been of use. Mr. Edwards, after thanking the members for their well wishes, resumed his seat, and his daughter received many tearful goodbyes.

A FISHERMAN'S STORY.

THE EXPOSURES OF HIS CALLING BROUGHT ON LUNG TROUBLE.

Suffered Severely and Spent Much Money Before he Found a Cure—An Experience That Will Prove Valuable to Others.

From the Canso Breeze.

A few miles from Canso, N.S., is located the little village of Dover Bay. Among the residents of the village none is better known than Andrew Horne, who is a general favorite with his neighbors. The editor of the Breeze was in Dover Bay a few days ago, and in conversation with Mr. Horne learned that he could add his experience to the many who have spoken so strongly in favour of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mr. Horne follows the arduous and dangerous calling of a fisherman, and is exposed to all sorts of weather. Some years ago exposure brought on a severe cold which left his lungs so weakened that after a hard fit of coughing he would frequently spit blood in considerable quantities.

Mr. Horne spent considerable money in doctoring, but met with such poor results that I began to be discouraged. To add to his trouble he was badly constipated, and this gave rise to chronic piles, which caused him intense agony, and reduced him almost to helplessness. One day Mr. Horne received a copy of a pamphlet issued by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., and after reading the strong testimonials it contained determined to give Pink Pills a fair trial. The result was beyond even his most sanguine expectations. He soon felt like a new man. His lung trouble disappeared and he is now able to stand any amount of exposure without feeling any bad effects. The constipation also disappeared, and with it the piles, which had caused so much agony, and, as Mr. Horne says, "life is again worth living, and I am glad to be able to make this statement in the hope that some other sufferer will follow my example, give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial, and regain health." The editor of the Breeze feels that he will be doing his share in the good work by giving Mr. Horne's statement to its readers.

PENNSYLVANIA FLOODS.

Overflowing Rivers Caused Much Damage —Homestead Under Water.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 9.—The floods in the Allegheny and Monogahela rivers have reached their highest marks and the worst is over. The highest marks were recorded at about 10 a.m., and soon after the water began slowly to recede. Prominent rivermen estimate the general loss on both rivers at about $500,000. James McSweeney, an employe of the beaver dam in course of construction, was swept away with a part of the dam and drowned. Several other employes had narrow escapes. Considerable trouble was experienced by the railroads in and about the city.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Jan. 9.—The entire lower part of Homestead is under water. Drift wood and ice knocked the false work from under the new brown bridge across the Monegahela. The Carnegie works were compelled to shut down on account of the flood, which disabled their pumps.

Gen. Sung at the Mercy of the Japs.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—The Times publishes a despatch from Shanghai saying that Gen. A despatch from Tien-Tsin says that Chinese agents have been discovered trying to induce British sailors to desert their ships in order to serve China.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

"Several years ago, I caught a severe cold, attended with a terrible cough that allowed me no rest, either day or night. The doctors, after working over me to the best of their ability, pronounced my case hopeless, and said they could do no more for me. A friend, learning of my trouble, sent me a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which I began to take, and very soon I was greatly relieved. By the time I had used the whole bottle, I was completely cured. I have never had much of a cough since that time, and I firmly believe that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life."—W. H. ONTARIO CREAMERY ASSOCIATION.

The Tenth Annual Convention Opens at Chesley.

CHESLEY, Ont., Jan. 9.—The tenth annual convention of the Ontario Creamery Association opened here yesterday. Mr. J. H. Elliot, reeve, occupied the chair. The following speakers were present: John Gould, Ohio: Prof. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture; Prof. Midison, Ottawa; Frank T. Shult, M.A., Ottawa; Prof. Doan, Agricultural College.

President Derbyshire, of Brockville, delivered his annual address. He touched on the work done during the year under the auspices of the association. Sixty meetings were held in different sections. He advised farmers to go into growing more corn and building silos and better stables, so that cows could have summer conditions in winter. He pointed out the need of instruction to new districts by the association and advised every butter maker to go for a short term to the dairy school. In this province there are 74 regular and 31 winter creameries. The increase of regular was 6 per cent. and of winter 200 per cent. He strongly urged on all butter makers to produce a higher quality of butter.

MIDDLEMARCH MURDER CASE.

Evidence That Hendershott Could Not Have Been Killed by the Tree.

ST. THOMAS, Jan. 9.—The adjourned hearing of the Middlemarch murder case resumed yesterday. The hearing promises to be a lengthy one, as the crown has about sixty witnesses and the defence about twenty five. Night sessions are to be held hereafter. John Stubbs, Edwin Pearce, Richard Sanders, Edwin Wardell, Robert Stephens and Henry House gave evidence yesterday. All of them agreed that the deceased could could not have been killed by the falling tree. Two of them identified the axe found in the woods as being the property of prisoner John Hendershott.

Judge Grosscup's Decision.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—The United States circuit court was crowded yesterday when Eugene V. Debs, George W. Howard and five other members of the A. R. U., came in to hear the decision of the courts on the motion to quash the indictment charging them with conspiracy to stop the mails. The defendants were in the custody of U. S. Marshals. Judge Grosscup stated that he overruled the motion to quash, except as to the third count of the indictment, which charge that the stopping of the mails was intentional and felonious. The trial was set for January 22nd in order that the attorneys for the defence might have time to go to Washington to ask the supreme court for a writ of habeas corpus in the contempt case.

Rochester a Rival of Toronto.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Jan. 9.—The common council at a meeting last night put itself on record as favoring general closing on Sunday. Three weeks ago Mayor Aldridge ordered that the saloons be closed on Sunday and the order has been rigidly enforced much to the displeasure of saloon men. Last night Ald. J. Miller Kelly, who is interested in a brewery here, introduced a resolution that the superintendent of police shall close everything that comes under the law. The resolution reads: "Labor, sports, trades, manufactures, agricultural or mechanical employments, public traffic and performances." The board of aldermen passed the resolution unanimously. The saloon men are jubilant.

Sir Hibbert's First Capital Case.

OTTAWA, Jan. 9.—An order in council has been passed by the Dominion Government allowing the law to take its course in the case of Louis Victor, now in New Westminster, B.C., jail, sentenced to be hanged on the 17th inst. Victor murdered an Indian named Peter, who was a whiskey detective. There were no extenuating circumstances, so that Sir C. H. Tupper reported to the council against any interference with the law. The order was forwarded to Lord Aberdeen yesterday for signature. This was Tupper's first capital case.

WIMAN'S CASE IN COURT

The Appeal From the Verdict Argued in the Supreme Court.

JUDGE'S DECISION RESERVED

General Tracey Assails the Trial Judge's Charge to the Jury—His Closer Headed Argument—The Damaging Story of the Cheques Retold.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The appeal in the case of Erastus Wiman from the verdict in the Court of Oyer and Terminer convicting Wiman of forgery was argued yesterday before the general term of the Supreme Court. Gen. Benjamin F. Tracey and A. B. Boardman appeared for Wiman and the prosecution was represented by Assistant District Attorney Lindsay.

The argument was begun by General Tracey raising the point that Wiman had not been found guilty of forgery for which he had been indicted, but for drawing money from the firm on account of R. G. Dun & Company. He contended that the main question submitted by the trial judge to the jury related to the criminal transfer from one account to another. Gen. Tracey said that the judge erred in denying the right of the defence to submit evidence as to Wiman's resources outside of his bank account after having permitted the prosecution to show that his account in the bank was never more than $29.00) and could not possibly have covered Wiman's overdrafts.

"The trial judge," Gen. Tracey said, "had charged the jury, as a matter of law, that Wiman was guilty and that the jury must find him so. He took away from the jury every question on which forgery as charged in the indictment could be predicated, and admitted questions on which it could not be predicated."

Mr. Lindsay submitted a voluminous brief in support of the verdict. The brief states that "Wiman has been systematically embezzling the funds of the Dun agency, and on the sixth day of February he was a defaulter to the extent of upwards of $188,000. He had partially concealed his peculations by means of fictitious entries in the books, and by procuring a worthless cheque for $135,000, drawn by him against a paltry credit in the Central National Bank, to be carried among the firm's assets, December, 1891, and prior to this he had given the bookkeeper his individul note for $45,000, which was carried along for a year and returned to him when he gave the $135,000 cheque without which the books would have shown a deficiency of upward of $42,000 then. Neither Mr. Dun nor Mr. Douglas ever knew anything about the $45,000 note or the cheque for $135,000. On February 6, 1893, before the transaction of any business his balance was $7,592.43. During that day he deposited $6,900 including the cheque for $5,000 upon which he had forged Mr. Bullinger's endorsement.

"On the day in question the defendant instructed James Howell, the cashier of the concern to draw a cheque for $5,000 to the order of E. W. Bullinger. Howell drew the cheque and delivered it to the defendant unsigned. Immediately upon receiving the cheque the defendant signed it and then endorsed the name 'E. W. Bullinger' on the back of it in a disguised hand and deposited it to his individual credit in the Central National Bank. The forgery was discovered February 17, 1893. On February 20, 1893, Wiman wrote the famous letter to Dun in which he said he had a confession to make, and that he had "improperly and fraudulently signed the name of E. W. Bullinger on the backs of two cheques." He says he would not urge that this was done without evil intent and that he acted without authority and imprudently, and he asks for mercy. In conclusion he said: "For the sake of my dear wife and children and for the sake of the long service rendered you, I pray God your heart may still be softened towards me that I may not be made to suffer the penalty of my offence." In the judge's charge the question of criminal intent was taken from the jury and the judge gave a more absurd definition of the word intent, utterly at variance with the true meaning of the word."

Mr. Lindsay's argument was in part as follows: "Even if technical errors were committed the guilt of the defendant is so clearly and overwhelmingly shown, that it is impossible for the general term to say that any injury could have been done. It is a well established principle that the general term of the Supreme Court will not reverse a conviction unless it affirmatively appears and is manifest upon the record that the defendant was actually injured, and the jury actually influenced against the defendant by the charges of the lower court."

Mr. Lindsay read the testimony in many parts, and claimed to show where Wiman had been convicted on his own testimony. He referred to where Wiman wanted to be forgiven and said if there was no criminal intent and no forgery, why would he want forgiveness? A person who acted within his province had no need of forgiveness.

Wiman was in court during the argument and listened to every point intently. After hearing the arguments the court took the papers and reserved decision.

LOCAL NEWS.

Big reductions in all winter clothing at Grafton & Co.'s clearing sale.

Catholic Literary Association Debate.

A debate will take place on Thursday evening, January 10th, in the rooms of the Catholic Literary Association on the following question: Resolved, "That Wallington was a greater statesman and soldier than Napoleon." In addition to the debate, an interesting musical and literary programme will be provided. Admission 10 cents. 4d

George Street Methodist Church.

The missionary anniversaries of the George and Charlotte streets Methodist churches will be held on Sunday, Jan. 27. The services of Rev. Dr. Galbraith, president of Toronto Conference, and Rev. Thos. Manning, B.A., of Whitby, a former pastor, have been secured for the occasion. Both these gentlemen are well and favourably known in town, and the congregations are to be congratulated on securing such an able deputation.

Non-Commissioned Officers Mess.

All was amity, peace and friendliness, last evening, at the meeting of the non-commissioned officers mess of the Rangers. It was feared that owing to certain breaches of discipline, which were stated to have been committed, that a split in the good fellowship, which has hitherto prevailed, would result, but on the contrary the members of the mess have settled the the difficulty among themselves and the matter has been quietly dropped. On the evening of January 22nd, the mess will hold a smoking concert, to which invitations are being issued and which will doubtless prove a great success. It will be held in the mess rooms and an excellent programme of vocal and instrumental music, stump speeches, etc., is being prepared for the occasion.

A Local Invention.

Mr. H. Calcutt of Ashburnham, is the inventor of a combined water tube and tubular boiler, with which, he claims, 40 per cent. of fuel can be saved, as compared to the ordinary boiler. The appliance can be attached to any boiler, and besides reducing the quantity of steam used, it will by a special mode of water circulation, greatly increase the quantity of heat which can be derived from a given quantity of fuel consumed. [A patent has been applied for by Mr. Calcutt, who uses the system in his brewery, where it gives the utmost satisfaction. Those interested can have an opportunity of inspecting the system in operation there at any time. By the addition of this improvement, the capacity of a boiler not furnishing sufficient steam for ons engine, can be increased so as to furnish power for a much larger engine, or it will readily furnish more power as well as save fuel.

Diphtheria Outbreak Near Orillia.

"An outbreak of 20 virulent cases of diphtheria exists 18 miles from any doctor. Will proceed there and use anti-toxine if rewarded." This was the text of a telegram received by Dr. Bryce, secretary of the Provincial Board of Health, yesterday morning from Dr. Gilchrist, Orillia. In reply Dr. Bryce wired instructions for Dr. Gilchrist to proceed to the scene of the outbreak, which was not named in the message, and also forwarded a quantity of anti-toxine. He expects full details by letter.

Further particulars have been received from Dr. Gilchrist, of Orillia as to the diphtheria outbreak which he reported to Dr. Bryce, on Monday. The outbreak is some distance from Orillia and has many distressing features. It appears to have arisen from a tea meeting which was held on New Year's day. Four or five days afterwards diphtheria appeared in eight families, and four deaths have since occurred. There are 20 cases. All of the people are very poor, and one family had to be supplied with clothing. Two nurses have been sent to the district and everything possible is being done.

See the Suits at $3.00, $4.00 and $5.00 at Grafton's clearing sale.

NEWS NUGGETS

Paragraphs Picked Up and Pencilled for Public Perusal.

—No grist from the police court this morning.

—A meeting of the Sons of Canada will be held this evening.

—A revision of the vote in Lindsay gives the deputy reeveship to Capt. Geo. Crandell, instead of Mr. Joseph Staples.

—Sand and ashes have been thoughtfully sprinkled on the sidewalks of the principal streets by street Inspector Pope's men.

—The joint installation of the officers of Mt. Hebron and Hiawatha Encampments, I. O. O. F., has been postponed for two weeks.

—Ramsay's comic production of his trip around the world to-night in the Opera House will merit one of the largest houses of the season. 1d

—An enormous amount of wood, hay and straw is being marketed. The good sleighing is the cause of the increased amount which is being brought in.

—Belleville is endeavouring to make arrangements for the holding of a summer carnival. Just what Belleville has to show visitors when they do get there is a conundrum.

—The green goods dealers of Gotham have been favoring rural innocents with their nicely worded circulars once more. Their offers are even more liberal than formerly. For ten dollars in good Canadian money they offer one hundred dollars in bogus greenbacks.

—The rabble of small urchins who infest the skating rink, who do not use the ice and who pay no admission fee, should be debarred from entering the apartments where the skaters have their heavy coats, overshoes, rubbers, etc. Numerous complaints have been received of articles missed from coat pockets, and also of the mysterious disappearance of rubbers.

—The young man boarding at the Balmoral Hotel, who swore at the police court, yesterday, that he sold no liquor on Sunday, Dec. 23rd, and who was arrested on a charge of perjury, as two witnesses testified to having bought liquor from him, will be tried before the magistrate, on Tuesday next. His bail has been fixed at $1,000. The maximum penalty for perjury is 14 years imprisonment.

NO DOODLE INQUIRY.

Rumors to the Effect That Peterborough was to Have one Unfounded.

Careful inquiry reveals the fact that there is no truth in the rumour that has been prevalent on the streets that an investigation similar to what has been held in Toronto, is to be held in Peterborough. There is nothing in the rumour whatever. Peterborough's representative men may in some cases have been extravagant and careless, yet every body knows they are free from any action such as would warrant an investigation.

The rumour doubtless rose from the fact that the meeting of the Finance Committee called for Friday night, January 11th, has been postponed to permit members to attend the Sons of Canada Carnival on that date. 1d

The Norwood Reeveship.

The question of the Norwood reeveship has not been settled. A recount will be held, and as there is only a majority of 3 in favour of Mr. Pearce, there is a possibility of a recount reversing the result.

Mr. T. Cavanagh Released on Bail.

Mr. T. Cavanagh, who was yesterday sentenced to four months imprisonment for selling liquor without a license, has appealed his case through Mr. A. P. Poussette, Q.C., and has been released on bail in the sum of $200. The appeal will be argued before Judge Weller.

Observe.

For a delightfully refreshing beverage, and a quick cure for sick headache, and derangements of the stomach and liver—"Dunn's Fruit Saline" is unrivalled. It especially keeps the throat clean and healthy. Doctors recommend it, because it is a pure product of salts of fruit, soda and potash. Through all chemists and stores. WILLIAM G. DUNN & Co. Holiday Decorations.

KINGSCOTTE, artistic decorator, sail, tent and awning maker, Water street, Peterborough.

Own a Good Piano.

It costs but a trifle more to own a good piano, like the "Rheimer," the "Morris," the "Heintzman" or the "Mendelssohn." The difference in cost is not for one day, or one month, or one year. It's worth five dollars a year for ten years to have exactly what you want. Just think it over. Have a talk with Mr. J. W. Crosby, of 342 Water street, the agent for those four first-class instruments, and close the purchase before he end of the year.

Another Industry.

Mr. Close, of the Universal Knitting Works, Toronto, arrived in town, to-day, on the noon train and was taken in hand by the Manufacturer's Committee of the town council. The Universal Knitting Works are removing from Toronto and are looking for a suitable site wherein to locate. Mr. Close is now being taken to the various local sites with a view to induce him to select Peterborough as the future headquarters of the works.

The Injunction Continued.

The following appears in yesterday's report of legal proceedings at Osgoode Hall, Toronto: Thaxton v. Pearson.—R. J. McLaughlin (Lindsay) for plaintiff, moved to continue interim injunction granted by local judge at Lindsay, restraining defendants from trespassing, cutting timber or wood, or doing any other work or damage upon lot 19 in the 11th concession of Harvey. Poussette, Q.C., for defendant Pearson, and Stratton (Peterborough) for defendant Hall, contra. Injunction continued and costs reserved until the trial.

That Aldermanic Turkey.

Councillor Dawson is not festively inclined nor, apparently, amenable to the influence of a gentle reminder. He is willing to take all the votes, and all the contracts he can get, but he did not take the advice of the EXAMINER to devote the turkey he won from Messrs. J. R. Orr & Co., for polling the biggest majority, to an aldermanic banquet. But Mr. Dawson has done better than to take the advice jocularly tendered. He has presented the turkey to the Peterborough Protestant Home, a graceful and kindly act for which he deserves commendation.

Charlotte Street Ladies' Aid.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Charlotte street Methodist church, was held in the school room on Monday afternoon last, when the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Mrs. Wright, (re-elected.)
Vice-President—Mrs. W. Hamilton.
Secretary—Mrs. Lillico, (re-elected.)
Treasurer—Mrs. Lyle, (re-elected.)

The secretary made a report of the doings of the Aid for the past year. The work carried on was most successfully done and highly satisfactory to the members of the association and church. The usual votes of thanks were passed and the high tea took up the attention of the members for the balance of the afternoon.

HOCKEY.

The Ontarios, of Port Hope, defeated the Cobourg Hockey team, Monday evening, by a score of 9 goals to 1.

A privileged few will be admitted to witness the Ladies Hockey Club hold their initiatory practice early next week.

Contrasts.

I. Lady (on pavement, to her husband)—Look at the splendid carriage Councillor A—— and his lady are driving about in. I only wish we were as lucky!

Privy Councillors Wife (to her spouse)—I am getting quite ashamed of this old coach. Look how the people stand still and look at us with contempt. If you don't wish to drive me to despair, you must buy a new turn-out.

II. Wood-Chopper—Here I've to chop fire-wood for that rich property-owner, while he sits doing nothing the live-long day. I'd give anything to change places with him for one week.

Property-owner—I am the unhappiest man in the world, or I am much mistaken It doesn't look as if I should ever get well again. The doctor says I ought to work. To be sure, If I had a strong constitution like that wood-cutter outside there, I would chop wood from morning till night, and be as happy as the day is long.

III. Brieftess Barrister—When I see His Excellency overwhelmed with honors and distinctions on the occasion of his jubilee, I feel as if I could burst. How miserable to pass through life unnoticed and uncared for!

Prime Minster—I would gladly forfeit all these distinctions if for one short year I might be young once more like that young lawyer, for instance, who is carrying on an animated conversation with his fair companion at the other end of the table.

IV. Young Man—There goes Lieut. N—— with his wife, the loveliest and most amiable creature I ever set eyes on. Aye, these lieutenants always have the pick. Ah! [or me!

Lieutenant N——(to his wife)—It will perhaps be best for us to part. You have made me wretched enough. I'd rather have wedded the poorest and plainest girl in creation than put up with such a vixen as you are!—Humoristische Blatter.

A Bit of Pathos at Christmastide.

There is a little girl of six who has proved herself one of the ministering children not in name only. A few weeks ago the baby of the family died. The children as well as the mother had looked forward to hanging up the baby's stocking at Christmas with a great deal of pleasure. But the loss of the baby brought such anguish to the mother that she decided to have no Christmas celebration of any kind. Last Sunday evening as the family sat in partial darkness, recounting their loss with all its sad circumstances, a tender little voice pierced the gloom:

"Mamma, isn't their any Christmas in heaven?"

"Yes, darling," answered the weeping mother. "It is always Christmas there."

"Then why don't you keep it here?" persisted the little girl. "Jus' make b'lieve baby isn't dead, an hang up her little stockin', mamma, an le's all have Christmas jus' the same an be happy, like she is."

The child's wisdom prevailed against the unreasoning sorrow of the mother, and the little ones are happy and busy filling the stocking of the baby who will keep Christmas in heaven.

BOOK WRITERS.

Zola has been pleased to remark, in nice French, that Kipling has shown evidences of talent. This will strongly incline Kipling to return the compliment, after battering it up a bit.

Charles Dickens' Gadshill collection of forty-eight prints by Hogarth, which he left by will to the late Edmund Yates, was recently sold at Brighton for $1,150 in an auction sale of Yates' personal effects.

Mr. J. P. Wallis, editor of the state trials and reader in constitutional law to the inns of court, is now writing the constitutional history of the British colonies, from the date of the earliest settlements in America to the present time.

A book by M. Prodot, "Le Pilori Parlementaire," is the sensation of the hour in Paris. It contains nothing save the public promises of his colleagues in the various chambers of deputies of which he has been a member, with the record of their votes opposite.

MARRIED.

MAHOOD—CRAGG—On Wednesday, Jan. 2nd, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Robt. Mahood, Smith Monaghan, by the Rev. H. Cragg, assisted by the Rev. Jas. Cantwell, Miss Maggie A. Mahood, to Mr. C. A. Cragg, all Hiawatha.

How Horses Sleep.

"Did you ever notice how horses sleep?" asked a Maine horseman the other day. Receiving a negative reply, he continued: "Well, they don't all sleep one way by any means. Some, in fact a good many, sleep standing and rarely lie down. Such a one you may approach and almost touch before he wakes up, if you come at the right time and without much noise. Others lie down, but not all one way. Usually they will settle back and drop over on one hip first. In rising they will put out one front foot first and then the other, bringing up the hind parts last.

"But some horses get up and down 'new fashion'—that is, they will get on their forelegs first. Such a one may always be told by the dirty condition of his knees. The strangest horse I ever saw in this respect was one I owned for some time. His first movement was to pull back on his halter as if testing its strength. Then holding it back taut he would sit down on his haunches exactly like the trick pony at the circus, and in that attitude he would sleep, snoring like a man. I thought he was afraid to lie down, fearing he would not be able to get up and took this queer fashion as a substitute."—Lewiston Journal.

Professional Beautifying.

A certain Dr. Robert Fischer, a professional "beautifier" of Vienna, has been revealing the secrets of the trade. He declares that many mothers put their daughters through a whole course of beautification before marriage. The doctor divides his treatment into the negative and the positive. By means of the first method he removes blemishes that exist, and by the latter he improves the good points nature has already given the subject. He has even gone so far as to invent a "tear pump," designed to aid in the timely display of emotion.—Exchange.

Bound to Take Along His Dog.

Among the crowd of refugees who endeavored to leave the town of Brunswick, Ga., in alarm at the outbreak of yellow fever was a poor old and enfeebled man with a dog as his companion. When told that the dog could not be admitted to the cars with him, he decided to remain behind, and the next morning he set out with his dog to walk the 40 miles that would take them, he believed, out of the reach of the scourge.—New York Times.

A SUCCESSFUL BUSINESS MAN.

Mr. J. W. Moore, as a Grocer and Promoter of the Cheese-making Industry.

The last number of the Canadian Grocer contains an admirable portrait of Mr. J. W. Moore, the George street grocer and dealer in cheese makers supplies, and the following notice:

"Mr. J. W. Moore is one of the successful business men of Peterborough, and enjoys a good trade, his customers being drawn both from town and country. He began business in 1891, and, being widely and favourably known, at once had the satisfaction of seeing his store well patronised. His energy and ability, combined with good management, have made him successful. His motto is the old one, so seldom lived up to: "The best goods at reasonable prices." Besides this, he gave unceasing attention to details. Mr. Moore believes thoroughly in the maxim, to trust nothing to others that he can do himself; and the application of this is seen in his success. As regular as the sun rises he is at his store, and his genial manner has won the confidence of the consuming public of Peterborough and a goodly share of its patronage.

While Mr. Moore is well known as a successful grocer, it is in other lines that he has done some of his best work. In 1877 he foresaw that the manufacture of cheese would increase, and eventually become one of the principal industries. Accordingly, in the year mentioned he organized the North Smith cheese factory. At that time there were only three cheese factories in the country. He carried on operations for two years, and then sold out his interest, moving to the adjoining village of Lakefield, where he started the Lakefield factory. This was at once a success, and Mr. Moore handled it until he removed to Peterborough. Ten years ago he was the means of organising the Cheesemakers' Association of the counties of Peterborough and Victoria, and was president of the association for seven years. Of course, with his wide experience in dairying, Mr. Moore has become an authority on cheese matters. He carries in his store a fine stock of dairying supplies, and is quick to introduce the latest improvements in appliances as they are brought out.

In 1893 Mr. Moore admitted as a partner in his grocery business, Mr. C. H. Moore, a relative, who brought additional experience in the grocery line and the support of a wide circle of friends to advance the the business. In all respects he makes, in the race track parlance, a good running mate.

THE WEEK OF PRAYER.

Increasing Interest in the Impressive Services

The services in connection with the "Week of Prayer" were continued last evening, at Charlotte street church, and were exceedingly interesting. There was a large audience and a deep spiritual feeling prevaded the meeting. Rev. J. J. Rae presided and had with him on the platform Rev. Dr. Torrance and Revs. Messrs. Cragg and Young. The subject for prayer was "The Church Universal" and in a very able address Rev. Dr. Torrance presented the reasons why prayer should be made for that church. The music was excellent and the service in every way profitable.

To-night the meeting will be in George street Methodist church. The subject for prayer,—"Nations and their rulers." Rev. J. E. Trotter will deliver the address. The interest in the services is increasing and the attendance larger than in any former year.

THE FORTNIGHTLY CLUB.

Rev. J. C. Davidson on Citizenship—The Membership Roll Swelling.

The sixth regular meeting of the Fortnightly Club was held yesterday evening, when Rev. J. C. Davidson read a carefully prepared paper on "Citizenship." He treated the subject both historically and practically.

As Mr. Edwards said, in commenting on the paper, the club is to be congratulated on having members like Mr. Davidson, who are prepared to discuss thoughtfully, not only purely scientific and literary matters, but the great questions bearing upon the conduct of life. The subject chosen by Mr. Davidson is, perhaps, of all moral questions, the one most needing the thoughtful consideration of citizens. Mr. Davidson dwelt upon the duties of citizens to scrupulously honour the law and to exercise all the rights and privileges conferred upon them in connection with the government of the country in all its divisions.

He especially referred to the duty of the best men to give their services to the community, and the duty of all to loyally support such men, and give earnest attention to public questions. He contrasted the patriotism and enthusiasm displayed by the citizens of ancient Greece and Rome with our apathy and lukewarm patriotism.

Mr. Dennistoun confined his remarks very much to the duty of governments to exhibit to the people a model of good citizenship, and submitted the opinion that they should take upon themselves broader functions than they had as yet done. He instanced the liquor legislation of Norway as an example of proper state interference with individual freedom of action, and explained at some length the famous Gothenburg system. The following verses which he read were greatly appreciated.

"Will you walk into my parlour?" said the Bishop to the man,
"It's the sweetest little parlour on the Scandinavian plan.
My liquor is the soundest which ever yet was made,
And my potboys are the noblest to be found in all the trade.
You'll find nothing here unpleasant after searching all about,
For the place is quite a Paradise with Christian chuckersout.'
The house is carried on with most benevolent intent,
And on temperance societies the profits all are spent.
So take a glass of liquor now, my worthy brother man,
To promote the cause of temperance by Scandinavian plan.

'The Devil in Solution', we've got him here, you see;
Arm and arm, though, with a Bishop, he's as harmless as can be,
Of the two it's hard to tell which most properly behaves,
And everyone delighted says, 'What splendid Scandynavas!'
Then walk into my parlour, my noble working man,
I want you to make trial of the Scandinavian plan:
For this drink shop we are running—at least, what's in our mind—
Is to elevate the masses and to benefit mankind.
Yes! I cannot put it clearer, in explaining our intent,
Is to benefit mankind and—pocket five per cent.
So please walk into my parlour, and be drinking all you can,
You will find it very pleasant on the Scandinavian plan."

'Twas thus the knowing Bishop threw out a taking fly,
And when this man was in his bar he "winked the other eye."
And all the friends of temperance in admiration ran
To thank the holy Bishop for the Scandinavian plan.
The Scandinavian plan, my boys!—the Scandinavian plan!
By far the strangest thing there's been since first the world began!

Mr. Edwards spoke of the Children's Protection Act as an instance of progressive legislation in the right direction, whereby for the first time, perhaps, the Englishman's "castle" was invaded by the law. He also took up Mr. Davidson's thought that public officers should, so long as they are honest and faithful, have the warm support of the people whom they serve, for only then can they do their work well. The paper and speeches deserved a fuller report, and it is to be regretted that the Reporting Secretary, Mr. Hampden Burnham, was not present at the meeting.

Mr. Bennet spoke feelingly of the general apathy shown in connection with all matters not directly affecting the selfish interests of the individual. This, he said, was painfully evident to him in his own experience. He urged all to put forth their energies unselfishly in the directions their several capacities indicated as their sphere.

Three new members were elected by ballot, Col. H. C. Rogers, Mr. Macfarlane Wilson and Mr. W. H. Hill.

It was decided to hold the meetings on Monday instead of Tuesday, and hereafter all meetings will be held on the Monday preceding the Tuesday previously fixed.

The next meeting will be held on Monday, the 28th inst. Programme—Paper: "A Prophet of the Century," being a paper on the life and work of John Ruskin, by Mr. W. H. Murray. Special speakers, Rev. Herbert Symonds, M.A., and Mr. Sheriff Hall.

We refer to our REMNANTS which have been LEFT over after a heavy season's selling, and which are going so fast that they won't trouble us at stock-taking time.

The qualities and prices are RIGHT—if they are left. Because we have decided to give customers the advantage of good, serviceable, staple oddlengths at and below original cost.

Some of the snaps still left on our Remnant Counter consist of short lengths of DRESS GOODS, CLOAKINGS, FLANNELS, BLANKETS, COMFORTERS, TABLE LINENS, TOWELINGS, &c. But they are going fast. It's worth while to come in and look them over.

We are grateful to our customers for their valuable patronage during 1894, and respectfully solicit continuance of the kind favours during 1895.

WOMAN'S HEAVY LOAD.

SOL. JONES SAYS EMPHATICALLY THAT SHE IS WRONGED.

He Philosophises on the Grevious Burdens of the Fair Sex, and Wants to Know Why Men Always Escape While Their Weaker Victims Suffer.

Elias Town's daughter Mag come back last week. She married and went away from here five years ago comin' Christmas, and here she is just in good time for another, with nothin' as I can see to be glad for.

'Lias was comftable, and took good care of his fambly. Mag had as good a home as enny girl in the county. Plenty of young men here would have bin glad to git her, but she wouldn't have none of them. And when a feller come along from another county she ups and takes a shine to him. She didn't know nothin' about him, and she sed she didn't care to know. He suited her and if he didn't suit others that didn't need to bother with him.

Of course she married him and then tha went out to the plains, and 'Lias set them up in farmin' But Mag's man didn't like the work on a farm, and she wrote back his helth wasn't strong enough to plough, so they sold the things and went into a store in the town. Then the next letter told 'Lias how Mag's husband's partner had cheeted him out of everything and run away with the money, and there tha was.

'Lias sent them money, and tha spent it, and then ast for more, and spent that, and she took in washin' and cooked for a family that she wouldn't spoke to here to home, and raised three children, and got tired of der man, and here she is.

She couldn't say hard enuff things about him when she first come home, but 'Lias tells me this mornin' that she will have to have her man sent for.

I have saw a good many curis things in my day, but the way a man can fool a woman is the curisest.

He finds her purty, and he brings her back after a while lookin' so old and so worn that noboddy wants her. He finds her happy, and he fetches her back with nothin' to be happy for. He finds her helthy, and he brings her back with some unendin' complante for the doctor to practise on.

And he's been gettin' better all the time. He's got fat while she was gittin' pore. He's made friends while folks has wondered how a man can live with her. He's loafed in the woods and et frute, while she's pulled the wash tub around in the shade of the house, and tride to make a dinner out of cold corn bred.

But, after all, that's the least harm he can do her. A woman that gits off that well is lucky.

I see in the papers an article about a young woman that killed herself in a hotel up there in the city because she didn't have no money and not a friend to pay for her bord and lodgin'. I reckon some of the smart young fellers there in the city has some sharp things to say about her, and somethin' funny to laff at. But I'm old enuff to see more than simply a bad woman that killed herself.

Mebby she didn't have no raisin', and so took up with some one that wasn't man enuff to trete her right. Mebby she hadn't no home, and didn't know how to work. Mebby she was wild, and wanted to see the world.

But supposin' you was the man that met her along there at the beginnin'. Some man did meet her then. Supposin' it was you. Supposin' you looked at her, and you seen that she was purty, and easy to lede, and you just set down by her an' sed: "I will tell your fortune. I see a young woman about your size, and she's goin' to a theatre with a young man, and after that she's goin' to supper with him, and after that he's goin' to put her into a big den in the cellar, where them mud on the floor, and lizzards, and crawlin' snakes, and todes and them things. And there on the floor I see a lion creepin' up tords her, with his jaws all over blood, and his eyes all red, and he's goin' to eat her up, and she can't git away with out she climbs over the wall, and if she does she gits into a fire that burns all the time, and it scorches her feet, and blisters her hands, and burns her face, and she smells her own hare thare where it's in the flame, and she tries to put out the coles that are stuck on her shoulders and her arms, and all over her, and she screemes and screemes, but tha ain't nothin' that can help her, leesn she goes back to the lions and the todes."

And then supposin' you sed to her: "That's your fortun, my girl." Mebby it would scare her. Mebby she wouldn't want to go ahead when a man what knows told her what was ahead for her. Mebby she'd ast him if tha wasn't a way to escape from the lions on one side of the fense and the fire on the other. And then supposin' he told her tha was if she stayed a good girl.

But the man that met her, he didn't tell her nothin' of all that. He told her fortun this way: He told her—"I see a young woman, a purty young woman, and she's going to have a good time at the theatre, and she's goin' to git a supper that'll taste better than ennything she ever et before in her life, and then she's going to travel through orchards where peaches hang on the limbs of the trees all the time, and apples drop into her hands whenever she's hungry, and where tha's sunshine from mornin' till night, and shadders whenever she's tired of the sun, and fine close all the time, and music and flowers and burds and all them sorts of things. And she'll be the happiest woman in the country if she just goes in in the way what she's started."

Something like that's what he told her. He knowed it wasn't so. He knowed the muddy celler and the horror would ketch her just as sure as he'd escape. And tha did. And he has escaped. She's ded. And no man knows whare he is. But I'll bet all the corn in the lower fields he's havin' a good time.

She's ded, and tha aint a relative in the world that likes to clame her, and he's smokin' good segars, and drinkin all the whisky bis selfish hide can hold. She's ded, after living for years in the cellers where the todes and fire and the lions has been at her more'n half the time, and she haint had no chanct to get away from them. She aint had no weepin' to fite them with. She aint had no salve for the places whare tha stung her, and burned her, and bit her.

She's bin proud, and has held her hed up while hart was hevvy as deth. She's wore good close, and tride to look like a lady, and mebby she's past the man that told her fortune thar at the beginnin', and he's bin too happy to see her; she's bin hungry, and he's bin too contented with a good dinner to look at the rings under her eyes; she's bin insulted and he's bin too merry over gittin' some man's money to care a cent whether she's livin' or ded; she's bin tired, and he's so fat with good livin' that he never thinks how easy is the path that leads to a bed, nor how hard is the rode with no rest at the end of it.

She's got nothin' out of life, and if he'd told her the truth thare at the beginnin' she'd have knowed she wouldn't. She's bin lookin' for the gardens and the orchards he promised her, and the nearest she comes to findin' them is to-day when she lays thare stiff, with the smell of poison about her, and the dark of the devvil's night in her eyes.

Married or single, woman gits the worst of it. But God pity the girl that hopes that right will come from rong.

The Sun's Three Motions.

The sun has three known motions: 1. An axial rotation, which is plainly shown by the appearance and disappearance of well-known spots upon his surface. The mean period of this axial motion is 25½ of our days. 2. A motion around the centre of gravity of the whole solar system—a motion which can only be ascertained by the use of very delicate instruments on account of his great mass, which is greater than the total of all the other bodies of the system combined. 3. A progressive motion through space in the direction of the constellation of Hercules. The rate of speed of the last named motion is not known, but is estimated to be 15,000,000 miles per year, and some investigators even think it possible that the rate will exceed the above estimate by at least half.

GRIEF.

The first great grief that comes into a life
Seems hardest, for the heart has known no pain,
But when each day brings greater care and strife,
And life endures, the heart must hope again.

Then looking back to pain from which we shrank
To stony grays we walked with bleeding feet,
So bitter now the cup that what we drank
In other days to us would now seem sweet.
—Cy Warman in New York Sun.

The Pulse and the Temperature.

If you take a thermometer on a hot summer day and watch it until it runs up under the influence of the sunshine to 98.4, you will see it when it reaches that point at the exact temperature of your body if you are in normal health. Your temperature may fluctuate a fraction above or below 98.4, according to the time of the day or night, but it never varies to any extent until fever or some other kind of disease sets in. Then the temperature begins to do what the pulse would not do—tell just how dangerously sick the person is.

And one of the strange things about it is that it does not vary many degrees from this normal point of 98.4, no matter how ill the patient may become. If there is a high fever, it may run up to 104 or 105 and sometimes to 108, but it seldom stays at this point for any length of time. If it goes up to 108, the good physician who is watching at the bedside of the sick person concludes that death will soon put an end to the suffering. Sometimes, as in cases of cholera, it may drop several degrees below 98.4, but it seems to be impossible for it to change many degrees from the normal point. There are cases recorded where the temperature ran up to 110 or 113 and the patient recovered.

The pulse, on the contrary, may change many beats, and still the sick person will not be in danger of death. But as a rule if the temperature reaches 108 or 109 death soon follows.

A tiny thermometer called a clinical thermometer is used to indicate the temperature. It is placed under the tongue or close to the skin in the axilla or armpit and left there for a few minutes. By an ingenious arrangement the mercury in the slender glass tube is self registering, so that you may tell how high it was at any time after the temperature is taken, if the mercury is not disturbed.—St. Nicholas.

How Edison Took Up Electricity.

"Now that you have left electricity, how did you first come to enter it?"

"I will tell you. It was by a peculiar incident. I was selling papers on a train running out of Detroit. The news of the great battle of Shiloh, 60,000 killed and wounded, came in one night. I knew the telegraph operator at Detroit, and I went to him and made a trade.

"I promised him Harper's Monthly and the New York Tribune regularly if he would send out little dispatches along the line and have them posted up publicly. Then I went to The Free Press and took 400 copies. That emptied my treasury. I wanted 200 more. They sent me up to the editor. It was Wilbur Storey, a dark looking man. I managed to get up to his desk and make a strong plea. He listened and then yelled out, 'Give this arab 200 papers.' I took 600 papers out. I was taken off my feet when we reached the first little station. The depot was crowded with men wanting papers. The next station it was worse, and I raised the price of the paper to 10 cents. At the third station there was a mob, and I sold out, with papers going at 25 cents apiece.

"Well, do you know, that episode impressed me that telegraphy was a great thing, and I went into it. Telegraphy led to electricity."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Influence of Ivy.

There is a widespread belief that ivy trained against the walls of a dwelling house is productive of damp walls and general unhealthiness. The very opposite of this is really the case. If any one will carefully examine an ivy clad wall after a shower of rain he will observe that while the overlapping leaves have conducted the water from point to point until it has reached the ground the wall underneath is quite dry. More than this, the thirsty rootlets of the stems will force their way into every crevice of the structure which will afford a firm hold and act like suckers in drawing out particles of moisture for their own nourishment. Care should be taken by means of occasional pinning that the ivy does not force its way into the interstices of the roof or the joints of the drains or gutters. Ivy, too, renders a house cool in summer and warm in winter, and its influence cannot be otherwise than beneficial.—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Dainty Lizard.

There is found on the edge of Death valley in California a lizard somewhat similar to the Gila monster, although more agile. It is strictly a vegetarian. This fellow is called the chuckawalla by the Coahuila Indians, who are said to be very fond of his flesh. The meat of this cousin of the dreaded monster is very white, tastes like chicken, and Americans who have eaten it are reported not to have turned up their noses at it. Apaches hate fish and reptiles of all kinds and never eat them, even if starving.—Exchange.

FULL OF ENCOURAGEMENT
FOR ALL WOMEN.

In Bed 5 Months—Had Given Up All Hope of Getting Well—A Remedy Found at Last to which "I Owe My Life."

Science has fully established the fact that all the nervous energy of our bodies is generated by nerve centres located near the base of the brain. When the supply of nerve force has been diminished either by excessive physical or mental labours, or owing to a derangement of the nerve centres, we are first conscious of a languor or tired and worn-out feeling, then of a mild form of nervousness, headache, or stomach trouble, which is perhaps succeeded by nervous prostration, chronic indigestion, and dyspepsia, and a general sinking of the whole system. In this day of hurry, fret and worry, there are very few who enjoy perfect health; nearly everyone has some trouble, an ache, or pain, a weakness, a nerve trouble, something wrong with the stomach and bowels, poor blood, heart disease, or sick headache; all of which are brought on by a lack of nervous energy to enable the different organs of the body to perform their respective work.

South American Nervine Tonic, the marvellous nerve food and health giver, is a satisfying success, a wondrous boon to tired, sick, and overworked men and women, who have suffered years of discouragement and tried all manner of remedies without benefit. It is a modern, a scientific remedy, and in its wake follows abounding health.

It is unlike all other remedies in that it is not designed to act on the different organs affected, but by its direct action on the nerve centres, which are nature's little batteries, it causes an increased supply of nervous energy to be generated, which in its turn thoroughly oils, as it were, the machinery of the body, thereby enabling it to perform perfectly its different functions, and without the slightest friction.

If you have been reading of the remarkable cures wrought by South American Nervine, accounts of which we publish from week to week, and are still sceptical, we ask you to investigate them by correspondence, and become convinced that they are true to the letter. Such a course may save you months, perhaps years, of suffering and anxiety.

The words that follow are strong, but they emanate from the heart, and speak the sentiments of thousands of women in the United States and Canada who know, through experience, of the healing virtues of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, a prominent and much respected lady, writes as follows:—

"I owe my life to the great South American Nervine Tonic. I have been in bed for five months with a scrofulous tumour in my right side, and suffered with indigestion and nervous prostration. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I cannot recommend it too highly."

Tired women, can you do better than become acquainted with this truly great remedy?

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease),
'Twas sad, full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want;
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
To scold then home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Pope,
To push us forward when of age,
They then were home, but stop, I miss,

They gave us every one, a kiss,
And said, "be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home,
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A ride will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

WITCHING FOR WATER.

A SUGGESTED EXPLANATION OF THE DIVINING ROD.

The New York Experiment Station on Its Reported Virtues—An Interesting Article of a Scientifically Farming Turn—The Conclusion Reached.

In the Practical Farmer of Philadelphia, there appeared an article with the following title: "Witching for Water. Is there anything in it?"

I am of opinion that there is.

It would appear that a belief so persistent as that in the efficacy of the divining rod, which has existed for centuries, and is at the present day firmly held by many persons of more than ordinary intelligence, which is moreover (unless authentic testimony be wholly disregarded) confirmed by practical results so often repeated as to forbid the hypothesis of mere coincidence, is worthy of consideration, and ought not to be set aside as simply a delusion. While this belief has existed in many forms, and at the present is, by different individuals, and in different sections, held under widely-differing modifications, there appears to be a common ground of agreement, which regarding may enable us to reach an explanation of the reported virtues of the divining rod.

First it will be observed that the character of the rod itself, its material substance, its form, and the manner of holding it, varies widely, some insisting that it must be a forked branch of hazel, apple or peach. Each of these has its earnest advocates, while the more liberal minded grant that a branch of any tree bearing stone fruit will serve the purpose; others still regard a flexible steel or iron rod as superior to any other.

By some it is regarded as equally effective for locating water or veins of mineral deposits, while others regarding it as valueless for one of these purposes, insist stoutly in regarding it as of inestimable value for the other, and generally we find its virtues extolled in different sections for the supposed ability it has to reveal that which is mainly desired by the inhabitants.

I am not aware that the following explanation has been urged, and yet it seems to me so obvious that it must have occurred to many who have sought to account for some substantial reason for a belief so persistently and so widely held.

It is of course well known that one of the most common sources of the precious and other metals is in veins traversing the rocks, and which are often found charged with workable ores probably deposited along with the other matters constituting the vein. It is also well known that generally, if not indeed always, these veins are not only different in composition from the country rock in which they are found, but either harder or softer than the adjacent rock, and therefore in the atmospheric action upon such rocks, the weathering, as it is termed, results in causing an elevation or depression along the course of the vein, which often is quite marked.

It is also not uncommon for underground streams of water to run or percolate such veins as have suffered from such weathering action, and often remarkable mineral changes are known to have resulted in the character of the compounds found present in such veins.

Any one carrying a divining rod of either of the many kinds recommended, will find it a very difficult, and practically an impossible thing, to carry it over a territory such as I have described, without observing it now and then being deflected to the one side or another, according as during his advance one foot or the other may strike upon an elevation, or in a depression, so slight often as to have quite escaped observation, and it may be that these perfectly natural results have so often occurred as to have established this belief in the virtues of the rod itself.

Many years ago I met a cultivated and intelligent mining engineer in one of our western mining districts, who, with all his general intelligence, was a firm believer in the divining rod, and used it also with marked success in pointing out new veins of ore. After a short course of observation, I became convinced that in this particular case the above explanation was ample, and to my friend's surprise he found that I, too, possessed this power, since in my hands also the rod turned as readily as in his own and, as he declared, as truthfully.

It would naturally happen that any local inequality on the surface would not likely be again struck in one's walk about, so that as a rule the existence of a change of level more or less continuous, such as a vein might cause, would soon reveal itself to one traversing it at intervals.—Peter Collier, in Country Gentleman.

Heavy Loss by Fire.

BUCKINGHAM, Que., Jan. 4.—Fire destroyed Lawrence's general store, Fournier's shop and Blais hotel. Lawrence carries a stock of $13,000 and has only $3,000 insurance, while Fournier has lost even his wearing apparel. Blais has lost all he owned. Mrs. Blais is seriously ill with the shock she sustained, she and the children escaping in their night clothes. Cosgrove has some insurance, but his loss is heavy.

The best anodyne and expectorant for the cure of colds, coughs, and all throat, lung and bronchial troubles, is undoubtedly, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, the only specific for colds and coughs admitted on exhibition at the Chicago World's Fair.

Skin Diseases are more or less occasioned by bad blood. B. B. B. cures the following Skin Diseases: Shingles, Erysipelas, Itching Rashes, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Eruptions, Pimples and Blotches, by removing all impurities from the blood from a common Pimple to the worst Scrofulous Sore.

THE BOARD WILL KNOW THE REASON WHY.

The Members Would Also Like to Know Why the Money was not Forthcoming on Demand, but was Withheld for Months—Explanations From the Town Council in Order.

At the regular meeting of the Board of Education, last evening, the following members were present:—Dr. Burnham, chairman, and Messrs. Ferguson, Hartley, Deane, Wrighton, Stevenson, Hayes, Hamilton, Dr. Boucher, Edgecombe, Dr. Caldwell, McKee and Hill.

THE COMMITTEE ON APPOINTMENTS

recommended that owing to the greater responsibility involved in properly conducting a ward school of seven departments, there should be a distinction made between such a one and that of others containing fewer rooms, the more so if the services rendered are perfectly satisfactory.

The committee being satisfied that the school in question is conducted in a very able manner deemed it their duty to recommend that the present incumbent, Mr. H. A. Yenney, rank as to time of service for salary purposes from the first of September last, as though he had then been on the staff five years; and that his salary from that date and for the future be based (according to the regular schedule adopted for ward principals) as though he had attained a service rank of five years standing.

The committee, further, felt justified in commending Mr. Yenney's energy, ability and worth, and based their recommendation as to advance in salary, not alone on the arduous duties he is required to perform, but on the evidence he has given of real merit. It is distinctly understood that the foregoing in no way interferes with the schedule of salaries adopted for ward principals—this modification of the rule applies only to the principal of a seven-room school, after he had given satisfaction for at least one year.

The committee further recommend that Miss Warren be instructed to act as supervising director of the Kindergarten, with authority to control and direct the courses of study for pupils, and for directors the ordering of supplies and the general management; and be granted one half day each month to spend in the South Ward Kindergarten.

On motion of Messrs. Hill and McKee, the report was adopted without discussion.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Col. J. Z. Rogers wrote the Board asking permission to use the gymnasium for the sergeants' class of the 57th Battalion, one night per week. Referred to the Supervision Committee.

From D. Blackwell, architect, stating that as directed he had examined the floor of the gymnasium and judging by what was broken up, judged it to be in a worthless condition, both joists and flooring being badly decayed, probably caused by lack of ventilation underneath and any money spent in repairing, he considered, would be of no permanent benefit. A new 1½ inch pine floor with an air space under can be put down for $85.00 and will require 3 days to do the work. The old floor would be removed and cedar joists 3x5 laid two feet apart, flooring to 1¼ inches thick and about 5 inches wide. A maple floor would cost about $110.00. The instructor is anxious to have the following new articles for the gymnasium, which he says are badly required, especially mattresses and without them there is always danger of the pupils seriously hurting themselves:

2 mattresses at $11.00 each	$22 00
15 leather covered rings at $1.40	21 00
Padded vaulting horse and board	6 00
6 poles 12x2½ in.	1 00
Cords for chest machines	3 00
Clubs	3 00
Dumb bells	3 00
Vaulting Pole	3 00
Fencing (pine)	25 00
	$121 00

Referred to the Property Committee with power to act.

INSPECTOR'S REPORT,

To the Chairman and Members of the Board of Education, Peterborough:

GENTLEMEN,—The total number of pupils enrolled in the public schools of the town in December (kindergartens not included) was 1262 or 45 less than in November. The reduction was due in nearly every case to illness, the Central and the Park street schools having suffered the most. 29 of the 45 pupils belonged to these schools.

The average attendance was 1,121 or 87.4 per cent.

The Central enrolled 463, average 403 or 86.4 per cent.; Rubidge street school, 230, average 207 or 87 per cent.; the Park street school 214, average 174 or 82½ per cent. The low average attendance of the Park street school was also due to illness.

The kindergartens enrolled: Central, 60, average 49; South Ward, 30, average 27½.

The progress of the schools during the year in the several branches of study will be reported fully next month after the half-yearly promotion examinations have been held.

The yearly report to the Education Department shows a gratifying increase in the average attendance for the year.

Prior to 1892 the yearly average attendance of the Public School pupils of Peterborough (so far as I am able to get the figures) never exceeded 90 per cent. of the total enrolment. In 1894 it was as low as 51 per cent. For 1893, the average attendance was 95 per cent. of the total enrolment, and for 1894, 70 per cent.

The total enrolment in 1894, was 1262, average 1121. Boys, 626; girls, 636; number that attended less than 20 days, 56; between 20 and 50 days, 139; between 51 and 100 days, 218; between 101 and 150 days, 265; between 151 and 200 days, 324; over 201 days, 148.

The schools were kept open 203 days and the aggregate attendance was 226,509.

The monthly average attendance has been 88 per cent. of the monthly enrolment; but in reasoning the average attendance for the year the total aggregate attendance must be divided by the number of teaching days the schools were kept open, after which the percentage is ascertained by comparing this average with the the total enrolment for the year.

As I have several times pointed out to the Minister of Education this method of comparing the yearly average attendance is very unfair to the schools of Ontario. In our total enrolment is included all pupils (1) who move from the town and attend school elsewhere; (2) all who pass the Entrance Examination in June and attend the Collegiate Institute the following term; (3) all who have reached their 14th birthday and have been withdrawn in accordance with law by their parents or guardians; and (4) all little ones who in the Fall term have reached their 5th birthday and have to be admitted.

In my annual report to the Department it is recorded that 413 pupils attended school less than half the number of school days for the year, yet in every case but three those pupils came under one or other of the above headings.

There are several other important matters I should like to bring before the Board in Committee of the Whole.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

J. W. GARVIN.

The report was received and the Board went into Committee of the Whole. On rising the committee reported that a resolution had been passed to the effect that hereafter the caretakers of the schools take instructions from the chairman of the Property Committee and the Inspector.

Mr. Ferguson then presented the following general statement of Receipts and Expenditures of the Peterborough Board of Education for the year ending Dec 31st, 1894:

Upon the presentment of the financial statement, it was referred to the auditors for inspection, and it was moved by Messrs. Hayes and Ferguson, that the secretary ask the town council why the money called for by the Board on March 5th last was not forthcoming at an earlier date than when received in September and December. Also why the last debentures for $1000 were sold at $960 instead of at par, the same as other town debentures.

The Board then adjourned.

Whooping Cough.

For Whooping Cough and all throat affections, chest troubles, etc., Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the best embrocation ever discovered. It promptly relieves inflammation, pain and soreness from whatever cause arising.

Possibility of Rosebery's Defeat.

LONDON, Jan. 9.—Sir John Long, an advanced Liberal M. P., said in a speech in Dundee last evening that a wave of political reaction had set in and that it was possible that upon the reassembling of Parliament the disruptive tendencies of the Liberal party would bring about a Government defeat and the dissolution of Parliament. Edmund Robertson, Liberal M. P., who spoke at the same meeting, said he was authorised to state that the Government would begin the session with a business like programme and would not throw up the sponge until defeated in the House of Commons.

A Female College Burned.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 9.—A special from Huntsville, Ala., says: "The Huntsville female college, one of the largest institutions of the kind in the South burned yesterday. There were one hundred boarders in the building, all of whom escaped without serious injury.

Guatemalan Boundary Dispute.

CITY OF MEXICO, Jan. 9.—The Guatemalan Minister, following instructions from his government, is pursuing a very conciliatory policy. The indications are that the boundary dispute will be settled peaceably.

Suicide at St. Catharines.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Jan. 9.—Thomas Feeney, about 45 years of age, a grinder by occupation, committed suicide by cutting his throat at his home on Queenston street this city yesterday. About nine months ago Feeney's oldest son was killed at the McKinnon works, this city. It is thought this so preyed upon his mind that he sought relief by committing the rash act. Deceased leaves a widow and four children.

A Bad Earthquake in Japan.

BOSTON, Jan. 9.—The earthquake which visited the Yamagata prefecture of Japan two months ago was especially severe at Sakata. A letter from Rev. H. P. Newell, sent to the American Board of Foreign Missions, dated November 7, says 736 persons were killed, 904 wounded and 5,868 houses were destroyed.

Killed by a Lake Shore Train.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Jan. 9.—Farmer Alex. Ball and his brother-in-law while crossing the Lake Shore tracks near the city were struck by a train. Ball was instantly killed and his brother-in-law badly hurt.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Jan. 9, 1895.

Street sales here were 300 bushels white wheat at 62 to 63c; red quoted at 61 1-2c.; 500 bushels barley at 46 1-2 to 47 1-2c.; 300 bushels oats at 35c.

Wheat was strong in Chicago during the early part of the session, but closed weak and unchanged on bearish crop reports. Corn and oats closed early and unchanged.

In Buffalo barley was quiet and firm. A few cars of Canada No. 2 grade sold 62 1-2 to 63c. Fair demand for the poorer grades of western but buyers' views are 1 to 1 1-2c. below holders' values.

At East Buffalo the sheep and lamb offerings were 42 cars. Market ruled steady throughout and about all the offerings were disposed of. The supply of native lambs was only of moderate quality and the offerings of Canadas were only six cars which sold at $4.80 to $4.95 as to quality.

The trading at the New York stock exchange was extremely light. The undertone of the market was firm. Usually well-informed people on financial matters are not looking for any legislation of importance from Washington in the immediate future. There were a few stocks which helped to relieve the monotony of the day, notably Chicago Gas and Jersey Central. The general market while dull, firm and higher prices were recorded.

There was a generally good tone in London with increasing interest with all the markets. Americans were good, closing quiet at the best. Business here is quiet and the rise was merely a reflection of the spurt in New York.

SCROFULA 12 YEARS

Always Sore. Face Burned Like Fire. Ashamed to be Seen. Four Doctors but Little Benefit. Cured by Cuticura.

For about ten or twelve years I have been troubled with scrofula. My head was always sore, my face was dry and scaly, and burned like fire most of the time. My body had big red spots on it, and I did not know what to do. I went to four different doctors and they helped me at first. In the fall I got worse again; then I tried other remedies, but they did me no good. I was ashamed to go into public. I was a sight to look at. Every one would say, "What is the matter, why don't you take something?" Even at my daily labor I had to wear a sort of cap to keep the dirt from getting into the sores. After I would wash, I would be covered with big red pimples all over my neck and face. Some two or three people advised me to try the CUTICURA REMEDIES. I did try them, and am glad I have done so. Glad to say I am a well man, and in the best of health since. I cannot praise the CUTICURA REMEDIES too highly. I enclose my portrait.

THE TURK'S SIDE OF IT

A Spanish Traveller Tells Another Story of the Armenian Outrages.

HIS VERSION FINDS SYMPATHY

What Appears to be a Reliable Account of the Recent Troubles in Armenia—The People Killed Were Slain in Open Battle With the Turks.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—The Morning Post prints a long interview with the Spanish traveller named Ximinez, who has just returned from a geographical mission through Mesopotamia and Kurdistan. He said:

"I was in Armenia from March to November and happened to be in Bitlis during the disturbances in the Sassoun district. It is absolutely false that women and children were outraged and tortured by the Turkish troops. The whole thing was grossly exaggerated from an entirely local disturbance, locally suppressed, the troops arriving too late to share in the repression beyond the capture of the supposed instigator. He was a liberated convict named Bohasian, alias Mourah, formerly a pupil in the American Methodist mission school.

Ximinez exonerates Zekki Pasha, who on arriving at Moosh, immediately liberated numbers of Armenians and adopted a policy of conciliation throughout. Ximinez says that the Armenian question hardly exists in Armenia. The Armenians of the Sassoun district, he describes as the least educated and intelligent of those of Turkey and very different from their fellows in Van and Bitlis. He thinks they are little better than Kurds. The disturbance arose from quarrels and raids of the Kurds and Armenians, he says, and developed until the Armenians mustered a force of 5,000, intent either upon reprisals on the Kurds or revolution. The troops twice encountered this force on August 27, killing 300 of them in an open fight.

The editor of the Post describes Ximinez as a distinguished Spaniard of high scientific attainments and a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society of England. He accepts the above statement as true and hotly denounces Mr. Gladstone and the other supporters of the Armenian political plotters.

VIENNA, Jan. 1.—A despatch from Constantinople explains why the Turkish police entered the Armenian cathedral yesterday. The patriarch Stephen Peter Azarian had received many menacing letters owing to his public statements discrediting the worst reports from Armenia and favoring the porte.

Cheiib and Djelaledin, members of the Commission of Inquiry arrived at Erzeroum on Monday.

The Standard says that Great Britain has replied to the Porte's appeal to disavow Mr. Gladstone's birthday speech on Armenia by directing attention to the fact that Mr. Gladstone is simply a member of Parliament and cannot be prevented from uttering his personal views.

ON THE SHORES OF HUDSON BAY.

Mr. Tyrrell Returns From His Search Into the Wilds of Canada.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 10.—J. B. Tyrrell, Dominion Government Geographical Surveyor, has reached the city after an absence of six months on a journey to the shores of Hudson Bay. The surveyors left for the Churchill exactly forty days ago and walked almost the whole distance to Winnipeg, nearly two hundred miles. Speaking of the new territory surveyed Mr. Tyrrell said that he had not been able to locate several timber areas and note the existence of many "interesting rocks," but he would not say whether or not he had discovered any minerals.

On the Kazan river Tyrrell fell in with a tribe of Esquimaux. These people have become alarmed of their brethren on the coast to whom they originally belonged and have become an inland tribe. They subsist mainly on raindeer meat, of which they can obtain an abundant supply with but little effort, as raindeer run through the region in vast herds.

Commission Merchants Meet at Buffalo.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—At the convention of commission merchants, Delegate Marvin H. Mackey, of Buffalo, read a paper upon "Trade." He eulogised Buffalo as the second railroad centre in the world and the largest sheep market in the world. Certain features of the Wilson tariff bill have very materially increased the transportation of goods from the Dominion of Canada into our market. This is especially true in regard to apples, eggs and poultry. Mr. Mackey concluded by suggesting that the convention should recommend the [illegible] some specific telegraph cypher code, so as to lessen the expense of telegraphing. F. W. Hart, of the firm of Hart & Tuckwell, of Montreal, then made a brief address. He was followed by Mr. George McWilliams and Mr. M. P. Clemes, both of Toronto, Can.

The Dispute of the Railroads.

CHICAGO, Jan. 10.—Chairman Caldwell wired from Montreal that he was making progress in his negotiations with the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk, but would require further time time to make final settlement or to determine that none would be made. The Canadian Pacific had withdrawn all its objections and it remains to pacify the Grand Trunk. Mr. Caldwell was given complete authority to make a final settlement with both lines. Should the Grand Trunk not agree it has been determined to ignore it completely in the same way it was originally proposed to ignore the Canadian Pacific.

THE MEMORIAL FUND.

The Total Amount Deposited in the Bank of Montreal.

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.—The Bank of Montreal, which has been the chief place in which the funds of the Thompson testimonial fund were deposited, has reported to the Hon. Mr. Foster a total of $9,936, which includes nearly all the local subscribers and a few from outside places, which were handed over from other banks. In addition to the above amount, Mr. Foster has received other contributions direct, all of which makes an aggregate sum of $11,100. The accompanying list of subscribers, it will be remarked, does not contain the handsome subscription of $5,000 cabled from Sir Donald Smith, and the $3,500 from Mr. Ogilvie, of Montreal, neither of which has been reported to the general treasurer. A Row With U. S. Soldiers.

CHICAGO, Jan. 10.—An exciting encounter between fifteen soldiers stationed at Fort Sheridan and two village marshals occurred at Highwood. As a result of the fracas three of the soldiers are confined in the hospital and the village marshals are nursing their wounds. The shooting occurred on the main street of the village. The soldiers claim that the shooting which was done by Marshal Gordon was unprovoked. On the other hand Marshal Gordon and Cauley claim to have acted in self defence and also say that the soldiers were under the influence of liquor. Sergt. Thomas O'Rourke, who is well known as the best marksman in the army, was identified as one of the men who took part in the affair and is now under arrest at Waukegan.

A Dangerous Moonshiner Dead.

IUKA, Miss., Jan. 10.—News comes from Red Sulphur Springs, Tenn., of a double tragedy in which a commercial traveller named Steele and a noted moonshiner, Gus. Thomas, lost their lives. Thomas was the outlaw who a week ago murdered Dr. Martin and was in the party which a couple of years ago fired into a posse of federal revenue officers wounding Marshal J. W. Brown and killing Deputy Marshal Garner. He was the most desperate moonshiner in the south.

Sir Mackenzie's Health.

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.—Sir Mackenzie Bowell continues to transact all important business in connection with his department at his rooms in the Russell, but he is otherwise kept as quiet as possible so as to give a chance to his throat to get better. Too much talk irritates it and therefore his physicians has forbidden his seeing more people than he can possibly help. In a week or so it is expected he will be around as lively as ever.

Raise in Oil Stock.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 10.—There was a sale of oil made yesterday on the local exchange at an even dollar, the first time in almost five years that a barrel of crude has sold at that figure in Pittsburg. The present firmness is much discussed and speculators who once crowded the bull ring show an inclination to get back into business once more.

DOWN FELL THE BENTS

A Terrible Accident on the T. H. & B. Near Dundas.

THREE MEN SERIOUSLY HURT

One of Whom Will Probably Die of His Injuries—Workmen Were Constructing a Trestle on the New Line When the Awful Accident Happened.

DUNDAS, Ont., Jan. 10.—A terrible accident occurred yesterday at the trestle work on the T. H. and B. railway in Binkely's Hollow, causing great loss to the contractors and perhaps the lives of at least three men.

The trestle is built by erecting bents made of square timber, some of which are 64 feet high. These bents are raised up to their places by an engine with blocks and pulleys, one block being attached to the bent last put in position, and on this block is the greater portion of the weight and strain of the next bent being raised, although the guy ropes lessen the strain somewhat.

At about 5.30 o'clock in the evening a bent 64 feet high had just been raised to its position and fastened by spiking planks to the bent last raised, and the workmen had nearly all gone back from the spot, only three or four remaining to finish, when, without a moment's warning, sixteen of the twenty-four bents which had been put up came down with a terrific crash, smashing many of the huge square timbers into kindling wood and making a pile of twisted and broken wood out of what had been the finest square timber ever put into a bridge or trestle.

The moment after the crash heart-rending cries of pain came from the wounded men and a rush was made to extricate them. In a few minutes three men who were terribly mangled were taken out and instantly medical help was sent for from here. Drs. Ross, Bertram and Smith were quickly at the scene and took charge of the wounded men.

One poor fellow had both legs broken and left arm broken in two places, besides other minor injuries. Another had his left leg broken and injured internally. The other had no bones broken but is supposed to be injured internally. Had the accident occurred fifteen minutes sooner twenty or thirty men would probably have been killed or badly mangled.

The wounded men were quickly chloroformed and placed on mattresses, covered with blankets and taken to Hamilton hospital. It is thought that one at least cannot possibly recover.

The injured are: Rogers, Hamilton, married, compound fracture both legs, left arm broken in two places, scalp torn very badly, one eye gouged out. Riley, Hamilton, married, compound fracture left leg and injured internally. John Kerr, Hamilton, unmarried, no bones broken, but must be badly injured internally.

This section of the T. H. & B. Railway is under Supt. Skinner's supervision, with Foreman Finnigan. Both were absent at the time but had been there through the day. An investigation will be held and perhaps a coroner's inquest. The damage to the trestle work will run up into the thousands.

THE COPYRIGHT ACT.

Mr. Daldy Replies to the Letter of Mr. J. D. Edgar, M.P.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—Mr. Daldy writes to the Times in reply to J. D. Edgar, the Canadian M.P., who argued recently in favor of the Copyright Act of 1889. He says: "Legal and other opinions support the contention that Canada really is asking England now to legislate against English authors and in behalf of Canadian printers. However, only the interested few make the demand. In visiting Canada in 1894 I found the entire public except the political circle unaware that the demand had been made. They anxiously repudiate all connection with it.

European Friendliness in the South Seas.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Jan. 10.—The new naval commander Admiral Bridge has arrived. A farewell banquet was given to Admiral Bowden-Smith, Premier Sir Robert Duff, presiding. Admiral Smith said in his speech that despite the fact that all Pacific Islands except Tonga were annexed by the powers it was necessary that British cruisers continue to patrol these waters owing to increased responsibilities in connection with the recent annexations. He rejoiced, he said, to know that the relations of Great Britain, France and Germany in the South Seas were most cordial.

This Slander Case Fell Through.

HAMILTON, Jan. 10.—It is not likely the slander suit brought by Henry Kuntz, the brewer, against Ald. Hancock, will come to trial as the licensed victuallers' association would not care to have all the facts in connection with their attempt to secure the repeal of the license reduction by-law made public. Ald. Martin, another member of the council, says he was approached by a man who offered him $500 if he would vote to reapeal the by-law, but the alderman refused to listen to the proposition.

Toronto Boodling Case.

TORONTO, Jan. 10.—The case of ex-Alderman Stewart, charged with soliciting a bribe, came up yesterday in the police court. The most important evidence was that of J. J. Wright, of the Toronto Electric Light Company. He stated that Stewart told him he could have the influence in the electric light contracts of four aldermen, namely Gowanlock, Bailey, Murray and Hewitt, on payment of $15,000. The case was adjourned until to-morrow.

Ontario Creamery Convention.

CHESLEY, Ont., Jan. 10.—At the second day of the Ontario Creamery convention held here the attendance was much larger than that of Tuesday. Some very able speeches were made by the different delegates. The farmers appeared to take a very deep interest in the instructions given by the different speakers. At the close of the days proceedings the visitors were entertained at a banquet in the McDonald House by the people of Chesley.

ONE CHANCE FOR ECONOMY.

One of the objections of Mr. Foster to a tariff reduction, is the necessity for revenue. If the expenses should be sensibly lessened there would be a good excuse for tariff reduction without touching the wide area in which the present extravagant Government could practice retrenchment. The St. John Telegraph points to the civil service as a sample of the reduction of expense that could be effected. The civil servants at Ottawa are a highly favoured class, who pay no taxes, whose positions are practically for life, and who, if disabled from work by age or otherwise, receive a superannuation allowance for the remainder of their days. When it is considered that the positions of civil servants are permanent, and their pay guaranteed by the government, they ought to be willing to work for the same rate of pay as men doing similiar work in ordinary mercantile employment enjoy. Every business man knows what these rates are, and every clerk who begins life in a business establishment is aware of the limit of pay which he is likely to obtain. A great many good clerks have to work for salaries ranging from $500 to $800 a year, and the number who in Canada receive more than the latter figure is quite small. But in the civil service of Canada, at Ottawa, and an entirely different scale of pay prevails, and many clerks are receiving $1800 a year for services worth not more than $800 or $900 in commercial life. Take for instance, the department of marine and fisheries, of which Hon. John Costigan has just been made the head. In this department there is one deputy-minister receiving $3,600 a year. There are six chief clerks, whose salaries aggregated in 1893, $13,550, an average of $2,290 a year for each. There are five first class clerks, with salaries aggregating $7,350, an average of $1,470 a year; nine second-class clerks, with salaries aggregating $11,103, or $1,220 each; and fourteen third-class clerks, with $11,355 in aggregating salaries, or $810 each. Now, it will be observed that the average salaries of the the third class class clerks were much greater than the average of any first-class mercantile establishment, including clerks of all grades, from the head book-keeper down. Why should this be, and why should the government pay twice as much for the services of clerks as private firms do? What need can there be for five chief clerks in the marine department when two or three could do the work, and why should their salaries be so large?

But the civil service clerks not only receive salaries altogether out of proportion to the work they do, but they demand extra pay for every hour they work beyond the alloted time. We observe in the accounts of the department for 1893 many such entries as the following: Alexander, W. H., preparing bounty cheques, 134 hours, at 58c, $77.72. Mr. Alexander, whose name is taken here because it comes first on the list, is in receipt of a salary of $1,500 a year, but if he works after hours the government has to pay him extra. This bounty cheque extra pay was received by twenty-three of the clerks of the department last year, and the government had to pay on that account upwards of $1,700 extra for services which ought to have been performed in the ordinary office hours, or for the regular pay of the clerks. The marine and fisheries office at Ottawa cost $60,000 to run last year, but a business house doing the same work would probably be able to keep its cost down to $30,000.

The cost of the finance department in Ottawa in 1893 was $65,000. The salaries were, for a deputy head, $4,200; three chief clerks at salaries varying from $2,350 to $2,600, a secretary at $1,350; five first-class clerks, $8,387; an average of $1,675; seventeen second-class clerks, $22,725, an average of $1,340; and three third-class clerks, $2,900 or $960 each. Here, as in the marine and fisheries office, the average pay of the third-class clerks is higher than that of senior clerks in an ordinary mercantile establishment, yet the work done by most of these highly paid employees is purely clerical. We might go through all the departments and show a similar state of affairs, but one more, the post office, will suffice. That department office at Ottawa cost $325,000 in 1893. It employed one deputy head at $3,200; eight chief clerks, $17 350, an average of $2,220 each; ten first-class clerks, $16,150, an average of $1,645 each; forty second-class clerks, $54,000, an average of $1,330 each, and 121 third-class clerks, $96,170, or nearly $800 each. Here the average salaries are lower than either of the other departments we have described, but much higher than in the outside post offices or in any mercantile establishment.

WILL NEWFOUNDLAND JOIN THE FAMILY?

Newfoundland is in a very bad way and our hearts go out in sympathy to the wayward sister that has so persistently refused to come into the family of Confederation. Through a commercial crisis there is great destitution and suffering. Men made desperate, it is alleged, with hunger have stormed the shops in search of food and a large party assailed the legislature chamber demanding assistance. This is not alarming, but it will do much to give point to the proposal to admit Newfoundland into the Confederation. So far the island has steadily resisted all overtures to this effect. But now that something like a deadlock has come in the administration of the affairs of the island, it is probable that the islanders themselves will be inclined to pay more attention to the question of union that is believed to be engaging the attention of both the Imperial and Canadian authorities. Sir Ambrose Shea, a former premier, has been selected by the home government to report upon the condition of the island, doubtless with a view of paving the way to the union of Newfoundland with the Dominion. Commercially, Newfoundland would be a good market. At present we send to that island, a little over a million of the six or seven millions Newfoundland imports, and nearly all composed of what this country has a surplus supply of. With the island's hostile tariff removed by union, the great bulk of this trade would be ours. With Newfoundland annexed to the Dominion, Canada would extend unbrokenly from Cape Race to Victoria.

How to Mend an Injured Leg.

In these days of autumn sports, football particularly, there is an injury common to athletic girls and boys which, without being dangerous, is exceedingly painful.

This is the dislocation of the kneepan, or patella, as the doctors call it.

"How can an unfortunate help himself?" was the query I put to a doctor, and I learned this:

He must at once lie down, stiffen the leg, place his fingers at the top of the kneepan, which moves easily under pressure. Push the little cap firmly downward, and work it sideways until he feels it gradually slipping into a correct position. If his limb is bare his eye will guide him also as to its attitude, as its shape is strongly outlined.

A companion should catch the foot and steadily pull it. This amateur operation is painful, but infallible. When the little cap slips to its place, then two splints of wood should be placed at either side of the knee and a tight bandage of cloth wrapped stiffly about it—a handkerchief serving admirably. If it is necessary to walk home, the pain, as well as common sense, will teach him to throw no weight on the injured limb. When he gets home he should have strong massage and strips of adhesive plaster put around the knee, holding the troublesome bone pan in place. No bathing or dressing of it is necessary.

If one has access to a doctor's rooms or hospitals, he can study the position of the kneepan and will wonder why it is not displaced oftener, it is so loosely hung. Its name defines its shape, and its position as layer over the two knee joints is secured by means of a strong muscle that passes over it and to which the pan adheres. It is the wrenching away from this muscle at the lower end that causes the dislocation and which makes locomotion an almost impossible thing. The bandage or strips of plaster keeping the pan in position allows the muscle to grow back on the bone.

This form of injury is common among athletic girls, especially those given to jumping and climbing.

NEW-FOUND-LAND—SAN-FRAN-CIS-CO

The Proper Way to Pronounce These Names Laid Down by Authorities.

A man from St. John's, Newfoundland and another man from San Francisco, Cal., met as strangers at a cafe table, says the New York Sun, but after some casual talk they happened to speak of the foreign pronunciation of the province from whence one hailed and the city of the other, and thus they soon became fervid friends, bound by a sympathetic tie, which was bountifully irrigated before they parted.

"It used to make us only weary, but now it makes us angry," explained the St. John's man. "Indeed, at first, we did not know what visitors from the United States were talking about when they spoke of 'Nu-fun lan,' with the accent on the first syllable. The name of my country is exactly as it is spelled, made up of three words, namely, 'new,' 'found,' and 'land.' If Lieutenant Peary should find a new land this winter I wonder if New Yorkers would, in conversation, speak of it as the 'nu fun lan?'"

"That is pretty tough," said the San Franciscan, "but we suffer worse, because from a worse cause. People probably mispronounce the name of your country through carelessness, but easterners call my city out of its name with malicious purpose, and that none of them has been hanged for it shows that we are forebearing people beyond all others. They call my city"—the speaker choked at the word—"they call it 'Frisco!' Why do they not call it 'Denis,' or 'Mars?' They have just as much right, and d—— 'm, sir, they seem to think they are doing something pleasant and smart; yet every San Franciscan loathes, with a murderous loathing, to hear his city so called. No native or resident of San Francisco ever calls it 'Frisco.' He would rather admit that its climate is bad. Californians never abbreviate their geographical names. Even 'San Bernardino,' 'San Luis Obispo,' 'San Buenaventura,' are honored in every syllable."

Improve the Poor Spots.

If there are poor spots on the farm improve them. Do not let them lie idle. Sow to grass and plow under. The farm on which we were born had ten acres of poor soil. Nothing was done with it until a few years since, when it was improved by sowing orchard grass and turning it under. It was then sown to wheat and another crop of orchard grass turned under. In this way and by a free application of barnyard manure it was made a good field. The soil was sandy.—Farmer's Voice.

For these two things—to build up woman's strength, and to cure women's ailments—this is the only medicine that's guaranteed. If it doesn't cure, in every case, your money is returned. On these terms, what else can be "just as good" for you to buy? The "Prescription" regulates and promotes all the natural functions, never conflicts with them, and is perfectly harmless in any condition of the female system. It improves digestion, enriches the blood, brings refreshing sleep, and restores health and vigor. "Several years ago, I caught a severe cold, attended with a terrible cough that allowed me no rest, either day or night. The doctors, after working over me to the best of their ability, pronounced my case hopeless, and said they could do no more for me. A friend, learning of my trouble, sent me a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which I began to take, and very soon I was greatly relieved. By the time I had used the whole bottle, I was completely cured. I have never had much of a cough since that time, and I firmly believe that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life."—W. H. LAKEHURST LACONICS.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The Christmas festivities have passed and gone and all that are left to us are the pleasant memories of happy hours spent with our friends and loved ones. As these occasions come and go, we are also warned of the flight of Time, and that the world with its millions is one year older. May it be that we grow better in growing older.

There have been changes enough in the weather since Christmas to suit the most fastidious. Those weather prophets who were so confident that we would have an open winter, will have to try again, and maybe they will be able to hit one bye-and-bye. At present the air is filled with fog, which, saith the old saw "will freeze a dog," so our prophets had better give old king winter a rest until he abdicates in favour of spring. The road across Buckhorn Lake to Indian village has been bushed out and the ice is reported as good.

Many of our people are glad to see sleighing. What with drawing cutters over bare ground all the way to town and back again, and horses falling lame, and losing many things by the way, it is very discouraging.

The entertainments in this place were fairly successful. The concert held by the Methodist young people in the town hall was well patronised and a good time enjoyed.

A party of friends spent a social evening together at the home of Mr. Wm. Weir, on New Year's night.

Miss Nellie Weir, who taught the Sandy Point school last year, has been engaged to teach the North Harvey school, at Nogie's Creek. May success attend her. Her brother has returned to his school at Westwood, while James is again at Norwood High School.

Miss Ella Weir, who has successfully passed the Normal School, at Ottawa, has taken a school in Hastings Co.

NORTH MONAGHAN.

(From our Own Correspondent.)

There was no election in North Monaghan on Monday, but next Monday evening, the 14th inst. there will be more votes cast than there would have been on election day. For it will be found, Mr. Editor, that every man, woman and child who attends the oyster supper on Monday night next will vote it the biggest success of the season. Abundance of oysters are being supplied by our big hearted councilmen to the High Park band, who will give an oyster supper and entertainment on the above named night. Everybody is invited to come.

Yes, come along ye people, there are oysters galore,
And all it will cost you is a dime at the door;
And this will secure you a ticket also
For admission to concert to which all want to go.
There'll be violin solos, and cornet duetts,
Instrumentals of all kinds, but no dancing sets;
Vocal solos, cornet solos, selections by the band,
And all for a dime, why, yes, my good land!
You'll see more, hear more, and get more oyster stew,
Than ever you did in all your life, as true as I'm telling you.
Please remember then the date, don't miss it if wise,
We'll give you all you want to eat regardless of size;
Then accept this invitation, it's extended to you all,
We care not what your religion is, just come along, that's all.

—SIMON THE POET.

OMEMEE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The holiday visitors have all returned back to their different avocations, including teachers and students.

The holiday entertainments were highly successful, both the band and that of the Presbyterians. Stu Fax, at the latter, gave the best of satisfaction and the cornet solos given by Herb. Williamson, bandmaster, at both entertainments, delighted the audiences.

A meeting will be held here, on Thursday, Jan. 10th, in the Presbyterian church, addressing a call to J. N. Tanner, B. A., of Quebec, to the Presbyterian church, Omemee, Fowler's Corners and Mount Pleasant.

Peterborough carpenters are making rapid progress in erecting J. Murphy's new house.

The Rev. Geo. Sherwood, an old pupil of Omemee High School, preached acceptably in Christ's church, last Sabbath.

Our High School is now in full operation again and some of the teachers would not be better salaried in any other place of the same size in the Dominion.

THE BABCOCK TEST INVESTIGATION.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—I see that C. & B. M. crawl out in defence of Mr. S. R. Payne and the system of paying for milk sent to cheese factories by the Babcock test and thinks if Mr. Payne and myself were put in a test bottle and whirled around that Mr. Payne would be on top. Certainly he would. Everybody knows that bubbles and gas are always on top. Then he resorts to the old threadbare plea that by paying for milk by the butter fat, the farmer will take better care of milk, etc. Now he tries to draw the thinking mind away from the facts produced against the system and intimates that I am dishonest, because I differ from him in my opinion drawn from the arguments of both parties for and against the system. Now sir, will you and Mr. Payne answer the following questions:

1. How many cheese factories are represented on the Peterborough Cheese Board and how many of them pay by the butter fat test?
2. Do those who have adopted the new system show an average of less number of lbs. of milk to the lb. of cheese than any who have stuck to the old system?
3. Does their cheese stand higher on the Board, and more sought after by the cheese buyers?
4. Are they always taken in first selections, and get a better price for their cheese than those who do not pay by the butter fat?
5. Has the cheese inspector less trouble in their factories than in the others, and do they find their product more uniform and better flavoured?
6. Who tests the milk at the factory—the cheesemaker or an inspector? If the former, by what means can it be shown that he has done justice to all?
7. If by the latter, how often does he visit the factory during the season?
8. Is he a more reliable man than the cheesemaker, and what redress has the former if he disputes his testing?
9. Is the former duly notified of the test?
10. Will he have to wait till the end of the season before he knows what he is getting for his milk—something or nothing?
11. Is the milk inspector an officer of the Dairymen's Association?
12. When taking office is he required to take an oath binding him to do justice to all to the best of his ability?
13. What salary does he receive for his services?
14. Is he paid by the year or by the cheesemaking season?
15. Who pays him, the Association or the factory employing him?
16. Is the milk always paid for by the amount of fat as shown by the Babcock Test? That is if A sends milk containing 3 per cent. of fat, and B sends milk with only 2 per cent of fat will A receive one third more than B for the same amount of milk?
17. Will the milk sent by A make a third more cheese than that sent by B, and if not will the quality be equal to the difference in quantity of cheese?
18. And by what instrument can this be found out.

A satisfactory answer to these questions will go further in settling this question than a carload of gas. Now Mr. C. and B. M., you started off with the assumption that you are a man and I call upon you to answer up or shut up, thus proving to be what you assume. I will insist on an answer to these questions. You may wiggle and squeal but I will treat with contempt any evasion of these questions. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for space in your valuable paper. I remain, yours truly.

Arizona's Strange Habitations.

Arizona is plentifully sprinkled with the ruins of strange habitations. Most of them are constructed of concrete or adobe, and the mystery about them is the identity of the people who designed them. How they could be built is not a matter of conjecture, as the materials are close at hand. But there is one ruin, although still in a good state of preservation, which is a mystery, no matter in what light it is considered.

It is in the Huachuca mountains, not far from the military reservation, in a northeasterly direction. Nothing is known of its origin, and the wonderful part is the material of which it is constructed. It is about 200 miles from the ocean and surrounded on all sides by hills of sand and rocks covered with cacti. There is no water for miles, except the excuses for rivers that run during the rainy season. There is not even the suggestion of water, and yet the house is built of seashells laid in a sort of cement.

Where the shells were obtained is a mystery that may never be solved. It does not seem possible that the builder of the house would carry the material over hundreds of miles of desert when there were plenty of rocks near by that would answer the purpose just as well, even though they were not so unique. The house is built in the shape of the straw huts of the Papago Indians and is about the same size. There is room inside for five or six persons, but at present nobody occupies it, except perhaps some prospector who uses it for a temporary shelter in cold weather. There are a dozen variety of shells in the walls, and one over the door is of extraordinary size.

The age of the building will never be known, but there is little doubt that it is as old as the oldest in the territory.—San Francisco Call.

NEW YEAR
NEW GOODS
1895

On looking over last year's business we find that we have everything to be thankful for, as it was one of the best years that, notwithstanding the hard times, we ever had, and that is saying a great deal.

Now, as this is the season for making good resolutions, we have resolved to surpass, if possible, last year's trade. To attain this end we have duplicated all our fall Cloths and added all the latest winter patterns we could find. We buy for spot cash and can afford to sell on a small margin. Give us a call and we will do the rest.

Our Gent's Furnishings and Underclothing Departments are both well stocked. We have a few choice Overcoats still left which we will let off cheap.

Pete Simons & Co.

416 George Street. Opposite Examiner Office.

The Goods are RIGHT If They Are LEFT.

We refer to our REMNANTS which have been LEFT over after a heavy season's selling, and which are going so fast that they won't trouble us at stock-taking time.

The qualities and prices are RIGHT—if they are left. Because we have decided to give customers the advantage of good, serviceable, staple oddlengths at and below original cost.

Some of the snaps still left on our Remnant Counter consist of short lengths of DRESS GOODS, CLOAKINGS, FLANNELS, BLANKETS, COMFORTERS, TABLE LINENS, TOWELINGS, &c. But they are going fast. It's worth while to come in and look them over.

We are grateful to our customers for their valuable patronage during 1894, and respectfully solicit continuance of the kind favours during 1895.

PEARLS AND PEBBLES.

Mrs. Traill's Charming New Book.

Canada is fast taking a prominent place in the arena of letters, both in respect of writers and publishers. Many of our literary people have in the past gone abroad to find both publishers and a market for their works. But in the former case our Canadian publisher, Wm. Briggs, Toronto, has made a creditable charge and has issued several important works by Canadians in a most creditable manner. The latest issue of his press is "Pearls and Pebbles," by Mrs. Catharine Parr Traill, at one time a resident of this county—at "Westove," Lakefield, and a frequent visitor to Peterborough. This work is a clever compelation of "the notes of a naturalist, and is all the more remarkable because it is written by a lady who has lived more than half a generation beyond the limit of life set by the Royal Psalmist. Mrs. Traill on Wednesday, Jan. 9th, completed her 93rd year of life. In the charming biographical sketch by Mary Agnes Fitzgibbon, we are told that Mrs. Traill was born in 1802. She came to Canada with her husband, the present site of Lakefield being the objective point. They came by a steamer to Cobourg, thence by light wagon to Rice lake, and by steamer and boat to Peterborough, then a village of a few scattered huts. Mrs. Traill spent a large part of her life in this vicinity, at Lakefield, and at Rice Lake. She and her husband also lived in Ashburnham from 1839 to 1846, occupying a frame house on the hill somewhere near the site of the present public school building. During her early residence in Canada Mrs. Trail suffered many of the vicissitudes incident to life in a new country, but it is to them and the keen observation of the phenomena of Nature she practiced and records that the charming contents of "Pearls and Pebbles" are due. A touching prose-poem, "The First Death in the Clearing," tells of how the rude conditions of early days only developed the brotherhood of man. In the other chapters of the book, however, is where the real interest of the work centres. In the memories of May mornings we get the benefit of Mrs. Trail's close observation and personal interest in the trees, plants and flowers, we are introduced to the blithe birds that nest and brood in May. There is set down in detail—not dry but interwoven with a poetic charm, the habits and movements and family affairs, and, so to speak, personal history of all our native birds. Scientific accuracy of statement and description add to useful instruction and delightful entertainment. Other chapters deal with the flowers and plant and insects that we meet in our out-door walks. Mrs. Traill seems to be in all their family secrets and to have made their little walks and ways their little joys and troubles her own and in a hundred ways instruction, amusement and entertainment are happily blended. She even takes up the cadgels, if such a formidable weapon can find a place in her benevolent equipments—for even the much abused sparrow.

Nothing seems to have been without the pale of her sympathies. She seemed to have carried into her writings the spirit of the lesson of the Ancient Mariner:

He prayeth best who loveth best,
All things both great and small,
For the dear God who loveth us
Hath made and loved us all.

An interesting chapter is also devoted to the children of the forest, the Indians and much interesting aboriginal folk lore, is imparted. Mrs. Traill writes in a straightforward simple, chaste style, evidently a reflex of her nature, which, like the Shakespearean philosopher, finds sermons in stones. Books in the running brooks and good in everything." Her latest and doubtless last book, "Pearl and Pebbles, is full of interest from preface to finish. There is a great deal of local interest, since the scenes with which she so gracefully deals are chiefly in the vicinity of Peterborough. The perusal of "Pearls and Pebbles," brings one in tender and delightful touch with nature in her gentlest moodt and most innocent manifestations, and one cannot rise from the reading of it without feeling that he has been made better by the associations with which he has mingled. The work is contained in a handsomely printed, finely illustrated and elegantly bound volume of about 250 pages and is a credit to the publisher, Wm. Briggs, as a specimen of the art typographic and of publishing enterprise. For sale at the Peterborough Book Store.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Wm. Snowden is visiting her daughter, Mrs. David Roblin in Belleville.

Mrs. Catharine Parr Traill, the nonogenarian Canadian authoress, who celebrated her 93rd birthday yesterday, is expected in town this evening from Lakefield, to spend a few weeks with A. C. Dunlop, Esq., and family who have been intimate friends since the arrival of the Traill family in this country. Mrs. Traill who is well-known as the author of "Studies of Plant Life," "Lost in the Backwoods, Afar in the Forest," the Canadian Crusoes, etc., etc., has lately completed another charming work "Pearls and Pebbles," a reference to which is found in another column — absolutely a work of great interest and merit but simply wonderful, when it is considered that the writer is in her 94th year, still possessed of all the brilliant mental faculties that distinguished her in the prime of her years.

The local Colts are trying to make an arrangement whereby the Belleville Colts can play in Peterborough, Monday evening, instead of Monday morning. A supper will probably be tendered the Belleville curlers if this arrangement can be carried out.

There was a large and enthusiastic meeting held in the curlers' apartment of the Millbrook curling and skating rink on Monday evening, when the Millbrook curling club was organized for the coming season with the following officers:

Hon. President—W. A. Fallis, M.P.P.

President—John Steele.

Vice.-President—Chas. Needler.

Sec.-treas.—H. M. Wood.

Delegates to Ontario Curling Association—C. H. Winslow and L. F. Clarry.

Skips—W. T. Wood, C. Needler, J. Steele and G. Hetherington.

The reason the club has organized so late in the season was owing to the fact that it was not known until a week ago whether the rink would be open or not.

WOULD LIKE TO COME TO PETERBOROUGH.

The Universal Knitting Works Company, of Toronto, Seeking a Site.

Mr. Close, of the Universal Knitting Works, Toronto, who came to Peterborough, yesterday, on the invitation of the Town Council and Board of Trade, with the object of ascertaining if the location would be a favourable one for the Works, which is about to be moved from Toronto, is understood to be well satisfied with what he saw of the town, although no definite arrangement has been reached.

The representative was shown the old Brodie mill and several other sites, which the local men thought might be suitable and was afterwards shown through the Auburn Mills and the Works of the Canadian General Electric Company.

It is understood that an offer of a free site and exemption would bring the company to Peterborough. The number of hands employed would average between 80 and 150 men all the time. The Manufacturers Committee will meet and discuss the matter privately, when a report will be made to the council.

EYES ON THE CIVIC CHAIRS.

Councillors Looking After Municipal Loaves and Fishes.

There is considerable speculation at to who will receive the various town council chairmanships this year. It is held by many that the old chairman who have been re-elected, should continue to be the chairmen of their respective committees. It takes some time for a chairman to thoroughly acquaint himself with the duties of his office, and it might benefit the town to have the services of the old chairmen this year.

There will be seven positions in the chairmen line open, those of the Fire, Water and Light, Charity, License, Printing, Market and Health Committees and the Court of Revision.

How Cold Can Burn.

In the accidents which have attended the manipulation of liquid air and other substances in his laboratory, M. Raoul Pictet has distinguished two degrees of burns from the intense cold. In the first the skin is reddened, turning blue the next day. The spot doubles in area on the following days, there is intense itching and five or six weeks are usually required for healing. In the more severe burns, those of the second degree, the skin is rapidly detached. A long and stubborn suppuration sets in, and healing is very slow and altogether different from that of burns from fire. On one occasion M. Pictet, while suffering from a burn due to a drop of liquid air, seriously scorched the same hand. The scorched portion was healed in ten or twelve days, whereas the cold burn was still open six months afterwards.—London Public Opinion.

THOSE SCHOOL DEBENTURES.

Mr. Lech's Remarks Upon Our Economical Council.

To the Editor of the Daily Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—Reading over the reports of the School Board, the writer felt astonished to note that school debentures are disposed of at a loss to the ratepayers, and the latter would like to know who the lucky investor is, who is sweeping in $50, which the ratepayers have to lose. Is this the economical way that councillors are prating about at election time? Has not everyone of the ratepayers equal right to buy debentures, or are they only for the favourites of the council? There would have been plenty of offers, as money is not scarce, to take debentures at par; as proof thereof the writer himself will take them at par. But this is the way, ratepayers are kept in the dark, unless they are informed by the press. The council's yearly statements have never revealed the cost in detail of our market building, nor the revenue derived therefrom, or whether the occupants pay taxes or not. Thanking you Mr. Editor for your valuable space, I remain, yours truly,

W. LECH.

THE BOARD OF THE PETERBOROUGH CENTRAL.

Arrangements Made for the Society's Annual Meeting.

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the Peterborough Central Exhibition was held yesterday afternoon at the Morgan House, with the following members present: Mr. Geo. Elliott, president, and Messrs. Kennedy, Hall, Davidson, Morgan and Hunter. The accounts for the past year—receipts and expenditures—were taken up and discussed and a full report concerning them will be given at the annual statutory meeting in the town council chamber on Wednesday, January 16th. At this meeting the reports of the township exhibitions, and that the Horticultural Society should be presented according to statute. All members and others interested in the affairs of the society are urgently requested to attend the meeting, which will open at one o'clock sharp, as the chamber is needed for the meeting of the Farmers' Institute later in the afternoon.

WARSAW.

Address and Presentation.

A very pleasant surprise party consisting of nine little girls, came one evening to the home of Mr. Donald McIntosh and presented him with an address and a beautiful white neck scarf and a silver paper knife: This is the address:

DEAR SIR,—We, the members of your Sunday school class, present you with this token of love and respect for you as our teacher. We also join unanimously in asking you to remain our teacher for the ensuing year.
Signed on behalf of the class,
Yours in love and faith,
BERTHA DOUGHTY,
EERIE GOUGH.

Mr. McIntosh replied that besides appreciating the gifts, he appreciated still more the loving impulse which prompted his Sunday school class (of the Presbyterian church) to show their love to him and said he felt encouraged to continue to teach them as they requested him to do. Mrs. McIntosh invited the class to tea, and after a merry evening they dispersed to their several homes.

In Olden Times

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action; but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs, will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

Own a Good Piano

It costs but a trifle more to own a good piano, like the "Rheimer," the "Morris," the "Heintzman" or the "Mendelssohn." The difference in cost is not for one day, or one month, or one year. It's worth five dollars a year for ten years to have exactly what you want. Just think it over. Have a talk with Mr. J. W. Crotty, of 348 Water street, the agent for these four first-class instruments, and close the purchase before the end of the year.

Value of Knowledge.

If any instance of the value of knowledge in the dairy were needed, no more striking proof could be given than that furnished by the experience of Hoard's Dairyman in the vicinity of its location. In 1885 the township of Koshkonong, where it had an established circulation, produced 154,081 pounds of butter, which, we are told sold for an average of 21.06 cents. In the township of Watertown, where it had no subscribers at the time in question, there were produced only 83,445 pounds, which sold for the average price of 12.06 cents per pound, or 9 cents per pound less than the price obtained in Koshkonong township. This amounted to $7,710.10 or $3.71 for each man, woman and child in the township. The farmers of one township posted themselves and the others did not. These two townships were only sixteen miles apart and had the same characteristics and the same markets.

The Jap's Illustration.

A bright young native of Japan, who is in business in this city, came into the Express office the other evening to learn the latest news about the war between his country and China. He speaks English with but a slight accent, and his only difficulty in expressing himself seems to be rather in a limited vocabulary than in inability to pronounce the words. He has the utmost confidence in Japan's ultimate victory, and when it was remarked to him that China had a great advantage in point of numbers, he said:

"It's just like this. You have one hundred cents—that's one dollar. I have one dollar-bill. That's only one. My one is as good as your hundred."

This Japanese has evidently a full appreciation of the advantages of civilization. His simile was a good one, and pretty nearly describes the situation.—Albany Express.

Noted Jersey Breeder Dead.

The death is announced of Edward P. Pasons Fowler at Southampton, England. Perhaps no man's name is more familiar to Jersey cattle breeders than that of Mr. Fowler. His father began importing Channel Island cattle to England in 1811, and the son took up the business while yet a youth. He resided for twenty-eight years on the island of Jersey, but his later years were spent in Southampton. He made many passages with Jersey cattle to this country. His career is an important chapter in the history of Jersey cattle.

SHE DON'T WANT TO TELL

—what made her beautiful. Yet it's only what other women know. Wealth of beauty comes only with a healthy body. Health is a set of good habits. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription assists nature in establishing these habits. Women have sallow faces, dull eyes and hollow cheeks, together with low spirits, when they are made miserable with disorders, derangements and weaknesses peculiar to their sex. Health is regained, after periods of dizziness, nervous prostration and excitability, or other manifestations of derangement or displacement of the womanly organs, when the "Prescription" is used. Besides, it's sold on its merits. The proprietors take the risk.

It is guaranteed to benefit or cure all the disorders, diseases, and weaknesses of women, or money is refunded.

What offer could be more fair?

AN AMERICAN TRIBUTE.

THINKS ENGLAND'S SYSTEM OF GOVERNMENT SUPERIOR.

Mayor Abram S. Hewitt, of New York, Admits the "Irish Conquest" and Favors Limitation of Suffrage—What He Says of American Government Abuses.

Mr. Abram Stevens Hewitt sailed recently for an absence of six weeks in Europe. As mayor of the city of New York, representative of her interests in the national Congress, merchant, financier, manufacturer, litterateur and public benefactor, he is among the first citizens of the United States, and therefore his opinions are valuable. In an interview he said many interesting things. After discussing the capital and labor question at length, he said:

"The system of government under which we are now living in the United States was designed for conditions quite different from those now existing. It fulfilled those conditions admirably, but its limitations have been outgrown; they are now apparent.

"In the United States it is not expedient to take a position of hostility to universal suffrage. A public man who does so is sent to Coventry; he cannot, therefore, be elected to office.

"But I am inclined to think mixed suffrage the best system for us. Let every man have a vote for something—but not for everything. Universal suffrage would not do for a bank; why should it do for a borough? There are wholesome and beneficial ways of qualifying the right of suffrage. Property qualification for certain functions is one way But there are others—the special determination of what should be voted for by one set of citizens and what by another might solve the problem.

"Judges, for example, as it seems to me, should not be voted for at all. They ought to be selected by the highest appointing power in the State. Under a system of universal suffrage the electors cannot possibly be qualified to pass upon the proper qualifications of a candidate for a judgeship. It is a scandalous but inevitable evil, it seems, under our system of electing Judges by the ballot that the candidates for the judicial ermine are forced, like other candidates for elective office, to pay assessments of money to the political organization through which they receive their nomination.

"All the candidates for judgeships in New York are required to pay such assessments. The judges of the higher courts are expected to contribute largely to campaign funds. I believe there is one exception in my knowledge—Judge Lawrence, when nominated the second time, declined to pay any assessment. I myself have subscribed to a fund to be used to pay an assessment for a personal friend of mine, a man of the highest qualifications, who made a judge of incorruptible and lofty dignity and worth. He was a poor man, and the assessment had to be paid, and it was subscribed for him. A system which permits such abuses is wrong, of course.

"I do not sympathize with personal attacks on such men as Croker and Gilroy. They realize that New York ought to have better government; they are willing that we should have it. They propose, however, that Tammany Hall shall have all the profit it can make by the operation, all the spoils and emoluments.

"Our system of government is, for this reason, the most expensive in the world.

"It used to be thought that a monarchy, or an aristocracy, involved more cost than a republican form of government. That has ceased to be true, thanks to our foreign rulers. These gentlemen from over the seas who fill our municipal offices have changed all that. Where the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland draws say $2,000,000 a year from the public purse, under our American system of government it costs, perhaps, $30,000,000 a year to elect our 'American Sovereigns.' Doubtless we can afford to pay heavily for self-government and be proud of it.

"It has been said that the individual system of government encourages independence, self-reliance and civic virtue. That is true. But it has also led to the degradation of the suffrage.

"I consider the British system of government in some respects the best now in existence, yet it can be improved by the abolition of special privileges. And the least costly. The members of Parliament, who are the lawmakers, have absolutely nothing to do with the control of patronage. They are not paid and they cannot influence public servants who are paid. Public offices are filled not by influence, not by money power, but by competitive examination. That may possibly not be the very best way of filling the offices, but it is a very good one. In the main the best men are chosen, though now and then a good official may be lost. Army purchase has been abolished, and the aristocracy or wealthy class can get into office, as a rule, only in the diplomatic service.

"Municipal government in Great Britain has developed many difficulties of late, but the County Councils seem in a fair way to remedy those difficulties. The remedy is at the expense of individual rights, but those must yield to the general good. That is the tendency of the day, and it is along precisely that line socialism may work itself out."

Oats for the Dairy Cow.

Hunter Nicholson, who is a high authority on dairy matters, says that oats cut and cured when the seed is in the milk stage makes as good a hay as can be fed to a milch cow. Oats grow so quickly that dairy farmers can afford to cut them when they are green.—Kansas Farmer.

CUT ON THE CANADA PACIFIC.

A Move Which Will Throw Five Thousand Men Out of Work.

MONTREAL, Jan. 9.—Nearly five thousand men, it is estimated, will be thrown out of employment owing to the decision of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company to cut down expenses. Five hundred men are now out of work here and more dismissals are expected. The cutting down process will apply to all departments.

Mr. C. W. Spencer, general superintendent of the Eastern division, and several of his lieutenants have been in close conference for the last three days, and J. B. Elliott, master mechanic of the road, whose headquarters are at Carleton Junction, is in town, and spent the whole morn with the general superintendent. The Committee of Ways and Means is still in session and every possible reduction is being made.

Over twenty per cent. is the reduction of the pay roll which Mr. J. F. Mundle, local freight agent, expects to accomplish this month. That he will do this, there is little room to doubt, as a glance at the freight sheds showed at once. The assistant foreman who has acted all the summer as foreman in full charge of all the sheds, is now filling in his time as timekeeper, while his predecessor in the last mentioned position is engaged as checker at one of the doors.

The freight sheds at Hochelaga have been closed altogether and the pick of the men employed there were brought into the Dalhousie Square sheds. This will not only effect a saving in labor, but will cut down the charges against the company for cartage very materially. The greatest reductions have been made at the locomotive works where the staff have been cut down fully fifty per cent.

The C. P. R. and the Dominion Alliance.

MONTREAL, Jan. 9.—Representatives of the Dominion Alliance and the Canadian Pacific Railway met again yesterday and came to an agreement respecting the case of Smith, the dismissed C. P. R. agent at Toronto. A memorandum was agreed upon whereby the C. P. R. repudiates the expressions used by Assistant Superintendent Brady in asking for Smith's dismissal. The Canada Pacific Railway, acknowledging that cause for disatisfaction has existed, claim the responsibility of dealing with and will deal with the matter in such manner as they consider deserving in the premises. The C. P. R. claims that, if for no other reason, Mr. Smith's discharge was justifiable on the ground of neglect of duty.

A Strike at Springhill Mines.

SPRINGHILL MINES, N.S., Jan. 9.—A serious strike is imminent here. There is a grievance between the miners and the company. Since the fire only one slope has been working, which has not afforded work for all the men. The company have made arrangements for the men to work twelve hours a shift and a half instead of eight hours and paid accordingly. The men refused to appear at the early hour of six, but appeared at seven o'clock. On appearing their lamps were refused and the men call it a "lockout." Some of the men outside were discharged and the coal haulers knocked off work. The men refuse to work to-morrow. If this grievance continues for a time destitution and suffering are unavoidable. Mr. R. Drummond is expected to-day.

Dr. Willoughby Holds His Seat.

COBOURG, Jan. 9.—Trial of the protest against Dr. Willoughby for East Northumberland was conducted here yesterday. As no evidence was offered the petition was dismissed without costs. Dr. Willoughby holds the seat. Judges Osler and Street, Johnston, Q. C., and Webb for petitioner, Laidlaw, Q. C., and Payne for respondent.

Hurt While Jumping on a Train.

GUELPH, Ont., Jan. 9.—Ed. Kelcher, a seven year-old son of D. Kelcher, stonemason, tried to jump on a moving freight train yesterday to ride home when he slipped and fell, his left foot was crushed and will probably have to be amputated.

MR. AND MRS. BOWSER.

THE AMIABLE COUPLE HAVE A LITTLE DOMESTIC TILT.

Bowser Thinks His Wife Made a Deliberate Attempt on His Life Through Loading His Shoes—A Serious Misunderstanding Which he Gets Benign Over.

"Has anything happened?" asked Mrs. Bowser, as Mr. Bowser got home fifteen minutes late the other evening and was limping on his left leg as he came down the hall.

"Nothing more than that I came within an ace of being brought home in my coffin," he replied, as he kicked his left shoe across the sitting-room.

"Is it possible? Why, what was it?"

"Blood poisoning," he hoarsely whispered, as he fell back on the lounge.

"But how? You were all right when you went away at noon. How can you have blood poisoning?"

"How can one person take another's life when they coolly, deliberately and maliciously set about it?" he shouted in reply.

"Who has tried to take your life? Why don't you explain matters?"

"Mrs. Bowser," he said, as he rose up and stood before her, with his right hand outstretched, "what do you see in my palm?"

"Why, I see a vest buckle, a shirt stud and a nickle. What have they to do with your narrow escape from blood poisoning?"

"What have they to do? This noon I put on this pair of shoes to get the others mended. I had scarcely left the house when I began to limp. Before I reached the office I was suffering intensely. When I pulled off my shoe to investigate I found—

"You found those articles, of course," she finished, as he hesitated and glared at her in an awful way.

"Exactly, Mrs. Bowser, exactly! Who put them there? What was the object? If anyone in this family wants to get rid of me and get my life insurance and marry again, why don't they take an ax and kill me in a decent, respectable way? Why cause me days or weeks of useless suffering?"

"Don't be foolish, Mr. Bowser. In the first place, I didn't know that you had changed your shoes. In the next, it's a wonder you didn't find a hair-brush, comb, paper of pins, handglass and a pint of buttons in your shoes. You are one of the most careless men around the house I ever heard of."

"Mrs. Bowser, are you talking to me?"

"I am."

"I'm a careless man, am I?"

"Very careless, Mr. Bowser."

"I deny it! I deny it in toto! Even a born fool would not drop buttons and buckles and nickels into his shoe. If there's a careful, methodical man in this town, I'm—"

"For instance," she interrupted, "you ran upstairs to change your shoes."

"Among your cuffs," she went on, "were the tack hammer, that window catch you thought you lost on the street car, two cigars and your missing pocketknife. A month ago your gas pinchers and the key of the music box were suddenly missing. To-day I found them in the pocket of one of your summer coats. The last time we changed girls you thought the old one carried off your paper cutter and a sheet of 50 postage stamps. I found them to-day in the hip pocket of those light pants you tore on the knee, you remember——"

"Mrs. Bowser, I remember nothing!" he interrupted—"that is, I remember that if those things were found where you say they were they were deliberately placed there by a certain person. However, the subject has been sufficiently discussed, and we will drop it. There is a great moral lesson in this thing which you should not lose sight of. I am a forgiving husband, but don't carry the thing too far—not too far, Mrs. Bowser! Even the worm will turn, and when he turns he knows no pity."

And for the next half hour Mr. Bowser tried to carry about a benign and magnanimous expression and to treat Mrs. Bowser as a child who had done wrong, but could be forgiven on a pinch, but his effort was a failure. As he went upstairs after his pipe he met the cat and kicked at her, and after finding his pipe in the box with his neckties he sat down and growled:

"By George, but I've got to put my foot right down, or there'll be no living with that woman in three months more."

The First Reaping Machine.

The reaping machine was invented in 23 A. D. A horse or ox pushing a rude affair stripped the head off or cut the stalk, and in a modified form is still used in Australia. Mr. Gladstone bought a reaper in 1806. The American machine came along in 1830 and was wonderfully perfected afterward.—Hardware.

Mrs. Anson says it must have been a woman who invented the alphabet. If it had been a man, he would have begun it with the letter I. But Mrs. Anson is probably wrong. If a woman had invented it, the first letter would have been U.

FULL OF ENCOURAGEMENT

FOR ALL WOMEN.

In Bed 5 Months—Had Given Up All Hope of Getting Well—A Remedy Found at Last to which "I Owe My Life."

Science has fully established the fact that all the nervous energy of our bodies is generated by nerve centres located near the base of the brain. When the supply of nerve force has been diminished either by excessive physical or mental labours, or owing to a derangement of the nerve centres, we are first conscious of a languor or tired and worn-out feeling, then of a mild form of nervousness, headache, or stomach trouble, which is perhaps succeeded by nervous prostration, chronic indigestion, and dyspepsia, and a general sinking of the whole system. In this day of hurry, fret and worry, there are very few who enjoy perfect health; nearly everyone has some trouble, an ache, or pain, a weakness, a nerve trouble, something wrong with the stomach and bowels, poor blood, heart disease, or sick headache; all of which are brought on by a lack of nervous energy to enable the different organs of the body to perform their respective work.

South American Nervine Tonic, the marvellous nerve food and health giver, is a satisfying success, a wondrous boon to tired, sick, and overworked men and women, who have suffered years of discouragement and tried all manner of remedies without benefit. It is a modern, scientific remedy, and in its wake follows abounding health.

It is unlike all other remedies in that it is not designed to act on the different organs affected, but by its direct action on the nerve centres, which are nature's little batteries, it causes an increased supply of nervous energy to be generated, which in its turn thoroughly oils, as it were, the machinery of the body, thereby enabling it to perform perfectly its different functions, and without the slightest friction.

If you have been reading of the remarkable cures wrought by South American Nervine, accounts of which we publish from week to week, and are still sceptical, we ask you to investigate them by correspondence, and become convinced that they are true to the letter. Such a course may save you months, perhaps years, of suffering and anxiety.

The words that follow are strong, but they emanate from the heart, and speak the sentiments of thousands of women in the United States and Canada who know, through experience, of the healing virtues of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, a prominent and much respected lady, writes as follows:—

"I owe my life to the great South American Nervine Tonic. I have been in bed for five months with a scrofulous tumour in my right side, and suffered with indigestion and nervous prostration. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I cannot recommend it too highly."

Tired women, can you do better than become acquainted with this truly great remedy?

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So haggering was poor Pa's disease),
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want;
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all.
Only their rooms were few and small).
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then were home, but stop, I mis'n,

They gave us every one, a kiss,
An' said, "be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home.
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

HOW THE GAY GUTTER FREQUENTERS AMUSE THEMSELVES.

Mysteries of Leap-Frog, Pitch-Penny, Throw the Stick—Fine Points of Cat, Red Rover, and Cherry-Pits, According to Kerb-Stone Rules.

When Theseus in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" bids the Athenian youth "awake the pert and nimble spirit of mirth," one might almost fancy that the pregnant mind of Shakespeare, brooding on things to come, was foreshadowing the gamesome city newsboy. For the street urchins who sell so many thousand copies of the dailies, and to make the byways of all our highways resound with their shrill advertising cries, find time between editions to play a variety of games that are exceedingly interesting to the observer. Many a tired business man stops to mop the dew from his brow and watch these gamins at their games, and looks as if he would like to forget the intricacies of business and the chase after the dear, delusive dollar in the mysteries of craps or the mazes of Red Rover.

Craps has been described too often to need revelation here, and any way is considered sacred, as it were, to our grown-up colored citizens rather than to the embryo polititians of the pave. But a description of some of the other most popular games played will be found of interest.

For instance, cat. This is generally played by two, but may be played by more taking sides. The cat is a piece of wood about the length of one's hand, sharpened at both ends so that these ends project about an inch above the gound. The four sides are marked, respectively, 1, 2, 3 and X. A small circle with a diameter about the length of the cat is drawn with chalk, or anything handy as a substitute, and fifteen or twenty feet away the pitcher takes his stand and endeavors to throw the cat into the circle.

If it lands inside, the striker, who is armed with a short stick, is declared out, or if it comes up with X on top, whether it goes into the circle or not, he is equally out.

Should it land on the edge of the circle or project over the edge, with the three on top, the striker has two chances to hit it; with two, only one chance. If with one on top he has no chance, but it is out also. Suppose him to have two chances. He then strikes the cat on one of the sharpened ends, making it bound into the air, and while it is in the air strikes it again, knocking it as far as he can. He then goes to that spot and repeats the operation, after which he sings out, "I'll give you six" (eight or ten, or as many as his fancy dictates), which means that the pitcher, starting at the circle, must try to reach the resting-place of the cat in the number of jumps prescribed by the striker.

Should he succeed, he counts one. If he doesn't, the count goes to his opponent. The game may be anything agreed upon—twenty, fifty, or a hundred, and some of the players are exceedingly skillful, both in striking, jumping and calculating the possibilities of their opponent's jumping powers.

"Throw the stick" is another game, for which, however, a rather unfrequented square or alley is necessary, or else one in which the passersby are able to become 'artful dodgers' at a moment's notice. A half a dozen or more urchins select a base of operations, generally a post, and lean a stick against it. Then one takes the stick and throws it as far as possible. The one who is 'It' runs after it, while the others scamper away and hide. He brings it back, leans it against the post again and starts out to find the fugitives. If he sees one he calls his name and runs back to touch the post, seize the stick, throw it and run to cover in an opposite direction, but if, before he gets back there, some other boy has rushed out and thrown the stick again, he has to begin all over.

"Red Rover" is another sport, which, like many of the pastimes of children, has a rhythmic and rhyming accompaniment. Two boundaries are chosen on a street, and in the middle of the street stands the boy who has been selected chaser, while the others stand on one sidewalk. He knows the names of all these boys, of course, and selecting one he sings out "Red Rover, Red Rover, let Charlie come over!" Whereupon Charlie jumps from the sidewalk and makes for one of the boundaries. If he catches Charlie, Charlie then becomes an additional chaser to help him "tag" the others. He now sings out "Red Rover, Red Rover, let Jimmie come over!" and if Jimmie reaches the boundary without being caught, Jimmie returns to the group on the sidewalk. This is kept up till all are caught.

The old games of "leap-frog," "cherry-pits" and "pitch penny" are too old and familiar to need description.

The Judge Couldn't See It.

In a suit for separation, counsel for the plaintiff pleaded, among other reasons, incompatibility of temperament. He depicted the character of the husband as "brutal, violent and passionate. The husband's advocate rose in his turn and described the wife as "spiteful, short-tempered and sulky." "Pardon me," interrupted the judge, addressing both limbs of the law; "I cannot see, gentleman, where the incompatibility of temperament comes in.

No Further Disturbances Reported—The Bank Inquiry.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Jan. 10.—No further disturbance occurred here yesterday, although a mob surrounded the court where the arrested rioters were remanded for a further hearing.

The inquiry in the cases of the accused bank directors was resumed before Judge Conroy. The statement of the accounts showed the total liabilities of the firms of the five directors on June 30, 1894 to be $3,085,288. Duder's liability alone was $956,000, while the capital stock of the bank was only $306,000.

THE HENDERSHOTT TRIAL.

Further Evidence Taken At the Preliminary Investigation.

ST. THOMAS, Jan. 10.—At the preliminary trial of the Middlemarch murder case yesterday thirteen witnesses were examined. A great deal of evidence was given as to position of the body under a tree, finding of the bloodstained axe under a log and other testimony similiar to that given at the inquest.

Coroner Gustin identified the signatures of the two prisoners, attached by them to evidence given at the inquest. When the Court adjourned Duncan Hendershott, brother of prisoner Hendershott, was on the stand. He proved to be a very unwilling witness but identified the watch found in the murdered man's vest as one belonging to prisoner Welter.

Hamilton's Big Bonspiel.

HAMILTON, Jan. 10.—Curlers are beginning to arrive here for the big bonspiel, which takes place on Hamilton Bay to-day in commemoration of the coming of age of the Ontario Curling Association. Under the rules of the competition no rink knows its opponent until the curlers go the ice. The bay is in grand condition, the surface being like glass without a bit of snow on it. The competition will be east vs. west as follows: East—Toronto Victorias, ten rinks; Toronto Caledonians, four; Toronto Prospect Park, eight; Totonio Granities, eleven; Scarboro Maple Leafs, one; Parkdale, two; Four Brothers, four; Ancaster Thistles, two; Simcoe, two; Ancaster, two; Thorold Lornes, two; St. Catharines, two; Harriston, three. West—Detroit, two; Chatham, two; Thamesville, one; London, two; Paris, four; Woodstock, three; Brantford, five; Ingersoll, one; St. Mary's, one; Stratford, one; Galt Granities, two; Galt, four; Lucknow, one; Preston, one; Flamboro, two; Dundas, three; Hamilton Asylum, two; Hamilton Victorias, four; Hamilton Thistles, twelve.

A Young Woman's Rash Act.

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.—About three o'clock neighbors living next to 354 Cathcart street were startled by the sharp report of a revolver shot. An investigation followed, and those who first entered the house were horrified to find Mary Ann Shea, a corpse at the foot of the stairway. A small stream of blood oosed out from the victim's temple and a small twenty-two calibre revolver lay close to the remains. Miss Shea was a medium sized woman and lived with her brother. She was 25 years of age. It was learned that deceased was not of sound mind, which may account to some extent for her death.

Fire at Lindsay.

LINDSAY, Ont., Jan. 10.—Yesterday fire was discovered in the large dry goods and tailoring establishment of E. E. W. McGaffy, the fire originating in the basement and had made considerable headway before the firemen arrived. The stock carried by Mr. McGaffy valued at $30,000 to $36,000 was very much damaged and mostly a total loss. The building, owned by the Dominion Bank, is damaged to the extent of $1,000 or $1,200. The stock is insured for $22,000.

Our Exports to Great Britain.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—According to the Board of Trade returns for 1894, the British imports from Canada increased during the year £468,000 or nearly five per cent. as compared with 1893. The increases include sheep, £250,000; cheese, £100,000; eggs, £17,000; fish, £30,000; and wood, £250,000. Exports from Great Britain to Canada during the same period compared to 1893 declined £1,[illegible] or nearly twenty-eight per cent.

PACIFIC CABLE STATION

Congress Urged to Consent to the Lease of Necker Island.

CLEVELAND'S FRIENDLINESS

He Transmits to Congress a Message in Which He Strongly Advises it to Grant Hawaii's Request—It Would be a Boon for the Islands.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—The President sent to Congress yesterday some correspondence on Hawaiian affairs with the following message of transmittal:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I submit herewith certain despatches from our Minister at Hawaii and the documents which accompanied the same. They disclose the fact that the Hawaiian Government desires to lease to Great Britain one of the uninhabited islands belonging to Hawaii as a station for a submarine telegraph cable to be laid from Canada to Australia; with a connection between the island leased and Honolulu. Both the Hawaiian government and the representatives of Great Britain in the negotiation concede that the proposed lease cannot be effected without the consent of the United States for the reason that in our reciprocity with the King of Hawaii, he agreed that as long as said treaty remained in force he would not "lease or otherwise dispose of, or create any lien upon any port, harbor or other territory in his dominion, or grant any special privilege or right of use therein to any other power, state or government."

At the request of the Hawaiian government this subject is laid before the Congress for its determination upon the question of so modifying the treaty agreement above recited as to permit the proposed lease. It will be seen that the correspondence which is submitted between the Hawaiian and British negotiators negatives the existence on the part of Hawaii of any suspicion of British unfriendliness or the fear of British aggression.

The attention of the Congress is directed to the following statement contained in a communication addressed to the Hawaiian government by the representatives of Great Britain.

"We propose to inform the British government of your inquiry whether they would accept the sovereignity of Necker Island or some other uninhabited island on condition that no subsidy is required from you. As we explained, we have not felt at liberty to entertain that question ourselves as we were definitely instructed not to ask for the sovereignty of any island but only for a lease simply for the purpose of a cable."

Some of the despatches from our minister which are submitted not only refer to the project for leasing an uninhabited island belonging to Hawaii but contain interesting information concerning recent occurrences in that country and its political and social condition. This information is valuable because it is based upon the observation and knowledge necessarily within the scope of the diplomatic duties which are entrusted solely to the charge of this intelligent diplomatic officer representing the United States government at Hawaii.

I hope the Congress will see fit to grant the request of the Hawaiian government and that our consent to the proposed lease will be promptly accorded. It seems to me we ought not by a refusal of this request to stand in the way of the advantages to be gained by isolated Hawaii through telegraphic communication with the rest of the world, especially in view of the fact that our own communication with that country would thereby be greatly improved without apparent detriment to any legitimate American interest.

"(Signed) GROVER CLEVELAND."

The documents submitted are summarized in the President's communication with the exception of a letter from Minister Hatch, referring to the Walker report and to the attitude of the British government toward Hawaii, in which he says: "If called upon to express an opinion, I should be constrained to say that during the past six months, and especially since the proclamation of the republic, the presence or absence of British war vessels here ought to have been regarded with indifference by our government, as it is now by this government. The conditions here for many months have been extremely orderly and peaceful."

LONDON, Jan. 10.—The Daily News says in a leader on Mr. Cleveland's recommendation that Hawaii be allowed to grant England a cable station: "Mr. Cleveland has shown his good feeling towards England and an enlightened sense of American interests in the matter of the cable station in the Sandwich Islands. There seems to be no reason to doubt that Congress will take that same sensible and neighborly view of the overhasty protest of New Zealand against Hawaii's alleged annexation of Necker Island. Anyhow the protest will be allowed to remain a dead letter."

Wheat Shipments at Port Arthur.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Jan. 10.—Cargoes of wheat received here from Port Arthur, Ont., during the past season aggregated 2,254,687 bushels. Elevator returns show that the cargoes overrun the quantity shown on the bill of lading 2,340 bushels and the shortages amounted to but 360 bushels. Of all the ports shipping to Buffalo, Port Arthur consignments alone overrun. Nine American ports all report average shortages except Port Huron and Fort Howard, which nearly balance.

Schooner and Crew Lost.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 10.—The schooner F. L. Godfrey, Captain Corson, master and owner sailed from here three weeks ago for Salem, Mass., with a cargo of coal and has not been heard from since. It is feared that the vessel is lost. The Godfrey carried a crew of six or seven men besides Captain Corson.

HOUSES OF REFUGE ON THE COTTAGE PLAN.

In the neighboring State of New York the county poor-houses are under the supervision of a general board, called the State Board of Charities and Correction. Although the functions of this Board is to a large extent wholly advisory, it has nevertheless succeeded during the last 10 or 15 years in bringing bout very great improvements both in the construction and in the management of these as well as of other county institutions. This Board had a large model of a county poor-house on exhibition at the World's Fair at Chicago last year, and this model is now at the State Capital at Albany. This model is constructed on what is known as the "Cottage System," that is, instead of one main building for the accommodation of all the inmates there are a number of detached cottages. This is the system now recommended by the State Board, and already one of the counties has adopted it after trying the old system for many years.

In view of the fact that more than one of the counties in Ontario is now moving in the matter of providing a county house of refuge or poor-house, a short description of the cottage system will be timely.

In the cottage system there is a central building for the keeper's residence and administration offices. In some case the farm house purchased with the farm can be utilized for this purpose if it is in a good location. To make the matter simple we will suppose that the keeper's residence faces the south, and also that there is a good barn to the northwest of the same. In this case the cottage for the men would be located to the west of the central cottage so as to be on the same side as that of the barn and for reasons that will be referred to presently. To the east of the keeper's cottage is the cottage for the women. These buildings are 20 or 30 feet apart and they are connected by means of a covered passage. To the north of the keeper's residence, but connected therewith by a covered passage, is the general kitchen and two dining-rooms, one for men and one for women. The cottages are two stories only. Over the dining-rooms is the chapel and over the kitchen are bedrooms for attendants. For the accommodation of sick inmates it is recommended to have two one-story cottages, one to the west of the men's cottage for the men, and one to the east of the women's cottage for the women.

The barn and cottage for the men are located on the same side of the keeper's residence so as to keep the men at all times as far as possible from the women's department. The morality of many of the inmates of houses of refuge is very low indeed and every precaution must be taken to keep the two sexes absolutely separated. This separation is much better effected by the cottage system than by the ordinary congregate system. The cottage system, moreover, is much safer in case of fire; it is safer in case of an epidemic; it is more homelike and removes the objection that many have to the ordinary poor-house; the cottages have more sun light and are more easily ventilated than the rooms of a large building.

No Diphtheria Near Orillia.

ORILLIA, Ont., Jan. 10.—All the Toronto papers have reports of a serious outbreak of diphtheria in the neighborhood of Orillia. The real facts are that at Seabright, a small settlement about eighteen miles from Orillia, there are a number of cases, but the distance is so great that no danger or likelihood of an outbreak in Orillia is at all imminent, and this report should be contradicted.

A Big Religious Convention.

BOSTON, Jan. 10.—It is estimated that when the 14th International Christian Endeavor convention is held here next July there will be from 50,000 to 60,000 members and delegates in attendance which will make it one of the largest religious gatherings ever held.

Victoria Ministry Not to Resign.

MELBOURNE, Jan. 10.—The Ministry decided not to resign or to take any further action before the meeting to-day. An effort will be made by them to get the support of the regular Opposition and thus overcome the laborists.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—The Daily Chronicle is informed of the death of Charles W. Morgan, an American artist, during a voyage from Cyprus to England.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Jan. 10, 1895.

Street sales here were 100 bushels white wheat at 62 1-2 to 63c; red quoted at 61 to 61 1-2c; 300 bushels barley at 46 to 47c; 800 bushels oats at 35c; 1 load rye at 50c.

Wheat in Chicago was steady and unchanged to 1-8c lower. Corn gained 1-8c and oats 1-4c.

In Buffalo barley was fairly active demand, catering of Canada limited and sellers asking higher prices; 29,000 bushels very choice No. 1 western sold at 63 1-2c. Sellers advanced on all grades; westerns are very stiff; No. 1 Canada quoted at 65 to 66c.

At East Buffalo the receipts of sheep and lambs were 51 cars of sale stock, Market opened fairly steady with quite a number of choice fat lambs in offerings, but toward the close prices broke badly, closing 15 to 25c lower, with 8 loads of native stock and 6 loads of Canadas unsold. Early sales of Canada lambs at $4.75 to $4.80 and latest sales at $4.65 to $4.75. A few lots of prime export Canada lambs, averaging 110 pounds, sold at $5, but anything not extra choice was hard to sell.

Consols and other gilt edged stocks were very firm in London. Other markets were irregular to dull. American railroads were dull and finished at the lowest price.

The condition of the New York market was firm. The market for the first time in weeks showed some signs of life and operators covered short contracts and were even disposed to buy for the long account. The failure of American sugar officers to submit a statement of the condition of the concern did not have any influence whatever and the stock reached its top notch near the close.

ANOTHER FIERCE FIRE

Toronto's Business District Again Suffers Severely.

THE ESTIMATED LOSS $700,000

Two Women Leap From a Burning Building And It Is Believed Are Fatally Injured—Firemen Badly Hurt —The Water Pressure Inefficient.

TORONTO, Jan. 11.—For the second time in a week Toronto has been visited by a terrible conflagration, and by a strange coincidence the second outbreak started within a few feet of the spot where the first was arrested. The buildings devastated by last night's fire were more numerous though not so extensive as those of Sunday's fire, and the total loss, so far as can be ascertained from the imperfect investigation that could be made last night, will be about $700,000, the same as that estimated for Sunday's fire. The second disaster was not attended by any loss of life, though several firemen were seriously injured and one woman received terrible injuries in escaping from the building in which the fire started.

The fire broke out at 7 o'clock, the alarm being turned in at exactly that hour. It started in the Osgoodby building, a massive six storey brick and stone structure on the south side of Melinda street, adjacent to the great McKinnon building that perished in the ruins of which are left from Sunday morning's fire. It had a frontage of 45 feet and ran back about 80 or 90 feet. The building was put up last year by W. G. Osgoodby at a cost of $50,000.

The firemen arrived within two minutes after the alarm, but the building was already blazing furiously from basement to roof, and the flames leaping high above the buildings. In the top flat of the building was the family of the caretaker, Edward Caven. His wife was lying in bed prostrate from the effect of Sunday's fire, when the building came near going. It was her screams that had attracted the attention of the policeman who turned in the alarm. With his wife was a Mrs. Holmes, who was taking care of her, and a little girl, a niece. The fire escape ladder had not arrived, and it was evident it could not reach the fire in time to be of service.

Women Jumped From the Top Flat.

A rope was thrown out of the window, and they were arranging to lower themselves, the firemen holding a net beneath. The sick woman, without waiting for the rope, jumped. She turned over once or twice, and then struck the telegraph wires, which are very numerous on this street, and then she rebounded and landed on the net. Mrs. Holmes got down on the rope half way and jumped the rest. Her injuries were thought not to be serious, but the with her sister was taken to the hospital. The little girl came down in the same way with Mrs. Holmes and escaped serious injuries. Caven himself came down safely.

Meantime the fire was raging furiously and had spread backward into Wellington street, where it attacked the wholesale houses that line the north side of the street.

The premises of Thomas Dunnett & Co., hats, caps and furs, caught first, and within twenty minutes the flames were shooting out of the windows. Dunnett's roof fell through with a crash soon after half-past seven. East and west the flames soon forced their way into Brereton & Co., furriers, to the east, and R. Boisseau & Co., clothing, to the west, and they were soon burning fiercely.

Several sections of the brigade had taken up a position on Wellington street and had six streams playing on the buildings, three on Dunnett's, two on Brereton's and one on Robert Darling's, further west, which had now caught fire. In addition two streams were playing on the premises on the south side of the street, which had already started to smoke.

As soon, however, as all the branches of the brigade were thus at work the water pressure, as in the case of Sunday, proved lamentably inefficient, and the streams would not reach higher than the third storey window, while the volume of water was poor.

Firemen Injured.

Two or three firemen met with somewhat serious injuries, though not fatal, from falling walls. With rather inadequate appliances the firemen fought bravely, and were aided by the weather, first show and then heavy rain helping to prevent the fire from spreading.

By ten o'clock they had the fire under control. They had devoted themselves especially to keeping the fire from spreading west and igniting the great drygoods house of Wyld, Grassett Darling, which carried a stock of $400,000 and was separated by the burning buildings only by a narrow lane. In this the firemen were happily successful.

Three-Quarters of a Million Loss.

It is impossible to accurately estimate the various losses but an approximate estimate of the losses places them at three-quarters of a million. The insurance reaching about two-thirds of this sum. The Osgoodby building alone contained some thirty tenants, many of them manufacturers' agents, carrying valuable stocks of which not a vestage remains. The total loss on stocks in this building reaches $165,000. Of this sum James R. Knox & Co, representing the Merchants' Manufacturing Company, of Montreal, and the Yarmouth N. S. Duck and Yarn Company, lost a stock valued at $63,000, insured for $25,000.

W. S. Johnston & Co., printers and blank book manufacturers, lost a stock of $18,000.

The building and stock of Robert Darling, dry goods, on the north side of Wellington street is a total loss; the building was worth about $15,000 and stock $100,000.

Thos. Dunnet & Co., furriers, lost $20,000 on building and $70,000 on stock.

Brereton & Manning lost $20,000 on building and $50,000 on stock; two-thirds insured.

R. H. Gray, white cotton goods, lost $60,000 on building and $60,000 stock, two-thirds insured.

The Corticelli Silk Company, next door, escaped with a scorching.

On the other side of Wellington street Hart & Riddell, wholesale stationers, lost a stock of $25,000, two-thirds insurance. Hart & Riddell occupied the same building with Buntin, Reid & Co., J. Y. Reid being the owner. This side of the building was badly gutted. Buntin, Reid & Co. escaped damage by fire, but suffered a serious loss by water. The Osgoodby building itself was insured for $25,000.

The Origin of the Fire

in the Osgoodby building is said to have been the breaking of a kerosene lamp carried by the janitor's wife, Mrs. Caven, who only returned from the General Hospital yesterday, where she had been under treatment for nervous prostration, brought on by the danger of the Osgoodby building catching fire last Sunday.

It appears Mrs. Caven was still in a weak condition and stumbled and fell; the lamp exploded and the fire spread so rapidly that the inmates of the building had to escape as described.

J. E. Knox, agent for Canadian Cotton Companies', who carried a certain amount of stock, estimates his loss at $10,000, pretty well covered by insurance.

Fell Sixty Feet.

A frightful accident happened at the ruins of the Globe building yesterday afternoon. Two men were engaged on the high southern wall pulling down the brick chimney with pickaxes and fastening ropes to the shaky walls. The two were working on a piece of wall next the high chimney, when suddenly it collapsed. The workman nearest the chimney sprang back and saved himself. But his companion, Eli A. Bowbeer, of 68 Humbert street, was not so fortunate. He was carried down with the huge mass of falling brick fully sixty feet, landing in the cellar of Rooney's gutted store.

A large crowd saw the accident and expected to see nothing but a mangled corpse dragged from under the bricks.

But when rescued Bowbeer was still alive, and by the time the ambulance arrived had partially regained consciousness. He is very badly hurt.

About 20,000 bricks fell as Bowbeer went down, making a great gap in the wall. Two other men were at work at the same height, Lindow Huddart, 9 Ketchum avenue, and Stephen Ferris, 61 Wickson avenue. These men, however, were working on the chimney which is too solid to give away. The chimney had been put up after the original building and part of the original wall was cut away. The wall where the break commenced was only four inches thick, but the collapse carried away much of the nine-inch wall as well.

Dr. Nattress thinks the man may live. He could not find any broken bones in the hurried examination. Bowbeer spoke and was able to take some brandy after the accident.

The two firemen who were injured at Sunday's fire are getting along finely, though the doctors are still dubious about saving Saunders' leg. The member is in a frightful condition, the bone being broken in three places. The other men, including the chief, are all mending rapidly.

NEWFOUNDLAND'S NEED

The Daily Chronicle Says Monetary Help is What Newfoundland Wants.

MUST SUBMIT TO AN ENQUIRY.

Sympathetic Comment Upon the Condition of the Hungry and Unemployed of the Colony—State of the Finances Must Be Made Known.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—The Daily Chronicle in an editorial comments sympathetically upon the condition of the unemployed people of Newfoundland, adding:

"There is much justice behind their angry demands. What the colony needs is monetary help from outside. That can only be obtained on one condition. The colony must submit its actions to a full and impartial inquiry. Until those willing to help are made aware of the state of the public finances it would be folly to expect such a return of confidence as would bring relief to the colony."

STILL TAKING EVIDENCE.

Important Evidence in the Hendershott Murder Investigation.

ST. THOMAS, Jan. 11.—At the Hendershott murder investigation, on Wednesday, Richard Curtis, who carried a lantern when the body was taken from the woods, said that he thought that not only would the head but the right hand have been crushed and the left hand would have been injured as well, had the tree struck the man in the position he was found.

Charles Joiner saw three patches of blood circling from where the body lay to a point on the opposite side of the stump, and traces of blood connecting them, and he was corroborated by John Lyle, Samuel Crocker and John Begg. A number of witnesses identified the handle of the axe and the insurance policies were put in as exhibits.

Duncan Hendershott, of Fingal, uncle of deceased, and brother of John Hendershott, testified that he first heard of Wm. Hendershott's death about four o'clock the day it happened. Wm. Welter drove to his house and told him. Welter said, "I have bad news." Witness said, "Is John hurt?" Welter said, "It's worse than that; it's Will. A tree was falling, and he ran to get his watch, and it fell on him." Witness got in the rig with Welter, and he drove him to Wardell's gate, when witness walked to the woods. On the way he asked Welter if the accident was due to carelessness, and he said not.

Three American Soldiers Drowned.

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, Jan. 11.—A sad drowning accident occurred near here about eight o'clock last evening, three American soldiers from Fort Niagara being the victims. The unfortunate men left the Fort intending to cross the river to this town, and when within about two hundred yards of the shore the boat became fast in the moving ice. After drifting for some time a tremendous wave struck the boat, upsetting it. The poor fellows succeeded in climbing on the bottom of the boat, calling piteously for help to the throngs of spectators who lined the beach unable to do anything to assist them. After clinging to the boat for an hour the poor soldiers one by one dropped off.

A Result of the Mayoralty Election.

TORONTO, Jan. 11.—Mr. J. A. McIlwain, a Toronto street broker, issued a writ yesterday against W. H. Scott, an employe of Mayor Kennedy, who, he alleges, made a slanderous statement against him as a result of their opposition to each other in the Mayoralty contest. The defendant was the Parkdale organizer for Mr. Kennedy, in which district he was beaten. The objectionable remark is said to have been made while the parties concerned were, with others, at lunch on Tuesday, and the plaintiff immediately requested an apology, which was not forthcoming. The amount of damages is not stated in the writ.

After the Tax Collector.

LONDON, Ont., Jan. 11.—A new information was yesterday sworn to by Reeve S. C. McDonald, of the village of London West, charging John M. Lord, tax collector, with appropriating $1,600 to his own use which belonged to the corporation. Three other small sums were alleged to have been taken in another information, making about seven charges altogether, but the large sum mentioned in the first information rather startled everybody unacquainted with the case.

THE TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

It is evident that the Government is undecided as to the date of bringing on the general elections. The tenders for the Lakefield and Balsam Lake sections of the Trent Valley Canal were paraded two or three months ago, as indisputable proof of the good faith of the Dominion Government in the matter of building these sections of the canal. Many were under the impression that the contracts were awarded and that work would be at once begun. But, as a matter of fact, no contract based on the tenders was even awarded. The Empire of yesterday states that the contract for the Balsam Lake and Lake Simcoe division has been awarded to the notorious Mr. Andrew Onderdonk, of Chicago, whose connection with a contract for a section of the C.P.R. suggests very expensive memories. The contract has been awarded, and that is not saying that it has been signed. But the greatest disappointment is in connection with division 1, of the Lakefield section. No contract has been awarded for this portion of the work, which is of the most importance to Peterborough. Somebody, possibly with an axe to grind, has suggested to the department that a cheaper line would be got by utilising the bed of the Otonabee river and by constructing a couple of dams with lift locks instead of making a cut through entirely new territory. This new idea, (by the way, not all new), which seems to present itself very conveniently at a time when it would appear that an excuse is wanted for delay in awarding the contracts, is being acted upon or was acted upon before the new idea was suggested, for the Empire's despatch, which records the decision of the ministers, also states that the engineers are already surveying the proposed new route. The Trent Valley Canal is a very pretty little political toy for the amusement of the Ministers and their political following, but it is rather an expensive one for the people. It is apparent that the Trent Valley Canal enterprise, instead of being used as an important public work should be used, is being juggled with in reference to its greatest utility in promoting Government interests during the general elections. It looks very much as if this great work of so much moment to Peterborough, both as a factor in giving employment during construction, and as a factor in commercial development when completed, is being used to time the beginning of work, so as to fit in with the date of the elections, which is evidently not yet decided upon.

THE GOVERNOR AND THE CARNIVAL.

Ottawa is in trouble. The Capital city's great winter carnival has been refused the countenance of His Excellency the Governor-General. In view of the recent death of Sir John Thompson, the premier of the Dominion, Lord Aberdeen thought it would not be becoming to carry out the programme of festivities, the winter carnival would involve, and suggested the postponement of the carnival. The committee having spent large sums in circulating posters and other advertising matter announcing the date, felt that it would not be practicable to withdraw all this advertising, and respectfully but firmly declined to alter the arrangements that had been made. Therefore his Excellency has withdrawn his patronage. Of course Lord Aberdeen views the matter from his point but it is open to question whether in all respects he is justified in assuming the attitude he has taken. No one will deny that the people of Ottawa as well as of Canada generally, have in no sense been wanting in expressions of the most profound respect for the memory of the late premier, and it is in no spirit of disrespect that the citizens of Ottawa are carrying out arrangements, matured before the sad event of the Premier's death. More than a month has elapsed—the usual period of court mourning—and when we reflect that no matter how great or distinguished the dead may be, the world was made for the living and not for the dead, it may easily be that the matter of sentiment can be carried to inconvenient extent. His Excellency is presiding at and patronising social functions quite as giddy and festive as the winter carnival will be, and this suggests an inconsistency that is worthy of note. However, in spite of the tacit veto of the Governor-General the preparations go bravely on on. Apart altogether from the fact of the advisability of embodying in ice the rigors of a Canadian climate and sending abroad false impressions in this respect, it will be interesting to note the outcome of this little case of friction between the aristocratic instincts of the old world and the democratic ideas of the new; whether in spite of the withholding of vice regal patronage the Ottawa people will bring off the carnival enterprise successfully, or whether, paradoxical as it may sound, the carnival project will be frozen out.

POULTRY PAYS.

No little fun has been thrust at Erastus Wiman and his "broilers," but there is no doubt that there is money in poultry. A paper read before the recent Poultry Convention at New Hamburg, gave estimates of the profitable nature of an investment, properly managed, in the unobtrusive hen. The writer calculates that a good hen, well managed, will yield in the matter of eggs alone, a net profit of $1.47½ cents per year. This represents the production of 12½ dozen eggs per year, at a price of 19 cents per dozen, a gross amount of $2.37½, reduced by cost of feed, expense of marketing, etc., to $1.47½, the net profit. The writer only works his hen 180 days out of the 365, leaving holidays to the extent of 185. If the hen breeder should emulate the example of the typical dairyman, and, who proposes to work his cow eleven months of the year, and make her keep productive for that period, there is no telling to what extent the profit of poultry might reach. Seriously, there is money in poultry. The writer in question points out that to make the return of $1.47½ per year, the hen must be well housed, well fed and so managed that a large proportion of the eggs are laid at a season when the eggs will command the high price of 19 cents. A profit of $1.40 per year per hen from a hundred hens would be no small addition to the incidental profits of the farm. And in these days of low grain prices it behooves the farmer to supplement the decreased profits of grain production by such aids as poultry-raising, etc. Dairying is, indeed, the sheet anchor of the husbandman, but only those who have tried have any idea of what an important total the odds and ends of farming can be made to reach. The profits of poultry raising not only appeal to farmers but to those persons in town who have premises suitable for carrying on the industry. The figures quoted above are those of a reliable authority on the subject.

THE friends of the party seem to think that the Government has quit "monkeying" with the Trent Valley Canal, but they are puzzled to know whether Onderdonkeying with the Trent Valley Canal is an improvement.

A FEMALE BIGAMIST.

A Brockville Married Woman Charged With Marrying a Gananoque Man.

BROCKVILLE, Jan. 11.—Mrs. James Dempster was arrested at Gananoque yesterday on a charge of bigamy and the circumstances of the case are somewhat romantic. The woman's name was formerly Annie G[illegible]n and in 1890 she married a man named Dowsley, a resident of Mallorytown, a village a few miles west of Brockville. The bliss usually supposed to accompany matrimonial ventures was conspicuously absent in this instance and after a month of married life the pair separated. The woman was known by the name of Dowsley until recently, when she assumed that of Macdonald and took up her residence in Gananoque, where she met James Dempster, a man in comfortable circumstances and in search of a life partner. Marriage was the result and everything went happily along until a few days ago when the first husband, Dowsley, turned up. He threatened to expose the pair unless given a deed of Dempster's farm, and when this was not forthcoming carried his threat into effect. The arrest of the woman was the result. She will be given a preliminary hearing before a magistrate to-day.

The steamer Transit, used at Brockville and Prescott for ferrying cars to the American side, sank at the dock at the latter place last night. On Monday the boat made a trip from Brockville to Prescott, encountering considerable ice, and has since been tied up in winter quarters. She appeared sound when Prescott was reached.

Looking for Baseball Players.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 11.—Charles Maddock, manager of the Toronto Baseball Club, of the Eastern League, arrived in this city on Wednesday. Mr. Maddock is hunting players for contract with Pitcher Southard, of Reading. He tried to sign Catcher Ulrich, of West Philadelphia, but found that he had already accepted an offer from Omaha. Mr. Maddock has his eye on Sweeney, of Allentown, and will endeavor to pick up some other strong players in his vicinity. He says that Toronto has not had a professional team since 1890, and that the town is crazy on baseball. The Toronto club has been permitted to negotiate with "Pop" Smith, and that clever fielder will probably be on the Canadian team at short.

Miners to Resume Work.

SPRINGHILL MINES, N.S., Jan. 11.—A committee from Pioneer Lodge arrived at an amicable settlement with the coal companies yesterday and work was resumed to-day. The companies' first arrangement being for the men to work from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m., this the men refused to do. The company have now made the following arrangement, which the men have adopted, at least for a time. They are to commence work at 6.30 a.m. and the first shift to work until 12.30 p.m.; then the second shift will work from 1.30 p.m. until 7.30. Rejoicing prevails that the grievance is settled.

The Governor's Salary Cut.

MELBOURNE, Jan. 11.—Last evening the assembly adopted the Goverment proposal to reduce the Governor's salary from £10,000 to £5,000, beginning with the next Governor. It is believed that in consequence of this decision that only a rich man will be able henceforth to maintain the dignity of the governor's office. The assembly also adopted the proposal to reduce the salaries of members of the assembly from £300 to £240. The Legislative Council rejected the income and land tax bill thereby creating a dead-lock between the two houses. The Council would have passed an income tax alone.

A Book for Young Men.

An immeasurable amount of suffering and injury to the human race, is due to the ignorant violation of physiological laws by the youth of our land. Ruinous practices are indulged in, through ignorance of the inevitable injury to constitution and health which surely follows. By every young man, the divine injunction, "Know Thyself," should be well heeded. To assist such in acquiring a knowledge of themselves and of how to preserve health, and to shun those pernicious and most destructive practices, to which so many fall victims, as well as to re-claim and point out the means of relief and cure to any who may unwittingly have violated Nature's laws, and are already suffering the dire consequences, an association of medical gentlemen have carefully prepared a little book which is replete with useful information to every young man. It will be sent to any address, securely sealed from observation in a plain envelope, by the World's Dispensary Medical Association of 663 Main street, Buffalo, N. Y., on receipt of ten cents in stamps (for postage), if enclosed with this notice.

"Several years ago, I caught a severe cold, attended with a terrible cough that allowed me no rest, either day or night. The doctors, after working over me to the best of their ability, pronounced my case hopeless, and said they could do no more for me. A friend, learning of my trouble, sent me a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which I began to take, and very soon I was greatly relieved. By the time I had used the whole bottle, I was completely cured. I have never had much of a cough since that time, and I firmly believe that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life."—W. H. POSTAL CARDS OF THE WORLD.

Eight Thousand Different Kinds Issued Since the Scheme Started.

It seems almost incredible that there should be 8,000 varieties of postal cards, but that is the extent claimed for the Watson collection. These, however, include various issues of the same nation and denomination, and also cards issued for special occasions.

Postal cards have been in circulation 24 years, declares the collector. The idea originated with Dr. Emanuel Hermann, a professor of national economy at the Imperial Academy of Wiener in Neustadt, Lower Austria.

His ideas, under the head of "New Means of Correspondence by Post," were published and attracted the attention of the government officials. The director general of posts took up the idea and succeeded in having an issue of postal cards put in circulation in 1869. The original name given to them was the "correspondens karte," and this has been retained ever since. This new move on the part of Austria quickly excited other countries to adopt a similar method of correspondence, and before the close of 1870 nearly all the European countries were using cards.

Germany was really the second country to use them, and a special series was issued to the soldiers engaged in the Franco-German war. These were called the field post correspondence cards and were sold unstamped to the soldiers at the rate of about five for a cent. The soldiers had the privilege of using them without paying postage. Another series was issued for civilians. These had a place left for a stamp, and the writer had to affix a German postage stamp to the card before posting. The field post cards are now rare, the used ones being scarcer than the unused ones.

Another card of equal rarity and also a reminder of the same war is the balloon postal card issued by France during the siege of Paris. The cards were sent up from Paris in balloons, and the mail bags were thrown off into the surrounding country where there was the least possible opportunity of their capture by the enemy. They were smaller than the postal card now in use and were covered with warlike expressions, as "Paris defies the enemy!" "Glory and conquest signify crimes; defeat signifies hate and a desire for vengeance," "Only one war is just and right—that for independence."

The United States was rather backward in adopting the postal card system and did not use them until 1873. The first issue printed was of reddish color, with the head of Liberty in the right hand corner. As a rule Uncle Sam's cards have been inferior to those of other countries in excellence of engraving. The designs also have not been very artistic. The blue card, bearing the portrait of General Grant, is the finest specimen of art work issued by the United States government.—New York Evening World.

The Story of "Mike" Apples.

The so called "Mike" apples of eastern Connecticut have a queer history, so it is related. Micah Rood was a once thrifty farmer in old Norwich town. His habits suddenly changed, and he became idle, restless and intemperate. He neglected his work and shunned his neighbors. Some thought the change due to witchcraft, others to insanity. When the apple trees blossomed in the spring, on one tree the flowers had turned from white to red. The neighbors wondered much, and especially as Rood was drawn to this tree by a resistless fascination. When the yellow apples ripened in the fall, each one was found to contain a red globule which was known afterward as the "drop of blood."

The people remembered that a foreign peddler had passed through the village in the previous fall and had stopped over night at Rood's house, and the story grew that he had killed him for his money and buried the body under this tree. Search revealed nothing concerning the peddler, but the people said the evidence of Rood's guilty was summed up in his disturbed spirit and the blood mottled apples. Micah Rood lost all interest in his farm, became a dependent on the town and died in 1717. But so long as the blood spotted apples grow they will be known as the "Mike" apples and will perpetuate the story of his life.—Boston Transcript.

MR. THOMAS ON PRONUNCIATION.

The Playwright's Father Had Decided Views as to the Word Missouri.

Mr. Thomas, the author of the play "In Mizzoura," has given an interesting incident in his early life recalled by the title of his play. The spelling of the name gives a fair idea of the local pronunciation. This pronunciation, particularly of the name of the state, is a sensitive question with the natives. Speaking of the matter the other day, Mr. Thomas said:

"You know that just south of Missouri the people of Arkansas, annoyed beyond endurance by the various pronunciation of the name of their state, brought the subject to the attention of the legislature, and that body by special enactment fixed the pronunciation Arkansaw. Missourians feel the same way about Missouri. They detest the effeminate aspirant that Boston has tried to fix upon them and the diminutive sound of the termination. I remember well when I was a schoolboy in Missouri and anxious to show my acquirement at home I pronounced the name of the state Missou-ree. My father overheard me and told me never to call it so again. Obeying him, the next day at school I gave the real transmississippi sound to. it in recitation and was called down by the teacher. I explained that paw had——

"'But that makes no difference. I'm teaching this class. Your "paw" isn't. You must say Miss-sou-ree!'

"I told my father at supper how the teacher had figuratively wiped up the floor with him before the geography class. The gov'nor pushed back his pie—they ate pie for supper there—and went out and chewed tobacco on the back porch. He thrashed around in bed all night, and when morning came he was up at daylight trying to push the time ahead to 9, when the school opened. Then he took me by the hand, and we went into school together—a trifle late for effect. The gov'nor has a good eye for stage business. He planted his progeny in the center before the astonished teacher.

"'That's my boy.' The young woman looked us both over and seemed inclined to grant it. Impressive wait. Then the gov'nor continued: 'He was born in Missouraw.' Where are you from?'

"The young woman said 'Boston' and gave a drowning man look for her diploma that was somewhere under the map of Asia, but the old gentleman was setting a faster pace.

"'What's Boston got to do with it? What do you say the name of this state is?'

"'Why, I thought Miss-sou-ree'——

"'Not at all. Tom Benton said Mizzouraw when he addressed the senate of the United States. General Shields says Mizzouraw. Nathaniel P. Lyon, who died at Wilson's creek, said Mizzouraw, and Frank Blair says it. Understand?'

"She understood.

"'And years ago, on the first survey map, it was printed as the Indians call it, full of z's.' The teacher was wincing as I'd seen her do when a boy scraped his pencil edgewise on a slate, and paw went on:

"'And every boy here that respects his parents and the constitution of the United States will always say Mizzouraw.'

"He went home, and I don't think I ever said Miss-sou-ree again."—New York World.

The Medicinal Value of Water.

The human body is constantly undergoing tissue change. Worn out particles are cast aside and eliminated from the system, while the new are ever being formed, from the inception of life to its close.

Water has the power of increasing these tissue changes, which multiply the waste products, but at the same time they are renewed by its agency, giving rise to increased appetite, which in turn provides fresh nutriment. Persons but little accustomed to drinking water are liable to have the waste products formed faster than they are removed. Any obstruction to the free working of natural laws at once produces disease, which, if once firmly seated, requires both time and money to cure.

People accustomed to rise in the morning weak and languid will find the cause in the imperfect secretion of wastes, which many times may be remedied by drinking a full tumbler of water before retiring. This very materially assists in the process during the night and leaves the tissues fresh and strong, ready for the active work of the day.

Hot water is one of our best remedial agents.

A hot bath on going to bed, even in the hot nights of summer, is a better reliever of insomnia than many drugs.

Inflamed parts will subside under the continual poulticing of hot water.

Very hot water, as we all know, is a prompt checker of bleeding, and besides, if it is clean, as it should be, it aids in sterilizing wounds.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Standing Up For His Rights.

"Are you the editor that takes in the society items?" inquired the caller, an undersized man, with a timid, appealing look on his face.

"Yes, sir," replied the young man at the desk. "I can take in any kind of items. What have you?"

"Why, it's this way," said the caller, lowering his voice. "My wife gave a swell party last night, and I'm willing to pay to have this writeup of the affair put in your paper."

"We don't charge anything for publishing society items," observed the young man at the desk, taking the proffered manuscript and looking it over.

"That's all right," was the reply. "You don't understand. I wrote this up myself, and I put in a line or two that says, 'Mr. Halfstick assisted his distinguished wife in receiving the guests.' That's the way I want it to go in, and I don't care if it costs $1 a line. I want my friends to know, by George, that I still belong to the family!"—Chicago Tribune.

A Doctor's Views on Marriage.

A St. Louis physician is querying to know why marriage ceremonies should not be performed by doctors of medicine instead of having the authority lodged in the hands of doctors of divinity and other ministers. He thinks it would be a good thing for this country if the doctors were given the power and exercised it properly. "If I had my way," he says, "no two persons should be united for life unless they had good, strong and sound physical makeups. Then I would never marry two blonds, but would always require a blond to secure a brunette for a partner. If this were done, we should become more beautiful as a race and stronger and longer lived."

Ringing Noises

In the ears, sometimes a roaring, buzzing sound, are caused by catarrh, that exceedingly disagreeable and very common disease. Loss of smell or hearing also result from catarrh. The German Court Kitchen.

On state occasions the menu is prepared a week in advance and submitted to the emperor, the details being ordinarily arranged by the empress. The cooking is done upon iron stoves, the roasting room containing huge stoves of special construction let into the walls and a huge turnspit worked by machinery. The department of the pastry chef is considered of great importance. The pastry and sweets have all sorts of elaborate designs round the edges of the dishes, made of dough gilded or silvered over and not intended to be eaten. All kinds of ornamentations in the shape of figures, hunting scenes and castles are to be seen on the dishes, most of them being modeled of dough or fat and colored and gilded. The emperor pays so much a cover for every dinner, so that strict carefulness has to be observed. For ordinary meals the rate is about 6 shillings a cover without wine.—Zur Guten Stunde.

CURIOSITIES OF PEARLS.

During the last century pearls to the value of £10,000 were taken from the river Tay.

Black pearls were at one time practically valueless, but now they command much higher prices than the finest pink or white specimens.

Some of the most beautiful of pearls are found in parts of the ocean where fresh water falls as at Suakim in the Red Sea and in the Island of Foosht.

An ingenious American desires to patent a process for manufacturing real pearls by securing from oyster shells the matter which is deposited around any foreign substance finding its way into the shell and dissolve it in acid and then redeposit it in layers around a pea or shot by suspending them in the fluid.

NEW YEAR
NEW GOODS
NEW LEAF
1895

On looking over last year's business we find that we have everything to b thankful for, as it was one of the best years that, notwithstanding the hard times, we ever had, and that is saying a great deal.

Now, as this is the season for making good resolutions, we have resolved to surpass, if possible, last year's trade. To attain this end we have duplicated all our fall Cloths and added all the latest winter patterns we could find. We buy for spot cash and can afford to sell on a small margin. Give us a call and we will do the rest.

Our Gent's Furnishings and Underclothing Departments are both well stocked. We have a few choice Overcoats still left which we will let off cheap.

Pete Simons & Co.

416 George Street. Opposite Examiner Office.

The Goods are RIGHT If They Are LEFT.

We refer to our REMNANTS which have been LEFT over after a heavy season's selling, and which are going so fast that they won't trouble us at stock-taking time.

The qualities and prices are RIGHT—if they are left. Because we have decided to give customers the advantage of good, serviceable, staple oddlengths at and below original cost.

Some of the snaps still left on our Remnant Counter consist of short lengths of DRESS GOODS, CLOAKINGS, FLANNELS, BLANKETS, COMFORTERS, TABLE LINENS, TOWELINGS, &c. But they are going fast. It's worth while to come in and look them over.

We are grateful to our customers for their valuable patronage during 1894, and respectfully solicit continuance of the kind favours during 1895.

This is an evidence of the fine weather which prevailed during the last month of of the year.

P. R. systems, east of Peterborough.

The Diamond Drill.

Mr. Arch. Blue has just returned from Hastings county, where he was inspecting the work done by the Government diamond drill on the Glendower iron property, Thrifty Island Lake. The first boring was made on the southern portion of the location, but owing to the drill striking some of the old workings of the mine operations had to be suspended. The drill is now at work on the northern side at an angle of 75 degrees, having reached a depth of 600 feet. Owing to the nature of the rock, low horneblendic schist and crystaline limestone, much fissured, very slow progress is being made, very seldom more than from fifteen to twenty feet a day being attained. On the whole, the work has been most satisfactory so far.

WHAT SCIENCE DOES.

(From the New York Sun.)

One dribblet from the Oriental war now raging gives more information about the behaviour of modern guns and ships motor than all other reports put together. We print here an extract from the London Engineering:

"The heavy naval fighting in the far East has given not a few opportunities or gathering valuable information about the behaviour of guns and armor which, no doubt will be available at a later date. It is stated, on what appears to be responsible authority, that the fate of the Chinese ironclad Ping Yuen was decided by one round from a Canet 12.60-inch gun, the heaviest weapon in both fleets. The shell which sunk the Ping Yuen weighed 480 kilogrammes, nearly 1,000 pounds, and was one of Holtzer make; it crashed through the after part of the vessel's armoured deck, the ship sinking by the stern almost immediately."

One flash from a luckily-pointed gun and a $3,000,000 warship goes down as worthless as McGinty. Science beats all creation.

Young Women's Association.

Annual meeting to-morrow evening, beginning at eight o'clock. It is desirable that a large number interested in the work will be present.

The Carnival.

It would greatly convenience the reporters if those participating in the carnival would leave their cards at the door, with their name and costume plainly written thereon.

Miss Woodgate gratefully acknowledges the following gifts to the Home:—Mr. J. Edgecombe, box of raisins; Messrs. Mason & Co. box of figs; Mrs. H. Vigeau, Toronto, 3 dozen oranges, candies, dates, figs, nuts.

Notice.

Lansdowne Lodge, S. O. E., will hold a special meeting in their rooms, Hunter street, on Monday evening next, January 14th, at 8 o'clock sharp. Business of importance will be brought before the meeting. DAVID CURTIS, President, W. J. SQUIRES, Secretary. 2d

Diphtheria in Warkworth.

Dr. Bryce, secretary of the Provincial Board of Health, yesterday, received a telegram from Dr. Coleman, medical health officer, Warkworth, stating that five cases of diphtheria had broken out there and others were likely to occur. Enterprise in the Right Direction.

The art of cooking is one which every lady should be proud of and to further this knowledge, the enterprising firm of Mason & Co. are bringing two ladies here from Boston, who are high authority on the art of cooking and who will give practical illustrations of the use of Cottolene in the preparation of food, on Monday and Tuesday, Jan. 21st and 22nd. This will be an excellent opportunity for everyone to see the value of this article.

Broke Gaol.

On Tuesday evening last four young men named Dormer, McCabe, Stinson and Workman were arrested in Lindsay on a charge of having purloined a clothesline on which hung the family wash of the Veitch house. They were placed in the lockup, but during the night succeeded in forcing the bars and the first three "flew de coop." Evidently the fourth prisoner had more faith in his case than the others, and preferred to see it out.

Week of Prayer.

The fourth service of the week of prayer was held in St. Paul's church last night, and the attendance was large, considering the storm which was raging. Rev. Dr. Torrance opened the meeting, after which Rev. J. J. Rae read a portion of the Scriptures. The sermon was delivered by Rev. W. R. Young, M. A., who spoke on Foreign Missions from the text, "Go ye into all the World." This evening's service will be held in the Murray street Baptist church, when Rev. W. C. Beer, of the Mark street Methodist church, Ashburnham, will preach on "Families and Schools." This will be the last of the series of services, and a large attendance is expected.

Might Come to Peterborough.

The Port Perry Standard says: "We have heard whisperings lately that Peterborough and a couple of other towns have been offering inducements to Mr. Dryden with a view of encouraging the removal of his foundry business from Port Perry. Knowing also that Mr. Dryden feels he is too highly assessed, leads us to ask the question, whether it would not be prudence on the part of the council to meet Mr. Dryden and offer him a reduction in his foundry assessment? If that gentleman were to see it to his interest to leave Port Perry, owing to the stringency of the times, the town would then, and not until then, fully realise the loss of the foundry. It seems to us every effort should be made to hold whatever business there is here, and not sit quietly by and allow other centres to snatch from us that which we would be sorry to lose."

Obituary.

The Montreal Witness of 31st December contained the following reference to the death of Maxville Montgomery Vaughan, who is well known in this section: "The death, yesterday, of Maxville Montgomery Vaughan, at his late residence, 234 Hibernia road, removes a very prominent figure from Point St. Charles. Mr. Vaughan was a resident of Montreal and vicinity for over forty-five years, and was clerk of St. Gabriel's market for upwards of thirty years. A few years ago he contested St. Anne's Ward for aldermanic honours, but was defeated by the late Ald. Malone. He was over seventy-two years of age. The funeral takes place from his late residence at 230 to-morrow afternoon." Deceased was an uncle of Mrs. James MacLachlan, Mrs. Thos. Fraser and David Foster, of Norwood. He visited this section several times and will be remembered by many.

After-Season Bargains.

The majority of people in every community are waiting for the after season bargains. The question with the merchant is "Will I keep the goods, or have the money?" The Peterborough Bookstore has decided to have the money. There must be no dull times in this live store. The goods will be sold, because people like bargains, and will buy them when they can get them genuine, and they can always rely on that at our annual stock-taking sale. A. E. STRATTON & Co. tf

—There were no arrests yesterday or last night, and no police court this morning.

—The Montreal Herald asserts that salt placed on sidewalks ruins the rubber on overshoes.

—Last night beginning about ten o'clock heavy rain, driven by a fierce gale, fell for some hours.

—The installation of the officers of Court Stanley, Ancient Order of Foresters, takes place to-night.

—A Cobourg man refused to pay his poll tax ($2), and the magistrate fined him $5 and $2.35 costs.

—The hail which fell yesterday afternoon, was most cutting and drove pedestrians indoors in a hurry.

—They are feeding wheat to hogs in Western Canada, while in Newfoundland men are driven by hunger to riot and pillage.

—In Bowmanville, on Monday, the municipal election turned on the question whether or not cows should be allowed to feed on the streets, and the friends of bovine freedom won.

—The report that another big fire had broken out in Toronto caused great excitement here, last night and the telegraph offices were besieged with enquiries for particulars. A report of the conflagration appears in another column.

—The EXAMINER has to thank Mr. T. E. Bradburn, local agent, for a beautifully illuminated calendar on cardboard, 18x25 inches, issued by the Standard Life Assurance Company. It is indeed a beautiful calendar, the ornamentation and colouring being really artistic.

—Hamilton's Chief of Police has returned to that city after an absence of over a week without permission. He avoids being interviewed under the plea of illness. The position is worth $2000 per year, and the probability is that it will be vacant before long, as most strange rumors are afloat regarding the chief's conduct while away from his post of duty.

—A teacher asked a pupil to parse the sentence—"Mary, milk the cows." When he reached the last word he said:—"Cow is a noun, feminine gender, singular number, third person and stands for Mary." "Stands for Mary," said the teacher angrily, "How do you make that out?" "Because," replied the youth, "if the cow didn't stand for Mary, how could Mary milk the cow?"

—Lindsay is such a humdrum old place, that an election is something which evidently upsets the calm and quietude of the town to no inconsiderable extent. The Watchman says that Councillor-elect Graham was so overjoyed at his success at the polls that he fainted and had to be taken home. It was reported that he was in a very precarious condition for a few hours and is not yet fully recovered. His friends are hoping for his speedy recovery.

The Barrie Advance is at war with Mr. J. W. Garvin, Inspector of Schools for Peterborough. It appears that during the Christmas holidays Mr. Garvin was addressing political gatherings in the vicinity of Barrie, in the interests of the Conservative party, and that the Advance, in an editorial article, commented rather severely upon Mr. Garvin's course. The latter wrote a vigorous letter in reply, and the Advance instead of printing it, criticises it, and in the course of its criticism insinuates that Mr. Garvin was seeking for the nomination as candidate for the local House for one of the Simcoes, and that he aspires to the portfolio of Minister of Education. The Barrie Examiner, however, publishes Mr. Garvin's letter and it is certainly vigorous enough for the heat of an election campaign. Mr. Garvin is doubtless right in resenting with all the spirit he can feel the appellation of "political crank" bestowed upon him by the Advance.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Buller, of Peterborough, is visiting friends in town.—Lindsay Watchman.

The Belleville Intelligencer says: Mr. E. D. Gough is reported to be improving in health.

Mr. E. Knowles, of Peterborough, is visiting Dr. Patterson this week.—Barrie Examiner.

Jas. S. Proutt, Marmora, and J. O'Grady, Norwood, are attending the Peterborough Business College.

Mr. J. H. Roper, of the banking firm of Mulholland & Roper, who has been confined to the house with a severe though not serious attack of illness, is improving.

To the list of names of contributors to the Thompson memorial fund, published in yesterday's EXAMINER, should be added the names of Rev. V. Clementi, $10, and Mr. J. H. Burnham, $25, who contributed through the local agency of the Bank of Montreal.

The district representative of the Redpath Sugar Refinery of Montreal made a special visit to Peterborough the other day to interview Mr. M. Carton, our new wholesale grocer, with a view to opening up business operations on a large scale with his company. Mr. Carton says that he has met with encouraging success since opening his wholesale house here. The securing of valuable connections like the Redpaths, and other strong manufacturers, has been very much in the interest of his customers in this district.

DEAR ARCHDEACON,—We the undersigned members of Christ church, Baillieboro, desiring to congratulate you on your recovery from your late sickness and also to express our thankfulness to Almighty God for having restored you to health, beg to subscribe the amount set opposite our names towards purchasing a set of Communion vessels for use in Christ Church as a thank offering, coupled with the earnest prayer that you may long be spared to labour in His vineyard, and at the last great day may you and we and all dear to us meet in the Church Triumphant, one fold under one Shepherd.

DUMMER.

When Rev. J. R. Peake, the highly esteemed pastor of the Methodist churches at South Dummer and Westwood, returned from a brief visit with friends during the Christmas holidays, he was surprised to find on his secretary, along with the mail matter which had accumulated during his absence, a purse containing $32 as a Christmas gift from the two congregations. In the purse was a note wishing him the compliments of the season, and requesting his acceptance of the gift as a slight recognition of their appreciation of his labours.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 75c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

A PROVINCIAL CONSTABULARY.

A Convention to be Held to Discuss its Establishment.

A circular has been issued to the chief constables, county constables and the public regarding the proposed organization of a provincial constabulary by the consolidation of Ontario's county constables, the aims and objects of the organization being better protection in the country, and the centralization of power by an executive head.

The idea originated with the York County Constables' Association, which adopted the following resolution:

"Whereas, it appears expedient that some better methods should be adopted in the Province for police protection in rural districts, there being at the present time no organization among the constables in outside towns, villages, etc., whereby in many instances criminals are allowed to escape and the safety of the community imperilled;

"It is resolved by this meeting of the County Constables' Association of York, that a committee, consisting of the President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer, with power to add to their numbers from sister associations and counties, be authorised by this association to consider what methods are advisable for the improvement of the present system, and to report as to the advisability of establishing a central provincial bureau for the purpose of enquiry, report and organization, so that outside constables may obtain information, etc., and thus render effective, as far as possible, the present constabulary."

The thought of the association is to get opinions and suggestions from the constables of the Province, und to hold a convention at some convenint place, to be hereafter selected, where the scheme can be discussed in all its bearings, and definite action taken by memorial to the local Government.

SWALLOWED A SIX-INCH SKEWER.

Mr. Aaron Cox's Big Mastiff Performs a Feat of Gastronomy.

Considerable comment was caused amongst the medical fraternity and the public generally when attention was called to the fact that there was a patient in the Toronto asylum for the insane, who lived for months after swallowing a knife and fork. The patient used to give his friends a treat at times by jumping up and down, when the knife and fork could be heard clinking against one another inside him.

A case almost as curious as this occurred in Peterborough recently when a big mastiff belonging to Mr. Aaron Cox, swallowed an iron skewer. Just when the dog swallowed the skewer is not known, but lately the big fellow has been eating queerly and yesterday Mr. Cox brought it into Veterinary Surgeon Johnston's office to have the case diagnosed. Dr. Johnson ran his eye over the dog and his professional optic at once noticed an abnormal lump on its side. Investigation showed it to be a foreign substance and the result of an operation resulted in the drawing forth of the six inch iron skewer. Just whether the big mastiff used to allow his canine chums to feel the skewer as a reward for kind offices performed or whether or no he was proud of the distinction of carrying it, cannot be ascertained at time of going to press.

Own a Good Piano.

It costs but a trifle more to own a good piano, like the "Rheimer," the "Morris," the "Heintzman" or the "Mendelssohn." The difference in cost is not for one day, or one month, or one year. It's worth five dollars a year for ten years to have exactly what you want. Just think it over. Have a talk with Mr. J. W. Crosby, of 342 Water street, the agent for those four first-class instruments, and close the purchase before the end of the year.

Skips D. W. Dumble and J. H. Connal have yet to play off in the first draw.

As the rink had been newly flooded and had not sufficiently hardened, no matches were played during the afternoon and the rink seemed lonesome without the cheery shout of the curlers.

A scratch match was played during the evening between skips W. Sailsbury and Dr. Boucher, resulting as follows:

St C Gurd,	W H Hill,

John McClelland,	G S Matthews,

At a meeting of the Millbrook curlers, the other night, it was decided to remain in the Ontario Curling Association, and the secretary was instructed to take all the necessary proceeding for so doing, in order that no technical objections might be taken to the club's winning the Ontario Tankard this season. It was decided to pay special attention this year to the rink matches, and as two nights a week are to be set aside for these games, Monday and Thursday evenings will probably be chosen for the rink matches but notice will be given, when the nights have finally been selected.

HOCKEY.

The Volta Hockey Club will not play the Collegiate Institute seven to-morrow. The Collegiate team was to be comprised as follows:—J. Hamilton, goal; H. Lewis, point; C. Poussette, cover point; Crossley B. Belleghem, L. King and G. White, forwards.

CATHOLIC LITERARY ASSOCIATION.

An Interesting Debate and a Most Excellent Programme.

Notwithstanding the stormy weather, a large and appreciative audience assembled at the club rooms of the above society last evening to enjoy what proved to be a first-class musical and literary entertainment.

The subject of the debate, "Resolved, that Wellington was a greater statesman and soldier than Napoleon," was very cleverly handled. Mr. J. Bogan, the leader on the affirmative side, in an eloquent speech, bristling with facts and statistics, advanced his claim to Wellington's superiority in such a decided and masterly manner, that the result of the debate seemed to be

A FOREGONE CONCLUSION.

In his efforts he was ably seconded by the ever-ready debater, Mr. T. Begley, who thoroughly upheld his reputation as one of the ablest debaters of the club. Mr. D. McCabe, in a well-worded and pointed speech, dissected for the negative as some length, several points made by the opposition to the great amusement of the audience. His supporter, Mr. T. Mahoney, in his own humourous style, added his share to the amusement, but failed in the main to shake the arguments of the affirmative, whose claim to Wellington's superiority were, after due deliberation, upheld by Messrs. T. Dwyer, Geo. Ahern and W. Cloonan, of New York.

THE MUSICAL PROGRAMME

was particularly good. Mr. C. Paterson sang several songs with good taste. The month orions solos of Mr. J. Cosier met with great [illegible] by three recalls. Mr. J. McKenzie rendered in fine voice and style the bass solo, "The Midshipmite," and in answer to a hearty encore he sang "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep." Mr. J. Hiller sang "The Gallants of England," a stirring song, with great spirit, and later on in the evening "The Volunteer Organist" in his usual effective style. Mr. Joe Begley, on being called from the audience, contributed a comic song which was well received. The best number of the evening was the singing of Miss Lola Petitt, who fairly took the house by storm. Her rendition of "When the Leaves Begin to Turn" was first class and showed the young lady to be the possessor of a rich, clear and resonant soprano, which with judicious study and instruction, bids fair to become one of the best. Her singing of Scanlan's "Rose Song" called forth unstinted and hearty applause, to which she responded by repeating the song.

Everybody present expressed themselves highly pleased with the entertainment, and the heartiest thanks are due to the ladies and gentlemen who by their efforts made it a success. The Catholic Literary Association intend holding a social in a couple of weeks, when a first class programme will be rendered before the hop, to which everyone is heartily invited.

Prince Clodwig Carl Victor von Hohenlohe-Schillingfurst, the new German chancellor, is seventy-four years of age. He will be called Hohenlohe for short. His wife was Princess von Sayn-Wittenstein-Berleburg, and they have five children of whom the eldest is a Prussian cavalry captain.

THEY CAN'T ESCAPE.

The liver when active is the watch-dog of the system—the destroyer of germs and impurities. The truth is: ninety-nine out of every hundred diseases begin with a sluggish liver. A slight cold or chill may amount to something serious. If you correct the liver you'll cure the cold. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets rouse the liver to vigorous action. After dinner, if you're bilious, take one of these tiny, sugar-coated Pellets. Take them when you have wind or pain in stomach, giddiness, fullness, loss of appetite, or when you suffer from costiveness, indigestion, sick or bilious headaches.

The makers take the risk of their benefiting you. If they're not satisfactory, your money is refunded.

Can you ask more?

What you are sure of, if you use Dr Sage's Catarrh Remedy, is either a perfect and permanent cure for your Catarrh, no matter how bad your case may be, or $500 in cash. The proprietors of the medicine promise to pay you the money, if they can't cure you.

THE CONVERSATIONAL TONE.

Shouting Oratorical Speeches Not the Best Way to Convince Men.

The voice is an instrument, the range, variety and effectiveness of which are apt to be wholly overlooked in this age of craving for sensations. Indeed, even in the pulpit, would not the man who should become master of it gain immeasurably in the hold he could get over the limited number that constitutes most congregations? In immense churches, where he must hold forth to vast assemblies, the preacher must adopt the oratorical style, just as in hailing the masthead in a gale a man must make use of the speaking trumpet. But a speaking trumpet in a parlor would make conversation as unendurable as a street brass band hired by an enemy to blast away just outside the window.

Nor is it less unendurable in many a small church. There the number is not too great to get into close, heart to heart, personal contact with, and the man who should adopt a quiet, varied, eye to eye, lovingly intimate, conversational tone would win over 10 sinners to the ways of righteousness and peace to one that your Jericho ram's horn blaster would shake down in consternation on his knees.

As an effective instrument to use in dealing at close hand with a jury, the conversational tone, it fairly may be argued, would seem to carry with it certain great advantages over the oratorical. Indeed there is something intrinsically false and absurd in the position of a man standing up and pronouncing a splendid oration before a beggarly dozen of his fellow creatures. It takes a densely packed acre of them to justify the situation. When Webster spoke at Bunker Hill, the individual was nothing; the mass was everything. He did not expect to come to close quarters with any selected persons, but to sway 10,000 in corporate body.

In addressing a jury, however, the case is as different as that between the ceremonial shaking of hands the president of the United States extends to myriads on a grand reception day and the warm, friendly pressure with which he greets a few real intimates. Is it not, then, something as really out of place to discharge a magnificent oration at a group of a dozen men as it would be to open fire on a flock of peeps on a beach with a columbiad instead of a shotgune? The true object is to bag the peeps and not to make the welkin roar.—Boston Herald.

Peculiar Rules For Astor Tenants.

Some of the rules by which the tenants of the Astors are bound are curious. For instance, although they will make almost any repairs that a tenant suggests before the lease is signed, even though the repairs may cost more than the rental, they will not spend a cent on the property during the existence of the lease. A lady who rented a house in Forty-fifth street from the Astors was told that she could have any repairs or alterations she wished, but no chandeliers. She had the house decorated from top to bottom and many expensive repairs made, and there was not a remonstrance, but she had to supply all the chandeliers, at a cost of $1,600, herself. Of course they remain her property, and she can take them away when she moves.

A curious incident is related by another tenant in Forty-fourth street. She leased a house at a rental of $3,000 for one year. When she came to renew the lease for another year, she was informed that the rent would be only $1,800. She was told by somebody who pretended to know that the reduction was due to a deterioration in the value of the property, and that the Astors did not want more than a certain interest on it. That, however, was not true, as was learned upon inquiry at the office of the Astor estates. The clerks there said that the reduction was due simply to the fact that during the first year they had charged a percentage for repairs and changes. As none was required the second year, the percentage was taken off. Nevertheless, it remains the fact that the reduction was voluntary and to the tenant unexpected.—New York Sun.

HER DANGER.

There never was a maid more fair
Or graced with more enticing ways
Than Julia, till she lately fell
A victim to the antique craze.
But now she has no thought for grace,
And of my worship will have none,
And all her winsomeness she wastes
On unresponsive wood and stone.

She has no time for words of love,
Because she has a cracked bed jar,
And now her heart will only glow
For musty draperies from afar.
A tattered rug or broken bowl
Will bring more color to her cheek
Than all the sighs and honest vows
That I could utter in a week.

Though I may bring a lover's kiss,
She has more service for my room,
Unless I also bring to her
Some treasure rare of ancient spoon.
So, though I loved her, much I fear
She must give o'er her games for delf,
Or like her taste and lustre jugs
She'll find herself upon the shelf.

TODAY, YESTERDAY OR TOMORROW.

How a Conflict of Dates Is Settled In One Part of the Pacific Ocean.

A question which has often been asked but rarely answered satisfactorily is how far one would have to go around the earth, moving east or west and supposing no time lost in transition, before one would reach the point where today changes into yesterday or tomorrow. Evidently there must be such a point somewhere, for an hour is lost every 15 degrees one goes to the east and an hour gained every 15 degrees one goes to the west.

To put the question in another way: Suppose it is one minute past midnight in Paris on the morning of Oct. 1, what day is it at that same moment at the antipodes of Paris? Is it the 1st of October or the 30th of September.

Apparently one can prove that it is either of these days by making an instantaneous journey half way around the earth either to the east or to the west.

Going east at the moment the Paris clocks point to a minute past midnight it is approximately 1 o'clock in the morning of Oct. 1 at Vienna, 2 o'clock of the same day at Sebastapol, 3 o'clock at Astrakhan, 4 o'clock at Bokhara, 7 o'clock at Saghon, 9 o'clock at Yokohama, 11 o'clock at Pine island and noon at Fortune island—1st of October at every point.

On the other hand, going westward one finds that it is 10 o'clock in the evening of Sept. 30 at the Azore islands, 8 o'clock in the evening at Buenos Ayres, 7 o'clock at New York, 6 o'clock at New Orleans, 3:15 at Mexico City, 1 o'clock in the afternoon near the Aleutian islands and noon at Fortune island—the date being Sept. 30 in each case.

Thus one has demonstrated that it is noon of Oct. 1 and noon of Sept. 30 at the same place and at the same time.

This would certainly be embarrassing to the good people of Fortune island, and in order to avoid such complications and relieve well meaning islanders in the Pacific from mixing up their Saturdays and Sundays in hopeless fashion an arbitrary line separating today from yesterday or tomorrow has been agreed upon by the navigators of civilized nations. This line has been drawn to avoid touching land. No one can be exactly sure of the moment of passing it, but the line runs just east of the New Hebrides and the New Caledonia groups and passes near the Marion islands and the Caroline islands. Captains of vessels, judging by the positions of the islands mentioned, can fix the date within a few minutes.

Vessels sailing from west to east on passing this imaginary line simply repeat the day before on their logbooks, which consequently show two days bearing the same date. On the other hand, ships going in the opposite direction from west to east skip the tomorrow and lose a day entirely. In the first case the sailors get an extra day's pay; in the second case they lose a day's pay.

The conclusion of the whole matter is that when the Paris clocks indicate a minute past midnight on Oct. 1 it is Oct. 1 going east as far as the imaginary line just indicated, while it is Sept. 30 going west up to the same line. It would be possible theoretically, therefore, for a man swimming in those waters to have one of his legs in Saturday and the other in Sunday at the same moment.—Cleveland Moffett in Chicago Inter Ocean.

No Tragedy That Day.

"There was a queer character out in Virginia City during the palmy days in the early sixties," said W. H. Barstow. "He was called Laughing Tom. He couldn't say a word without laughing, and he usually prefaced what he had to say with a series of chuckles that were the most infectious things imaginable.

"There are hundreds of stories of which Tom is the hero, but one there is in particular which I have never seen printed. One day Tom began playing poker with a miner. The stakes were small, but they were big to the players themselves, as they represented all their earthly possessions. It was nip and tuck for awhile, and a pretty good jack pot was being built up when the miner saw Tom slip a card. He said nothing until the laughing prodigy opened the jacker, bet off the limit and was about to gather in the pot, when the miner quietly told him he had seen him cheat.

"'All right,' said Tom, with his laugh. 'It was unintentional, I assure you, but take the pot and let's keep on playing.'

"The miner was agreeable, and play was continued until he caught Tom cheating again. It was the latter's deal, and he slipped two cards into his lap while shuffling the cards.

"The miner was as mad as a hornet, not so much on account of Tom's cheating as because of the insult to his intelligence by the bungling style of Tom's work. Rising and drawing his pistol, the miner said:

"'Hang you, Tom, I'm going to blow the top o' your head off.'

"Tom looked up into the gun's muzzle and laughed out, 'You wouldn't kill a feller before the draw, would you?'

"There was no tragedy that day."—Washington News.

Lazarus and the Rich Man.

Ever since the days when your Sunday school teachers tried to teach you something which they very imperfectly understood themselves you have spoken of the aristocrat who refused to befriend Lazarus, the beggar, as "Dives," being well satisfied in your own mind that that was his name. The facts are these: Dives is a Latin word meaning "rich." It is a common or appellative noun, but is often regarded as a proper name, especially when reference is made to the parable in Luke xvi. It is said that the mistake originally arose from the fact that all old pictures on the subject were labeled "Dives et Lazarus." My authority says that it was quite natural that uneducated persons would take the first word to be the rich man's name, as the last was unquestionably that of the beggar.—St. Louis Republic.

A Fatal Mistake.

Among other possessions in the trunk of a young lady who left to spend her vacation at a New Jersey shore resort was a complexion mask warranted to do away with every sort of blemish from a moth patch to sunburn. After one night's fight with mosquitoes she donned the mask, feeling sure that they could not bite through tough rubber, and then she went serenely to sleep. When she awoke, she could not open her eyes, for her eyelids were swollen terribly, every free lance of a mosquito having assembled there in the silly night to sing "They have driven me from home."—Springfield Homestead.

THE GERMAN SCHOOLBOY.

No Other Student Studies So Hard or Knows So Little About Sport.

Year after year gymnasiums, high schools and universities send out into the world, there to look for a living, multitudes of overwrought youths, teeming with instruction which has unfitted them for bread earning by the practice of any purely mechanical craft or petty trade, and has imbued them with many of the tastes and sympathies that can only be productive of happiness or even enjoyment to those who are enabled to take their stand and maintain it in one of the upper social spheres. These youths have been "put through the mill" with a severity of which the British public schoolboy and university "man" have not an even approximate notion.

Nothing is less like the school life of England than that of Germany. In the first place it is entirely devoid of the element of play. Games, such as those which constitute an important feature of our educational curriculum and are specifically associative in character, are unknown to the boys who attend German gymnasiums and Realschulen. All these establishments are in the nature of day schools. They do not take in boarders. No leisure moment of the scholar's life is spent within their precincts; consequently no playgrounds are attached to them, and they are exclusively utilized for study. There is no such thing as cricket or football, rowing or paper chasing at a German school, nor were those or any other open air sports tolerated by the management of any educational institution would there be any time for indulgence in them.

It may be said of the average German schoolboy that during the seven years or so which he passes in working his way up from "sexta" to "prima" his labors never cease save during meal times and sleeping hours and are only lightened to a certain extent by his annual summer vacation, which, however, is abundantly fraught with tasks calling for careful fulfillment ere he returns to the regular routine of school life. This routine begins at 8 a. m. and lasts, with an interval for necessary refreshment, until a late hour of the afternoon. Should the "gymnasiast" happen to reside at any considerable distance from his school, he is compelled to rise at 6 or a little after in order to dress, get his breakfast, cast a glance at his lesson books and exercises, and reach the gymnasium in time to avert an imposition for unpunctuality.

When he returns home at the end of school hours, he carries with him a quantity of work, the adequate preparation of which for submission to his teachers next morning will occupy him until 10 p. m. if he be a quick student and probably until midnight if he be a slow one. For healthful recreation—nay, for absolute rest—he has not had five minutes at his disposal throughout the working day. Week in, week out, excepting on Sundays, with him it is toil and trudge, toil and trudge.—London Telegraph.

Recalling a Mailed Letter.

To recall a letter once mailed is almost as difficult a task as to take back an assertion once uttered. The sender must appear at the postoffice and is handed a blank to fill out. In this he must state when and where he mailed the letter, how it was addressed, must describe the envelope, state the amount of postage prepaid and testify "that the above mentioned letter was written by me or by my authority, and I desire to recall it for the following reasons"—and then state the reason, which is usually, "mailed by mistake." He must then sign his name, so that the handwriting may be compared with that on the letter, and sign a receipt. If the address cannot be shown to be in his handwriting, or is printed or typewritten, he must describe some peculiarities of the envelope sufficient to identify it. If he is unable to do this the letter is refused, unless the postmaster knows the applicant and is satisfied concerning his good intentions. If he is satisfied, he asks for a statement concerning the contents, and the applicant is then obliged to open the letter and read portions of it in the postmaster's presence to prove that it is the one he described.

But if the letter has been sent away the process of recalling it is still more difficult. A similar blank has to be filled out, and a minute description telegraphed at the sender's expense to the postmaster at the office of its destination. If discovered in time, the letter is then intercepted and sent to the department at Washington with a statement of the case. Why should any one want to recall a letter so much as to take this trouble? Well, there was one case at the local office recently where a valuable deed was mailed and the sender received information that satisfied him that the sale should not be made.—Exchange.

The Contingent Fee Explained.

An Irishman went to a lawyer with a case, but the attorney wanted a retainer. The Irishman was poor, and finally the lawyer said he would take the case on a contingent fee. It was settled, but the contingent fee part of the agreement bothered the client. He confided his ignorance to his friend Paddy and asked for an explanation. "An it is the meanin of a contingent fee yer after knowin? Sure, I'll tell ye. A contingent fee means that if ye lose the case the lawyer gits nothin. If ye win, you git nothin."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Coffee a Real Brain Food.

An eminent medical authority maintains that coffee is a real brain food, and has the power of absolutely increasing a man's capacity for brain work. The writer further says: Opium stimulates the imagination; alcohol lifts a man up for the moment to throw him into confusion and irregularity of action, but caffeine increases his power of reasoning and absolutely adds to his brain work capacity for the time.—Boston Surgical and Medical Journal.

The Steel Pen.

Although the pen is so small a thing and seemingly simple to make, it takes some time before it reaches the state when it is ready for use. No order for a pen that has to be made to order can be executed in less than 10 days. This is mainly due to the many times it has to be heated and to the scouring it receives to take off the rough edges.—Boston Commonwealth.

How to Cure a Corn.

It is one of the easiest things in the world to cure a corn. Do not use acids or other caustic preparations, and don't cut a hole in your boot. It is simply to apply Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor, and in three days the corn can be removed without pain. Sure, safe, painless. Take only Putnam's Corn Extractor.

In Bed 5 Months—Had Given Up All Hope of Getting Well—A Remedy Found at Last to which "I Owe My Life."

Science has fully established the fact that all the nervous energy of our bodies is generated by nerve centres located near the base of the brain. When the supply of nerve force has been diminished either by excessive physical or mental labours, or owing to a derangement of the nerve centres, we are first conscious of a languor or tired and worn-out feeling, then of a mild form of nervousness, headache, or stomach trouble, which is perhaps succeeded by nervous prostration, chronic indigestion, and dyspepsia, and a general sinking of the whole system. In this day of hurry, fret and worry, there are very few who enjoy perfect health; nearly everyone has some trouble, an ache, or pain, a weakness, a nerve trouble, something wrong with the stomach and bowels, poor blood, heart disease, or sick headache; all of which are brought on by a lack of nervous energy to enable the different organs of the body to perform their respective work.

South American Nervine Tonic, the marvellous nerve food and health giver, is a satisfying success, a wondrous boon to tired, sick, and overworked men and women, who have suffered years of discouragement and tried all manner of remedies without benefit. It is a modern, a scientific remedy, and in its wake follows abounding health.

It is unlike all other remedies in that it is not designed to act on the different organs affected, but by its direct action on the nerve centres, which are nature's little batteries, it causes an increased supply of nervous energy to be generated, which in its turn thoroughly oils, as it were, the machinery of the body, thereby enabling it to perform perfectly its different functions, and without the slightest friction.

If you have been reading of the remarkable cures wrought by South American Nervine, accounts of which we publish from week to week, and are still sceptical, we ask you to investigate them by correspondence, and become convinced that they are true to the letter. Such a course may save you months, perhaps years, of suffering and anxiety.

The words that follow are strong, but they emanate from the heart, and speak the sentiments of thousands of women in the United States and Canada who know, through experience, of the healing virtues of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, a prominent and much respected lady, writes as follows:—

"I owe my life to the great South American Nervine Tonic. I have been in bed for five months with a scrofulous tumour in my right side, and suffered with indigestion and nervous prostration. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I cannot recommend it too highly."

Tired women, can you do better than become acquainted with this truly great remedy?

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough fo. burial fees.
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease).
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want;
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then went home, but stop, I mind,
They gave us every one, a kiss,
An' said, "be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home,
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which some the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

THE LOVE OF THE SEA

HOW MEMORY OF EARLY DAYS AFFECTED AN OLD MERCHANT.

The Queer Actions of a Well Dressed Man Explained by His Conversation With a Ship's Watchman—Affection For a Ship Strong In After Life.

He was portly in figure and had on his face that look of contentment and peace which comes with the possession of plenty of the world's goods and the disposition and ability to enjoy them. He was well dressed, wore a silk hat and would have given to a casual observer the impression that he was a retired merchant, one of the many men in this great big city who have successfully fought the battle of life and calmly settled down to enjoy the fruits of victory. The casual observer would have been right in his impression. He was a retired merchant. He had wealth in plenty. His home was fitted and filled with all the luxuries which the unsparing use of money could procure. His wife and daughter appeared at all the fashionable social functions, and he and they were welcome guests in the proudest homes of the great city.

Sheltered from the falling rain by a large umbrella, he sauntered down South street as unconcernedly as if he were a hundred miles from any excitement instead of being only a short distance from the scene of a great celebration. At Burling slip he stopped, looked carefully around and went across South street and down the pier, where a big ship was tied up. The gangway stretched from the rail of the ship to the pier floor, and up the narrow walk, over the rail and down on to the deck he went. The watchman was there, and after a brief talk they went aft and down the cabin gangway. He gave a sniff of delight and a sigh of satisfaction as the warm air from the cabin rushed up the gangway, and he disappeared into the depths whence it came.

When he reappeared, he wore a suit of the watchman's clothes, and the silk hat was replaced with a "sou'wester." He went forward with the rolling gait of a born and bred sailor, took a look aloft in a way which showed that he knew what he was looking at, unlocked the cook's galley and explored it thoroughly, went into the paint locker and fumbled around among slush buckets, paint cans, scrapers, "bo'sun's chairs," swabs and tar pots. Then he went into the sail locker and stretched himself at full length on the jibs and staysails, which were carefully rolled up and packed away in the little room. Long, deep breaths he took, and a look of bright, buoyant happiness came into his eyes.

The big iron eye at the clew of a topsail stuck out from a mass of canvas near him, and he patted and stroked it and spoke soft, low words to it as though it were the hand of a woman whose heart he hoped to win. Over the great folds of storm stained duck he rolled and tossed and at last went out and closed the door, with a "goodby" which was partly a whisper and partly a sob; then into the "fo'c'sle," with its three tiers of bunks deserted, save by the pungent odor which is always a part of Jack's floating home.

There was the forward bunk, always the last one taken, because, being built athwartship instead of fore and aft, its owner may wake up and find that "tacking ship" has placed his heels higher than his head, and Jack prefers sleeping on an even keel. Into one of the bunks he crawled and carved his initials on the board which separated it from the one just forward of it, then out and forward to the chainlocker, the big box where the anchor chains are laid away.

Still forward, away under the forecastle deck, where the dull glint of the water came up through the great round eyes of the ship—the hawseholes—the air was full of a damp, sticky odor that told of stores of salt beef for the men and a pig for the cabin. Back again by the big windlass, which received a loving pat from the hand which only a short time before had been soft and white, but now was soiled by contact with almost everything it had been able to reach on board the ship.

Giving a pull at the neatly coiled ropes as he went by, he talked to them as if they were old friends, gave the main deck capstan a whirl, picked up a marine spike and carried it to the locker, found a belaying pin and put it into a vacant hole in the rail where it belonged, and at last got back to the cabin, where the watchman had a tin pan of coffee and a couple of "hardtack" waiting for him. Mechanically he rapped the "soup plate crackers" on the table and dropped them into the hot coffee.

"There's none in them, sir," said the watchman. "They're too hard for the creepers. But I s'pose it's habit, sir."

"Yes," was the answer, "it is habit. When I was a boy and ran away to sea, as so many boys have done, we used to get 'hard tack' that would have walked overboard if it hadn't been kept in a barrel."

"Them was great times, sir," remarked the watchman.

"True, they were, and they gave me the love of the ship. Did you ever feel it, watchman? That love for the sea and its ships and the life of it all, that once you have tasted is always with you? That makes of a ship a living being, to be loved and petted and taken care of and chided and watched over. That makes it a part of your own life and almost as precious?"

"Indeed I have, sir, or I wouldn't be here now," answered the watchman, and the men, so widely separated by circumstances, but with kindred hearts, clasped hands and then "spliced the main brace."

Then he changed clothes again, put on his silk hat and went up on deck with the watchman. At the rail he stopped and shook hands once more with the ship's guardian.

"Goodby," he said. "The sea was my first love, and she treated me so harshly that I left her. But I cannot get rid of the old feeling, and once in awhile it conquers me. Now I'll go home again and be all right for a time. Goodby," and as the watchman's hand closed over a $5 gold piece his visitor went up the pier to the street, with a light, springy step and a slight roll which showed that the successful merchant had not entirely obliterated the sailor lad of years gone by and that the sea and her ways had not been forgotten.—New York Tribune.

YESTERDAY'S STORM

Trains Buried in Snow and Telegraphic Communication Delayed.

STORM RAGES EVERYWHERE

Street Car Traffic Paralyzed in Toronto—A Foot of Snow Covers the City—All Trains Behind Time—Toward Midnight Rain and Sleet Fell.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Jan. 11.—Traffic on the Fall Brook Railroad was completely paralyzed yesterday by snowslides in the mountain regions of Pine Creek. In one instance an entire freight train was buried out of sight by an avalanche and the crew narrowly escaped injury. Great rocks and tons of earth came down with the snow and the tracks are buried at points many feet deep. Between Blackwells and Cammel for a distance of fifteen miles the track is almost entirely covered and hundreds of laborers are working in the effort to open the road. The buried freight train consisted of seventeen cars and it had just halted owing to a slide in front when another avalanche came and overwhelmed it. Two other freight trains are stalled between slides. The officials can not give any assurance as to when the road will be opened. Not a train arrived or departed from this city to-day.

LEGHORN, Jan. 11.—The British schooner George Kilner, Captain Rees, from St. Johns, Newfoundland, Decem ber 5, which arrived here yesterday lost sails and was obliged to jettison a portion of her cargo on the voyage.

MADRID, Jan. 11.—Telegraphic communication with France has been stopped nine days in consequence of the storms in the north of Spain. The snowstorms and gales continue.

VIENNA, Jan. 11.—The present snowstorm is the heaviest that has visited Vienna in a generation, excepting the storm of 1883. The street cleaning officials have at work 3,800 scavengers, 27 ploughs and 360 carts. The tramway companies have 6,500 hands and 71 ploughs employed in clearing away the snow. Many country places are isolated.

TORONTO, Jan. 11.—This is the second time during the present season that Ontario has been visited by a terrific snowstorm, which came upon us from the South. The first one was very much more severe than the present downfall, but, fortunately for Torontonians, we only got the outer northern edge of it, the main volume moving along eastward from the Gulf of Mexico over to the New England States, accompanied by a gale of wind the velocity of which had been unprecedented in years. This mild type of blizzard which raged yesterday also took its rise in the Mexican Gulf region, centering in Tennessee and moving directly toward the lake region. It was about half past seven yesterday morning when the snow flurries began to assert themselves in the city, and the downfall kept increasing in volume. A rising temperature will soon drive it away, leaving the streets swimming in slush.

Street car traffic was very much demoralized and although the company brought all their appliances for such an emergency into immediate use they have been unable to do anything more than keep open the leading lines. The attempt to keep to scheduled time was not at all successful, but by dropping all trailers and doubling motors a fair service was kept on. The company's officials say that in addition to the snow ploughs a force of about 100 men were engaged cleaning the curves and other points where delays were likely to occur.

Greenwich the Legal Time.

HAMILTON, Jan. 11.—Edward Gordon, hotelk-keeper, was fined by Police Magistrate Jelfs some days ago on a charge of selling liquor during prohibited hours. Mr. Haverson on behalf of Gordon appealed on the ground that Solar time and not Standard time should govern and in that case Gordon was within the law. Judge Muir gave his decision yesterday, quashing the conviction on the ground that Greenwich time, which is 19 minutes slower than the Standard time, was the legal time to be considered. The members of the Licensed Victuallers' Association were greatly interested in the appeal.

All Quiet at St. Johns.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Jan. 11.—There were no further disturbances here to-day. The Government is preparing to begin work on new roads and harbor improvements of considerable magnitude. It will introduce proposals in the Legislature which will effect an annual saving to the taxpayers of $250,000. The local creditors of Job Brothers met last night. The British creditors decided to accept one-third of the amounts due them and to permit the firm to continue to do business. The local creditors generally favor acceptance of the same offer.

For Publishing a Sunday Paper.

TORONTO, Jan. 11.—On Sunday last the Toronto World, published by W. F. Maclean, appeared in the form of a special edition giving an account of the big fire. The paper came out at 10 a.m. and was sold by the newsboys in different parts of the city. The publisher was arraigned in the Police Court yesterday, charged with having broken the Lord's Day Act. Lawyer Murdoch appeared for him and was granted an adjournment until Wednesday next. Fifteen newsboys were also charged with a breach of the Act, who were remanded until the same date.

Grafton & Co's big clearing sale now going on.

THE MISSING GERTIE KIDD.

She Says That She Was Deserted in Detroit by Her Brother.

DETROIT, Jan. 11.—A pretty sixteen-year-old girl came into the office of the Poor Commission yesterday afternoon and asked assistance. She told a remarkable story, if it be true, and she seemed not to have deception in her make-up. She said her home was in Toronto and that she was married to a 98-year-old man.

Soon after she had married her brother brought her to Detroit, she said, to get her away from the centenarian husband. She and her brother lived at Patrick Mallory's hotel, 13 Brush street, for a short time, and then he went away and left her alone. Her money had quickly given out, and she had been obliged to apply to the Poor Commission for help. Her maiden name, she said, was Gertrude Robins and the name of her husband Kidd. The young wife was given a ticket to Toronto to return to her aged husband. It is evident that this is none other than old John Kidd's child bride who since last spring, when they were married in Toronto, has deserted the old man several times, and while living with him at Mono Mills carried on disgracefully with a number of married and unmarried men not far from Orangeville. This experience may have the effect of taming the youngster, who openly asserts that she detests the old man whom she married for his money, but who has been talking of securing a divorce while on the threshold of his hundredth birthday.

UNITED STATES CROPS.

The Corn Crop of 1894 in Rate of Yield the Lowest on Record.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—The estimates of the area product and value by the states and territories of the cereal crops have been completed by the statistican of the agricultural department and represented as follows:

The corn crop of 1894 in rate of yield is one of the lowest on record. In the past thirteen years the yield per acre of but one year namely 1881 was lower, the yield for that year having been 18.6 against 19.4 for the year 1894.

The product garnered is 1,212,770,000 bushels having an estimated farm value of $544,719,000.

The wheat crop is above an average one in yield per acre. The entire product of the country is 460,267,416 bushels which is below the average for the five years 1890 to 1894 inclusive.

The farm value of the crop is $225,902,025. The rate of yield is 13.2 bushels per acre The estimates for oats are :—area 37,028,553 acres : product 662,086,926 ; value $214,816,020 ; yield per acre 24.5 bushels.

Will Now be Tried on Its Merits.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 11.—In the Common Pleas Court yesterday Judge Pugh rendered a decision in the suit of the Central Trust Company, of New York, against Judge Stevenson Burke in the Hickok estate, the Green estate and others, in which nearly $14,000,000 is involved. In 1881, while Burke was president of the Columbus, Hocking Valley and Toledo road, the stockholders voted to issue $8,000,000 worth of bonds for the purpose of extending and double tracking the road. Instead of following the intention of the issue, Burke and the other defendants sold to the railroad the coal and iron from land which they owned in the Hocking Valley for $8,000,000. The present suit is one of a series brought to recover this money. The petitioners ask for the $8,000,000 and interest, which brings the entire sum up to nearly $14,000,000. To the petition Burke filed a demurrer, which raised all the vital points in the case. Burke's demurrer to the petition is overruled by Judge Pugh and Burke is severely scored.

Hopes to Pass a Financial Measure.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—The administration is reported to have not lost all hope of the passage of a financial measure by the House. Secretary Carlisle is considering the substitute bill which has been before the House with a view of amending it in such a way as to secure for a new bill the support of some of those who have antagonized the substitute. Some of the friends of the Carlisle bill are willing to sink their objections to free silver to the extent of agreeing to a coinage of the seignorance in the treasury. It is said the President is willing to make any concessions to the opponents of the bill that will not impair its general features or that will not be regarded as a clean surrender to the free silver men.

A Verdict Against the Knights.

SALEM, Mass., Jan. 11.—In the case of Thomas J. Lally against John Hughes and nine other members of the joint board of Knights of Labor of Lynn, to recover damages for depriving him of work in May 1893, by causing his discharge as a cutter in Welch & Landregan's factory by threating to call out all the help if he was retained, the jury to-day returned a verdict of $80 for the plaintiff. This is considered a test case and it will be taken to the Supreme Court of exceptions. Lally was out of work four weeks.

A Fool and His Money.

BUFFALO, Jan. 11.—Edward Barry, a Canadian, said to be a wealthy fruit and produce dealer, visited Buffalo Tuesday and took in the sights. Yesterday he caused the arrest of Kittie Higgins, a woman of the town, for stealing $100 from him. He could not testify that the woman took it, and Judge King, who does not particularly love Canadians, dismissed the case with this terse remark to the plaintiff: "A fool and his money are soon parted. Get out of here and go home to Canada."

Man and Wife Found Dead.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 11.—Yesterday O. W. Rollings and his wife were found dead in their home at 610 Emerson avenue. They had not been seen for several days, and the neighbors forced an entrance to the house. A revolver was found indicating murder and suicide.

IRISH M. P.'S MUST BE SATISFIED.

That the Government Intends to Act in Good Faith.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—Besides the naval expenditures, the free breakfast table and routine matters, it is said the cabinet has reached a crisis in regard to the Irish question. Mr. Justin McCarthy is said to have made it plain that the Irish members must be satisfied that the Government intends to act in good faith and push the Irish question into the foremost possible position, that they cannot much longer be restrained by idle promises and that a definite statement of the position of the cabinet must be outlined in the Queen's speech. They are supported by Mr. Morley, Chief Secretary, by Sir William Vernon Harcourt and by George Otto Trevelyan, who are represented as insisting upon the Irish demands being satisfied. The Premier and Mr. Asquith have support in the cabinet for a strong English session and the local reforms outlined in the Newcastle declaration. The disagreement as to the Irish question is said to be as serious as that over the naval estimates and the budget. There is a general speculation at the clubs and popular resorts as to the result of the cabinet meeting, no inkling of which has yet reached the outside public.

No Sovereign Rights Will Arise.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—In referring to President Cleveland's proposition in favor of leasing the Neckar Island to Great Britain for a cable station, the Morning Post will say to-day :—"We assume that no question of sovereign rights will arise in regard to Neckar Island. Nevertheless it is not easy to see how a station can be acquired on neutral landing ground, and also be free from foreign control—at any rate to the extent that the cable could not be cut in the event of war. Such a difficulty, however is certainly remote."

Premier Crispi's Daughter Married.

NAPLES, Jan. 11.—The civil marriage of Premier Crispi's daughter and Prince Lingualosse took place yesterday. A congratulatory despatch was received from King Humbert. The Queen, the Prince of Naples and many ambassadors and ministers sent presents. The syndic of Rome gave a gilt bronze ink stand which won a prize at the Chicago fair.

Hannon, George Terry and Morrill Wood. They are all believed to be members of the Ku-Klux band. John Edmondson owns 3,000 acres of fine land in Murray county and is one of the leading citizens of his section of the state. He gave a $5,000 bond and went back home. He is said to be the leader.

Dr. Selwyn Not Superannuated.

OTTAWA, Jan. 11.—Dr. Selwyn, director of the Geological Survey, who has been in England on a three months' leave of absence, denies the report that he has been superannuated. If he has, he says, he never heard anything about it. His three months' leave are now up and he has returned to work. There is, however, a general opinion in official circles that if Dr. Selwyn is not now superannuated he very soon will be.

MME. JONIAUX'S NERVE

Remarkable Coolness of the Antwerp Poisoner at Her Trial.

HER ANSWER TO THE JUDGE

She Meets the Closest Questioning With Ready Answers That Astonish the Court—The Intense Feeling Exhibited Against Her is Undergoing a Change.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—The Sun's London correspondent says: "All Europe is following with the keenest interest the poisoning trial at Antwerp, which easily takes rank as one of the greatest causes celebre of the century. Even the English press printed verbatim reports of the wonderful four days' examination of Mme. Joniaux, the accused woman, and all Europe is marvelling at her splendid courage and amazing resources before her accusers. The case suggests slightly the great Borden trial at Fall River, but the radical difference in the procedure in the Belgian courts, which follow French methods, yields scene after scene dramatic and thrilling beyond anything in English or American jurisprudence.

Readers are familiar with the general facts in the case. Occupying a high position in one of the first families of Belgium, Mme. Joniaux is accused of killing by poison her sister, uncle and brother, in order to profit by the insurance on their lives. The evidence of her guilt which had come to light was so strong that the public was convinced of her guilt in advance of trial, and the detestation of the crime was so great that it is not too much to say that there was a general popular clamor for the woman's head.

It is perhaps the best tribute to her wonderful qualities to say that when her four days' duel for her life with the presiding magistrate was finished on Saturday evening there was a strong reaction of public sentiment in her favor. The trial will continue probably another ten days, but it is hardly possible to exceed the dramatic interest of the long inquisition of the prisoner at the hands of the magistrate. The president of the court is one of the keenest judges in Belgium, and he is merciless in the pursuit of most damaging and significant details. Mme. Joniaux, who is a woman of 51 years, self-possessed, cool and undaunted, faced him throughout with the air of an accused queen who scorned her accusers. Evidence and insinuation, often presented with crafty and crushing force that would have overwhelmed a master of state craft, she parried or even turned to advantage. She made the most astounding admissions in a most matter-of-fact manner.

Two days were spent in intricate inquiries as to her great financial difficulties which showed her desperate condition at the time each suspicious death occurred. Every question, implying guilt however indirectly, she met with an emphatic protest of innocence, sometimes vehemently, sometimes calmly, almost indifferently, sometimes with tears or with a dramatic insensity that left the court in breathless silence. It was in connection with the examination regarding her brother's death that the prisoner created several thrilling scenes. Early in the day, when close pressed by the inquisitor, Mme. Joniaux suddenly electrified the court by exclaiming in an intense voice: "I have prayed, I have implored God to throw light upon this dark mystery, and He has answered me. A witness will come forth who will prove my innocence."

"But," retorted the president cynically, "Providence is not in possession of the papers and evidence in this case. Who is this witness?"

"Find out," was the tortured woman's first spiteful and genuinely feminine reply.

Another outburst followed some suggestive questions implying that while her first husband, Prof. Faber, was still alive, she was carrying on an intrigue with Joniaux, her present husband, and was in fact his mistress. This the prisoner vehemently denied, adding that she protested against such inuendoes from the president of the court. The president dropped the subject and proceeded to read a letter, admittedly in the prisoner's handwriting, in which she related that she had been borrowing money from a usurer.

"Who is that usurer?" asked the President.

"He was a man named Leriot," replied the prisoner.

"Ah!" snapped the judge, "Leriot. Yes, but Leriot has long been dead at the date you mention."

Mme. Joniaux had tripped distressingly. Every head craned toward the dock in order not to miss a word of her explanation. It came after a momentary hesitation.

"No wonder I got mixed up among so many details."

"On the contrary," remarked the president, "I must compliment you upon your marvellous memory."

Many questions were put regarding Mme. Joniaux's purchases of morphine a few days before her brother's death a year ago. Mme. Joniaux alleged that they were for her own use. She was addicted, she said, to the morphine habit and she had to the stage of being able to take six or eight centigrammes at a dose. It was true she had purchased a large quantity upon the eve of Alfred's death at several chemists, but simply because no one chemist would have sold her the strong dose to which she was accustomed. Without a moment's warning, the President in his sternest manner turned upon the woman in the dock and exclaimed in a terrifying voice: "At this very time, woman, you were promising to pay your creditors in a few days. You were evidently forecasting Alfred's death and the gain of the insurances money.

"Oh, no," replied the prisoner (no in a voice shrill with vehemence.) "I was expecting my husband's salary and other receipts. Had I been guilty, would I have given the name and address of the chemists?"

Even the president was driven to exclaim, "Madame, you are never at a loss for a reply," and the harrassed woman improved the occasion by retorting: "I must need defend myself, I am alone here before my judges. I deeply deplore these sad events and the blot which they put on my name.

"During the long months of this inquiry I have often, in the solitude of my cell, wept tears of blood, and I would not wish for the greatest of my enemies one tithe of the tortures I have endured."

It is no wonder that Europe is marvelling at the fortitude, endurance and cleverness of this woman, whose qualities have been imperfectly indicated in these few points from a remarkable trial.

CARRIED THE VAULT KEY.

The Mystery of a Brantford Law Office Solved by a Detective.

BRANTFORD, Jan. 14.—For some time past Hardy, Wilkes & Hardy, lawyers, lawyers, noticed that their vault and contents of cash box had been tampered with. They made every effort to ascertain how it was but without success. They finally placed the case with the chief of police, who detailed policeman John Wallace to investigate. Wallace took the case in hand and for some weeks past would nightly enter Hardy, Wilkes & Hardy's office at about 8 p. m. and remain till about 2 a. m. Up to Friday Wallace was not successful in getting at the trouble. The cash in the vault was still tampered with, though no person was seen at the vault.

Friday night Policeman Wallace determined to get at the case and at six p. m. locked himself up in Hardy, Wilkes & Hardy's office to remain all night. About seven p. m. he heard a noise at the door entering the cellar under the office. The intruder opened this door and proceeded in through the cellar to a trap door which is in the floor of Hardy, Wilkes & Hardy's law office. After some little time the trap door (on which was placed a broom so that if the trap door would be raised the broom would fall and make a noise) was raised and the broom fell making a noise. The constable was thus duly warned and presently the intruder entered the room where the vault was, and made for the vault door. Just as he was reaching the vault door Detective Wallace collared him and after a short struggle got the handcuffs placed on him.

When reaching the light it proved to be Charles Elliott, a lawyer. The prisoner was conveyed to the cells. Elliott served his apprenticeship with Hardy, Wilkes, Hardy, was in a law office in Toronto for a while and after passing returned here last fall.

During the scuffle Policeman Wallace heard something fall on the floor, but the room being too dark to see he could not tell what it was. After locking the prisoner up he returned and found it was the vault key on the floor. The prisoner will also be charged with housebreaking and larceny on December 17th and 21st and January 5th, the amounts being $10, $25 and $3.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

The Prisoners Hendershott and Welter Will be Tried at Next Assizes.

ST. THOMAS, Jan. 14.—At Saturday's session of the Middlemarch murder investigation the evidence was mainly in reference to the insurance feature of the case.

Patrick Fitzpatrick and Dr. C. K. Duncombe, of St. Thomas, and Dr. Marlatt, of Aylmer, gave evidence as to Hendershott's attempt to insure the life of Fitzpatrick whose drinking habits caused him to be rejected by the company.

G. Roche testified as to insurance being placed upon the life of the murdered man.

W. R. Jackson, jeweler, identified the watch found on deceased as one which had been purchased from him by Welter in August, 1891.

This ended the case for the Crown.

Police Magistrate White asked the prisoners if they had anything to say, both replied in the negative and he committed them for trial at the next assizes.

Fire in Bracebridge.

BRACEBRIDGE, Ont., Jan. 14.—The Railway hotel was discovered on fire yesterday. The building was a frame structure owned by Geo. Neil and occupied by Jas. B. Brown. The fire originated in the second storey and had gained great headway before being discovered. The inmates were aroused and escaped in their night clothes. The house and contents are a total loss. The fire spread south to an old building occupied by Wm. Storey as a wheelwright's shop, which was partially destroyed. The loss is estimated at about $2,000, partially covered by insurance. The new waterworks worked very satisfactorily and was undoubtedly the means of preventing a very disastrous fire.

A Quebec Hotel Burned.

QUEBEC, Jan. 14.—Yesterday a disastrous fire broke out in the large kitchen of the Victoria hotel. The boarders, about 70 in all, were asleep. Mr. Theo Hamel, being almost overcome with smoke, woke up and gave the alarm. The fire brigade responded with alacrity and in a few minutes the interior was flooded and the fire extinguished. Mr. Benjamin Trudel was soon on the scene with his men. The boarders and their effects were all saved and transferred comfortably to the Florence, Mr. Trudel's hotel in St. John street. The loss will be $40,000. The buildings were insured for $30,000 in five different companies. Most of the damage was done by water.

BRITISH CABLE LETTER

No Serious Differences Have Arisen Within the Cabinet Circle.

LORDS THE VITAL QUESTION

How to Go About This Delicate Matter is the Only Part of the Policy on Which All Are Not Agreed—Plural Voting Must Be Abolished—The Armenian Committee.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The proceedings of the Cabinet Council which was held last week, and about whose deliberations there has been so much speculation, were by no means as vitally important as was supposed. The council began with the arrangement of the Parliamentary work of the coming session, the sequence of the measures to be introduced, and the manner in which they should be presented. These questions being decided the construction of the Queen's Speech was taken up and the question exhaustively debated. These topics constituted all of the matters discussed by the council that were of public interest. The rumors which have been widely circulated of grave dissensions over the questions as to the advisability of an early dissolution in view of the Parliamentary situation and the order in which bills should be introduced are utterly without foundation and the stories that serious differences have arisen between Lord Rosebery and Sir William Harcourt are exactly the reverse of the truth. All of the well-informed adherents of the ministry know that the cabinet is united and in thorough accord as to the policy to be pursued, though the ministers have not yet decided upon the line of Parliamentary tactics, which will yield the best results.

In minor matters the Cabinet are united, but the leading and delicate question how to mention the House of Lords in the Speech from the Throne was keenly debated in the council and the various propositions submitted were exhaustively discussed. If the omission of any reference to the House of Lords from the Queen's Speech could thwart the machinations of the Opposition, who are trying to force the Government into declaring themselves upon this question early in the session, the matter would be gladly ignored, but the majority of the Cabinet, in view of the official utterances of Lord Rosebery and Mr. Campbell-Bannerman upon the subject, are of the opinion that the Government were already committed to a declaration and must open Parliament with a formal announcement of their policy in regard to the Upper House. Lord Rosebery and Prof. James Bryce are to speak at the Universal Suffrage Congress at Cardiff on January 18, when it is understood that the Premier will promise the Executive Committee of the National Liberal Federation a full statement of the Government's programme in regard to the House of Lords. The Congress will afterwards wind up its session with the passage of a resolution reaffirming the anti-Lords' declarations of the Leeds conference.

The annual report of the National Liberal Federation was given out on Saturday. It contains this statement regarding the issues in the next election: "Unless a bill be passed before the general election abolishing plural voting and shortening the period of qualification to three months, reverses await the Liberals in the election which is to determine whether the Lords shall longer override the Commons."

In regard to dissolution the leading members of the Liberal party recognize the fact that the certainty of the Government's position may precipitate its fall within a fortnight after the resumption of the session of the House. The Ministerial whips report that according to the most reliable information obtainable the Government's majority of 16 in the House depends upon the adhesion of the Radical wing to the Ministry, the full vote of the McCarthyites and the abstention of the Parnellites from voting with the Conservatives. Still, the Government are confident that they will be able to hold out until the main measures and a popular budget are introduced, and these are relied upon to gain sufficient adherents to enable them to pull through.

Sir William Harcourt expects that the showing of a substantial surplus will enable the Government to shape the budget so that it will appeal successfully to the people in the next election, and it is believed by the Liberal leaders that their internal discords will not prevent the McCarthyites from meeting in Parliament with a united front.

Mr. Healy, when the party meets in February, will resume his fight over the constitution of the Irish Committee for the session, hoping to overthrow the vote of last March, when Arthur O'Connor and Florence O'Driscoll were ejected from the committee at the meeting of the committee in Dublin.

The report of the committee enquiring into the Armenian atrocities is not expected to be rendered for several months. The district in which the atrocities are alleged to have been committed is now covered with deep snow, and the temperature is almost unbearable to persons not accustomed to the climate. The British Consul at Erzeroum has suggested the advisability of a preliminary enquiry at that place for the purpose of hearing the testimony of refugees and other witnesses, with a view of expediting the work of the committee. Several of the London daily newspapers who have sent or are about to send special correspondents to Armenia, have been advised that the Porte will not allow representatives of the press to accompany the committee, and these journals have decided to institute an independent enquiry. In these circumstances the final reports may be expected to be varied and conflicting.

Quebec Legislature Prorogued.

QUEBEC, Jan. 14.—The Montreal bill was killed in the Legislative Council on Saturday night. In the Lower House Mr. Ange made a heavy charge against the Legislative Council but the majority of the Lower House went against him. At 8 o'clock in the evening Lieutenant-Governor Chapleau prorogued the present Legislature. His Honor was attended with the usual military honors. Hon. Mr. Leblanc entertained about forty journalists at dinner and several speeches were made.

A MATTER OF FAITH.

Our evening contemporary quietly and gently flagellates the EXAMINER for not having the faith that removes mountains (or digs canals) in respect of the completion of the Trent Valley Canal. It quotes Premier Bowell's polite platitude at the time of the visit of the last deputation, that he hoped to live to see the connection (presumably by Canal) between Georgian Bay and the Bay of Quinte. The age of the patriarchs will, one fears, have to be revived to admit of so desirable a consummation. Premier Bowell is now seventy two years of age, and at the same rate that has marked the progress of this important work during the past three score years, the premier will have reached the venerable age of 130 years before he shall see the desire of his heart. Even under the protection of the present Government, thirteen years have elapsed since Sir Charles Tupper visited this district and went over the route and pledged the best endeavours of the Government in the interests of the work on the Trent Valley Canal. In 1890 we had the positive promise of Sir John Macdonald in respect of urging on the work, and at the same time the representative of West Peterborough and supporter of the Government, speaking doubtless by inspiration, solemnly and publicly pledged his seat in the House for the employment of 1,000 men the following summer upon the Peterborough-Lakefield section. Five years have gone by, and after elaborate surveys this section is put to tender, but the tender is cast out and a new survey ordered of the river route, which has been under the hands of engineers with reference to its use for canal purposes for the past dozen years.. We do not doubt—for it would be rank heresy to do so—that Sir Charles Tupper meant what he said in 1883, and that Mr. Stevenson meant what he said in 1890, yet behold the result or, rather, lack of result. On the same grounds it would be rash to doubt that at this moment the government is in deadly earnest in the matter of canal construction. But under the circumstance—after such numerous examples of Punica fides, the Review will probably pardon the EXAMINER if it does not work up canal enthusiasm to the point of sending up its hat on an aerial excursion indicative of gratitude for favours—yet to come.

BUILD MORE CREAMERIES.

The president of the Ontario Creameries Association, in his address at the annual meeting of the association, which opened at Chesley on Tuesday, said there are now seventy-four regular and thirty-one winter creameries in the province.

This is very good for a start, but it should be considered only a start, in view of the immense capabilities for development of the butter industry. The system under which each farmer churns the butter from the milk of his own cows is pronounced an antiquated one, and so long as it continues Ontario will never secure her proper place in dairy production. It should be the aim of the Creameries Association to make creameries as numerous as cheese factories are now. Until that is done, butter making will not become the profitable industry that it should be, nor the dairying industry reach the high position in Ontario which, with proper and systematic effort, it can be made to reach.

THOSE Ontario Conservatives who have had a weakness for attacking the policy of having the Minister of Education a member of the government showed a disregard for the traditions of the party. Sir John Macdonald, who is regarded as a type of political astuteness and political orthodoxy, favoured the principle of the educational arrangements now in force. In a letter written to Hon. John Carling, dated December 28, 1871, Sir John said :

"I need scarcely say that I look upon the defeat of Sanfield's administration as a most unfortunate event, of which one cannot see the result. There is "no use in crying over spilt milk," but it is vexatious to see how Sanfield threw away his chances. He has handed over the surplus which he had not the pluck to use to his opponents, and, although I pressed him on my return from Washington to make a President of the Council and Minister of Education which he half promised to do, yet he took no steps towards doing so. With these two offices, and that of Solicitor-General and Speakership, he had the game in his own hands. You see that as I prophesied would be the case, the first act of the new government was to increase the Cabinet."

IT has often been asserted that Sir John Macdonald was never a protectionist because he believed in the principle, but only because he felt that its adoption was a means of retaining his hold in power. This Mr. W. F. Maclean makes clearer than ever in a recent article in the Canadian Magazine, and corroboration of his statement is obtained from Mr. Goldwin Smith, who writes regarding a conversation he had with Sir John as follows :

I called his attention to the fact that some of his supporters were holding protectionist language, and ventured to point out to him that while the United States, with their vast and varied area of production, and their immense home market, might not suffer so much from the protectionist system, that system would never do for Canada. "No," was Sir John's reply, "and you needn't fear that I am going to get into that hole." When he ultimately declared for protection, I could not help rallying him on his conversion. His answer was that "protection had done so much for him that he had to do something for protection."

GOLDEN WEDDING.

(Fenelon Falls Gazette.)

On the 2nd of January, 1845, Mr. Tanguay Bentley and Miss Mary McCarthy were married at Fenelon Falls, by the Rev. Mr. Elder, the then resident minister, and on Wednesday of last week, the venerable couple—whose ages are respectively 80 and 85 years—celebrated their golden wedding at the residence of Mr. Naaman Everson, whose wife is their only child, and whose farm in the 2nd concession of Verulam is not much more than half a mile from their own. Mr. and Mrs. Bentley both came to Canada from County of Cork, Ireland, in 1833, and settled in Verulam, where they have lived ever since, with the exception of a few years residence, not long after their marriage, in Peterborough. The old couple are, of course, getting feeble, and have not been to the Falls for a long time, though they are in fair health and may live for several years. Mr. and Mrs. Everson have ten children, the oldest of whom, a son, was married a few weeks ago.

YOUNG'S POINT.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Last Monday being election day was rather quiet this year in the village, there being little or no excitement. The weather was beautiful during the day, but the voting, as the saying is, was "as slow as molasses." The old council was re-elected.

Mr. Chas. Jory, son of Mr. Jas. Jory, living between here and Lakefield, died at his father's residence on Monday, Jan. 7th, and was buried on Wednesday. The deceased was 27 years of age. Friends and acquaintances sympathise with the family in their sad bereavement.

Mr. Ambrose Houlighan, of Buffalo, is spending a few weeks with his parents.

Mr. J. Weir, of Peterborough, is visiting friends here ; also Miss Minnie Weir.

Mrs. Robt. Pope, of Peterborough, is the guest of Miss Maggie Young.

Miss Lottie Kearney is spending a few days with friends in Peterborough.

Mrs. Richard Reid. sr., is dangerously ill.

We are sorry to say Mrs. Blewett still continues the same.

The roads are now in fine condition, the recent fall of snow making the sleighing good.

It is reported that there are two cases of diphtheria in the village. Mrs. J. Godfrey and Master Robert Plymet. Dr. Halliday, Peterborough, and Dr. J. Fraser, Lakefield are attending the patients.

A meeting of the farmers and prominent men of this section was held in the hall, Wednesday evening, for the purpose of building a cheese factory in the village. It was agreed upon that it would be built opposite the school, on the spot known as Dermert's Point. Our farmers will find it very convenient for them in the future. Messrs. Wilson will commence to build as soon as possible.

A concert is to take place here, on Wednesday evening, in Herd's hall, under the auspices of the Marine Minstrels troop, Peterborough.

A Dying Farmer's Queer Notion.

CHARLOTTETOWN, P. E. I., Jan. 14.—William Yeo, a well-to-do farmer, Traveller's Rest, near Summerside, who has been ill for some time and is now in a dying condition, a few days ago instructed a friend to have made a cedar coffin, covered with sheet lead and made perfectly air tight and after his body has been placed inside the coffin is to be hermetically sealed. He also ordered that a vault be buried in the ground merely large enough for the coffin and to be bricked inside and out and covered with large stones.

FAKED HIS CITIZENSHIP.

A Canadian Charged With Fraudulently Obtaining Naturalization Papers.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 14.—Herbert T. McLeod was arrested by the United States Marshal charged with fraudulently obtaining naturalization papers. McLeod was a former employe of the Doty Engine Co. of Toronto, of the Kerr Engine Works of Walkerville, and had been an engineer on the Midland Railway for ten years. He came here in 1889, but the employments mentioned have occurred since his formal declaration of intention to become a citizen and it is shown that he "has not resided continuously for the statutary period in the United States. He was held in $1,000 bail for further examination.

The facts in the case developed through McLeod's application to the inspectors for a license as first assistant engineer. It is alleged that there are quite a number of Canadian engineers employed on American vessels in the great lakes whose citizenship is doubtful, and therefore, the outcome of the present case will be watched with no little interest in marine circles.

Germany's Anti-Socialist Bill.

BERLIN, Jan. 14.—The majority which referred the anti-Socialist bill to the committee on Saturday was large enough to delight the ministers. It consisted mainly of Liberals and Conservatives against whom were arrayed the Social Democrats, South German Democrats, Radicals and a few Guelphs and Independents. The Emperor was much pleased with the result of the first reading, although it gives no guarantee of the future of the bill.

Lynched, Yet Living.

LEBANON, Mo., Jan. 14.—Reuben Garner was hanged a mob near Celt postoffice, Dallas county, Thursday. Garner was accused of robbing the store of Hunt & Fowler at that place last week. A friend of Garner's who was present when the party called for him followed the lynchers and no sooner had they left their victim than he was there to rescue him. He succeeded in rescuscitating Garner who has since left the neighborhood.

A British Steamer Lost.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The British steamship Prescott, from Sunderland for Marseilles, is believed to have gone down in the recent storms. No news of her has been received since January 4 and a lifeboat filled with water and marked "Prescott" was seen on January 8, floating about six miles off Spurnhead, coast of Yorkshire. The Prescott was a 1,300 ton vessel and carried a crew of 26 men.

New Year's Day in Russia.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 14.—Yesterday was New Year's Day according to the Russian calendar and was noteworthy in official circles for the distribution of the usual New Year's honors. M. Burge, president of the committee of ministers, received the decoration of the order of St. Vladimir first-class. Gen. Vannowsky, war minister, received the decoration of the order of St. Andrew.

A Sicilian Socialist's Victory.

A Real Estate Man's Fatal Fall.

DULUTH, Jan. 14.—John A. McKenzie, a prominent real estate man, fell sixty feet to the lobby from the stairway in the Spaulding house. He lived only a few minutes. He was a nephew of Sir George McKenzie, a general in the British army.

HE WON THE CASE.

A Shrewd Lawyer Who Used the Bible as His Legal Authority.

In the early days of interior Missouri the late Judge E—— cut cordwood, cleared up his homestead farm and was employed upon one side of nearly every case that came up, being for some years the only lawyer in the county.

He had no books except an old leather covered Bible and an old volume or two of history similarly bound, but had read law a short time in Kentucky in his youth. He was very small and insignificant in appearance, but became before his death a splendid lawyer and an honored judge.

A young attorney from the east settled in the little country town, with his library of about half a dozen new and handsomely bound lawbooks, and on his first appearance in a case he brought most of his library to the justice's office in a fine, beautifully flowered carpet bag, popular in that day. E—— was engaged against him and as usual had not a book.

When his adversary carefully drew his books from his pretty carpet bag and laid them on the table, E—— looked astonished, but quickly recovered his ready resources and asked the justice to excuse him for a few moments. He hurried to his homestead, half a mile or so away, and put his old leather bound Bible and histories into a grain sack and brought them to court, imitating his opponent in laying them before him on the table.

The evidence was introduced, and the eastern man, being for the plaintiff, made his opening argument and read at length from his textbooks. E—— made his characteristic speech in reply, closing by reading law from his old Bible just the reverse of that read by his opponent and took his seat, putting his Bible on the table.

His adversary reached over and picked it up, and seeing what it was eagerly addressed the justice:

"Your honor," said he, "this man is a humbug and a pettifogger. Why, sir, this is the Bible from which he has pretended to read law."

The old justice looked indignant, and interrupting the young attorney said:

"Set down, durn ye. What better law can we git than the Bible?" He then decided the case in favor of the defendant.—Green Bag.

The Chinese Literary Man.

A Chinese literary man is nothing if he is not allusive. To write either prose or poetry without constant reference to historical events or personages is regarded as a sign either of stupidity or of lack of education. As the only history with which Chinamen are acquainted is that of their own country and as every Chinaman writes, the practice of using historical allusions has become a fine art, and the most obscure characters and circumstances of past ages are necessarily dragged into writings to prevent endless repetitions and to display the minute acquaintance of authors with the records of their country.

In nine cases out of ten this acquaintance is only simulated, and to support the deception endless manuals of familiar quotations are published to supply a semblance of the knowledge which is wanting.—Athenæum.

The Introduction of Kid Gloves.

Long kid gloves were introduced during the reign of Charles II to accommodate the short sleeves worn at that time by fashionable women. Their advent is by no means modern, and from earliest time boxes of them have no doubt been lost and won with as courtly a grace as at the present day.—Dry Goods Economist.

A Book for Young Men.

An immeasurable amount of suffering and injury to the human race, is due to the ignorant violation of physiological laws by the youth of our land. Ruinous practices are indulged in, through ignorance of the inevitable injury to constitution and health which surely follows. By every young man, the divine injunction, "Know Thyself," should be well heeded. To assist such in acquiring a knowledge of themselves and of how to preserve health, and to shun those pernicious and most destructive practices, to which so many fall victims, as well as to re-claim and point out the means of relief and cure to any who may unwittingly have violated Nature's laws, and are already suffering the dire consequences, an association of medical gentlemen have carefully prepared a little book which is replete with useful information to every young man. It will be sent to any address, securely sealed from observation in a plain envelope, by the World's Dispensary Medical Association of 663 Main street, Buffalo, N. Y., on receipt of ten cents in stamps (for postage), if enclosed with this notice.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

"Several years ago, I caught a severe cold, attended with a terrible cough that allowed me no rest, either day or night. The doctors, after working over me to the best of their ability, pronounced my case hopeless, and said they could do no more for me. A friend, learning of my trouble, sent me a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which I began to take, and very soon I was greatly relieved. By the time I had used the whole bottle, I was completely cured. I have never had much of a cough since that time, and I firmly believe that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life."—W. H. EXTINCT FOOD SNAKES.

The Sioux Indians Could Make Their Poisonous Eggs Nutritious.

It is not generally known that the James River valley was once the home of the only species of snake which ever furnished an abundant and nutritious supply of food for the use of man. Recent and most exhaustive investigation proves it to be true. This valley, in which no snake is now found, was once full of serpents called by the Sioux Indians the "food snake," by reason of the size and delicious flavor of its eggs.

By untold dozens these eggs were laid in pits hollowed out of the soil for their reception. As a rule the pits were from 5 to 9 feet deep, 18 inches in diameter and contained from 100 to 200 eggs, snugly packed at the bottom and covered with dry grass and leaves. The eggs were a little larger than those of the domestic hen and more palatable, but deadly poisonous.

Many of the Sioux, tempted by hunger, died from eating them. Often they were purposely exposed to the discovery of invading enemies in order that they should eat and die. Not only were these eggs imbued with poison, but they were equally peculiar in that they remained fresh and palatable in all weathers for 13 years, and were finally hatched by the cold of the winter and not the heat of the summer.

Three hundred years ago Blue Goose, a mighty chieftain, ruled the Sioux. His wife discovered a mixture which was a perfect antidote to the poison in the eggs. The simplest washing in the mixture rendered them perfectly wholesome.

Blue Goose was a lover of war. He saw that by revealing the secret of the antidote the hunting of buffalo, then numerous, would largely cease, and that the people, finding abundant food in the snake eggs, would grow indolent and less warlike.

He therefore formed a council of several discreet women, most solemnly pledged to retain among themselves the secret of the antidote and to use it only in times of famine or defeat in war. This council was self perpetuating and elected new members only as vacancies occurred by death. Never was the secret betrayed.

Indian tradition says that seven times was an antidote used in times of need, when a pestilence swept off the entire country almost at a stroke, and the secret was lost.

The race of food snakes was never reconciled to this loss and rapidly dwindled away. They utterly disappeared about the year 1820. It is interesting to note that the last place at which either the snakes or their nests were found was in the timber along the James river at Rondell.—Minneapolis Journal.

How Hebrew Women Used Cosmetics.

The Hebrew women had learned in Egypt all the fashionable vanities and carried them with them into the deserts and afterward into the land of Canaan. As in these days, the profuse use of cosmetics by women caused odious comparisons, and there were besides prophets like Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel who discoursed on the vanities of the fair sex with a plainness, a brutality even, surpassing that of John Knox preaching to Mary, queen of Scots. The experience of the world has shown that the reproofs and warnings of preachers are powerless against female vanity, and the prophets of Israel were no exception, for among the women of the chosen people the practice in question was common if not universal. In the Proverbs of Solomon the son, when he is advised to keep the commandments of his father and the law of his mother, he is especially counseled not to be taken by the eyelids of women, from which it would appear that the use of kohl, practiced by the women of modern Egypt, was then known. Kohl is obtained by burning and crushing frankincense or the shells of almonds. There are similar suggestions in the prophets. Jezebel, queen of King Ahaziah, who is remembered only for her badness and her tragic death, wishing to appease Jehu, who had just slain her husband, painted her face, tired her head and looked out of a window. The sacred historian leaves it uncertain whether or not it was the painted face that aroused the ire of Jehu—which was hardly possible, for he must have seen many such—but he ordered her to be thrown out of the window, and she was trodden under the feet of his horses and afterward devoured by jackals.—San Francisco Chronicle.

THE FEUD OF LAND AND SEA.

The Ocean and the Land made peace,
And each one sent a token
That their new friendship might increase
Their table be kept unbroken.

The gentle Land sent meadow sweet
Upon a hurrying brook,
And laid it at the gray king's feet.
His waves the gift uptook.

The Sea a wreath of seaweed twined
Far inland on the tide;
Its salty kiss was keen as frost—
The grass blade shrank and died!

The Land then sent a painted moth,
Borne out upon the breeze;
The Ocean sprites with chains of froth
The lovely waif did tease.

The Sea sent back a scallop shell,
The shell an osprey bore;
The Land received it where it fell,
Upon a mossy floor.

The Land then sent a noble tree
That crowned a river bank;
The laden stream into the Sea
With weary murmurs sank.

The Sea returned a broken spar
('Twas once the forests' pride).
The Land reproached him from afar,
And all her forests sighed:

"Such cruel gifts as thou dost send,
As thou dost send to me—
How can I longer be thy friend,
Thou bitter, bitter Sea?"

—Edith M. Thomas in Youth's Companion.

The Use of the Word "Ain't."

It would be immense relief if that dreadful Americanism "ain't" could be given a rest for all eternity. You hear it so frequently. The few exceptions among well educated people scarcely make an impression with an observer on the lookout for the phrase. It is surprising how easily a fault in speech may be acquired by ear, but in this part of the world, where our public schools are believed to really educate, it is quite as common to hear grammatical errors as in localities less intellectually favored. "I ain't, you ain't, he or she ain't, they ain't," is the unpleasant conjugation of what verb? "Ain't you going to the fair?" asks a well set up young person, who would be highly offended if her social status was questioned.

"Oh, I ain't had half of the party!" is another form from younger lips, and the nice looking car conductor scares the life out of you by hallooing: "Wait till the car stops! We ain't got there yet!" Purists will take no offense at this abuse of grammar if it saves their necks, but if any one would keep watch over his tongue as well and note the ain'ts that now afflict the American language that offensive and meaningless contraction and negation would be abolished, and even the primarily educated masses might say what they mean.—Boston Herald.

Why Sand Baths Are Healthful.

A well known medical authority writes: Sand baths, readily obtainable on the seashore, are very beneficial for rheumatism and some other ailments. As, however, sand consists chiefly of particles of silex or flint, including comparatively little vegetable matter, the benefit occasionally received from a sand bath must be chiefly derived from its constituting a slightly moist paste excluding the air, the effect of which is to promote copious exudation from the skin. Wet soils, on the contrary, found near mineral springs, sometimes efficacious in the treatment of cutaneous disorders, are of course composed in varying proportions of vegetable and mineral substances more or less in solution. These in sum represent chemical combinations that are frequently beneficial to the skin when diseased.

Sometimes very severe cases of rheumatic troubles have been cured by mud baths. There is a place in Germany where the entire cure consists of burying the patient to his neck in the damp soil. It is certain that children who play much in sand and dirt are nearly always healthful.

Finding the Contents of Bins.

Every farmer ought to know how to measure his products without taking the trouble to remove them from the bins or other receptacles. For instance, two cubic feet of dry corn in the ear will make a bushel, and to find out how many bushels there are in a crib take the inside measurements, multiply the length by the breadth, this by the height and divide by two, which will give the number of bushels of shelled corn. In apples and potatoes get the cubical contents as before, divide by eight and point off one figure for decimals. In hay find the cubical contents and allow 512 cubic feet to the ton. The result in each case will be so nearly correct that the difference will be inappreciable.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Our Modern Superior Democracy.

We have passed that stage in our national life when to make a boast of ignorance, of crudity and uncouth conditions was considered true democracy. We have reached the higher plane of superior democracy—that of gentlemen and ladies who know no aristocracy except that of culture, personal worth and elegance. We have learned that the choicest gems need cutting and polishing to show their true value, and we believe that the American diamond in the rough is vastly less attractive and admirable than when polished and cultured to its full possibilities.—Jenness Miller Monthly.

The Oldest Painting In England.

The oldest picture in England is said to be the portrait of Chaucer, who died in 1402, which was probably painted in the low countries 30 years before his death. It was discovered in an old garret in the house in which Cromwell was born at Huntington. Count Truchens, a well known collector, after examining the painting, said that it was first painted in water colors and afterward painted over in oil for preservation, and he certified that the name Chaucer in the background was laid on with the painting.—New York Evening Sun.

Miss Lillian Morritt, an English phenomenon, has the power of retaining in her memory hundreds of complex figures and of multiplying, deducting and adding at the same time any of the cross figures.

In remote rural regions of England to this day the door through which a corpse has passed is left open until the return of the party from church. If shut, another death may ensue within a year.

In Austrian society it is the custom to take a partner for only one round of a dance. By this means ladies and gentlemen change partners five or six times in a single dance.

Yes! with invalids the appetite is capricious and needs coaxing, that is just the reason they improve so rapidly under Scott's Emulsion, which is as palatable as cream.

What Sala Has Seen.

It is something to be able to tell the present generation, says Sala in the London Telegraph, that I have seen Louis Philippe while he was still king of the French; that I have seen Soult, Thiers, Guizot and Lamartine; that I have witnessed three revolutions in the French capital; that I followed Garibaldi in his campaign in the Tyrol; that I have heard Daniel O'Connell deliver a speech at the London Tavern; that I knew Lord Palmerston; that I knew the first Lord Brougham: that I was in the Franco-Mexican war and at the storming of Puebla; that I spent thirteen months in America when she was in the midst of war: that I was personally acquainted with Abraham Lincoln, with Seward, with Stanton, with Charles Sumner, with George Bancroft, with Longfellow and with Bayard Taylor, with Grant and with McClellan, with Horace Greeley, Raphael Semmes and Jefferson Davis. I have conversed at Algiers with the Emperor Napoleon III.: I have been patted on the head by the great Duke of Wellington; I lived in Cuba when there were negro slaves there and in Russia when there were millions of white serfs in the the dominions of the Czar; I can remember to have seen the Czar Nicholas himself at Ascot races: I attended the funeral of the assasinated Alexander II. and the coronation of Alexander III.; I was in Constantinople when the first Turkish constitution was proclaimed from the steps of the old seraglio, and I can hear now the shouts of "Amin" from the Moslem troops present.

Best Plan for Pork.

The best pork is of course that made from pigs under a year old, and these should be given such food as will produce muscle or lean meat to the greatest possible extent. It should not be the principal aim to produce fat first, but to feed such foods as will make growth and keep the digestive organs in good condition. For this purpose a good grass range is probably as good as anything, and plenty of milk where it is obtainable will be found to supplement the grass in the production of muscle. If the pig is kept in a thriving condition by a course of feeding of this kind it will be ready to finish for the shambles in a short time, when the slaughtering season comes. Bran and shorts are good things to feed growing pigs as they are rich in bone and muscle-forming material. A pig that is fed something after this style will not produce as much lard as one that is kept until a year and a half old, but the pork from it will be sweet and wholesome instead of a greasy mass that is prolific of disease, and distasteful at any time to a refined taste.

Macadamizing Through a Swamp.

A Telford road recently built in Medford, Mass., by John P. Pritchard, was constructed through low wet land, which had to be drained by a trench 4 feet deep, in which was a 6-inch pipe with open joints. The trench was then filled with stone up to the subgrade of the avenue, which was well wet and rolled. On this was the Telford foundation, 9 inches deep at the centre and gradually decreasing in thickness to 5 inches at the curb line. The foundation was wedged and knapped, and then covered with four inches of 2½-inch stone unrolled, which was covered in turn by 3 inches of 2-inch stone, spread with a shovel from a cart, wet and rolled. The surface was next filled with enough half-inch stone to fill out all the inequalities, more sprinkling was done and the surface again rolled to form a firm bed or a 2-inch course of 1-inch stone, well wet and rolled. This street, the Engineering News says, costs about $3 a linear foot, including the expense of grading, trenching, pipe laying, catch-basins, and other incidentials.

An Intelligent Animal.

"What is the matter with that mule?" asked a man who was standing on the bank of the canal. "He doesn't seem to be of any account whatever."

"He's all right," replied the boatman. "The fault's with me. Ye see, mister, he understands every word ye say to him."

"He doesn't pay much attention to what you say."

"That's what shows his intelligence. I've jist joined church, an' he thinks I'm a stranger."—Life.

Information Wanted.

Mr. B. Morrow, registrar, received on Saturday a copy of the Glasgow Herald of Dec. 19th. The following was marked, drawing attention. Some person may be able to supply the information asked for: BAIRD, MARY, left Glasgow for Canada 50 to 60 years ago; when last heard of 19 years ago, was living with her husband, Daniel Doran, at Peterborough, Ontario, Canada. Sought by her nephew, William S. Stark. Reply to this office.

Own a Good Piano.

It costs but a trifle more to own a good piano, like the "Rheimer," the "Morris," the "Heintzman" or the "Mendelsohon." The difference in cost is not for one day, or one month, or one year. It's worth five dollars a year for ten years to have exactly what you want. Just think it over. Have a talk with Mr. J. W. Crosby, of 342 Water street, the agent for those four first-class instruments, and close the purchase before the end of the year.

Metropolitan School of Cookery.

The shortest or the shortening est" way to a husband's heart is through his stomach. On this assumption the Metropolitan grocery cordially invites the ladies of the town to visit that establishment, 138 Simcoe street, on Friday and Saturday, Jan. 18th and 19th, when two expert lady cooks will give practical exposition of fine cooking by the use only of Cottolene. Every lady will find it to her advantage to witness a practical test of the perfect "shortening" qualities of Cottolene. tf

HOCKEY.

The management of the hockey club are just in receipt of a letter from the hockeyists of Trinity University, who are anxious to play the local team here on Wednesday evening. The challenge has already been accepted, and although the Peterborough boys have had but few regular practices and the Trinity seven is one of the fastest in the Senior League, yet the local men are confident of being able to give a good account of themselves. It is urgent that the little time which is left in which to get into shape should be utilized, and the members of the team are expected to attend practice without fail both to-night and Tuesday evening. As the Trinity University team is classed in the first rank, the match will be one of the most interesting of the season, and may be considered as a sure test as to the stamina of the Peterborough players for 1895.

The first match of the Northern Hockey Association was played in Midland on Saturday night, Orillia against Midland. Orillia won four games to Midland's none. A large number of spectators thoroughly enjoyed the introduction of the game of hockey to that town.

CURLIANA.

The Belleville Colts were unable to make arrangements to play the local colts today, but will probably come up some time during the week. The town colts made an effort to make up a couple of rinks to play in Campbellford this afternoon, but the notice given was not of sufficient length and the contemplated trip had to be postponed.

An effort is being made by the Belleville rinks to arrange for matches with Cobourg, Peterborough and other towns in the vicinity.

RUGBY FOOTBALL.

At a meeting of Rugby Football enthusiasts on Saturday evening in the Trent Valley Canal offices. Mr. R. B. Roger took the chair and an informal discussion took place relative to the advisability of giving an amateur minstrel performance under the auspices of the club and for its benefit. The idea was taken up enthusiastically and the preliminaries will be arranged at a meeting to be held early in the week. The club's treasury is in rather a depleted condition owing to the heavy expense incurred in bringing out of town clubs to town and it is thought, if economically managed, an entertainment of the nature proposed would do much to straighten matters out as a large patronage is assured.

The Kendall correspondent of the Orono News says,—"Mr. Thos. H. McLean, of Peterborough, representing the Noxon Bros. Manf. Co., of Ingersoll, was in town for a few days this week. Tom. is an old Kendall boy and we are always pleased to see him. He had his usual luck in winning a few dollars on the elections."

Maggie Barr, the "Queen of Scottish Song," will sing four songs at the Burns Anniversary concert in the Opera House on Wednesday evening, January 23rd.

"Sing sangs o' auld lang syne and hame—
The simple, guid auld sangs o' fame—
Sangs dear to us by birth and name.

"Welcome! O' Scottish song the star,
Lilrin' at will o' love or war:
Welcome ance mair, sweet Maggie Barr."

Mr. Thos. Kelly has been appointed city agent of the Sun Life Assurance Company in the stead of Mr. Barton Earle, recently removed to Toronto. Mr. Kelly has had a large business experience, and has a personal popularity which will enable him to give effective service to the company. Mr. Kelly will be much helped by the record of the Sun Life, which enjoys the distinction of having written the largest amount of life assurance of any Canadian company in 1894. The EXAMINER wishes Mr. Kelly success in his new sphere of action.

The many friends of Mr. R. M. Orr, who will be kindly remembered as cashier of the Bank of Commerce in Peterborough, where he received his early banking training, will be glad to learn that he has been appointed to the important position of cashier in the American Exchange National Bank in Chicago. Mr. Geo. F. Orde, Peterborough, has been appointed assistant cashier in the same bank. Both these young men, who were popular officials in the bank in Peterborough, received their early training in the Peterborough branch of the bank of Commerce and are to be congratulated upon the important positions which both occupy in the World's Fair City. Young Canadians are looked upon in the United States, when thoroughly trained, as most reliable employees.

CHURCH CHIMES.

Holy Communion was celebrated in St. Paul's church yesterday morning.

The collection yesterday in the George street church was in aid of the Sunday school.

"Zion awoke" was the title of an anthem which was well rendered in St. Paul's last night.

The anthem "I will lift up my eyes unto Him" was rendered in good voice at the George street Methodist church, last night.

Mr. A. L. Davis sang the baritone solo, in "Palm Branches" with good effect at the Charlotte street Methodist church last night.

The regular weekly Epworth League meeting, at the George street Methodist church, has been postponed from Monday until Tuesday evening.

Miss Montgomery took the contralto solo in the anthem "Nearer My God to Thee" in remarkably sweet voice yesterday morning in St. Paul's church.

In the Murray street Baptist church Mrs. Hunter and Miss Hutchinson took the duet in the anthem "O Praise the Lord" yesterday morning in perfect harmony.

The missionary anniversary of George street Methodist church will be held a week from next Sunday. The pulpit, in the morning, will be occupied by Rev. Thos. Manning, a former pastor.

The solo part in the anthem "I will praise Him" was well taken by Miss Annie Fawcett in the Charlotte street Methodist church, yesterday morning. Messrs. Steers and Davis took the duet in the same anthem.

At the evening service in the Murray strtet Baptist church, yesterday, the anthem, "O, Seek Me Early," was rendered. Miss Hutchinson and Mr. Kemp took the duet in a manner most satisfactory. Rev. Mr. Weaver conducted both services.

The largest congregation since Rev. J. J. Rae's pastorate, assembled in the Charlotte street church last evening to hear that eloquent divine continue his sermon on "It is is not well for man to be alone." All the draw seats as well as several hundred chairs had to be utilized to accommodate the large audience.

At both masses in St. Peter's Cathedral, yesterday, Rev. Father Fitzpatrick preached his first sermons since his ordination,at Norwood, about three weeks ago. His subject was "charity." At Vespers, Rev. Father O'Leary preached on the subject of the Motherhood of the Blessed Virgin. Both sermons were impressive and listened to with the most marked attention.

On Wednesday evening next a united meeting of the congregations of St. John's and St. Luke's churches in the interests of Diocesian Missions will be held in the schoolhouse of St. John's church when special addresses will be delivered by Messrs. L. H. Baldwin and A. H. Dymond, of Toronto. Notices of this meeting were given in the churches yesterday, and an urgent appeal was made to all members to attend. It is earnestly hoped that all members of the Anglican church in Peterborough and Ashburnham will, by their presence, co-operate to make the meeting worthy of the church.

It was the Sunday school anniversary at George street Methodist church yesterday, and large congregations attended both the morning and evening services, at which Rev. C. O. Johnston, of Kingston, delivered two most interesting sermons. In the evening, he took "Christianity" as the subject of his discourse and spoke from the text, "all things are yours". This age, he thought, was more purely Christian than any age which ever preceded it, as the public were in a condition to be able to real Christianity. In the past, he said, we have stumbled over conventionalities, figures and creeds and have tarried in the ante-chamber of Christianity, which set forth the colourings so advantageously that many were content with the initiation and desisted from seeking the inner and true religion of Christ.

Christianity, he continued, is more than a resurrection, it is more than a sense of subordination, it is more than the mastery of self, than the mastery of sin and of death—Christianity is life. Jesus Christ did not say he had life, but "I am life." When you have attained religion, you haven't got religion but you are religion. It is not something apart

BUT IT IS YOURSELF.

If you are saved, and if you are God's child you, yourself, are righteousness. A man is not what he is in his profession,but what he is in his life. To be carnally minded is death. To be spiritually minded is life.

Manner, form and services belong to Christianity, as does the scaffolding to a building in course of erection, but as the scaffolding is not absolutely necessary as actually a part of the building, so is it with form and service in connection with Christianity, though for convenience sake they are generally associated therewith.

A man might have piety, eloquence and faith, but if he had not charity these profited him nothing. Christianity was and not in creeds, performances and ceremonies. It is the Christ-like charity that thinketh no evil—charity that hopes when others despair, gives when others withhold, that is Christianity.

IN THE HEART,

Let no man glory in culture, education or creed, concluded he, for all things are yours, all things are yours—for development. This world will either lift a man up until he is fit for Heaven, or it will thrust him down until he is only fit for hell.

Rev. Mr. Young, the pastor, made a brief announcement concerning the progress of the Sunday school, in which he stated that the membership roll now showed nearly a thousand names and that the average attendance had increased ninety-one per cent. over last year, which he thought was a very creditable showing indeed.

Mr. Pearce's Election Confirmed in Norwood.

The result of the re-count for the Reeveship of Norwood, at ten o'clock this morning, before Judge Weller, in the county court, was that Mr. Pearce was declared elected over Mr. John Finlay by the same majority as at first announced, viz.,—three. The re-count changed several figures on both sides, but the result was unchanged at the conclusion of the re-count.

INSPECTOR GARVIN MAKES A REPLY.

THINKS DALTON McCARTHY HAS LOST THE CONFIDENCE OF HIS CONSTITUENTS.

Mr. Garvin's Vigorous Rejoinder to the Barrie Advance.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 14, 1895.

To the Editor of the Examiner,
Peterborough, Ont.

SIR,—It was with regret I found on returning to Peterborough that the EXAMINER had published the Globe's comments on the Friday evening political meeting at Barrie that had reference to myself, and also the second scurrilous editorial of Mr. McCarthy's organ, the Advance.

Since my appointment as Public School Inspector of this town, I have taken no action politically in the West Riding of Peterborough, n " have I intended so to do. I am well aware of the prejudice in the mind of the body politic against such a course on the part of an educator, and it was my earnest desire to avoid arousing such a prejudice in my Inspectorate. It is not my intention to excuse any action I have taken, or will take, in any other riding. I am a son and an elector of North Simcoe, and a citizen of the State, and believing, as I do, that the whole political course of Mr. McCarthy (who is neither a Liberal-Conservative nor a Reformer) for the last six years has been diametrically opposed to the interests of Canada, I deem it my duty to prevent, if possible, his re-election.

The citizens of Peterborough need have no fear that I shall neglect their schools. They are the pride of my heart, and I will continue to bend every energy in the future as in the past to make them the best in the Province.

Mr. Editor, you did not quote the maligning in the Barrie Advance that I chiefly complained of. It is embodied in my reply, which the Advance refused to publish, but was inserted in nearly every other paper in the riding :

P. S. Inspector's Office,
Peterborough, Jan. 4, 1895.

To the Editor of the Advance, Barrie, Ont.

SIR,—Your scurrilous editorial pertaining to recent political meetings addressed by me in North Simcoe has just been brought to my notice. You insolently associate my name with that of some mythical individual whom you say "nominated himself a candidate for the Local House last June," etc., etc., and then proceed to slander and libel me in the most approved style of gutter journalism.

Let me inform you, sir, that you are mistaken, not only in every statement referring to myself, but in every base insinuation as well. You state, "He has undertaken to form a Conservative party of his own, and advertised a series of meetings in different places in this riding, using the names of prominent Conservatives as speakers without their knowledge or consent. Among the names of those so used are those of Mr. Chas. Gamon, of Collingwood, Mayor Creswicke and Mr. Haughton Lennox of this town."

The following are the facts : On Saturday, Dec. 22nd, I called on Messrs. Creswicke and Lennox, and asked them to join me in addressing public meetings in the Liberal-Conservative interest at Elmvale and Midhurst. Mr. Lennox consented without hesitation to speak at both these places, and Mr. Creswicke at the latter. The posters were printed on the following Monday, with the names of the speakers thereon, according to custom, and sent to their destination. On Christmas Day I received a letter from Mr. Lennox to the effect that he had changed his opinion as to the opportuneness of the time for holding the meeting-, and would not be present. Mr. Creswicke intended being at Midhust, and asked another speaker to accompany him, who was present and who addressed the audience. Mr. Creswicke, however, was unable to be there, but sent to me, by a well known citizen of Barrie, the following lines : "I find it impossible to be with you this evening, owing to municipal matters that have to be attended to without delay. * * * * I hope your meeting will be a success, and regret that I cannot be with you to state my own views."

On the same Saturday referred to above I requested Mr. Gamon, of Collingwood, by telegram, to join me on the following Wednesday and Thursday at Sunnidale Corners and at Duntroon. On Monday morning he telegraphed me as follows : "Am not well, but will endeavour to meet you." Any reader of this communication may see the two telegrams in the office of "The Great North Western Telegraph Co." at Barrie.

Because of the condition of his health Mr. Gamon was not able to join me, but on Thursday I spent several hours in Collingwood, and met Mr. Gamon and some half-dozen other prominent Liberal-Conservatives, all of whom were in hearty sympathy with my action, and enthusiastic supporters of the Dominion Government, in opposition to Mr. McCarthy. Mr. Gamon secured a substitute to address the audience at Duntroon, who was prevented from being there by the hurricane which blew for hours that evening. But, notwithstanding the hurricane, the Duntroon meeting was the most interesting of the four. Mr. Leighton McCarthy appeared in behalf of his uncle, and stated to the audience in effect that all that Mr. Garvin had told them in his hour and a half address in favour of the National Policy was quite true, but that his words were wasted, as Mr. D'Alton McCarthy was as good a Liberal-Conservative to-day as he ever was, and had never been in favour of Free Trade, or of a Revenue Tariff only. In my reply I read quotations from Mr. McCarthy's latest speeches, which convinced the assembled electors that for some time he had been anything but a supporter of the National Policy, and that the talented nephew had apparently neglected reading his distinguished uncle's speeches for the last two years at least.

Mr. Leighton McCarthy also said that after the Examiner's published notice of the meeting, Mr. Pepler had telephoned Messrs. Creswicke and Lennox, and that both these gentlemen had denied any knowledge of them. The intention, sir, was the same as your own, viz., to make the electors of the North Riding of Simcoe believe the writer of this to be dishonest and unworthy of confidence. But, sir, he failed, and so will you. On Friday morning I wrote Mr. Lennox, (Mr. Creswicke was out of town, I understood), telling him what had been said, and on the same evening at Elmvale, received from him the following telegram ; "I have not spoken to Mr. Pepler on any subject since I saw you." Messrs. Gamon, Creswicke and Lennox will not hesitate one moment to verify the above reference to them.

The four meetings clearly proved that Mr. D'Alton McCarthy had lost the confidence of a large number of the staunch old Liberal Conservatives of North Simcoe, and that at an early date they would declare themselves against him with no uncertain sound.

In conclusion let me say, that weak indeed must be the cause of the man that requires in its defence an editorial, which is a disgrace to decent journalism, and pitiable must be the position of an editor, who could be coerced into writing such opprobrious statements concerning one, whose character and achievements he had, in the past, so frequently eulogized.

Yours,
J. W. GARVIN.

The statement in some of the Toronto papers that the audience would not listen to me was quite incorrect. For the first fifteen minutes there were no interruptions at all and a rapid speaker can say considerable in that time. Moreover the whole disturbance was caused by less than fifty individuals in the rear of the hall out of an audience of about 1000.

Yours truly,
J. W. GARVIN.

[The above letter was already in type, when Mr. Garvin's communication was received, the EXMINER feeling that in justice to that gentleman, his letter, which was not available for use on Saturday, should be printed in connection with the extracts published as a matter of current news, on that day—ED. THE GRAND WORK OF THE Y. W.C. A.

THE THIRD ANNUAL MEETING HELD.

All the Reports Presented Show the Association to be in a Most Progressive State—A Balance in the Treasury Wherewith to Begin the New Year.

The third annual meeting of the Young Women's Christian Association was held on Saturday evening last. Mrs. (Dr.) Scott, the president, was in the chair and there was a large attendance of members present, who manifested a great deal of interest in the proceedings. The meeting was opened with devotional exercises, after which the report of Miss Barker, the secretary, was read and adopted as follows :

THIRD ANNUAL REPORT—1895.

While reviewing the work of the past year, we feel we have great cause to be thankful, and we are encouraged to go forward.

We have no great things to boast of, for while facts are stated and numbers given, such a record gives little idea of the individual and private work which reaches hearts in need of sympathy, love and sometimes counsel.

We are not in a position to give money to the needy, nor do we desire to do so, their being other sources from which it can be obtained ; but in many cases, while strangers have applied to us for a temporary shelter while seeking work, we have wished that we could give them such accommodation. Many ladies agree with us in this desire, and we understand that we are the only Y.W.C.A. on the conti- that does not possess a "home" and means of inexpensive boarding. For this we will hope in the future, and now go on to state what we are doing at present.

SPIRITUAL WORK.

First, and most important, our Bible class on Tuesday evenings is much appreciated by the members and they miss it greatly if it is omitted. It is also a means to draw together those who at other times come to us for private conversation on their difficulties and various trials.

Then on Saturday evenings we have tried to have some attractions to bring in strangers. Some young ladies, to whom we feel very thankful, have kindly played the piano for half an hour before the time of meeting.

We also have very often had a new friend to address them, and they have afterwards told us how much they have enjoyed it.

Our invitation committee have done faithful work during the year, and have distributed 525 invitation cards on the streets. This has, perhaps, swelled our numbers on Saturday evening. We believe many have been impressed, for in speaking to me in private at least twelve have told me that they had given their hearts to Christ.

SOCIAL ELEMENT.

Perhaps one of the most encouraging features of the work is the social element which has prevailed among the members. Six socials have been held during the year, two special ones, "Thanksgiving" and "New Year's." Two entertainments have been held in aid of Association work.

CLASSES.

Last winter classes were taught in literature, writing and painting. These have all been dropped. At present we have but two formed, namely, Cutting and Fitting and Physical Culture classes. The latter is taught by Sergt.-Major Rundle, and with such an efficient teacher beneficial results cannot but accrue to the members under training.

MEMBERSHIP.

Two hundred and ninety are supporting our work, therefore members ; 83 being young women ; 35 of these have been presented as new members during the year. Quite a number of our members have moved away, from whom we have had letters telling us how much they miss the Association rooms and its friendly helpfulness. Twelve letters of introduction have been written.

EMPLOYMENT BUREAU.

478 girls have been looking for work of various kinds. We have been able to help many looking for domestic work.

NOON HOUR.

Nearly every day a few have found the rooms convenient for lunch and rest. At other hours strangers passing through town have availed themselves of our cosy rooms to stay in while waiting. They have also expressed what a great thing it was to them to have so pleasant a resting place, preventing them from feeling alone in a strange town.

READING TABLES.

14 papers and journals have been coming regularly, all kindly donated by friends. Our tables are well frequented and much appreciated.

CALLS.

250 calls have been made by the secretary in the interest of the work. On some of these occasions new members have been gained and certainly took great interest in our work, and practical help in various ways have been obtained ; young women generally giving me a cordial welcome.

Before concluding I should like to express my gratitude for the kindly considerations and help given to me by members of the Board, both personally and in my work ; also to the reception committee who gave their services so cheerfully.

In closing, as an association, we desire to learn from other similar institutions how to make our work more useful and efficient, and trust that none of us may despise the day of small things, but may, in faith and patience, looking unto Jesus, take as our motto for the coming year, "Excelsior."

Mrs. John McKee, recording secretary, then presented

THE APPENDED REPORT

of the Association's work, which was received and adopted.

In December of 1892 in response to a call from the secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, Mr. R. J. Colville, now of Toronto, several ladies met in the old Y. M. C. A. building to consider the advisability of starting a Y. W. C. A. After much prayer and earnest thought it was considered best to do so. Rooms were rented and furnished. How much credit is due those who so kindly assisted us in our efforts to make the rooms comfortable and profitable, only those know who avail themselves of them. We have gone on steadily, not making any marked advancement, yet enabled to close each year free from debt. Now, we feel a time has come to enlarge our work and hope a way may be opened up to enable us to do so, and feel assured that if the public generally understood the aims of the work, more than one generously disposed person would come forward to our aid. We feel assured that if the "What is it? Why is it? and what it proposes to do" were more generally understood, our boarding house would be a thing of the near future, and we hope ere long to have an opportunity of placing them before the people of our town.

The Board of Management held ten regular and three special meetings. At the last meeting a vote of thanks was tendered the press for their unvarying kindness, to the reporters, to the Rathbun Co. for coal, to those who have provided literature for our reading table (fourteen papers and journals coming regularly, we not knowing who some of them come from), School Board for use of gymnasium, and to all who have in any way assisted in the work ; also the faithfulness of our Secretary, Miss Barker. In the year, just opening, let there be a hearty co-operation and our motto be forward.

THE CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY TAKES THE AGGRESSIVE.

A Case Aired in the Police Court—Six Months in the Police Court.

At the police court this morning T. H. Ratford was brought up charged, nominally, with being a vagrant and sentenced to six months in gaol. The prisoner is a young, strong man, who, by his own confession in the box, has degenerated into a common sponge. He has been living with the Kearns family on Paterson street, whose condition is pitiable. The Relief Officer wisely refused to offer them aid because of Ratford's living in the house and the unsavory reputation of the place. Kearns, a man with a wooden leg, has had what work he could do from the Chamberlain estate, but his wages were not enough to keep the wolf from the door, whilst his objection to Ratford's presence had no effect on that person. The family consists of six children, one born this morning, the oldest being twelve years and to say that their future is likely to contribute to the criminal records of the country is not going too far. Several witnesses were examined but Ratford himself admitted in his examination by Mr. Edwards, all that was required to establish his depravity.

The Society makes it an inviolable rule to give the most searching and careful inquiry to every case it takes up. The Court of Justice is the last resort. Every opportunity is given the object of suspicion by means of private interviews to explain his or her side of the case, for it is better that an innocent man should escape than that many guilty ones should get their full due. Ratford stumbled upon several serious admissions in the course of his rather impudently given evidence that fully proved the Society's case, even without the testimony of the six or seven witnesses called. A pestilential spot has for the time being been cleared, leaving room for further efforts in the direction of rescuing a family of children that are making straight for a life of crime.

Mr. Miller, the agent, is a very industrious officer. He alone receives a salary, which the Society has to pay, and they look to the public to help. Salaries do not come with the items pabable by the town.

Mr. E. B. Edwards, the Society's counsel, appeared for the prosecution.

DANIEL CROUGH'S IMPORTANT INVENTION.

A Simple and Effective Device to Save Clover and Other Seeds.

Mr. Daniel Crough, of Ennismore, received on Saturday, through the kindness of Mr. Peter Hamilton, his papers from the United States patent office, covering a clover seed attachment invented by him. This ingenious arrangement consists of an attachment to the cutter bar of the mower. As the grass or grain cut falls behind the sickles of the mower, it is drawn by a man or lad walking behind the machine over a slatted box, which catches and holds the seed shelled out in the process. It is especially adapted for saving the seeds of red clover, alsike clover, peas and buckwheat. In the matter of Alsike, Crough's clover attachment saves a very large amount per acre as much as $6, which under the old system goes to waste, besides retaining as much as usual in the straw. Mr. Crough's estimate of the amount saved is based on actual experiment. His new device is simple in construction and costs little to make. The Peter Hamilton Agricultural Works are manufacturing them. Mr. Crough also receives orders and will dispose of rights to manufacture. It is patented also in Canada.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

Next Sunday we hold a praise service to which ladies are invited. The music will be good.

The "blues" treated free of charge Friday night. Sure cure, too!

Special features are a debate, resolved "That the city boy shows more awkwardness in the country than the country boy does in the city." Tailing the donkey, etc. It is "peanut night."

Gaining Favour.

Most smokers like a cool, mild and pure smoking tobacco. Clegg's mixture has these qualities, and is consequently gaining in favour every day. Try it. E. S. CLEGG, 415 George street.

PIPE SMOKING POPULAR.

Americans Use the Briarwoods Because the Englishmen Set the Pattern.

Pipe smoking is annually becoming more popular in the United States. In past times pipes were relegated to the alleged lower classes. Of late years, however, and particularly since the craze for everything "English, you know," came in, pipe smoking has increased. It is now considered quite too awfully swell to drop from a tandem dogcart with the stem of a short root pipe tightly clinched between your teeth.

It is a sort of finishing touch to your rough and ready fishing costume to have a stubby pipe in your mouth and gives one a delightful sense of easy, graceful, negligent swellness. Just as soon as the approval of society alighted upon the custom of pipe smoking pipes became much in demand, and the cost of the same increased proportionately, especially for the strictly English shapes. It is amusing to see a fellow pretending to be a judge of a pipe. The fact is that nearly all pipes smoke pretty much the same.

The cheaper pipe smokes better than the more expensive ones as a general thing. For instance, a corncob pipe is one of the coolest, sweetest smokes you can get. Next comes the penny clay pipe. If you will smoke a clay pipe a few times and throw it away, you will always be sure that you are enjoying pipe smoking of the most delightful character. The tendency of the average human is to buy an expensive pipe and then color it by blowing smoke against the bowl.

This practice renders the pipe ornamental, but as a general thing these highly colored pipes are very strong, and it is anything but pleasant for persons averse to tobacco to be in the same room with them. The English smoke pipes because pipe smoking is cheaper than cigar smoking. Americans smoke pipes because the English smoke pipes.

The only man who can properly understand a pipe is the plantation darky, who puts a live coal on top of a pipe filled with plug tobacco and puffs gently at the "turrer end" of a reed stem while the purple night shadows gather around the cabin and the screech owl scares itself and the neighborhood with its weird laughter.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Diet In Seasickness.

Persons intending to cross the ocean should for several weeks before embarking take daily exercise in the open air to get the general system in a good condition. To the same end they should eat a moderate quantity of plain food, especially avoiding what is heavy, greasy or constipating.

They should select a stateroom as near the middle of the steamer as possible.

Some tourists are never seasick so long as they lie on their backs and keep their eyes closed. The passenger who is seasick should remain in his berth until 9 or 10 o'clock in the morning and have the steward bring him what little food he takes. He should not go the table in the cabin until all symptoms of seasickness have left him, as the very sight and odor of the rich food will surely make him worse.

My own experience and observation have taught me that a dry diet is by far the best, and until the patient feels certain that he is over the worst of the attack he should rely largely upon sea biscuit or water crackers. As he gets better he may take gruels and broths. The latter should be free from grease. Raw oysters with lemon juice may be eaten.

After vomiting the patient should drink a cup of hot water in which there is a pinch of soda, and it is all the better if this is ejected, as it clears the stomach of bile and mucus.

Lime or lemon juice, in water without sugar, should be taken several times a day, both before sailing and during the voyage, for its action on the liver and bowels and as an aid to digestion, which has been weakened by losses of the gastric juice.

When the patient begins to go to the table, he should avoid pastry, fat meats and all rich food, and after eating he should lie flat on his back for half an hour, or until digestion is well begun, when he may go on deck and walk or sit in a steamer chair, but he should not lean over the side or stern of the ship.—Youth's Companion.

COPYING A CAPITOL.

The National Edifice a Model For Many State Buildings.

The architectural relation of the state capitol buildings scattered throughout the country to the national capitol at Washington is quaintly comparable with that of parent and progeny, for the present legislative homes of the states have all been constructed since the Washington capitol took shape, and the architects whose plans they embody almost instinctively turned to the edifice by the Potomac—if not as a model, at least as a suggestion.

This is nowhere more evident than in the western and southern states. The capitol of Kansas and that of Texas, for instance, are but modified reproductions of the mother edifice in Washington. North Dakota, Nebraska, Colorado, Tennessee, Missouri and the other states in that part of the country, however, while preserving the main features of the national building in dome, pedimental main doorway and basement story, have not indulged in the column ornamentation. This tends usually to give a denuded look to structures of that character, but the architects have as a rule been so happy in their combinations that such a consequence was escaped.

The south affords a striking instance of Vitruvius' accuracy in saying that the architecture of a state is a history in stone of its past. Her capitol buildings form an architectural aristocracy, poor, it may be, and not gilded, but impressive still. The structures, with Texas as the exception in richness only, show refined taste with dignified poverty.

The east affords a specimen of every type. New York's building at Albany has had the misfortune to be connected with an unsavory taint of jobbery, and its undeniable grandeur seems disregarded in general condemnation of the system which gave it being. Alone among the states the Empire commonwealth has freed its official home from the architectural domination of the city of the Potomac. The consequence, artistically, is a success. The capitol is a palace. The law of harmonies is obeyed in letter and in spirit. The dome tower of the structure is the fitting crown of a monarch in marble.

The influence of architecture upon government is the topic this creation will present in the next generation to philosophers who have exhausted the interest of architecture's influence upon religion. The sweep of step and balustrade that affords entrance to the capitol is a worthy footstool for such royalty in stone. The building is concrete evidence of that beauty created amid corruption to which a Greek poet alludes.—Boston Herald.

Rabbits Versus Civilization.

No one who is at all familiar with the feelings of resentment, irritation and despair which find their way into colonial prints on the subject can doubt that the character of the rabbit needs whitewashing badly. It is said that any person convicted of bringing the white rabbit to any port of Cape Colony would be lynched.

In New Zealand the sheep farmer drives from one log cabin to another on his "run" with a cartful of cats in cages, which are deposited at each and taught to earn a living by keeping down the rabbit plague. The demand for cats, fostered by the increase of the rabbits, even disturbs the domestic circle when hearth rug favorites of known homekeeping habits mysteriously disappear, and bereaved housewives on comparing notes find a suspicious correspondence between the rise in prices offered by the advertising farmers and the sudden loss of their household pets.

In Australia the rabbit has learned a new accomplishment. In California it has forgotten an old one. The Australian rabbit has developed long claws and climbs the scrub with ease in order to eat the leaves when grass is scarce. In California it has forgotten how to burrow.

But in all the colonies—and even in most parts of Germany, where the people will not eat rabbits, declaring that the meat is "too sweet"—the rabbit is looked upon as a pest to be exterminated if possible, and so unremunerative as food as not to pay the wages of the men employed in its destruction.—London Spectator.

Devoted Dogs.

Two fox terriers, Tan and Tally, which belonged to a physician in southern California, were the playmates of his little daughter Mabel. They had been her companions from her babyhood, and she was now 5 years old. One day she and they were frolicking in the garden when the little girl's attention was attracted by a peculiar noise in a bush at her elbow.

She peered into the branches to see what had made the noise. Instantly the head of a snake reared itself before her, and the sound of its rattles was repeated. Mabel stood as if fascinated. The gardener at work not far off screamed to her to run and hurried as fast as he could to her rescue. Hurry as he might, however, he would have been too late but for the dogs.

They saw the little girl's danger and threw themselves between her and it, worrying the snake till the man could come up and kill it. They were quite aware of their own danger. Again and again, when camping out with their master, they had shown the greatest terror at the sound of a snake's rattles, but they could not see the child injured.

When the mother came in answer to the shouts of the gardener, she found Mabel safe, but both dogs were already in the agonies of death.—Youth's Companion.

Sympathy Between the Eyes.

There is a remarkable sympathy between the eyes. So much is this the case that any serious injury to the one is almost certain to affect the other; hence the necessity which often arises for the removal of the injured eye mainly for the sake of saving the other. This sympathy has been shown to extend so far that color perceived by one eye alone excites the retina of the other. This is shown in the following way: If a white surface is observed for a short time through colored glass with one eye, while the other eye is screened, on removing the colored glass the white ground appears to be tinted with the color complimentary to that of the glass. This is a common and well known result, but the point is that if the first eye is closed and the screened eye opened, the whole surface appears tinted with the same color as the glass.—Dr. Chauveau.

The Shrinkage of Hay.

I often hear or see in the papers inquiries in regard to the number of cubic feet required for a ton of hay. Many times the answer is given 500 feet. I do not think any definite number of feet can be relied upon as a rule. Much depends upon the quality and condition of the hay and more upon the judgment of the person making the estimate. I have many times weighed and assisted in weighing hay from a given number of feet and found a variation of from 380 feet in a deep well bay of fine hay to 600 feet on a small scaffold of a coarse, loosely packed article.—Rural New Yorker.

The Art of Conversation.

The chief business of the host or hostess is to give the occasion, to suggest and to bring sympathetic minds into play, so that as iron, in the language of Scripture, sharpeneth iron, so may a man the countenance of his friend. The gift for this kind of management is not inborn in many. Indeed it is inborn in very few, but much can be done by self control and practice to develop it. So long as there is anything stiff, stilted and distant in talking the best result has not been reached. All who have written on conversation are agreed on this. "To talk without effort is, after all, the great charm of talking." The social party is not the place for academical lectures, and he is apt to be thought either a prig or a pretender who adventures upon them. Men like Macaulay and Carlyle were privileged. But they were masters of monologue rather than polite conversation. Their example is not to be followed.

Montaigne, in his essay on conversation, has some very good hints. This is one: "In table talk I prefer the merry man before the wise one, and in common conversation the most able speaker, even though he does not always mean what he says, and so of other things." This points out one great rule. Earnestness is apt to overleap itself, and one sided enthusiasm is sure to do so. The man with a hobby, the man with a grievance, the man with a cause, these are one and all, save in very exceptional cases, bad subjects for the master of conversation to manage and control. And just as they violate harmony and fair interchange by the interposition of their egotism so does the person who would fain lay bare his bosom and treat the party to a revelation of all his private affairs, his sufferings and his faults.—Argosy.

Snuff at a Funeral.

An old lady named Margaret Thompson, who died about a century ago, left one of the most extraordinary wills on record, which is almost entirely taken up with directions for her burial. She was a noted snuff taker, and was evidently determined to go to her grave with a liberal accompaniment of the fragrant dust. She instructed that her body, after it had been placed in the coffin, should be covered with Scotch snuff, and the will went on to say:

"Six men to be my bearers who are known to be the greatest snuff takers in the parish of St. James, Westminster. Instead of mourning, each to wear a snuff colored beaver hat. Six maidens of my acquaintance (named) to bear my pall and to carry a box filled with the best Scotch snuff, to take for their refreshment as they go along. Before my corpse I desire the minister may be invited to walk and to take a certain quantity of the said snuff, not exceeding one pound. And I desire my old and faithful servant, Sarah Stuart, to walk before the corpse and to distribute every 20 yards a large handful of Scotch snuff on the ground and upon the crowd who may possibly follow me to my burial place. And I also desire that at least two bushels of the said snuff may be distributed at the door of my house in Boyle street."—London Tit-Bits.

When a Woman Whistles.

It is particularly unlucky for a woman to whistle, because it is said that while the nails were being forged for our Lord's cross a woman stood by and whistled. Of course it is no worse for a woman to whistle than for a man, but you know how a woman does a thing—whole hog or none—and the craze has gone so far that severe remedies must be adopted to suppress her effusion. Suppose we get them to practice before a mirror? If she knew how the pucker distorts her pretty lips, she would refrain perhaps. Minerva disgustedly threw away her pipe with an imprecation when she beheld in the water the disfigurement of her lovely face caused by her musical performance.—Exchange.

The Tact of Louis Agassiz.

A middle aged woman once attended a dinner in California, at which Agassiz was present. "I shall never forget," she says, "the exquisite tact and simplicity with which that grand old man, near whom I was seated, listened to me and drew me out with great appearance of interest in the little nothings that I uttered. Nobody could possibly have suspected that I was a nonentity and he the guest of honor. The positions were reversed whenever he spoke to me."—New York Times.

He Was Wrong.

"Well," said a facetious stranger to a member of the brass band, "there is one thing for you to be thankful for."

"Vat is dose?" inquired the musician.

"You can always blow your own horn."

"Nein, my friendt. Dis cornet is borrowed."—Detroit Free Press.

SILENT FIGHT FOR LIFE

THE COOL FACING OF DEADLY FOES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

An Englishman Who Met the Wild Negroes Without a Single Weapon—They Gazed and Then Fled, Leaving Him Unharmed—He Lit His Pipe.

An English traveler in South Africa, who had incurred the wrath of some of the natives, writes: "Fortunately in 1868 the natives possessed no firearms; they held them in mortal dread and scarcely one could be found fearless enough to face a loaded rifle. The storekeepers knew this and behind their barricades were enabled to keep the foe at bay for many hours by a plentiful display of every shooting weapon they possessed. The flimsy material of which the Bechuana huts were constructed, and the close manner in which they were huddled together, also gave the traders another advantage, for the natives did not dare to fire the stores for fear of setting the whole town in a blaze. Had they allowed passion to overcome prudence not a single hut would have been saved, and the white men would have been roasted alive. The enemy was mad at being baffled by a mere handful of men who simply maintained their positions by showing the deadly gleam of the rifle barrels whenever a disposition was shown of rushing the frail defenses. Thus the day wore on without a single shot being fired, and to this self-possession on the part of the traders I am convinced I owe my life, for had any of the natives been killed my life would not have been worth five minutes purchase.

When Strombom left me to my own devices I felt annoyed at having refused his offer of protection, for the first marauding party might make short work of me with their assegais. What chance could I possibly have now that their blood was up? It was sheer madness which had prompted me to estimate my wagon and oxen as of equal value with my life! Yet the die was cast, and even if I would I could not now reach my white brethren, for a band of Bakalihari was now rushing from the station, blocking the only road to safety. And a veritable set of demons they looked as the brandished their long spears and yelled out vengeance in most blood-curdling shrieks.

I jumped out of the wagon box and saw that the three rifles were loaded and ready to hand. But what was the use of these against hundreds of assegais? I could fire six bullets and perhaps take as many lives; then, before I could reload, I should be tossed a bleeding, mangled corpse to mother earth amidst the jeers of my slayers. I fancied I yet had one slight chance which would be utterly smashed if I fired a single shot. Without hesitation I determined to adopt it, so I sat down on the wagon box, lit my pipe, and was calmly smoking when the foe came up to me.

This apparent sang froid seemed to stagger them, for they stopped their wild rush and stared at me with great curiosity, which seemed to increase when they noticed I had no offensive weapon within reach. What exactly passed through their minds as they saw me sitting there, the least concerned of them all, I cannot tell, but I believe they must have taken me for a wizard or medicine man. However, they merely jumped onto the front wheel, some poising their spears as if to hurl them at me, others flourishing knobkerries in my face, and all employing their tongues in such a voluble fashion that the noise they made prevented me from gathering their meaning. After enduring this unpleasant demonstration for quite five minutes, the warriors withdrew without so much as having touched me. Of course my driver and Kaffirs had disappeared completely during the performance of this almost tragedy, and I could not help laughing when I saw them sneaking out of some native gardens as the hindmost of the enemy moved out of sight. Their astonishment was ludicrous when they found that I still possessed a whole skin, but I put on a stern air and angrily asked them where they had been.

"Ah, Boss!" exclaimed Piet, the driver. "I never thought to see you alive again."

Grouse Shooting.

Since September 1 all sport loving Englishmen have been out on the Scotch moors after grouse. The effects of the May blizzard were felt in light bags in the northeastern counties, but on the west coast, where the grounds were sheltered, the scores were well up to the average of the past ten years. What is considered the record bag for the "garden of grouseland" is the total of 1,269 brace killed by the late Comte de Paris and eight guns in 1888, on Moness and Loch Kennard, during the opening week of the season. The nearest approach to it this year is 1,233½ brace on Moy Hall, Inverness-shire, to eight guns.

THREE RUNNING SORES
PHYSICIANS FAILED
BUT B.B.B. CURED

DEAR SIRS—After having used Burdock Blood Bitters for Scrofula in the blood, I feel it my duty to make known the results. I was treated by a skilled physician but he failed to cure it. I had three Running Sores on my neck which could not be healed until I tried B. B. B., which healed them completely, leaving the skin and flesh as sound and whole. As long as I live I shall speak of the virtues of B.B.B., and I feel grateful to Providence that such a medicine is provided for sufferers.

A SCALY ERUPTION
UNENDURABLE ITCHING
Suffered Three Years—Now Perfectly Cured by B. B. B.

GENTLEMEN—I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for Skin Diseases, from which I have been a sufferer for three years. I have used six bottles and am now entirely cured. I have used other remedies, such as Donald Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura Remedies, but all to no good. I doctored one year with the best physicians in the land; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but could not remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard dry scales. The itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured, and I owe it all to B. B. B.

PURIFIES THE BLOOD

When the Nerve Centres Need Nutrition.

A Wonderful Recovery, Illustrating the Quick Response of a Depleted Nerve System to a Treatment Which Replenishes Exhausted Nerve Forces.

MR. FRANK BAUER, BERLIN, ONT.

Perhaps you know him? In Waterloo he is known as one of the most popular and successful business men of that enterprising town. As managing executor of the Kuntz estate, he is at the head of a vast business, representing an investment of many thousands of dollars, and known to many people throughout the Province. Solid financially, Mr. Frank Bauer also has the good fortune of enjoying solid good health, and if appearances indicate anything, it is safe to predict that there's a full half century of active life still ahead for him. But it's only a few months since, while nursed as an invalid at the Mt. Clemens sanitary resort, when his friends in Waterloo were dismayed with a report that he was at the point of death.

"There's no telling where I would have been had I kept on the old treatment," said Mr. Bauer, with a merry laugh, the other day, while recounting his experiences as a very sick man. "Mt. Clemens," he continued, "was the last resort in my case. For months previous I had been suffering indescribable tortures. I began with a loss of appetite and sleepless nights. Then, as the trouble kept growing, I was getting weaker, and began losing flesh and strength rapidly. My stomach refused to retain food of any kind. During all this time I was under medical treatment, and took everything prescribed, but without relief. Just about when my condition seemed most hopeless, I heard of a wonderful cure effected in a case somewhat similar to mine, by the Great South American Nervine Tonic, and I finally tried that. On the first day of its use I began to feel that it was doing what no other medicine had done. The first dose relieved the distress completely. Before night I actually felt hungry and ate with an appetite such as I had not known for months. I began to pick up in strength with surprising rapidity, slept well nights, and before I knew it I was eating three square meals regularly every day, with as much relish as ever. I have no hesitation whatever in saying that the South American Nervine Tonic cured me when all other remedies failed. I have recovered my old weight—over 200 pounds—and never felt better in my life."

Mr. Frank Bauer's experience is that of all others who have used the South American Nervine Tonic. Its instantaneous action in relieving distress and pain is due to the direct effect of this great remedy upon the nerve centres, whose fagged vitality is energized instantly by the very first dose. It is a great, a wondrous cure for all nervous diseases, as well as indigestion and dyspepsia. It goes to the real source of trouble direct, and the sick always feel its marvellous sustaining and restorative power at once, on the very first day of its use.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees.
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease).
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want;
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then went home, but stop, I miss,
They gave us every one, a kiss,
An said, "be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home,
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

Their Feeding Value Discussed in a Practical Way.

There are many substances which if chemical analysis be taken as the sole guide for feeding value, would appear to be real rations, yet it is sometimes found that either the animals will refuse to eat them altogether, or fail to do well when restricted to them. It is important then that foods should be appetizing, that they should be relished by the stock. Again one cannot consistently advise the use of articles of food, at least to any considerable extent, unless it can be profitably produced or purchased at a comparatively reasonable figure in the markets.

The chemical analysis of roots has proven satisfactory, they are relished by stock, they can be profitably grown, and when fed out to farm animals experience has shown that the results obtained have come up to all reasonable expectations. I find them valuable as a food for all farm stock. Horses soon learn to like them and it has been a custom with me to feed about two good sized young roots to a horse every day. All the cattle get rutabagas, seldom more than sixty pounds of cut roots a day, depending an the age and size of the animal. I aim to feed the cows what sugar beets they will eat up clean. The brood sows get a few roots every day and seem to eat and relish them as well as grain. Poultry are fond of a light feed of finely chopped beets at frequent intervals.

While I advocate the feeding of roots to all farm animals, where succulent food in some other form is not available, yet I believe that roots are preeminently a most valuable and an economic food for sheep. At the Michigan experiment station, in an experiment conducted to ascertain the relative value of ensilage and roots for fattening lambs, the roots gave much the most marked results. Not only this but the economic value of roots as a factor in the ration of fattening lambs was conclusively proven. It is very expensive to construct a silo and get suitable machinery, while in raising and feeding roots no great initial outlay is occasioned and the roots furnish valuable succulent food.—American Agriculturist.

Care of House Palms.

A New York woman who has kept her bay window filled with the same palms for 15 years, tell the Evening Sun that their long life is only a matter of proper care. She has the advantage of electrical light and steam heat, making a better atmosphere for palms than do gas and the furnace, but beyond this it is necessary to keep them moist at the root and out of the cold air. Twice a eek she fills the top of each pot with water; once a fortnight, with a flower-sprayer, she cleans the leaves, which must drip dry. When housed for the winter, near the window for sunlight to reach them, she never allows a draft to blow on the palms, and except on the balmiest days, no window is opened to dust until they are removed to a place of safety. If in spite of this care they droop, the florist is sent for, and if he finds moisture and drainage good, he will look for worms, which are a palm's greatest enemies, but can be cut out without great detriment to the plant. Clean water, an even, warm temperature and sunlight will suffice for health of any house palm.

A Word to Beginners.

Those who begin farming find so many new expenses that they are always cramped for money. It is here that many make their greatest mistake. It costs too much to buy the best stock, so they begin with that which is not so good, because it can be bought with less money. Sometimes the stock is so poor that it subjects them to loss from the start. In that case it takes all they can make by cropping to offset losses on stock. Most of the profit that farmers can now make must be from the increase in value of their farm stock. If they begin with the best, but few in number, they can make this increase faster than is possible in any other way.

An Egg-Producing Mess.

The Wisconsin Agriculturalist says: Take a piece of liver, rough lean meat or any cheap portions from the butcher and boil it to pieces, or to a broth. Add sufficient salt to season, and cooked turnips or potatoes also may be added. While boiling add sufficient of a mixture of equal parts of middlings and ground oats to thicken the mess to a consistency, the thicker the better. When cold, feed it at night, giving the hens all they will eat.

A Curiosity Among Colors.

It is a curious fact that the color of yellow, whether it be vegetable or animal, is much more permanent than any other hue. The yellow of a flower's petals is the only color known to botanists that is not faded or entirely discharged upon being exposed to the fumes of sulphurous acid. Take the viola tricolor (heart's ease) as an illustration. If exposed but a moment to these fumes the purple tint immediately takes its flight, and in the wall-flower the yellow shines as brightly as ever after all other colors have fled.

AFFAIRS IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

Relief for the Destitute Families—Mr. Goodridge's Liabilities.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Jan. 14.—The officers of the mail steamer Virginia Lake, which has arrived here, report intense destitution along the northern coast of Newfoundland. The steamer recently carried 500 barrels of flour to the north for distribution among the needy families, but as this amount is totally inadequate to meet the widespread starvation existing there the Government will despatch her again to-day with another supply.

The investigation directed against Mr. McGrath, editor of the Herald and one of the foreign newspaper correspondents accused of sending messages detrimental to the colony's credit, has apparently been abandoned. The newspapers condemn the investigation, as its political object becomes more and more apparent.

The relief measures of the public committee are being continued, but are far from sufficient to relieve the existing distress.

The creditors of Goodridge & Sons met and heard statements of the assets and liabilities of the firm. The statements showed that a dividend of 58 cents on the dollar is available. A committee was appointed to examine the books. After the examination the question of a compromise was decided.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The Times will say: The responsibility of dealing with the situation in Newfoundland must eventually rest on the Imperial government, one of whose first conditions must be that the colony renounce the responsible g vernment which it has misused. Further borrowing must be discouraged until after a complete reform of the existing system.

A Colored Preacher in Trouble.

ST. JOHNS, N.B., Jan. 14.—Rev. Thos. H. Henderson, pastor of the colored church in this city, was yesterday arrested on a charge of abortion, at the instance of New Jersey State detective Joseph A. Hayes. It appears some months ago Henderson was arrested in Morristown, N.J., on a charge of adultery and afterwards abortion on a married woman of that place, also colored. Henderson was admitted to bail and skipped out in July last. From that time until last Monday the a uthorities had lost all clue to his whereabouts. He was on that day located in this city as pastor of St. Phillip's church and Detective Hayes, armed with the necessary papers, arrived here on Friday. As adultery is not an extraditable offence, new papers had to be secured and Henderson was not arrested until yesterday in consequence. Extradition papers have been applied for and are expected from Washington in a few days.

West Durham Patrons.

BOWMANVILLE, Ont., Jan. 14.—The Patrons, who were greatly disappointed in not placing a candidate in the last Provincial contest in West Durham, have decided to enter the federal race and have picked on Mr. C. Jonas Thornton, of Kerby, who has accepted the candidacy with great expectations of success. There were 53 delegates and the resolution to put a member of their order in the political race was supported by 49 of them and afterwards made unanimous. The choice of Mr. Thornton was comparatively unanimous on the first ballot.

HAMILTON, Jan. 14.—Notice of an action for damages for libel was served on the Spectator Printing Company yesterday by Carscallen, Cahill & Ross, solicitors for the Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo Railway Company. The alleged libel was contained in an editorial in last Thursday's issue of the Spectator, in which it was stated the road was cheap and nasty, that the road was being constructed cheaply and was as crooked as a ram's horn, etc. The amount of damages claimed is not stated in the notice, but it is said the railway company will ask for $100,000.

A G. T. R. Engineer Suicides.

ST. THOMAS, Jan. 14.—John Forrest, a G. T. R. engineer, residing at 77 Catharine street, this city, shot himself dead with a revolver on Saturday night. The deed was committed in the hall of his house and is said to have been caused by domestic trouble.

A Winnipeg Man Suicides in St. Paul.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 14.—Geo. Brown, aged 35 years, of Winnipeg, Man., took nitric acid at the Capital hotel here last night and will die. A railroad ticket from Winnipeg to Kansas City was found in his pocket besides $160, a gold watch and a diamond ring. WHITE-WINGED PEACE

Arbitration as a Means of Settlement of International Disputes.

MR. CREAMER AT WASHINGTON

The Peace Delegate From Great Britain Arrives to Present a Memorial to President Cleveland—The Action of These Countries May End War.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—The representative of the arbitration movement in Great Britain, William Randall Creamer, M.P., is in Washington, and expects to have an audience with the President to-morrow. He will then present his memorial, signed by 345 members of Parliament, proposing arbitration as the means of settling all differences, no matter how little or great they may be, between the United States and Great Britain.

Mr. Creamer reached Washington late on Friday evening and since he has been engaged in calling upon his friends here. He was here seven years ago, when the first movement was begun looking to the adoption of arbitration to settle all disputes between the two great English-speaking nations of the world. He has not yet fully matured his plans for carrying out the work which brings him to the United States and intends to confer with his friends before taking any further steps toward the accomplishment of his mission.

"The consummation of the present plan of arbitration," said Mr. Creamer, "would be a great victory for peace and civilization. It would be the first link in the chain of universal arbitration and the grand example thus set by the United States and Great Britain would sooner or later be followed by other countries."

Mr. Creamer said further that from a conversation he had with Lord Rosebery, British Minister of Foreign Affairs, just prior to his departure for this country, he felt certain that the British Government would heartily co-operate with the United States in any plan looking to the adoption of international arbitration and that it would look with favor on any steps which this country might take in that direction. He expressed the utmost regret that the chances of Congress adopting the resolution offered in the Senate by Mr. Allison and in the House by Mr. Lacey, proposing arbitration between the two countries, seemed to be small on account of the approaching end of the session.

It is Mr. Creamer's intention to present each member of Congress with a copy of the memorial he will present to the President when he obtains his audience with that official.

BILL COOK CAPTURED.

The Notorious Murderer and Desperado in the Toils at Last.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M., Jan. 14.—Bill Cook, train robber, murderer and all-round desperado, was captured near Fort Stanton, Lincoln county, New Mexico, last Friday night by Sheriff Perry, of Chaves county. Cook when he found that escape was impossible admitted his identity and decided to return to Oklahoma without any formality. Perry spent over three weeks in the saddle with only a few trusted aides accompanying him and these did not know the true nature of his trip into the western country.

MUSKOGEE, O. T., Jan. 14.—Deputy Dobbs, of Fort Didge, wired to this place that Cook, French and five confederates were riding up and down the main streets flourishing their Winchesters. Dobbs asked for men to come to Gibson to assist in driving the bandits out. The deputy marshals called a meeting and decided that it was too dangerous to pursue the Cook gang unless larger rewards were offered. The bandits have been in and about Fort Gibson for more than two weeks and no effort has been made to capture them. The Forth Smith and Muskogee marshals have been cognizant for more than ten days, it is said, that the Fort Smith court is trying to induce Cook and French to give up and receive a five years' sentence.

Bradford, Pa., Has a Destructive Fire.

BRADFORD, Pa., Jan. 14.—Yesterday this city was visited by a very destructive fire which started in the Sheehan house at 9 Mechanic street. The weather was intensely cold and the firemen were greatly handicapped in fighting the flames. Mary Callahan leaped from the second story of the Sheehan house and escaped with a broken ankle and arm. Mary Dorine also jumped but escaped injury. Mrs. McQuiston residing over Smith's grocery rushed down the stairs to Main street with her clothing on fire. The flames were extinguished and she will recover. For a time the business portion of the town was threatened with destruction. The loss is estimated at $150,000; partially insured.

A Remarkable Charge.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Jan. 14.—Undertaker J. G. Franklin, jr., was on trial here on the charge of conducting a museum without a license. The bodies of the two negro boys, George Mapp and Buddie Wooten, hanged on Friday, were placed in coffins and carried to Franklin's establishment and exposed to a gaping crowd of negroes at five cents admission. The police stopped the show and arrested Franklin.

Terrific Blizzard in Pennsylvania.

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Jan. 14.—A terrific blizzard struck the north end of Fayette county and continues with increasing fury. Snow is falling in blinding sheets and drifting badly. The mercury fell from 20 degrees above to the zero mark within two hours. In the mountains east the storm is even worse and is likely to blockade the railway tracks.

A Kentucky Phenomenon.

ELVA, Ky., Jan. 14.—When people in this locality arose on Saturday they found the ground covered with two inches of white snow, covered with a yellow tinted stuff that could be gathered in handfuls. It turned water inky black when handed. There is no explanation of the phenomenon and an analysis has been taken.

THE ECLIPSE AT SEA.

A Great Arch of Scintillant Light, and a Fount in of Fire.

The partial eclipse of the moon which happened the 15th September, 1894, was observed by the passengers and offices of the Red Star line Westernland, far out at sea,, and they had a good view of the phenomenon, which was accompanied by an electrical display of rare beauty. Seamen, as a rule, are not susceptible to the poetry of sea, bnt one of the officers of the Westernland was so impressed by the glory of the scene that he delivered himself as follows:

"When I came on watch at midnight I stood in the doorway of my cabin for some minutes, so impressed was I with the beauty of the night. A silvery path through which the ship was sweeping attracted my attention; but the wonder of the moon, the stars and the deep-blue sky passes all description.

"I went up on the bridge and cast an eye toward the lovers' and sailors' friend, shining down upon us. The stars twinkled as one sometimes sees them ashore on a clear winter's night. And look where you would—north, south, all around the horizon—not the faintest sign of a cloud could be seen to mar the clear expanse of the heavens.

"Bringing my glass to bear upon the moon, I discovered an unusually dark spot near the northern pole, which was probably the beginning of the eclipse. At the same instant an unusually bright flash in the sky coming from the north attracted my attention. Looking in that direction, I saw the heavenly electric batteries were opening their full display. Rays, columns and clouds of light were bursting up from the horizon from east to west, shooting southward across the zenith.

"The lights would shoot into every conceivable shape and form, trying to outshine even the brilliant stars that gazed calmly down on the battle of light against darkness, while back of all the indigo blue of the sky was in itself not the least remarkable feature. Against the background we could see mysterious, unearthly rays of electric light crossing and flashing in all directions, lasting but a second.

"Two exceptionally remarkably apparitions during the display impressed themselves upon my memory. One was a grand arch of light, horseshoe shaped, raising itself about twenty-five degrees above the horizon in the north. Its hollow was sharply defined against the heavens, while the line of the outer edge of the arch was almost constantly broken by rays, flashes and star-like forms that shot up continually towards the zenith. At the same time in the hollow of the arch, up from the horizon rose a column of flame that burst into a perfect fountain of fire, playing away merrily for fully five minutes without a pause. Then in a flash it was gone.

"The second of these spectacles was quite as remarkable, if not as beautiful. It was what I can only describe as a gigantic burst of flame that shot across the heavens from east-northeast towards west southwest, taking the perfect form of a monstrous feather with a sharply defined edge on the north, while that which formed the barbs spread downward to the south in soft, fleecy clouds, the western edge of the feather just touching the edge of the moon. The barbs moved longitudinally, continually revolving as they swept along, accompanied by incessant changes of color, from the purest white to light blue, orange and yellow. This lasted for ten minutes and then disappeared, when the familiar, well known electrical display, the 'aurora borealis,' began, accompanied by unusual white, fleecy clouds. These clouds remained stationery for four or five seconds, the stars shining through meanwhile, and then disappeared.

"When the eclipse began the moon stood west-southwest from us at about forty degrees from the horizon. Of course, we had a perfect view of it, about one-fifth of its surface—the northern portion—being darkened. From beginning to end the eclipse lasted just two hours, and a curious feature of the electrical display was that it moved in perfect accord with the eclipse, growing stronger as the face of the moon was darkened and gradually passing away as the shadow disappeared from the silvery disk."

Pride o' Auld Scotia.

It is said that the Duke of Argyle, when his son, the Marquis of Lorne, was sent for by the Queen to betroth himself to the Princess Louise, said to the Minister's wife, Mrs. Donald Fraser: "This is one of those sacrifices which makes one feel the burden of rank." A feeling which was shared by his retainers, one of whom, after hiding a huge drink of whisky to the young couple's health, remarked: "This 'ull pe a proud day for Her Mojesty."

The "Grapple" Plant.

The "grapple" plant, a botanical oddity which grows only along the edge of the Kalahart desert, has the general resemblance of an immense star fish. Each ray or arm of this vegetable curiosity is provided with natural "grab-hooks," and if a sheep get too near it is likely to be caught by the wool and held till it dies.

FOR A CUSTOMS UNION

The London Statist's Competition Attracting Considerable Attention.

CANADA STREATY WITH FRANCE

Desirability of a Direct Steamship Communication With That Country—The Copyright Question—Cold Storage for Ocean Shipping. Belgian Embargo.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—One of the events of the year from the Colonial point of view, promises to be the competition announced by the Statist for the best paper on a customs union between the Colonies and Great Britain. It is not surprising that it is already attracting considerable attention, as the enterprising journal in question has offered the magnificent prize of 1,000 guineas in connection with the competition. The nomination of the judges who are to make the award, was left to the Marquis of Salisbury and to the Earl of Rosebery, and it is now announced that the former has selected the Marquis of Lorne and the latter Lord Playfair, both of whom have accepted the position. The conditions of the competition will be made public in the issue of the Statist of February 2nd, and papers, it is stated, will have to be sent in before the close of the year. Few people will envy the judges the duties they have undertaken, and it is very certain that no decision can be published until the year 1896 is far advanced. The opinion of the Marquis of Lorne upon an imperial customs union is well known and, for the matter of that, so is that of Lord Playfair. The fact that the latter is an extreme free trader may be regarded as somewhat of an indication of the views of Lord Rosebery upon the subject. It is to be hoped that the expert attention that will be devoted to the question of imperial commercial unity, in which the future of the Empire is more or less bound up, will lead to some tangible result and bring the question within the region of practical politics.

The French Treaty.

The French-Canadian Treaty having been adopted by the French Senate and chamber of Deputies, has now been promulgated by the the President of the Republic and the announcement appeared in the Journal official, of the 26th ulto. The President is authorized by the proclamation to ratify, and if there is good cause, to put into operation the treaty in question, which it will be remembered was signed at Paris on February 6, 1893. All that remains to be done now is for the exchange of ratifications to take place, and a proclamation to be issued by Canada and France, fixing the date on which the mutual tariff concessions are to take effect. The development of trade, as the consequence of the treaty is attracting considerable attention in steamship and business circles and the possibility, and indeed the desirability, of direct steamship communication between Canada and France is being much discussed. If Canadian manufacturers, merchants and shippers take the question up with their usual enterprise, there is little doubt that the trade of the Dominion with the Republic may be largely increased; but of course direct importation into France will be necessary, to avoid the Surtaxe D'Entrepot which is levied on importations by way of any European country. There is already a good deal of irregular steam communication between the two countries during the season of navigation, and no doubt the steamship companies may be disposed to pay more attention to the service if they receive any encouragement to do so.

The Copyright Question.

The day before his death the late Sir John Thompson had a long interview with the Marquis of Ripon at the Colonial office on the Canadian copyright question; but outside the Colonial office little is known of what passed on the occasion. From what has leaked out, however, indirectly, it would not appear that the settlement of the question in a way satisfactory to Canada is much nearer than it has been at any time during the last few years. There is no doubt that the sympathies of the Marquis of Ripon personally are to some extent with the Canadian contention; but it is evident, also that the opposition to the bill of 1889 is making itself felt in official circles. The real difficulty in the way of anything being done arises from the Berne convention. All the leading countries of the world, excepting the United States, are parties to it and there is a decided disinclination to do anything that may weaken the understanding arrived at a few years ago after much prolonged negotiations. The letter from Mr. J. D. Edgar published in the Times of the 26th ult., was most opportune as it shows that there is no divergence of opinion on the subject between the two great parties in the Canadian Parliament. It is evident to those who are following the matter, from the Canadian point of view, that the action already taken will have to be followed up promptly and vigorously, if the absurdities of the existing state of things are to be removed.

Value of Cold Storage.

The trade between Australia and Great Britain, particularly in dairy produce, is rapidly increasing, and it is attributed to the admirable and extensive cold storage provided on the steamers which convey the traffic. Of course, in view of the shorter distance between Canada and Great Britain the necessity for such accommodation on steamers from that colony may not be so great, but in business circles it is generally believed that Canadian exports of more or less perishable articles will never reach the dimensions the capabilities of the Dominion warrant, unless the question of cold storage is grappled with by the steamship companies. Only a few days ago 700 tons of butter, or 1,512,000 pounds, valued at £70,000, were shipped by one steamer from Melbourne; and it is expected that during the present season the shipments of butter from Victoria will bring about £1,000,000 sterling into the pockets of the farmers. Then again, the cold storage is enabling the farmers to turn the rabbit pest to some advantage, as thousands of the rodents are now being disposed of in the different markets in England at prices ranging from 1s to 1s 3d each.

Canadian Cattle in Belgium.

No developments have recently taken place in the matter of Canadian cattle in Belgium. It is satisfactory to know, however, that no further cases of suspicion have been discovered, and that the Belgium prohibition rests upon the two animals alleged to have been diseased, ex steamship Hispania and Sicilia. It is regretable that some alleged cases of pleuropneumonia have been found among American cattle, which arrived in Antwerp a few days ago. This circumstance may be used to strengthen the position Belgium has taken, as on the continent, the distinction between Canada and the United States is not readily recognized, and little is known of the quarantine in force in Canada against importations of cattle from the United States or of the great care that is taken to prevent the introduction of disease.

FROM THE CAPITAL.

Evidences of Dissolution at Hand—Hurrying the Lists.

OTTAWA, Jan. 15.—An evening paper says: "An idea seems to be gaining ground in Ottawa that dissolution is at hand. Although it has been the practice to call Parliament in the early part of the year, the only law on the subject is contained in the B. N. A. Act which says that Parliament shall be held "at least once in every year." Taking a year from the prorogation of the last session would give until July before the present Premier would be obliged to call a session. It is no way thought that Premier Bowell fears the result of an immediate session as likely to expose the weakness of the new Government. On this account it is thought that a general election will be ordered that the new Ministry may make themselves secure for another term."

Owing to the illness of Chief Justice Strong the Supreme Court did not sit to render judgments to-day. He has a bad cold.

Down at the Government Printing Bureau the voters' lists are being rushed into print with all possible haste. Even night work has been resorted to, all of which is thought to mean an election before another session of Parliament.

TO COME IN OUT OF THE COLD.

Rumors That Newfoundland is Seeking Union With Canada.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Jan. 15.—It is reported that the Government here is in correspondence with the Canadian Government regarding terms for Newfoundland's admission into the Canadian Confederation.

The whole question, it is understood will be presented to the Colonial Legislature next week. The Governor is in constant cable communication with the Imperial authorities.

Bold Attempt at Robbery.

HAMILTON, Jan. 15.—A bold robbery occured in Barton township, about two miles and a half from the city, over the mountain top, on Saturday evening. A house occupied by Miss Murray and her brother was entered by four masked burglars during the absence of Mr. Murray. The four men burst in the door and ransacked the premises, and being unable to find money or valuables which they believed to be concealed in the house, they threatened to roast the woman unless she told the whereabouts of the money. Miss Murray protested there was none in the house, but the burglars would not believe this story and after taking off the woman's shoes and stockings they tied her to a chair preparatory to roasting her feet. Miss Murray's pleadings evidently saved her and the men decamped after securing about $4 in money.

Masonic Temple Destroyed.

ST. CATHARINES, Jan. 15.—The Masonic Temple, situated on Ontario street, was totally destroyed by fire about two o'clock yesterday. The ground floor of the building was occupied as a business college, the public free library on the second floor, and by St. George, Maple Leaf and Temple lodges on the third floor. The Masons lost their jewels, regalia, furniture, books, etc. The public library lost all their books. The business college lost everything. The Masonic Temple was one of the finest buildings of its kind in the Dominion. It was three stories high, with tower, iron front and altogether an imposing looking structure. Insurance on Masonic Temple as follows: $5,000 in Commercial Union, $2,500 in Royal, $2,500 in London.

A Young Man's Rash Act.

MONCTON, N.B., Jan. 15.—The community was shocked yesterday to hear that Arthur L. Campbell, son of John Campbell, Intercolonial railway office, shot himself through the heart while in bed. All the chambers were loaded with the exception of the one just discharged. The rash act is attributed to a fit of despondency, as he has lately been complaining of feeling blue. Deceased was 24 years of age and of quiet and unassuming manners. Two brothers hold positions in the Bank of Montreal. One is teller in the branch at St. John and the other is stationed at London, Ont.

Mr. Madill's Church Burned.

SARNIA, Ont., Jan. 15.—Yesterday Zion church caught fire and considerable damage was done before it was put out (possibly $1000, fully covered by insurance. The fire resulted from the furnace and had evidently been smouldering from the night before. Rev. J. C. Madill, the president of the P. P. A., is the pastor of the church.

Suspicions of Foul Play.

QUEBEC, Jan. 15.—A woman called Major, of River Beoudet, Lake St. John district, died from mysterious causes on New Years Day. The coroner's jury have postponed the inquest until January 29th, when a report of the autopsy will be rendered.

ALL THE TROLLEYS IDLE

Brooklyn Street Railway Men Out on a Gigantic Strike.

THE U. S. MAIL CAR MOBBED

The Police Called Out to Protect the Company's Property—Federal Troops May be Needed—Company Expects to Set The Lines Going With New Men.

BROOKLYN, N.Y., Jan. 15.—The trolley car strike began when the last night car was housed, which was shortly before four o'clock yesterday morning. Not a single day car is running on any road in Brooklyn, with one exception—the Coney Island and Brooklyn. The elevated trains, although the service has been nearly doubled, are unable to carry the people, and during the working hours in the morning these cars were crowded to suffocation. When the electricians employed in the four power houses in the city went to take their night shift at 6 p.m. last night they were asked by the foremen if they would be willing to take places on the cars as motormen and conductors in the morning. To a man they replied, "No." Then they were told there was no more work for them. This, the first act in the lockout, threw some 900 men out.

The strike is the greatest Brooklyn has ever seen since Master Workman Martin Connelly's order was at once observed by 6,000 men. Plenty of men—the company says 2,000—applied at the City Railway Company's office for work. They said they would take out cars if there were good protection. The company at once applied to the police for protection. If the police cannot give it the Federal Marshal and the United States troops will be called on.

The railway companies have contracts to carry mail. If these cars are interfered with the marshals and troops, the companies say, will co-operate with the police.

All the police reserves are on duty. The companies involved in the strike are the Brooklyn Heights Traction Company, one of the largest railroad companies in the east; the Atlantic Avenue Railroad Company, which is now the Long Island Traction Company; and the Brooklyn and Newton Railroad Company. Over 600 miles of trolley lines are tied up by the strike.

President Lewis, of the Brooklyn City railroad company, says: "We have already signed contracts with fifty men to take the place of strikers on the Heights road. We have a long line of men who want work waiting and just as speedily as they can show their ability to handle a motor they will be engaged. We are running the Court street cars, some of them with men who work usually in the shops. In two days, however, we expect to have signed with enough men to run all our cars on schedule time. Whether we succeed in doing so will depend on the police. If they will give us protection we will run our cars."

An attempt to move a car on the Atlantic avenue line, bearing the inscription "U. S. mail" was prevented by 500 strikers, who threw clubs, stones and other missiles. A squad of 25 police with drawn revolvers finally caused the mob to retreat. A mail car will start to-day and all the police captains in the district are ordered to see that it is not molested.

Sailors Adrift on Coal Barges.

HAWESVILLE, Ky., Jan. 15.—In a dense fog yesterday as the tow boat Boase, with thirty loaded coal boats bound from Pittsburg to New Orleans rounded the bend just above here she struck the bank and the fleet went to pieces. The Boase's wheel and machinery were damaged and the boat keeled over on one side. The crew became frantic and climbed on to the barges. Twenty barges went down immediately and others drifted out of sight and are going to pieces on the ice. The Boase drifting by lying on one side is evidently about to sink. Not a word has been heard from the boats or the twenty-nine men who were on them.

Two Sailors Perish.

FIRE ISLAND, N.Y., Jan. 15.—The coal barge Seth Low, New York for Boston, with coal in tow, broke away 20 miles east of the lightship and grounded on Short Beach. The crew of five took to the rigging. After great efforts the life-savers succeeded in reaching the boat, but two of the crew had fallen off and perished.

Earthquake in Indiana.

PRINCETON, Ind., Jan. 15.—Two distinct earthquake shocks were felt here. At Union, a small town twelve miles from this city, the shocks were severe and did much damage to houses. They were preceded by rumbling noises lasting several seconds, followed by vibration southwest to northwest.

An Unfounded Rumor.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Jan. 15.—The story that Mrs. James Dempster, of Gananoque, now in jail here awainting trial on a charge of bigamy, secured a package from an American druggist, to take her husband's life is a wild rumor, originating from the fact that Dempster was ill and unable to attend the preliminary examination. No evidence whatever was taken to corroborate the rumor. It is generally considered to be a canard, pure and simple.

Lived With a Bullet in His Brain.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Jan. 15.—An inquest was held yesterday on the body of George F. Ashford, who murdered his wife and child on December 22, and after killing them put a bullet into his own head. He died last Saturday night from the effects of the wounds. Although the medical evidence adduced showed that the bullet was imbedded one and one-half inches in Ashford's brain, the man lived and had the full use of his faculties for three weeks.

Killed in a Runaway.

ALLANBURG, Ont., Jan. 15.—A sad accident occurred at Lundy's Lane on Saturday afternoon. Two young women named Wright, of this place, accompanied by their brother, were driving, and the horse ran away and Effie jumped out, striking on her head, dying in about twenty-four hours. The body was brought home yesterday. She was a very promising young lady and organist of the Methodist church here.

The Daily Examiner will be delivered to any part of the Town for 10c. a week 35c. a month, $2.00 for six months.

Daily Examiner.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 15, 1895.

SEVENTY per cent. of the steamship tonnage of the world is, according to an article by the president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce in the January North American, carried under the British flag.

THE Earl of Winchester, in an article in the January North American, gives the earning power of the people of the United Kingdom at £1,000,000,000 per annum. The president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, as elsewhere stated, shows that the old land has the ships and the statement of the noble earl indicates that she has the money too.

A pointer or two for you who pay taxes: In 1878 you paid $12,782,824 in customs duties; in 1893 you paid $20,954,008. Do you ever stop to think how much of the taxes that are taken out of your pockets through the customs house goes to pay interest on the national debt? In 1893 on interest alone, to say nothing of the sinking fund and commission, you paid $9,806,884. While our population is only one-fourteenth of that of the United States, we are taxed annually over one third as much as the people of the United States are taxed, to meet interest charges on our debt, their interest account for 1893 being $27,264,392.

OTTAWA may proceed with her carnival. She cannot injure Canada by establishing a reputation for icebergs. Canada, to employ, the slang of the hour, "isn't in it" with other countries this winter. England, Ireland, Scotland and Europe is suffering from a cold snap, attended by the freezing to death of citizens, such as are unknown in Canada. The latest despatches inform us that even in Algiers, on the borders of the desert of Sahara, the Arabs are frozen to death in their tents. This happening within 30 degrees of the equator, may be constrasted with the finest winter weather in Peterborough experienced for years.

ONE of the underwriters says insurance companies have lost $3,000,000 by fire in the congested district south of King street Toronto, in twenty years. Now will the same gentleman tell us what has been received in premiums in the same time for properties in that district? It is unfortunate that the insurance companies should be struck so hard, but when one comes to think of it, that is what they exist for, that is, from the public point of view. Insurance companies, as a rule, are fairly comfortable in finances. None of them occupy very humble homes, and though they are occasionally bled pretty copiously they are simply restoring the funds which the insured have paid them with the express understanding that it shall be refunded when loss by fire occurs. Insurance companies are a necessity, and while they make money, they confer a benefit upon the property owning public that in times of disaster from fire cannot be too highly appreciated. Their existence gives confidence to the business men from the feeling that if his belongings are destroyed by fire, he will not be deprived of the means of making another stand in life. If an insurance company should "squeal" because it has to meet the obligations in respect to the policy it issues, it should permit the same luxury to the policy holder, when he has to pay the premium.

THE BABCOCK TESTER.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

SIR,—I will now make an attempt to answer Fairplay's questions re Babcock Tester, briefly:

1. (a) Over fifty, (b) only three.
2. No, not a great deal, but the cheese is of better quality.
3. Yes, they do.
4. Yes, they are always taken on the first selection, and also get a higher price on the whole. But one thing about the price is that the rules of the Cheese Board are that the first selection must be no less than 500 boxes, and these three factories being small the buyers have to pick on some of the poorer factories, that is, some of the factories that do not pay by the Babcock Tester. I know a certain inspector who said the cheese in those three factories was of a better quality than the most of the others, and I advise all the factories in the county of Peterborough to adopt the system of paying for the milk by the Babcock Test, and then they will get a higher price for their cheese all the summer through.
5. Taken up in the fourth.
6. By the cheesemaker. How does Fairplay think an inspector is going to be at every factory in the county to test the milk every week?

Fairplay asks, by what means can it be shown that he has done justice to all? Well, are cheesemakers not as likely to be honest as farmers or any other man? If the patrons don't want to trust to the cheesemaker let them appoint a committee of three or four men whom they can trust, and have them go the factory on test days, and see that things are done correctly, or have the cheesemaker sworn; I don't think there are any that would be afraid to be sworn.

8. The inspector that goes to the factories should be no other than a reliable man, and the cheesemaker should also be just as reliable a man, and I think the most of cheesemakers will agree with me when I say they are.

Questions from 11 to 15 have nothing whatever to do with the Babcock tester.

16. Yes.
17. Yes; but if the milk sent by B. is skimmed to make it nearly two per cent. fat, it will make nearly as much cheese, but not of as good a quality.

Now since Mr. Fairplay has told me either to answer up or shut up, I want to tell him I'm not shuttin' up just yet. Now sir, you have been trying to scare us, but you can't do it a little bit. Thanking you Mr. Editor for space in your valuable paper, I remain

Yours truly,
C. & B. M.

PREMIER DUPUY IS OUT

The French Cabinet Tenders Its Resignation to M. Casimir-Perier.

A DEFEAT IN THE CHAMBER

A Resolution Approving the Government's Conduct in Connection With the Railway Scandals Was Rejected—The New Ministry Will Probably be Radical.

PARIS, Jan. 15. — Last evening the Chamber by a vote of 283 against 241 rejected a resolution offered by M. Trelate approving the government's conduct throughout in dealing with the railway conventions and also approving the government's dissociation from the acts of M. Barthou.

Premier Dupuy then ascended the Tribune and said: "After this vote the Chamber must understand that the Cabinet cannot continue to participate in its deliberations."

The Ministers then left the Chamber and proceeded to the palace of the Elysee and tendered their resignations to President Casimir-Perier.

President Casimir-Perier tried vainly to induce Premier Dupuy to reconsider his resignation. The Premier would not listen to any proposals looking to his retention of office and after a conference of 40 minutes his resignation was accepted. To-day Henri Brisson, President of the Chamber, and M. Chamel-Lacour, President of the Senate will be summoned to the Elysee to consult with M. Casimir-Perier.

The official journal publishes a decree charging the members of the Dupuy cabinet to carry on the routine business of their departments until their successors shall be appointed. The general opinion is that if a Radical ministry be formed M. Bourgeois, Minister of Justice, during the Panama scandal or Eugene Godefrey Cavignac will be Premier. Those near the President are making strenuous efforts to assure the choice of Bourgeois. Whether a composite or homogenous cabinet be arranged probably several members of the Dupuy ministry will remain in office.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The Daily News correspondent in Paris says: Although it was in no wise proved that those who defended the railway concessions in the Chamber were bribed, they may be convicted out of their own mouths. The levity displayed was nothing short of criminal. It is now certain that the companies had the law on their side and that Raynal's declarations were empty rhetoric. All France has known for the last eleven years that scandal was simmering neath the conventions. It was said that M. Canivet could mention the deputies, many of them still sitting, among whom £26,000 was distributed during the last session that the concessions bill was before the Chamber. Deputies notoriously poor before the guarantees were voted afterwards acted as wealthy men. M. Raynal is in a certain degree impeached by the appointment of the committee of inquiry.

The Times has this despatch from Paris: "M. Barthou, whatever his excuse, must bear a large part of the blame for the ministry's defeat. No premier ever placed a case before a chamber more frankly than did M. Dupuy. Eighty members abstained from voting, otherwise the result would have been different. A large proportion of the votes against Mr. Raynal were not condemnatory.

MOVEMENTS IN THE ORIENT.

Landing Troops at Chemulpo—Gen. Sung Asks to be Punished.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The Times correspondent in Kobe telegraphs under date of Jan. 8: It is reported that several transports have left Ujina with a portion of the third Japanese army. It is expected that the embarking will be completed on the 11th. The Emperor gave an audience to the commanding officers of the sixth. The transports will rendesvous near Chemulpo and are expected to land troops at two place on the Sung Tung coast south of Wei-Hai-Wei.

The Times correspondent in Hong Kong says that Admiral Freemantle has gone with the fleet to Japan, presumably to follow the Japanese movements.

The Central News correspondent in the Tien-Tsin says that Gen. Sung, whom the Japanese, under Gen. Nozu, drove out of Kai-Ping, has asked the Pekin government to punish him and two other high officers for losing the town. All three cases have been submitted to the board of punishment.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 15.—M. Grenard, the French explorer, who was arrested by the Chinese in Thibet last fall has arrived here. Rhines, who went to Thibet with him, was murdered near L'Hassa.

The Cheapest and Most Economical.

Important Facts Concerning Prepared Foods.

One great objection to the majority of prepared foods for infant use is their cost. Many foods have been given up because of their expensiveness. When such foods are used a burden is imposed upon many families of small means.

Our Canadian mothers should be furnished with the best and most nutritious food at a price that all can afford. Lactated Food, when prepared according to directions, is the cheapest and most economical food in the world.

While Lactated Food has the advantage over all other foods in point of economy and cheapness, it also possesses qualities of far greater importance. Lactated Food is infinitely more nutritious and strengthening than any other food now seeking recognition. Thousands of frail, weak and half-dead babies in Canada have been made strong, hearty and happy through the use of Lactated Food.

The work of life saving goes on every day to the delight of mothers and physicians, and the good news quickly spreads that Lactated Food is the best and safest for babies.

After La Grippe.

There is no remedy so prompt, and at the same time effectual and pleasant, as Milburn's Cod Liver Oil Emulsion with Wild Cherry and Hypophosphites, which is the latest and best combination of anti-consumptive remedies. Price 50c. and $1.00 per bottle.

A Hamilton Boy Missing in New York.

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Frank Flynn, 14 years old, has been missing from his home in Hamilton, Ont., for several days. It is supposed that he came to New York City in company with another boy younger than himself. A despatch was received at police headquarters from his father, who is connected with the postoffice department in Hamilton, asking that he be looked up. A general alarm was sent to the different police stations. Young Flynn, it is said, frequents the theatres.

Italians Besieged by Dervishes.

ROME, Jan. 15.—Private advices from Massawah Bay say an overwhelming force of Dervishes is besieging the Italian garrison at Kassala. The garrison, which is 1,500 strong, recently made a sortie, but the soldiers were repulsed and driven behind the fort works. General Baratieri has collected all the troops available and started from Kern to relieve the beleaguered garrison. The wires between Agordat and Kassala are cut, and the fate of a company of infantry which started a short time ago to convey a quantity of ammunition, provisions, etc., from Agordat to Kassala is unknown. The government is withholding all official news from Massowah.

He Needs Another Lesson.

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 15.—Advices received here from Cape Coast Castle, a town of Gold Colony, British West Africa, say that the trouble which has arisen between that colony and the King of Ashantee, on account of the latter refusing to refrain from human sacrifices, is approaching a crisis. The king is said to have been arrogant during a recent interview with the Governor-General, Sir William Grandford Griffiths, and the opinion of the white population of the Gold Coast is that another Ashantee expedition is inevitable.

Britain and the Mosquito Chief.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The Standard denies that Great Britain is sending an envoy to Nicaragua to demand that Chief Clarence be reinstated on the Mosquito coast. "Vice-Consul Belanger having to leave, owing to private business," it explains, "Mr. Harrison was ordered to Bluefields from Havana to protect British interests."

Miners in a Flooded Colliery.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The Diglake colliery at Hanley was suddenly flooded yesterday, cutting off the escape of 50 miners. Fifty others were taken out of the pit but the 50 unfortunates cannot be reached until the water subsides. It cannot now be learned whether any of them are alive.

A Book for Young Men.

An immeasurable amount of suffering and injury to the human race, is due to the ignorant violation of physiological laws by the youth of our land. Ruinous practices are indulged in, through ignorance of the inevitable injury to constitution and health which surely follows. By every young man, the divine injunction, "Know Thyself," should be well heeded. To assist such in acquiring a knowledge of themselves and of how to preserve health, and to shun those pernicious and most destructive practices, to which so many fall victims, as well as to re-claim and point out the means of relief and cure to any who may unwittingly have violated Nature's laws, and are already suffering the dire consequences, an association of medical gentlemen have carefully prepared a little book which is replete with useful information to every young man. It will be sent to any address, securely sealed from observation in a plain envelope, by the World's Dispensary Medical Association of 663 Main street, Buffalo, N. Y., on receipt of ten cents in stamps (for postage), if enclosed with this notice.

A Common Affliction

Permanently Cured by Taking

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

A CAB-DRIVER'S STORY.

"I was afflicted for eight years with Salt Rheum. During that time, I tried a great many medicines which were highly recommended, but none gave me relief. I was at last advised to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, by a friend who told me that I must purchase six bottles, and use them according to directions. I yielded to his persuasion, bought the six bottles, and took the contents of three of these bottles without noticing any direct benefit. Before I had finished the fourth bottle, my hands were as

as ever they were. My business, which is that of a cab-driver, requires me to be out in cold and wet weather, often without gloves, and the trouble has never returned."—THOMAS A. JOHNS, Stratford, Ont.

WHEN THE CIRCUS COMES.

The Wayback Citizen and His Family Go to That Show "of Hay Spiles Fur It."

"There's no use of talking, the great American circus still holds first place in the rural heart," said Tody Hamilton. "The wayback citizen will sacrifice a good deal to get to the county agricultural horse race, but nothing but a circus could induce him to sell his pig—the only one he had and his main dependence for the wintering over of himself and family—to procure funds for taking in the circus. That is what a citizen did once when we were showing in Connecticut. Another time, when we were in Harrisburg, a man took his cook stove, put it in his boat, and poled it three miles up the Susquehanna river to that place and sold it, so he and his family could see the show. Then there were the Pennsylvania swain and his girl who were to be married. He had money to get the license, but the circus was coming.

"'Betsy,' said he, 'if I buy that license next week we can't go to the circus.'

"'Then we'll have to put off the weddin, Billy,' said his girl. 'The circus has got to be took in!'

"There's nothing so positively valuable in the eyes of the wayback citizen as a circus ticket procured without putting out the cash for it. Once our men were decorating a rural neighborhood with our paper. It was at the height of a very bitter local political campaign. One candidate had been flaying his opponent by reviewing his record in flaming posters, which he stuck up through the district, while his opponent followed him with posters making ugly counter charges, and posted them at the side of the other's bills. This made the first candidate mad, and he stuck one of his bills on the side of a barn that commanded the public eye at a much traveled road crossing, and paid the owner of the barn $5 on his agreeing to prevent any one else from posting a bill upon it. An hour or so after this little transaction the son of a farmer who lived a mile down the road came along, and the owner of the barn told him about the good bargain he had made with the candidate.

"'Well, you've done it, you have!' exclaimed the farmer's son. 'Why, Barnum's circus fellers are puttin bills on our barn, and dad's goin to get three tickets to the show for lettin 'em!'

"'What!' yelled the farmer, and he jumped on his horse and rode three miles to the county seat to see if he couldn't back out of his bargain, but the candidate held him to it, and he returned home the most disappointed man there was in all that country."

She Was Sorry For the Other Ten.

We were camped alongside of an emigrant train in Nebraska, and just after supper a woman about 40 years of age, who was smoking a pipe, came over to our fire and sized the crowd up and said:

"I've got suthin to say. I'm a plain spoken woman. When I've got a thing on my mind, I don't beat around the bush."

We looked at her with curiosity and surprise, and she leaned against the wheel of a wagon and continued:

"I've been a widder for three years. Over thar I've got a span of mewls, a good hoss, a new wagon filled with housekeepin stuff, and I kin rake up about $90 in cash. I cum along with the party to take up a claim. I'm good tempered, healthy and can swing an ax or hold a plow with most anybody. As I said, I'm a plain spoken woman. If there's a critter among you who wants to get married, let him stand up while I take a look at him."

The 11 of us promptly stood up.

"Git into line," she continued, with a wave of her hand. "I hain't after beauty or eddecashun, but I can't take up with a fellow who'd skeer a wolf to deash."

She passed down the line and then returned half way and said to a middle aged man named Remington:

"You'll do, I reckon. There's a preacher in camp, and 'twon't take 15 minutes to settle things. All of you as want to see the marrying, come on."

We followed the couple, who were made man and wife inside of 20 minutes, and next morning as we passed the wagon on the road the woman looked out and bowed and said:

"Sorry for the other 10 of ye, but perhaps you'll meet up with another train soon and strike luck."—Louisville Commercial.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

A Wondrous Story.

Can be Vouched for by Scores of Heekston People.

Terrible Condition of Mr. John Irvine.

FRIENDS EXPECTED HIM TO DIE

Medical Men did not Understand His Case.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND MADE A PERMANENT CURE.

A wonderful story comes from Heckston, Ont. It is full of comfort, assurance and glad, welcome news for the sick and those whom physicians cannot cure.

Mr. John Irvine, of Heckston, Grenville, Co., Ont., writes as follows:

"Three years ago, I had a severe attack of la grippe, which left me in a very weak and debilitated condition. The next autumn I had another attack, which left me in a very bad state. My health was nearly wrecked, I had no strength and felt tired all the time. I was so weak that my legs would not support my body, and I have often fallen to the ground when trying to attend to my work both in the field and in my barn, and would be compelled to lie wherever I had fallen, until I could muster sufficient strength to rise.

My appetite was all gone, and when I would try to eat in order to gain strength, I would suffer untold misery for hours. It seemed to me that I was slowly starving to death.

I tried different doctors but did not derive any benefit from their treatment. My friends thought I was going to die, and I verily believe I would have died had I not tried your Paine's Celery Compound. I bought six bottles, and can conscientiously say I received more benefit from it than I ever dreamed of; it was worth more to me than one hundred dollars worth of medicine from the doctors. I began to improve in health before I had finished the first bottle, and to-day I am completely restored to health. I can do as good a day's work as I ever could, can now eat any kind of food without experiencing trouble afterwards, and can sleep as well as when I was a boy.

"I have not had to use any of the Compound for months, which convinces me that the cure is permanent. I feel it my duty to let every sufferer know what Paine's Celery Compound has done for me and it seems impossible for me to say all I should in its favour. My wife who has been a sufferer for years with chronic rheumatism, was greatly benefitted by the use of your medicine. I send you this testimony unsolicited."

The Pole's Attraction.

The pole's attraction for other objects besides the magnetic needle has up to the present time been at best imperfectly understood, owing to the incompleteness of the data furnished by those who make such matters a study. That many objects possess a well marked polarity, however, there is not the least doubt. It is a well known fact that if a bar of soft iron be suspended sufficiently long in the air, say at a height of from one to four feet above the surface, it will become magnetized, and no odds in what position it was originally placed, it will (if so balanced as to be free to move), eventually assume a north and south direction.

It is also claimed by experimenters that a living human body stretched rigidly upon a board perfectly pivoted will quickly "line up" in a north and south direction, the head pointing toward the pole. This faculty is not present in a corpse, and it occurs to the writer that if there is really anything in it, it would be a splendid "death test."

Another "polarity" proof is this: Place one end of a demagnetized bar of iron upon the ground, inclined so that the end in your hand points toward the pole star, strike it one sharp blow with a heavy hammer, and it will immediately acquire "polarity" and will be found to exhibit all the well marked qualities of a magnet.—St. Louis Republic.

Begging as a Fine Art.

M. Georges Berry, one of the municipal councilors of Paris, says that near the Ecole de Medecine he found a woman who sells sets of addresses of the charitably disposed to the begging letter impostors. She sells two sorts, the big set and the little set ("le grand jeu et le petit jeu"). The little set is 5 francs and comprises 200 addresses. For 15 francs one can have the big set of 950 addresses, sufficient, said the vendor, to enable any one starting in the business to earn his living for a year.

Ordinary street begging in Paris, it appears, is reckoned to bring in an average of at least 1 shilling an hour. Many of the beggars sleep in the neighborhood of the Jardin des Plantes. A man in that neighborhood makes a large income by affording shelter to them at the rate of 1 pence per head per night. He is enabled to do this by hiring for a small sum each, until regular tenants are obtained for them, all the empty shops and houses he can obtain. —London Tit-Bits.

Great Britain's Steam Power.

In the manufactures of Great Britain alone the power which steam exerts is estimated to be equal to the manual labor of 4,000,000,000 of men, or more than double the number of males supposed to inhabit the globe.—London Letter.

A little girl, walking with her father in Central park the other day, saw a little duck swimming near a majestic swan and exclaimed, "Oh, pa, look at that little duck with its nurse!"

The Duke of Westminster has spent over £1,000,000 in rebuilding Eaton hall, which is now considered to rival Chatsworth as England's finest house.

In the world there are 4,966 daily newspapers published, of which no fewer than 1,953, or more than a third, are issued in the United States.

A CLEVER SWINDLER.

HOW A FAMOUS AUTOGRAPH COLLECTOR WAS DUPED.

There Seemed to Be No Limit to the Imaginative Vagaries of Vrain Lucas, and None to the Blind Credulity of His Victim—Tests of Forgery.

Falsified letters and papers at various times have played a conspicuous part, if not actually in history, at least in contemporaneous annals and in certain circles of society.

Either the autographs in question have been confessed to be forgeries or discovered to be such, but at a given moment they bore a character of authenticity which in a measure exonerated their dupes. Perhaps none at least at first was so convincing as those which completely and successively deceived the very clever member of the Institute of France, M. Chasles, who was taken in by one of the most astute and unprincipled of forgers.

According to experts, shortsighted people are better qualified to detect a falsified writing than those who are gifted with a more perfect vision, but the faculty of discernment is chiefly conferred by nature and cannot be judged by ordinary and invariable rules. Some persons have a diagnosis as unerring in the matter of autographs as the cleverest physicians in cases of illness. Everything is a clew for them—the texture of the paper, the quality of the ink, the nature of the pen, whether steel or quill, and as the use of the former began at a certain date the employment of it for documents pretending to be of earlier production has frequently led to detection. The seals, the fashion in which the sheets are fashioned together, are so many guides not neglected by the expert.

There is a vast difference between forgeries proper and facsimiles; the latter are much easier to detect. An engraved, lithographed or photographed document may, even after minute examination, be taken as genuine, but there is a material test which invariably proves fatal to a fraud. When a pen is dipped into an acid and a drop allowed to fall on the tail of a letter, the ink will disappear if it is an autograph, but will not be affected if it is only an impression or a facsimile. Formerly to produce the latter the genuine document was transferred by tracing and the copy obtained was engraved on wood or stone; then lithography came into common use, and finally photography superseded it. Today the art of facsimiles is carried to a singular degree of perfection with the assistance of the heliotype and photogravure.

The ancient kings of France kept at their court secretaries whom they allowed to sign for them all brevets, circulars and official communications. Under Louis XIV the habit had become absolute rule, and the monarch signed personally only his private correspondence. One of his secretaries "of hand," as they were called, Toussaint Rose, imitated his master's writing so accurately that whole letters, purporting to be written by the king himself, could easily be taken as having been in reality penned by him.

The custom of keeping secretaires de main was continued under his successors and was also practiced by their consorts. Sometimes, however, the royal treasurer insisted upon having the genuine signature of the sovereign on orders to pay large sums, and in that case the real signature had to be appended beneath that previously signed by the secretary. This accounts for the number of documents still kept in the archives on which appear a double and apparently identical signature.

Napoleon I refused to conform to this tradition. He signed all papers and acts himself, and by a curious idiosyncrasy he lengthened or abridged his signature according to the rank of the person mentioned in the brevet or concerned in the act. It varies greatly, ranging from the whole Napoleon to Napol., Nap., Np., and even the single N. He, however, used a stamp especially for the convocations of parliament. Charles X and Louis Philippe did the same.

The institute has not forgotten the stupendous hoax of which M. Michel Chasles was the victim. It was perpetrated by a man called Vrain Lucas, who styled himself the agent of wealthy autograph collectors and gained the confidence of M. Chasles. He after awhile brought to him and tempted him with letters supposed to date from the seventeenth century, but fabricated by him with considerable skill. Encouraged by his success, he created a perfect factory of autographs, and becoming reckless had the audacity to offer for sale letters written by Mary Magdalene and Cleopatra and some from Archimedes to Nero, from Alexander to Aristotle, from Rabelais to Luther—impudent fabrications which the old savant had become too infatuated to detect.

Some of these apocryphal letters were fantastically extravagant. Vercingetorix wrote of Cæsar; Joan of Arc appealed to the Parisians; Charles V to Rabelais, praising his subtle and delicate tact and promising a thousand crowns to whoever would succeed in squaring the circle.

There seemed at one time no limit to the imaginative vagaries of Vrain Lucas, as there was none to the blind credulity of his dupe. M. Chasles, however, was not the only one who had been taken in. As long as the swindler contented himself with producing documents dating from the fifteenth, sixteenth and eighteenth centuries they were believed genuine, and a long and an earnest controversy was waged on a reputed correspondence between Pascal and Newton as to whether the former or the latter had discovered the law of universal attraction.

But this very controversy created doubts as to the authenticity of the Chasles collection. The later impositions of the forger confirmed them, and M. Chasles had the grief and shame of being openly declared a dupe and of seeing the years spent in enriching his collection wasted. The forger was arrested, tried and punished to the highest penalty of the law. M. Chasles lost the best part of his fortune, for he had spent over £8,000 in the purchase of valueless papers.—London Cor. New York Sun.

Young Women's Association.

Marriage is not a Failure

Where the wife is a good cook. A grand opportunity is offered to every lady to further her knowledge in the art of cooking by attending the experiments with Cottolene, at Mason & Co.'s stores, on Jan. 21st and 22nd, by two graduates from the Boston cooking school. All are cordially invited.

A Sad Coincidence.

Mr. David Spence, received on Friday, the sad information that his sister, Mrs. Cameron, of Walker-on-Tyne, died on December 28th from a relapse into la grippe. Her illness was of only brief duration. What makes the occasion doubly sad to Mr. Spence, is the fact that about a year ago his mother died about the same time of the month.

Obituary.

The death of Mrs. Wm. Campbell, only sister of Mr. Aaron Comstock, town, and mother of Mr. Manson Campbell, mayor of Chatham, occurred last night. A telegram was received this morning apprising Mr. Comstock of the fact.

Metropolitan School of Cookery.

The shortest or the shortening'est" way to a husband's heart is through his stomach. On this assumption the Metropolitan grocery cordially invites the ladies of the town to visit that establishment, 138 Simcoe street, on Friday and Saturday, Jan. 18th and 19th, when two expert lady cooks will give practical exposition of fine cooking by the use only of Cottolene. Every lady will find it to her advantage to witness a practical test of the perfect "shortening" qualities of Cottolene. tf

A Prompt Response.

The EXAMINER is published to be read and it is satisfactory to know that it is read widely. Yesterday's EXAMINER contained a notice, taken from a Glasgow paper sent to Mr. B. Morrow, registrar, asking information of the whereabouts of Mary Baird Doran, who was last heard from by the advertiser 19 years ago, as living in Peterborough. Before ten o'clock this morning, information was left with Mr. Morrow, that the lady sought for was Mrs. Daniel Doran, living with her husband in Ashburnham, corner of Driscoll Terrace and Douro street.

Four Generations of Royalty.

"Four Generations of the Royal House of England," is the title of a handsome pamphlet just issued by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. The cover is a work of art, and has admirably executed portraits of Queen Victoria, the Prince of Wales, Duke of York, and the infant Prince Edward of York. The Dr. Williams' Co. have a reputation for distributing the handsomest pamphlets issued by any proprietary medicine house in Canada, and the present work amply sustains this reputation. The pamphlet is well worth having, and a copy of it will be mailed free to any of our readers who will send their address (plainly written) on a post card to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Weather Prophet Vennor's Successor.

Smith, the successor of Vennor, in his planetary almanac for 1895 has made a particularly apt prognostication in regard to the weather for January. He says in reference to this month : "A cold, stormy month. Piercing winds, disastrous gales, heavy drifts, snow blockades. I have in my mind's eye as I write the Januaries of 1838 and 1863. The first gave us a mean temperature at Montreal, the lowest for over twenty years, the second came very near doing the same. The inevitable 'mild spells' or 'January thaws' will be emphasized by the disagreeable accompaniment of rain and fog." The severe cold snap, followed by the fogs and snow blockades, have already been experienced.

Own a Good Piano

It costs but a trifle more to own a good piano, like the "Rheimer," the "Morris," the "Heintzman" or the "Mendelssohn." The difference in cost is not for one day, or one month, or one year. It's worth five dollars a year for ten years to have exactly what you want. Just think it over. Have a talk with Mr. J. W. Crosby, of 342 Water street, the agent for those four first-class instruments, and close the purchase before the end of the year.

Women Superior to Men.

The Rev. C. O. Johnston in his lecture ("Seven different people of which you are one") claims that woman is as far superior to man, as man is superior to the clay from which he is made. This is why a woman is always willing to forward her knowledge in the art of cooking, and Mason & Co. have secured two ladies, who are the highest authority on cooking, to practically illustrate the use of Cottolene in the preparation of food, on 21st and 22nd of January and you are cordially invited.

Committed for Trial.

William Robertson, who was charged with having committed perjury in the Cavanagh liquor selling case on January 8th, was given a preliminary hearing this morning before the magistrate and committed for trial. Robertson, it will be remembered, swore to having sold no liquor on Sunday, December 23rd, and in the evidence which was afterwards adduced two witnesses testified to having received drinks at his hands on that day. The evidence taken this morning was simply confirmatory of that previously adduced.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

The directors were in conference for two hours last night. President Bennett, Messrs. Croly, Best, Grover, Garvin, Mason, Hall, Madill and Roger were present. Reading room literature, Provincial convention at Belleville, annual meeting, anniversary and finances were the themes for discussion. On the reading room table the Family Herald and Weekly Star, McClure's Magazine, and Christian Herald take the place of St. Nicholas, Boys' Own Paper and Youth's Companion. Several members were appointed to attend the convention, and committees have charge of preparations for the annual meeting and anniversary. Treasurer Madill made a statement of the financial situation, which was followed by a lengthy discussion on that topic. A report of the month's work showed encouraging progress. The Board is taking a deeper interest, workers are taking of their coats, friends are praying, and throughout we see a movement towards better things.

Just to jog your memory—we remind you of the "time" Friday, peanut night, and the praise service Sunday, to which all are invited.

The simple, guid auld sangs o' fame—
Sangs dear to us by birth and name.

"Welcome! O' Scottish song the star,
Litlin' at will o' love or war:
Welcome ance mair, sweet Maggie Barr."

HUNTING FOR HIS WIFE.

A Man From Campbellford Locates the Partner of His Joys in Belleville.

(Belleville Intelligencer.)

A man named Milne, whose place of residence is Campbellford, is in the city hunting up his wife, whom he claims is of a wayward disposition. It appears that the husband is about fifty years of age, while his wife is only twenty-three, and "November and May" have not drawn well together in matrimonial harness. The wife has been here about a month and has not been keeping the best of company it is asserted. Milne says this is her second outing since their marriage, and he is growing tired of making his own bed. He says it will be $40 in his pocket if he can get her back to Campbellford, and there is no doubt that when Mrs. Milne hears of this bit of good fortune she will immediately return, although the husband did not divulge the scheme whereby he is to acquire the sum mentioned.

SERIOUS RUNAWAY ACCIDENT.

Mr. Aaron Comstock Thrown from his Cutter and Badly Hurt.

Mr. Aaron Comstock met with a most severe accident this morning while out driving. His horse, it appears, was very lively, having been kept in the stable for some time, and when the runners of his cutter caught suddenly in the street car track on George street, near the corner of Charlotte, the mettlesome animal took fright and bolted. The cutter overturned as it freed itself from the track just in front of the Custom House, and Mr. Comstock and his son were both the former still hanging on to the reins and endeavouring to check the runaway horse, which had sheered over to the east side of the street near the sidewalk, and continued its wild career.

THROWN VIOLENTLY OUT,

An electric light pole stands just north of Mr. Comstock's establishment on George street, and as the runaway approached it, the son shouted to his father to let go the reins, but he probably did not hear, as Mr. Comstock was dragging in the snow beside the cutter, and the next instant, with a sickening thud, his head came in violent contact with the pole. The steed dashed on, and Mr. Comstock's inanimate form was picked up and carried into his furniture store and two physicians summoned. After during which Mr. Comstock recovered consciousness, it was ascertained that there were no limbs fractured, but that the injured man was suffering considerable pain from two bruises on his forehead just above the left temple. One of these bruises is of so serious a nature that it is feared concussion of the brain may result, and it will be several days before it can be definitely ascertained as to the extent to which he has been injured.

A HASTY EXAMINATION,

The horse after being freed from Mr. Comstock's hold on the reins, attempted to turn into the stable yard, but the turn was too short for it to make when running at so high a rate of speed and the only result of the attempt was to shatter the cutter to pieces against another pole. After proceeding some distance farther down George street the animal was turned back and caught again just at the spot of the upset.

Not Too Late Yet.

We want to say that we have still, without exception, the most elegant stock of fans, shopping bags, card cases and purses to select from. The excellence and beauty of these goods is enhanced by the fact that the prices are now very low and can suit everyone's purse. A. H. STRATTON & Co., Peterborough Bookstore. tf

GEORGE STREET SUNDAY SCHOOL.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES HELD LAST NIGHT.

Almost a Thousand Names on the Membership Roll—An Increase of Over 91 per Cent. in the Average [illegible] Last [illegible] C. O. Johnston Lectures.

The officials of the George street Methodist Sunday school board report having an enrollment of nearly a thousand members and last evening, when the anniversary services were held in the church, fully ninety-nine per cent. of the attendance in the intermediate and senior grades must have been present.

Rev. W. R. Young, B. A., the pastor, occupied the chair and made a few brief remarks, in which he expressed sincere regret at the absence of the painstaking superintendent, Mr. Jeffries, who was too ill to attend the anniversary service.

The secretary of the Sunday school, Mr. Albert Dixon, submitted the following report for the year, ending 31st December, 1894:

The school at the end of the year was composed of the following divisions. The primary depatment, under six teachers and officers, 17 junior intermediate classes, 16 senior intermediate classes, 3 bible classes, an orchestra, and the following officers: a superintendent, an assistant superintendent, a secretary, a treasurer and eight librarians.

THE LIBRARY

in connection with the school is now being replenished and improved and it is expected will soon be adequate to the requirements of the school, as $150.00 was recently appropriated for supplies for the library.

The past year has been a successful and prosperous one in many respects. The attendance increased so rapidly that it became necessary to provide more space. The room at the west end of the school room occupied by the librarians and secretary were torn away, and these offices were crowded into a small room near the rear of the building. Seventy-five new chairs were purchased and there was difficulty even then in finding accommodation for those in attendance.

A new [illegible] organ

A BIBLE CLASS

for the training of teachers and senior scholars was established and has proved to be a great success, and it is hoped that the efficiency of our splendid staff of teachers will be increased.

Another new departure has also been decided on, viz., the establishment of a

HOME CLASS DEPARTMENT

with a view to an increase in the study of the Holy Scripture by those members of the congregation who do not, or cannot, conveniently attend the Sunday school, and with the hope that a greater interest would be taken by parents in the school, and in a thorough home study of the lessons by the children. Arrangements have been completed for the formation of the new class, and it is now being organized, and we confidently look for the hearty support and co-operation of a very large number of the congregation, who are not now connected with the school, in this new department.

We are very happy to say that our school has not suffered from the death of a single member during the past year, a record which is remarkable for so large a school.

Mr. S. A. Armstrong, assistant superintendent, was called upon in the absence of Mr. Jeffries to make some explanations regarding the proposed establishment of "home classes," mentioned in the secretary's report. There were many, Mr. Armstrong stated, who were unable to attend Sunday school regularly, and it was to meet such cases that the scheme of home classes had been devised. The idea was to induce them to become members of this department o. Sunday school work, and to issue to each the regular Sunday school lesson papers. With these a card would also be given in which spaces would be left for marks to be entered, signifying that the member had or had not been able to devote half an hour during the week to the study of the lesson. This was all that was required of the membership and the object was to make the Sunday school influence more widespread, and create even more interest in its work amongst the congregation. The new idea, Mr. Armstrong stated, would be put into operation at once, under the superintendency of Mr. T. W. Robinson.

The following report concerning the finances of the Sunday school was then submitted:

The entertainment was brought to a close by the pronunciation of the benediction by Rev. Mr. Young.

INSPECTOR GARVIN.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

DEAR SIR,—"They say there is a tide in the affairs of men, which taken at the flood, leads on to fortune," and from newspaper reports it does appear that the Inspector is in the swim at the present time. He has crossed swords with the veteran statesmen, Dalton McCarthy, and has come out second best, which is doing pretty well for the first round. There never was a better chance of high promotion in this country for an active, well-educated young man than at present. For instance, the Minister of Education, may his shadow increase, can't last forever, and after him it will take just such a man as Inspector Garvin to fill his place. Then there's the premiership of the Dominion, which needs a young man to guide the helm, and why not let the inspector make a bold strike for that big game. Some timid people might say that Inspector Garvin would have no chance in the struggle for such high honours, but in political revolutions some wonderful things happen. For instance, history tells us that in Oliver Cromwell's time lucky shoemakers and draymen found themselves in the House of Lords. And taking the inspector, even at his own modest appraisement, he will compare favourably with the lucky aspirants in Cromwell's time. From these considerations it will be unkind of the Board to keep Inspector Garvin any longer, or to deprive him of the honours which fortune seems to throw in his way. But there is another very pressing reason why the Inspector should have a free foot. In every well managed municipality, economy is the burning question of the hour, and why should the Board of Education waste $1,200 of the people's money for an inspector and thereby increase the burden of taxation—a burden which is already too heavy to bear. Taking a wide view of the situation we think it would meet with the approval of the citizens here if the trustees would call a special meeting at once and give Inspector Garvin an opportunity of retiring, in order that he may tackle those very distinguished political honours which seem to lie in his way.

BUTTER AND CHEESE MARKET, IN ENGLAND.

The following clipping from a recent English paper will afford interest to Canadian dairymen, and should stir them up in the great competition with other countries which find in England the most attractive market in the world at the present time:

DAIRY PRODUCE FROM THE ANTIPODES.

New Zealand dairy produce in British markets, as shown in an excellent diagram just issued as a supplement by our esteemed contemporary. The Grocer and Oil-Trade Review, is gradually but surely increasing in favour and importance—so much so, indeed, that unless our English farmers and dairymen bestir themselves the flourishing colony in question will make serious inroads upon their trade. The British Isles, with their teeming, prosperous, hard-working population of forty millions, is the best market in the world for those who have access to it, and we open our doors to all comers—to alien paupers and to food supplies and imports of other kinds. New Zealand, like most of our over-sea possessions, is fully alive to this; hence her trade with the "old country" is increasing, if not by leaps and bounds, at least in a very marked manner. In 1884 she sent us 517 tons of cheese and 888 tons of butter, which figures last year had increased to—cheese, 2,470 tons; butter 3,633 tons. It is to be regretted, we think, that our home dairymen are not equal to the task of meeting every British demand for butter and cheese. But if we are to have imports in this line of goods, then the more we get from our kith and kin in New Zealand and our other colonies the better. Here are some interesting figures taken from the diagram referred to. Last year our imports of butter from New South Wales reached 1,471 tons; from Canada, 2,105; Holland, 7,976; Sweden, 12,878; Denmark, 48,907; France, 21,212; Germany, 7,574; Victoria, 7,064; United States, 2,021; South Australia, 234; and other countries, 6,637 tons. As for cheese, Canada, who supplies us with as much as most of the other nations combined, sent over 52,806 tons; the United States, 31,520; Holland, 13,619; France, 2,818; Victoria, 520; and other countries, 1,109 tons. From this, one must perceive that, whatever be the chief cause of British agricultural depression we have no reason to complain of any want of demand for good cheap food stuffs, neither can we lament the fewness of the markets open to us. It is strange if England—the great central market, which attracts the produce of farmers who occupy the most distant parts of the earth—does not offer the home producer prices that will remunerate him for his labour. The very mention of such a state of things seems absurd. And yet the New Zealand dairyman is strengthening his position in the British market.—Shrewsbury Chronicle, Oct. 19.

NEWSPAPERS' LIABILITY.

New Clause in the Criminal Code as to Advertisements.

Under the new criminal code which came into force on Jan 1., any newspaper that prints an advertisement for the return of articles supposed to be stolen, with the words "no questions asked," or anything to indicate that the party returning it will not be prosecuted, is liable to an action for $250 for each publication. Any person can bring the action and recover the amount. One Montreal paper, according to the Journal of Commerce, has already an action on hand for $250. Another, which inadvertently printed such an advertisement four times without being aware of its liability, immediately got a lawyer to enter a friendly suit for $1,000 in order to head off a probable bona fide prosecutor. The statute also imposes the same penalty for promising pawnbrokers, through the newspapers, to return money advanced on any article that may have been stolen and pawned.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease),
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want.
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then went home, but stop, I miss,
They gave us every one, a kiss,
And said, "be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home,
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid,
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money,
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

ALL OVER THE GLOBE—Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are known. Pills of American manufacture easily lead. Why? Because they're smaller; the vegetable extracts are concentrated. There are many liver pills, yet there must be a reason why Dr. Pierce's Pellets give the best satisfaction. Probably because they're sugar-coated, small as grains of mustard seed, therefore, easily swallowed. Most of all—they act in a natural way, and are effective in result. Then, too, after they're taken they can't be felt—so different from the old-fashioned pills, with their griping and violence.

For indigestion, pain in stomach, costiveness and habitual constipation, as well as sick and bilious headaches, these "Pellets" bring such a lasting cure, that they can be guaranteed. Your money is returned, if they do not give satisfaction.

To every sufferer from Catarrh, no matter how bad the case or of how long standing, the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy say this: "If we can't cure it, perfectly and permanently, we'll pay you $500 in cash." Sold by all druggists.

SHY LITTLE MABEL.

When scarce could I in truth believe her,
She sighed: "Alack!
Please take it back
For stolen goods I can't receive sir."
Mabel was shy.

Worthy of Serious Thought.

There is the ever-present demand for good roads. A hundred million dollars could be spent within a year by towns, counties, states and the nation in road making, which would repay the cost by the added value given to land, especially farm land. Of course it will be said that many of the unemployed are not physically able to do hard manual work on roads and aqueducts; but if only half of the unemployed were earning wages the problem of caring for the suffering would be just so much reduced. An impulse would be given to all industries which would afford employment, perhaps for all, for at least part time.—National Baptist.

Chicken Surgery in Florida.

A marauding hawk made an attack on a Lakeland (Fla.) fowl yard, and succeeded in ripping a chicken's craw entirely from his body, so that it dragged on the ground; and also cutting a hole through the craw, so that it would not hold food. A day or two afterward the owner caught it and one of the ladies of the family performed a surgical operation. The craw was sewed up, the chicken was soaked in hot water until the wounded and dry skin was made elastic again, the craw was restored to its place, the wound sewed up, and now that is about the healthiest chicken in the yard.

The Stars and Our Sun.

Referring to some of the more valuable conclusions arrived at by recent astronomical research, an English writer argues in favor of the theory that the stars, or many of them, are very similar to our own sun, this being clearly shown from three considerations. One of these is their great intrinsic brilliancy compared with their small apparent diameter, a diameter so minute that the highest powers of the largest telescope fail to show them as anything but mere points of light without measurable magnitude; second, their vast distance from the earth, a distance so great that the diameter of the earth's orbit dwindles almost to a point in comparison, this also accounting satisfactorily for the first fact, and, third, the spectroscope—that unerring instrument of research in this field—shows that the light emitted by many of them is very similar to that radiated by the sun. Thus their chemical and physical constitution appears analogous to that of our central luminary. Though the spectra of the red stars differ much from the solar spectrum, these objects are comparatively rare, forming exceptions to the general rule.

Identified.

Mrs. Dr. Cool paid a visit to Chicago recently and while out shopping and sight seeing spent all her ready money. On her way back to her hotel, therefore, she stopped at a bank to have a check cashed. As usual, the clerk told her that she would have to be identified. As Dr. Cool was a stranger in a strange land, she found herself in a dilemma. She presented her card, but that would not do, when a brilliant idea struck her.

Flashing a beam from the diamond set in her front teeth upon the clerk, she said, "Please look in my mouth."

"Another one gone crazy," thought the clerk, but he complied with the request, looked astonished, smiled and paid the check, for on the crown in the dentist's mouth the clerk read the inscription, "L. Cool, 1893." Identity was thus established beyond a question, and Mrs. Cool went on her way rejoicing.—San Francisco News-Letter.

Sand In a Cyclone.

On the plateaus of our southwestern border states the most furious whirlwinds often fail to raise the sand more than a few feet above the level of the plain till suddenly, perhaps an hour after the crisis of the storm, great columns rise to a height of 100 yards, and swaying from side to side walks about like tipsy giants.—Exchange.

ALMOST BURIED ALIVE.

Saved From a Horrible Fate by a Sister's Untiring Devotion.

Edward Templeton of Saugus Center, Mass., was once a subject of suspended animation for several days. When asked to relate his experience while under this psychic spell, he relapsed into silence and seemed averse to talking of himself. His sister, Miss Annie Templeton, however, was more communicative and freely talked on the matter.

"It happened," said she, "during the summer of 1887. We were then living at Malden, Mass., but subsequently removed to Saugus Center. My brother had been taken seriously ill of a malignant fever. For several weeks his life was despaired of, but medical attendance and loving friends succeeded eventually in breaking the fever, although he was left in a weak and emaciated condition. He rapidly grew stronger, however, and gained well nigh former weight and strength. He was able to do light work in his carpenter shop, and we were congratulating ourselves on his ultimate recovery.

"One afternoon in September he came home earlier than usual from his work and complained of strange pains in his head and body. He went immediately to bed, but while we were preparing some simple home remedies he fainted away. We sent hurriedly for our physician, Dr. Atwater, who exhausted all his efforts and medical skill to restore Edward to consciousness.

"Edward's body became as rigid as death itself, his flesh was colorless, and the following day Dr. Atwater informed us that he was dead. We refused to believe this, however, and sent for Dr. B. M. Richardson of Boston to come in consultation with Dr. Atwater. He came, and after a careful diagnosis and a consultation, which consumed an entire afternoon, he coincided with Dr. Atwater that Edward was dead.

"Well, we prepared the body for burial and were to have held the funeral services the following Sunday. Somehow I couldn't convince myself that Edward was dead and kept a silent watch by his side. The Saturday before the date set for his funeral I was watching him intently, when I imagined I perceived one of his eyelids twitch. I called my mother, who was in an adjoining room, and she took up the watch, while I again summoned Dr. Atwater, informing him of what I had observed. Long and patiently he labored and was finally rewarded with signs of returning life.

"The same evening Edward was fully restored to consciousness. He then told us that all the while we believed him dead he was in full possession of his mental faculties, but could not move a muscle of his body. He could tell you better himself of the awful horror which seized him when he heard the physicians pronounce him dead and could hear and see our preparations for his burial."

Mr. Templeton was again importuned to relate his awful experience, but simply remarked: "It is better to drop the subject altogether. I have no desire to revive the horror of those few days and simply thank God that I am here today instead of receiving the fate which so many afflicted with suspended animation have received."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Sunlight and Shadow.

"Do not sympathize with me," laughed Miss Benson, one of the instructors in the Western Pennsylvania Institution For the Blind. "Remember, I do not know fully what I miss. I have always been sightless and never think of my deficiency as a calamity. Of course there are times when I long for sight with a longing that is almost a pain, and yet, withal, I am such a coward that I will not submit to an operation that might possibly benefit one of my eyes at least. I say possibly, but I really feel there is no hope.

"The possibility is simply based on the fact that with my left eye I can distinguish colors—that is, if a brilliant tint is held before that eye I know that there is a difference from the monotonous shadow. The same if I go into the sunlight—I know that there is illumination. I was born with sight, but when a little child I was stricken with measles, which disease left me blind. I have grown up in darkness and am so accustomed to it that I seldom think of blindness as an infirmity.

"Were I incapable of taking care of myself probably I would feel more keenly the loss of sight. I have always been of a light hearted disposition, prone to look on the bright side of things, if you will excuse the pun, and really do enjoy my mission in life. My eyes do not pain me or burn, as do those of so many of the blind. Indeed one reason why I am afraid of undertaking the operation for the left eye, which some of my friends so much advise, is the fear lest some injury be done that will mean future misery. If I undergo any operation, it will only be to please my friends. I have no hope of sight myself this side of the grave."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

A Mixture In the Manuals.

Manuals of correspondence or "complete letter writers" are dangerous things to depend upon. Some time ago a young man who wished to win the hand of a young lady mused long over the proper and most effective way of addressing her. At last he found in a manual somewhat wide circulation, a form for a letter which pleased him much. The letter bore the title "From a young gentleman to a young lady, making an ardent but dignified offer of marriage."

He copied out the letter, signed it with his name and sent it to the lady.

After some days of anxious waiting he received a letter. He tore it open and read: "Turn over the leaf in your manual. You will find my answer at the top of the opposite page."

He seized his manual, and in the place indicated found a brief and sharply formal letter entitled "From a young lady to a gentleman peremptorily refusing an offer of marriage."

She was the possessor of a copy of the same manual.—London Tit-Bits.

Looking Glasses In Coffins.

One of the ancient customs connected with Swedish funerals was to place a small looking glass in the coffin of an unmarried female, so that when the last trump sounds she might be able to arrange her tresses. It was the practice for Scandinavian maidens to wear their hair flowing loosely, while the matrons wore it bound about the head and generally covered with some form of cap. Hence the unmarried woman was imagined as awakening at the judgment day with more untidy locks than her wedded sisters and more in need of a glass.—Westminster Review.

PHYSICIANS FAILED

BUT B.B.B. CURED

DEAR SIRS—After having used Burdock Blood Bitters for Scrofula in the blood, I feel it my duty to make known the results. I was treated by a skilled physician but he failed to cure me. I had three running Sores on my neck which could not be healed until I tried B. B. B., which healed them completely, leaving the skin and flesh sound and whole. As long as I live I shall speak of the virtues of B.B.B., and I feel grateful to Providence that such a medicine is provided for sufferers.

A SCALY ERUPTION

UNENDURABLE ITCHING

Suffered Three Years—Now Perfectly Cured by B. B. B.

GENTLEMEN—I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for Skin Diseases, from which I have been a sufferer for three years. I have used six bottles and am now entirely cured. I tried other remedies, such as Donald Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura Remedies, but all to no good. I consulted one year with the best physicians in the land; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but could not remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard dry scales. The itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured; and I owe it all to J. B. B.

Young pigs will soon learn to eat mill-feed slop.

The sheep that is always thriving produces an even-fibred and strong wool.

When eating good grass or its equivalent, young animals will get all the fat-producing elements they need.

It is not difficult to keep sheep and hens from being sick, but it is not easy to cure them when they are sick. It is then easier and often cheaper to kill them than to try to cure them.

When a Horse is Unsound.

It has been determined by an English judge, as a definition of the meaning of "unsoundness," that, "if at the time of sale the horse has any disease which either does diminish the natural usefulness of the animal so as to make him less capable of work of any kind, or which, in its ordinary progress, will diminish the natural usefulness of the animal, or if the horse has, either from disease or accident, undergone any alteration of structure that either actually does at the time, or in its ordinary effects will, diminish the natural usefulness of the horse, such horse is unsound."

Liquid Oxygen for Sterilizing Milk.

Describing his experiments on milk, in his work "La Pression Barometrique," the late Paul Bert, who lost his life while on a political mission in Tonquiu, announced that compressed oxygen prevented the coagulation, that is to say, the souring of milk, because it destroyed the germs or vibrions which produced the fermentation. M. Villon has now put this discovery into practice, and employs liquefied oxygen for the purpose of sterilizing milk. We are told that the liquid oxygen is supplied for the purpose in tubes as an ordinary commercial article.

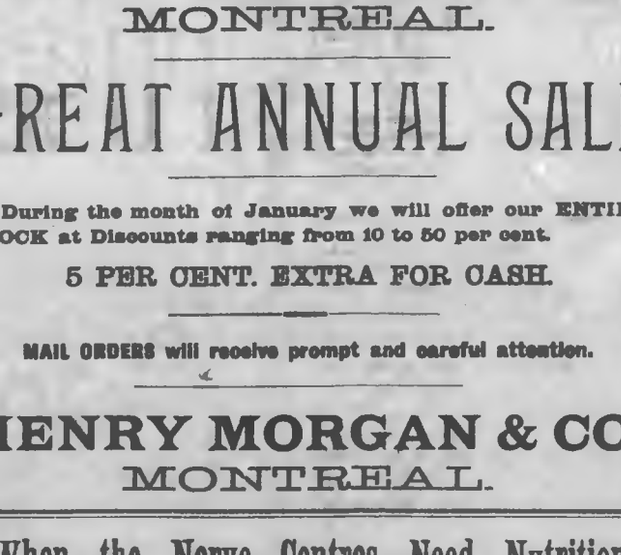
When the Nerve Centres Need Nutrition.

A Wonderful Recovery, Illustrating the Quick Response of a Depleted Nerve System to a Treatment Which Replenishes Exhausted Nerve Forces.



MR. FRANK BAUER, BERLIN, ONT.

Perhaps you know him? In Waterloo he is known as one of the most popular and successful business men of that enterprising town. As managing executor of the Kunts estate, he is at the head of a vast business, representing an investment of many thousands of dollars, and known to many people throughout the Province. Solid financially, Mr. Frank Bauer also has the good fortune of enjoying solid good health, and if appearances indicate anything, it is safe to predict that there's a full half century of active life still ahead for him. But it's only a few months since, while nursed as an invalid at the Mt. Clemens sanitary resort, when his friends in Waterloo were dismayed with a report that he was at the point of death.

"There's no telling where I would have been had I kept on the old treatment," said Mr. Bater, with a merry laugh, the other day, while recounting his experiences as a very sick man. "Mt. Clemens," he continued, "was the last resort in my case. For months previous I had been suffering indescribable tortures. I began with a loss of appetite and sleepless nights. Then, as the trouble kept growing, I was getting weaker, and began losing flesh and strength rapidly. My stomach refused to retain food of any kind. During all this time I was under medical treatment, and took everything prescribed, but without relief. Just about when my condition seemed most hopeless, I heard of a wonderful cure effected in a case somewhat similar to mine, by the Great South American Nervine Tonic, and I finally tried that. On the first day of its use I began to feel that it was doing what no other medicine had done. The first dose relieved the distress completely. Before night I actually felt hungry and ate with an appetite such as I had not known for months. I began to pick up in strength with surprising rapidity, slept well nights, and before I knew it I was eating three square meals regularly every day, with as much relish as ever. I have no hesitation whatever in saying that the South American Nervine Tonic cured me when all other remedies failed. I have recovered my old weight—over 200 pounds—and never felt better in my life."

Mr. Frank Bauer's experience is that of all others who have used the South American Nervine Tonic. Its instantaneous action in relieving distress and pain is due to the direct effect of this great remedy upon the nerve centres, whose fagged vitality is energized instantly by the very first dose. It is a great, a wondrous cure for all nervous diseases, as well as indigestion and dyspepsia. It goes to the real source of trouble direct, and the sick always feel its marvellous sustaining and restorative power at once, on the very first day of its use.

1895

On looking over last year's business we find that we have everything to be thankful for, as it was one of the best years that, notwithstanding the hard times, we ever had, and that is saying a great deal.

Now, as this is the season for making good resolutions, we have resolved to surpass, if possible, last year's trade. To attain this end we have duplicated all our fall Cloths and added all the latest winter patterns we could find. We buy for spot cash and can afford to sell on a small margin. Give us a call and we will do the rest.

Our Gent's Furnishings and Underclothing Departments are both well stocked. We have a few choice Overcoats still left which we will set off cheap.

LONDON'S DOG THIEVES.

The Headquarters at Which These Gentry Nightly Congregate.

Once in my life I consorted with professional dog thieves. I wish it to be distinctly understood that I never stole a dog, although I am free to confess that I have been tempted, and I have told the story of how on one occasion a dog stole me. But to return to my thieves. In the northern part of London, which you will reach by passing through Fetter and Leather lanes, continuing past the quaint Italian quarter, with its cathedral, the interior of which is beautiful, although the building is but crude externally, you will find yourself in close proximity to the rendezvous of the London dog thieves.

Near by is a place called Hockings-in-the-Hole. It is well named, being situated in a decided hollow in one of the worst quarters of the great city. Those in search of a fine, creepy feeling should visit it after nightfall as I did. I then found myself in the bar of a small, old style public house of very doubtful character, or perhaps I shall express myself better if I say that its character was not at all doubtful. I was eyed curiously by the loungers as I took some refreshment at the bar. I then quietly gave the countersign in accordance with the instructions with which I had armed myself. The powerful and heavy necked publican changed his demeanor at once and ushered me through a side door and up a creaky, tortuous and dark staircase. At this period this creepy feeling was at its best—or worst. A door opened, and we entered a long room, the ceiling of which was very low. Yellow gas jets flickered here and there.

A curious sight met my gaze. The room was full of men, three-fourths of whom held dogs of every degree. The men were mostly of an uncouth description, clothed in great part in corduroy, surmounted with the conventional cap that are worn by the London costermonger. They resembled in general appearance the touts and welshers of the English race tracks. Most of them smoked short pipes. The dogs yelled and whined amid the general hum of conversation that came through the amber haze. My appearance excited no comment, and for this reason: It is quite a common thing for "swells with sporting blood in them" to drop in upon these gentry and pick up a dog at a nominal price. The morality of the proceeding is very questionable, but the fact remains.

Gin, the favorite drink with the low class in London, was brought in a jug and served in small wine glasses. I accepted the hospitality of my friends, the thieves, as I saw at once that it was expected. Then I conversed with various members of the party concerning the points of the canines in their possession. They took my presence there as a matter of course and talked with perfect candor. Had I been able to forget the company I was in I might truthfully record that I spent a pleasant half hour at Hockings-in-the-Hole.

These men are not all thieves. Some of them are dog brokers, who sell dogs for others or pick up a bargain to sell again. None of them openly admit that they are professional thieves, although of course it is understood perfectly. They "find" lost dogs, or else they are commissioned to sell a dog that belongs to a "friend." Not a small part of their income is obtained through receiving rewards offered for lost dogs which they have been fortunate enough to "find." During my visit to them their demeanor was perfect. They might have been an assemblage of farmers at a cattle show.—Donahoe's Magazine.

Mr. and Mrs. Dickens.

My first view of Dickens was at an evening party, when he was standing in the midst of a circle of ladies, relieving himself in very energetic terms of his impressions de voyage. His hair was long and light and looked as if it had not recovered from the tangle incident to days of seasick misery. He had brought with him two velvet waistcoats for full dress—one of vivid green, the other of brilliant crimson. These were further ornamented by a profusion of gold watch chain. In 1841 a black satin waistcoat was almost the national costume of gentlemen in America, so that Mr. Dickens' vivid tints were very conspicuous.

Mrs. Dickens was a small woman of about 30. Her position as the lion's mate seemed embarrassing to her. She was not accustomed to dwell in "the fierce light" that shone upon every deed and word of the popular idol, and she evidently found satisfaction in quiet talks with me concerning the best shops in Oxford street and other such homely and familiar matters. There was no sign then of any disagreement or incompatibility between husband and wife. On the whole, I should have said that in those days Mrs. Dickens showed signs of having been born and bred her husband's social superior. After their return to England I saw several amusing and familiar letters written by Dickens to his Boston friends—letters in which repeated and affectionate allusions were made to "Kate"—and it struck me with the greatest surprise when several years afterward I learned that conjugal difficulties in the Dickens household had led to estrangement and separation.—Lippincott's.

The Sect of "Nonsleepers."

During that epoch of extraordinary religious enthusiasm, 412 to 430 A. D., one Alexandrianius, a native of Asia Minor, founded a peculiar sect known as "Nonsleepers." They lived in communities of 70 (the custom having some reference to the 70 apostles), and whenever a young Nonsleeper put in his appearance the oldest man or woman in the camp would leave to join some other community that had recently lost one of its members by death or otherwise. In this way their communities never exceeded the allotment of 70 and was rarely short a member more than a few weeks or months at a time.

They were called "Nonsleepers" from the fact that at least seven in each community were always to be found wide awake and constantly chanting the "sleep song." In summer these chanters were divided into three relays of seven each and during the winter months into four or five, according to the length of the nights. This peculiar sect of nonsleeping, singing fanatics were finally exterminated by the Armenian barbarians under the leadership of Omeer Dightee.—St. Louis Republic.

The Union Pacific Now Needs Conciliating

CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—Only one road now stands in the way of the formation of a trans-continental passenger association. This is the Union Pacific, which objects to the agreement between the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific on the question of California business. Under it the Southern Pacific is allowed 40 per cent. of the business the other lines to divide the rest between them. Although Central Traffic Association lines decided not to cut rates at the last meeting of the executive committee the statement of last week's eastern business clearly shows this is being done.

Germany Wants More Cruisers.

BERLIN, Jan. 15.—In the Reichstag yesterday Dr. Hasse (National Liberal) called attention to the scant protection afforded to Germans abroad and quoted a statement made by Chancellor Caprivi on the occasion of the Chilian disturbance. The German fleet was not sufficiently large to protect Germans everywhere. Baron Marschall von Bieberstein, Foreign Minister, said the fleet of cruisers ought to be increased and the German flag should be seen more widely, so as to strengthen the national feeling in Germans abroad. This would be more effective than protection.

The Christmas Hobby Horse.

Among the diversions of the season in the olden time was the hobby horse. It is said to have originated in Cornwall, where, according to tradition, the Danes once effected a landing at a small cove on the coast, but seeing at a distance a number of women dressed in their red Cornish cloaks they mistook them for soldiers, and fleeing to their ships put to sea. The boys and young men thereupon disported themselves by prancing around in imitation of a horse, with poles between their legs. In Kent the festivities of Christmas commenced, with a curious procession called hodening of young people, who had with them the stuffed head of a dead horse, which they fixed on a pole covered with a horse cloth. One of them got under this cloth and walked about, pulling a string attached to the lower jaw of the skeleton, thus making a loud snapping noise, which was accompanied by the others, who were grotesquely attired, with hand bells in their hands. They went from house to house and were given beer, cake or money.

To Control the Piston.

Engineers should apply the steam engine indicator at least once a week, and some rig for reducing the motion of the piston should be available which will admit of easy attachment without stopping the engine. A unique arrangement of this kind has been introduced which consists of a light brass wheel which has two diameters, the larger diameter being of such dimensions that the circumference will be one half the stroke of the engine and the small er having a circumference one-half the length of the diagram.

A cord wound two or three times around the large wheel is attached to the cross head, and a cord from the wheel of smaller diameter leads to the barrel of the indicator when in operation or is hooked to an idler cord which passes over a leading pulley to a weight while the indicator is at rest. A clock spring attached to the side of the wheel causes the return motion after the cord has been drawn out by the moving crosshead. This rig as a permanent attachment to the front head of an engine has proved satisfactory.—Power.

Couldn't Fool the Elephant.

An elephant was sent to Nagerboil for the purpose of piling timber by the Dewan, who requested the wife of a missionary there to be good enough to see the animal fed, and thus prevent its keeper from abstracting its food. It was therefore brought to the house for this purpose, and at first all went on correctly, but after a time it was suspected that the amount of rice was getting smaller and smaller, so one day the keeper was remonstrated with, and of course protested against the imputation of having taken it, adding in true native phraseology, "Madam, do you think I could rob my child?" The elephant looked on most conscientiously, and at this stage of the proceedings quietly threw his trunk around his keeper and untied his bulky waistcloth, when the missing rice fell to the ground.—Exchange.

MYSTIC MESSENGERS.

A SINGULAR APPARITION THAT MATERIALIZED IN THE FLESH.

The Intangible Vision Drew Daughter and Mother to the Brink of Death, Whence Its Human Prototype Repelled Them—A Mother In a Vision.

The events here related were told to me by persons intimately connected with them—persons who in the ordinary affairs of life would be believed.

Miss A. was a strong, healthy English girl, exceedingly sensible, and one who was a scoffer at ghosts. Like the other woman, she did not believe in ghosts, but unlike her she was not afraid of them.

She was invited to stay at a friend's house in Ireland, and this house had a haunted room. Miss A. asked permission to sleep in the haunted room, and the permission was reluctantly granted, for those in the house thoroughly believed in the ghost.

It was nearly midnight when Miss A. went to the haunted room, which was situated in the front part of the house overlooking the carriage drive that led to the entrance. She looked around the room, which was furnished in a modern manner, and saw nothing to disquiet her, but as she was preparing for bed she heard a carriage come up the drive and apparently stop at the front door. Astonished that any visitors should arrive so late, she parted the curtains and looked out. It was a lovely moonlight night, the moon shining full on the front of the place, making the drive as light almost as day.

She saw standing opposite the door two black horses and a closed hearse. The driver had got down from his seat and was standing by the horses, looking up at her window, with his hat in his hand. His face was bloodless, nothing but skin and bone—the face of one almost but not quite a skeleton.

It says much for Miss A.'s nerves that she did not call out nor faint. More than that, she staid until morning in the room, although she did not sleep, and next day told them that she had seen nothing of a ghostly nature in the haunted chamber, attributing her paleness to lack of sleep. She also insisted on remaining in the room the second night in spite of the protestations of her hostess, who firmly believed she had seen something.

Next night exactly the same thing happened, but this time her nerves gave way, and she ran into the hall and fainted.

The result of this was a long illness, and whether Miss A. saw a ghost or not there is no doubt about the fact that her health has been permanently impaired by her two nights' stay in the house in Ireland. Last winter she was so ill that her mother took her to the Riviera in the hope that change of scene would obliterate the memory of the man with the hearse. Apparently the stay at the south of France had that result, for Miss A. became almost her old self again. On the way home they stopped at a large hotel. The girl became suddenly worse, and on being questioned told her mother with a shudder that she had met the hearse driver in the corridors of the hotel.

The mother was shocked to find the old delusion, as she called it, returning. She finally succeeded in getting the girl to believe it was only fancy, but when they returned to the hotel that afternoon and were about to enter the elevator to go to their room the girl drew back and said in a horrified whisper to her mother that the elevator man was the driver of the hearse. The mother saw that the man was a most cadaverous looking individual, and he, seeing them hesitate, said:

"Are you going up, ladies?"

Two other persons were in the elevator waiting.

"No," said Mrs. A., "we'll walk up stairs."

The man closed the lift door and went up. At the fourth story the rope broke, the elevator fell and killed both the visitors and the attendant.

Those who told me the story look upon this as a hint that we should not neglect warnings from the other world, and they think that what Miss A. saw in Ireland was the means of saving her life, quite ignoring the fact that if she had not seen the vision or whatever it was her health would not have broken down, she would not have been staying at that hotel and would therefore not have been in danger of going on that elevator.

The events next to be related happened in London only a few weeks ago. Mrs. X. had been ill for some time, but was not supposed to be in immediate danger. She died suddenly and unexpectedly one night about 8 o'clock. So unanticipated was this event that her husband was from home at the time. He was sent for and arrived about midnight.

There were two children, little girls aged 8 and 12. Their governess asked Mr. X. whether he or she would tell them of the sad event of the night before. The father said he would break the news to them, and he said furthermore that he did not wish them to see the body, but preferred they should retain the recollection they had of their mother from seeing her while she was alive.

Mr. X. went up stairs to the room of his little girls and found them awake. He told them as well as he could that their mother had had to go away, and that they would not be able to see her for a long time.

"Yes," said the elder girl, "we know."

"How did you know?" asked the father in surprise. "Who told you?"

"Mother came in last night and woke us up and said that she was going away. She kissed us and told us to be good little girls."

The younger girl corroborated this, and the children, it seemed, had gone to sleep again quite contented. They had been talking over their mother's visit when the father entered the room in the morning.

As far as Mr. X. could learn, no one had told the children of their mother's death.—Detroit Free Press.

About the Koran.

The Koran, the sacred book of the Mohammedans (usually spoken of by oriental scholars as the "Alcoran"), was composed by Mohammed (Mahomet) and is said to have originally been written upon the bleached shoulder blades of sheep. The first edition contains 6,000 verses; the second and fifth, 6,214; the third, 6,219; the fourth, 6,236; the sixth, 6,226, and the seventh or "Vulgate" edition, 6,225. The words and letters are the same in all editions—viz, 77,639 words and 323,015 letters. The George Sale (common English translation) is divided into 114 chapters.—St. Louis Republic.

Charity.

Let your charity begin at home, but do not let it stop there. Do good to your family and connections and, if you please, to your party, but after this look abroad. Look at the universal church, and forgetting its divisions be a catholic Christian. Look at your country and be a patriot. Look at the nations of the earth and be a philanthropist.—Henry Martyn.

JILTED, SHE BECAME INSANE.

A Montreal Woman, Whom Her Brother-in-Law Promised to Marry, But Didn't

MONTREAL, Jan. 15. — A sensational breach of promise suit for 10,000 has been taken out against H. Poirier, a well-known merchant tailor of this city. These proceedings have been instituted at the insurance of Miss Georgina Lalonde, of St. Polycarpe.

This young lady has been an inmate of Longue Pointe Asylum since November 28th last, and it is alleged that her condition was due to the conduct of the merchant tailor, who was her brother-in-law. Several years ago Mr. Poirier married the eldest sister of Miss Lalonde. They were children of a highly respected farmer of St. Polycarpe. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Poirier, and when the mother died they became frequent visitors at the home of their grandparents. Miss Lalonde asked to be allowed to keep them always under her care, to which Mr. Poirier readily consented.

Letters soon began to pass between the father in the city and the young sister-in-law in the country, and they became engaged to be married in September last. One of Miss Lalonde's friends was a certain Miss Taylor and she was a frequent visitor at the Poirier homestead. There she met Poirier. The result of this acquaintance was that Poirier went to St. Polycarpe in the beginning of last November and announced to Miss Lalonde that he had decided not to marry, although the wedding had been fixed for the following Tuesday and everything had been arranged. Poirier then took his children and Miss Lalonde became greatly troubled at the turn affairs had taken. As the day on which Miss Lalonde was to be united to Poirier approached that young lady's mind became deranged and she soon became very violent. She has since been confined in the asylum.

The Case Against Young McLeod.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 15.—Two more arrests are likely to follow that of Herbert T. McLeod, the Canadian engineer, who was taken into custody Saturday afternoon on a charge of illegally obtaining naturalization papers. These are witnesses who testified to the length of residence of McLeod. Both these witnesses, Dr. J. G. Harper and Miss Jean N. Lawrence, are former Canadians and neither are supposed to be residents of the United States. The legality of the naturalization papers issued on the testimony of a woman is questioned. McLeod's case came before the United States Commissioner to day and after one witness had testified the case was put over till to-morrow to permit McLeod to prepare his defence. It is understood that his father telegraphed to him from Canada this morning advising him to retain counsel and fight the case.

Gatling Gun Howard Married.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 15.—Ex-Lieut. Arthur L. Howard, formerly of this city, but now of Montreal, better known as "Gatling Gun Howard," was married on Thursday evening last, in this city, to a Mrs. Margaret Douglas, of Brownsburg, Que. Mr. Howard has had a great deal of newspaper notoriety during the past ten or twelve years, his greatest degree, perhaps, being his command of a battery of gatlings in an engagement in the North west territories during the famous Riel rebellion. A few months ago a statement was printed far and wide that the lieutenant had been lost in a storm off the coast of Labrador

Household Notes.

Rub spoons with salt to remove egg stains.

Pails and tubs saturated with glycerine will not shrink.

The latest clothes prop for the back yard is a slender iron pole.

Tight collars are apt to produce a permanent swelling of the throat.

After knives have been cleaned they may be brilliantly polished with charcoal powder.

Dishcloths should be washed out in hot, clean soapsuds daily and boiled in soda once a week.

Upon curtains the principal part of the embroidery is now placed upon the turnover portion of the top. This has much the effect of a valance when well overlaid.

A rug made of old ingrain carpet, cut bias and sewed on to ticking or denim with carpet thread, is said to last ten years and grow softer and prettier every year. The preferred width of the bias strips is one inch, and they should be sewed—by the middle—on the foundation, at spaces a quarter of an inch apart.

For a dry shampoo the hair should be loosened, then every inch of the scalp should be gently rubbed until all the dust and dandruff are loosened. The hair should be parted in different parts of the head and brushed with a very stiff little brush until the scalp is clean, and the hair also. Then it should be rubbed with alcohol or some hair tonic and the snarls gently combed and brushed out.

For shampooing get five cents' worth of powdered Castile soap, the same quantity of borax; add to them a tablespoonful of alcohol, the beaten yolk of an egg and a pint of hot water. Put this in a bottle and cork. There is sufficient for three or four shampoos, as it only takes a small quantity applied to the scalp to cause a good lather, which must, however, be carefully rinsed out with several basins of warm water.

What Benzoin Will Do.

Benzoin is one of the best friends of woman. A few drops of it in a basin of water gives a pleasant odor to the face and hands. It helps to whiten the skin and to tighten it. Tan and wrinkles are both removed by its action, and, combined with glycerine or alcohol, it is an excellent lotion.

CASIMIR-PERIER IS OUT

The President of the French Republic Resigns His Office.

M. BRISSON MAY SUCCEED HIM

Casimir-Perier Considers the Vote in the Chamber Against the Government As a Reflection on Himself—All Sides, He Says, Showed Him Ill-Will.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—M. Casimir-Perier has resigned the office of President of France. He announced his resignation last evening at a specially summoned meeting of the Cabinet, having previously informed M. Challemel-Lacour, the President of the Senate, of his inability to solve the problem presented by the resignation of Premier Dupuy.

The news of the President's resignation spread like wild fire throughout Paris and was received everywhere with consternation amounting almost to paralysis. In the newspaper offices the first report was considered absurd, but was soon confirmed. Almost simultaneously crowds began gathering in front of the newspaper offices and in the public places, inquiring for further particulars and discussing the situation.

The following official communication dictated or written by M. Casimir-Perier was made public: The President of the Republic has taken a resolution to resign his official functions. The proceedings and vote in the Chamber of Deputies are in his eyes but secondary incidents of the struggle that has begun against parliamentary regime and public liberty. He had hoped that the President of the Republic, being unprovided with means of action, would remain outside the lines of party struggles, and that the political confidences of all parties would give him the necessary force and authority. He had hoped that those, who in spite of himself had placed him in a position where he cannot defend himself, would undertake the defence of the first magistrate of the state. He requested the ministers to withdraw their resignations, provisionally, in order to assure the regular transmission of his power to his successor.

Monsieur Charles Dupuy, President of the Council, has informed the President of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies of the decision of the President of the Republic and they are going to convoke Parliament with urgency.

M. Challemel-Lacour, President of the Senate, allowed himself to be interviewed notwithstanding the great pressure of business suddenly thrust upon him by the President's resignation. He said that it had not yet been decided whether to convoke the national assembly to elect a successor to M. Casimir-Perier for the 18th or 19th instant. He will probably announce the date on the meeting of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies.

M. CASIMIR-PERIER.

M. Casimir-Perier's reference in his public communication to his inability to defend himself in the presidency may, according to trustworthy information obtained, be explained by the fact that he was a sub-secretary of state in the Cabinet which concluded the railway conventions in 1883. He regards the adverse vote on the subject in the Chamber on Monday as a personal reflection upon him, although he had no vote in the Cabinet when the conventions were made. Whether this be the true reason of his resignation or not, it proves to what lengths he is prepared to go against the Socialists, whom he regards as aiming at a revolution.

Extremist newspaper men received the news with jubilation. The editors of La Petit Republique were wildly elated, but consider it certain that M. Casimir-Perier would be re-elected if he would be a candidate again. Otherwise there is a consensus of opinion that Henri Brisson is certain to be elected to the presidency of the republic.

M. Spuller, who was largely influential in inducing the President to form a ministry in 1893, visited him yesterday and endeavored to induce him to recall his resignation. M. Dupuy and M. Spuller obtained a promise from the President that he would withhold his resignation until 10.30 p. m. When they were leaving the President's palace the two met the President's mother in the corridor and begged her to entreat her son to remain. The mother promised to exercise all her influence, and is reported that she had an affecting interview with her son. Nevertheless, at nine o'clock, M. Casimir-Perier wrote briefly to M. Dupuy saying that his decision was irrevocable and requesting him to communicate a statement to the press. The streets were somewhat crowded, but until the semi-official note announcing the President's resignation was displayed in the windows of the newspaper offices, the reports about the President's resignation were generally not credited. The truth made a disagreeable impression.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The Paris correspondent of the Daily News says: "M. Casimir-Perier has submitted to the ministry a sketch of his message to be read to the Chambers. He refers to the patriotic spirit in which he assumed the post of honor and danger to which he was called without having sought it. 'I had the single-minded wish,' he says, 'to be not a man of party, but a man of all France; to defend order, seeking inspiration from the example of the lamented Carnot. But to my deep sorrow I found that I pleased no party. I was attacked on every side. The attacks varied in form but all showed a personal ill-will."

The chief candidate for the presidency will be Henri Brisson. The National Assembly may desire to re-elect M. Casimir-Perier, but he will probably refuse to come forward. M. Waldeck Rousseau is also mentioned, but he was an important member of the Cabinet in 1883. M. Dupuy wished M. Challemel-Lacour to stand, but the latter dislikes the idea. Public order does not seem to be threatened. There is nothing absolutely dangerous in the situation, but France needs quiet.

Casimir-Perier's Career.

Jean Pierre Paul Casimir Perier was born at Paris on November 8, 1847. His grandfather was Prime Minister of France in 1831, and his father, who died in 1876, was Minister of the Interior under Thiers and afterwards a senator. M. Casimir-Perier greatly distinguished himself during the siege of Paris as a captain of the "Mobiles de L'Aube" and was made a chevalier of the Legion d'Honneur in 1871 for his services.

He was elected a Deputy in 1874 and succeeded to the office of Under Secretary for Public Instruction, and for war in 1877 and 1883. He was Vice President of the Chamber of Deputies from 1885 to 1893, when he was elected its President, and after the general elections he was again chosen to that position. He became Premier December 5, 1893, but his term of office was cut short by an adverse vote in May, 1894, and he became again President of the Chamber, only to relinquish the office for the Presidency of the Republic to which he was called by a large majority on the assassination of President Carnot. He became President of the Republic on June 27, 1894. Politically he has identified himself with the moderate Republican party.

FROM THE SEAT OF WAR

Frederick Villiers Arrives on the Empress of Japan—An Interesting Interview.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Jan. 16.—The steamer Empress of Japan arrived last evening from the Orient. Frederick Villiers is among the passengers. When interviewed by a representative of the United Press Mr. Villiers said in his opinion there would not be much more serious fighting this winter; possibly Wei-Hai-Wei would be invaded and likely captured. He said the Japanese would not attempt to reach Pekin during the winter, which has been a very severe one, especially on the Liau Tung peninsula. He is very emphatic in his denunciation of the Japanese atrocities at Port Arthur.

Mr. Villiers says there are rumors that a sharp conflict prevails in the Chinese government between the peace and war parties. On the side of peace are the Empress Dowager, Prince Kung and the Viceroy Li. On the side of war the Emperor, Gen. Von Hanneken and Gen. Liu. To Hanneken the continuance of the war means fortune.

Since the sixth of July, 1894, Japan has had constantly at sea a navy of 29 ships of war and 20 torpedo boats. Not a ship has been lost and not one seriously disabled. It is a remarkably creditable record. The headquarters of the first Japanese army in Antung have now been brought into telegraphic communication with the headquarters of the second army in Chin Chow. The distance is 180 miles.

There is little doubt that the division of troops now awaiting embarkation at Hiroshima will be carried to the province of Shang Tung for the purpose of attacking Wei-Hai-Wei. The division consists of men hitherto stationed at Sendai in the North of Japan. They are consequently inured to the severest form of winter. With them will be associated a division of the second army now in Liau Tung peninsula. If the loss of Wei-Hai-Wei finds China still insensible the Japanese will be prepared to deliver a crushing blow when the ice breaks up in March.

A FATAL EXPLOSION.

Powder Cars Blow Up During a Fire, Killing Several Bystanders.

BUTTE, Mont., Jan. 16.—During a fire at the Montana Central railway yards last evening several cars of powder caught fire and exploded with tremendous force, killing a number of firemen and spectators and maiming many others. Debris from cars and adjoining buildings was scattered high in the air for half a mile away, the flying articles striking people in the crowd. Every ambulance vehicle and doctor in town was soon on the scene carrying off the dead and wounded. The ground was strewn like a field of battle with the injured and dead.

Union Bank Directors Meet.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Jan. 16.—The shareholders of the suspended Union Bank held a meeting last evening which was stormy throughout though the complete report of the directors of the bank will not be presented until to-day. The total amount of discounts, over drafts, etc., is $6,941,000, of which about $2,000,000 is credited to firms of which the directors of the bank were members. Though great looseness is shown in the matter of overdrafts, the debtors of the bank are better off as far as their assets are concerned than those of the Commercial Bank. The directors were roundly denounced at the meeting last evening for their loose management. To-day a final decision will be arrived at regarding the future of the bank.

HE HAS NOT THE POWER

Sir Oliver Cannot Pass a Prohibitory Law for the Province.

SUPREME COURT'S DECISION

In Regard to Local Option the Court Decides That the Ontario Law is Constitutional—The Questions Submitted by the Dominion Government.

OTTAWA, Jan. 16.—The Supreme Court met yesterday to deliver judgments. Sir Henry Strong, Chief Justice, being indisposed, was not present. Justice Fournier was also absent on sick leave. There were present Justices Taschereau, Gwynne, Sedgwick and King.

In the case of Huson v. Smith, Norwich, known as the local option case, the appeal of Huson against the by-law of the township, which he wanted quashed, was dismissed with costs, Chief Justice Strong, Taschereau and Fournier deciding for dismissal, while Justices Sedgwick and Gwynne dissented. The decision, therefore, is that the by-law is legal, and that the Provincial Act of Ontario, which authorized that by-law, is constitutional. In other words, Sir Oliver Mowat has the right to pass a local option law.

The next case was the reference submitted by the Dominion Government in regard to the whole prohibition case arising out of this case, so as to decide whether the power to prohibit lay with the Dominion or the provinces. The result is that by a majority the court has decided that the province has not the right to prohibit, which it will be seen conflicts with the judgment in the first case. The judges who heard this case were Chief Justice Strong and Justices Fournier, Gwynne and Sedgwick. The questions submitted by the Dominion and the answers to them are as follows:

1. Has a Provincial Legislature jurisdiction to prohibit the sale within the Province of spirituous, fermented or other intoxicating liquors? Answer—No. Chief Justice Strong and Justice Fournier dissenting.

2. Has the Legislature such jurisdiction regarding such portions of the Province as to which the Canada Temperance Act is not in operation?

No. Chief Justice Strong and Fournier dissenting.

3. Has a Provincial Legislature jurisdiction to prohibit the sale of such liquors within the Province?

No. Unanimous.

4. Has a Provincial Legislature jurisdiction to prohibit the importation of such liquors into the Province?

No. Unanimous.

5. If a Provincial Legislature has not jurisdiction to prohibit the sales of such liquors, irrespective of quantity, has such Legislature jurisdiction to prohibit the sale by retail, according to the definition of a sale by retail, either in statutes in force in the Province at the time of Confederation or any other definition thereof?

No. Chief Justice and Fournier dissenting; they said yes.

6. If a Provincial Legislature has a limited jurisdiction only as regards the prohibition of sales, has the Legislature jurisdiction to prohibit sales subject to the limits provided by the several sub-sections of the 99th section of "the Canada Temperance Act" or any other revised statutes of Canada, Chap. 106, section 99? No—Chief Justice and Fournier dissenting. They said, yes.

7. Had the Ontario Legislature jurisdiction to enact the 18th section of the Act passed by the Legislature of the Province in the 53rd year of Her Majesty's reign. "An Act to improve the Liquor Houses Acts," as said section is explained by the Act passed by the said Legislature, in the 54th year of Her Majesty's reign entitled "An Act Respecting Local Opinion in the Matter of Liquor Selling (this refers to the case of Huson vs. Smith, Norwich).

No—Chief Justice and Fournier decided yes.

Justice Sedgwick said that had he known what the judgment of the court would have been in case of Huson vs. Norwich he might have, out of respect of the court, come to a different conclusion.

Election Preparations.

Dr. Montague has arranged here for the preparation and printing of campaign literature for the general election. Ministers and Conservative members, however, still insist that there will be a session before the general election. The idea is said to be a session will be called, say on February 14th, or a week later, and that the general elections will come off in June. A circular has been sent to all revising barristers asking them to rush forward their lists before February 28th, the final day arranged by statute for closing them. This is said to be done with the view to getting them well printed before the work of the session comes on, when the bureau will have enough to do attending to Parliament.

Lawyer Elliott Tried for Stealing.

BRANTFORD, Jan. 16.—At the police court the case of Charles Elliott, lawyer, was brought up for hearing. Elliott elected to be tried by the police magistrate. The first charge was that of stealing the vault key. He pleaded not guilty. To the charge of entering the counting house of Hardy, Wilkes & Hardy with intent to commit a felony, he pleaded not guilty. After hearing testimony of some six or seven witnesses the magistrate sent the case to a higher court. To the charge of stealing law books he pleaded guilty and this was also sent to a higher court. Elliott was liberated on bail, himself for $1,000, his father $500 and his brother $500.

A Toronto Alderman Committed.

TORONTO, Jan. 16. — Ex-Ald. John Maloney was before the Magistrate again yesterday. Robert Grant, book-keeper for Maloney, testified as to the date of the different checks given and received by Maloney from June to September, 1893. Mr. Hodgins, for the defence, argued that no prima facie case had been made out, but His Worship held differently and remarked that even if he found inconsistencies in the evidence he would not dismiss, as he considered it a proper case to go to a jury. Defendant Maloney was formally committed for trial, the old bail being accepted.

BE READY FOR THE GENERAL ELECTIONS.

There are indications that the Government is preparing to bring on the general election contest before the time fixed by law. Without arguing the point as to whether the Government is justifiable in going contrary to the spirit and letter of the charter of Confederation by dissolving Parliament before its legal term shall have expired, it will be well for Liberals of this riding as well as elsewhere to make full preparations for meeting the occasion whenever it may arise. Nothing should be left undone, to rob the springing of the elections, sooner or later, of the nature of a surprise. The Liberals can only expect fair treatment from the Government except on the principle of the proverb, that all's fair in war and politics. The Government exists (theoritically) for the benefit of the country and the government in using the resources of the country for any other purpose than its benefit, say to entrench themselves in power, is betraying its trust. We cannot expect from the present government fair treatment in the matter of the elections. We must expect that every artifice possible will be used to place the Liberal party at a disadvantage in respect of the date of the elections. And the only way in which the Liberals can checkmate their opponents is by being prepared for the elections whenever they may come, be it sooner or later. Get ready for the fray.

NORWOOD NEWS NOTES.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Council meeting next Monday at 10 a.m.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Cumming are visiting friends in Toronto.

Officers of Norwood Lodge, I.O.O.F., were installed on Tuesday evening.

Bills are out for the carnival to be held in the skating rink here next Friday evening. Handsome prizes are offered for the best fancy and comic costumes and also for races.

Last week Mrs. Thos. Buck while stepping from the door of her residence on Victoria street, slipped from the icy door step and fell, fracturing several ribs, and suffering other serious injuries. We are glad to state that Mrs. Buck is recovering, though somewhat slowly.

The annual meeting of the members and adherents of the Presbyterian church was held on Monday evening last. After the necessary business was transacted, the assembly partook of refreshments, which were supplied by the ladies, and a social evening was enjoyed by all.

The growth of the High School during the past year has been phenomenal. There has been an exceptional increase this term. There have been 37 added since Christmas, including 16 from other counties, 13 from the county of Peterborough, and 8 from the school section. This brings the attendance up to 180—larger than many of the Collegiate Institutes. At this date in 1884 there were 127 pupils on the roll; now there are 181, or an increase of 55 in one year. This increase is in itself the attendance of an ordinary high school with two masters. A large number of these from other counties pass by their own schools and come to Norwood, where they can get a thorough training in a reasonable time for the Honour and Pass Matriculation examinations, teachers, non-professional certificates and commercial certificates. A fifth teacher will be needed immediately. Additional room is also necessary.

SCHOOL BOARD MEETING.

The first meeting of the school board for 1895, was held Monday evening. The following members were present,—Messrs. J. Breckenridge, J. Raddon, P. W. Reynolds, W. Webster, W. H. Stephenson, Drs. Ford and Pettigrew. On motion, Dr. Ford took the chair. The minutes of last meeting were read and signed. The following reply from the Minister of Education to a communication of the board re the changing of the boundaries of a union school section, was read:

Secretary of School Board, Norwood:

DEAR SIR,—I am instructed by the Minister of Education to state in my reply to your letter of 20th inst., that except as therein mentioned no change can be made for five years after the award of the arbitrators has gone into effect. Section 37 (II), Public School Act.

Your obedient servant,
JOHN MILLER,
Deputy Minister.

The exception mentioned is that a union school section may have its boundaries extended by the municipalities concerned. No lots can be removed from this section for about four years.

The secretary read a communication from F. E. Perney, asking for the use of a room in the school building for the holding of a night school. Moved by Mr. Raddon, seconded by Mr. Breckenridge, that Mr. Perney's communication be received and that he be allowed the use of a room, matters of expense to be afterwards arranged.—Carried.

The next communication was from J. Davidson, M.A., Principal of the High School. Owing to the growth of the school he asked for additional accommodation. Twelve additional desks and seats were ordered for the assembly room. The chairman suggested that a delegation be sent to the county council to ask that the High School district be enlarged. All the members present were in favour of the idea and decided to hold a special meeting next Monday evening to fully discuss the matter. Mr. Fraser reported that he had had the wall cleaned according to instructions from the Board at a cost of $2.50. The report was received and adopted.

An account of 65c, for coal oil, was ordered to be paid.

The secretary reported that Mr. Perney had paid $8.10 on the geographical chart, making a total of $37.

The Board adjourned to meet next Monday evening.

How Can I get rid [illegible] of my tormenting corns; get rid of them without pain; get rid of them quickly and effectually, without possibility of return? The answer is, use Putnam's Painless Corn and Wart Cure, the great corn cure. Always sure, safe, and painless. Putnam's Extractor. Use it and no other—frauds are in the market. Can't run the risk of ruining your feet with caustic applications.

After La Grippe.

After La Grippe obstinate coughs, lung trouble, etc., frequently follow. There is no remedy so prompt, and at the same time effectual and pleasant, as Milburn's Cod Liver Oil Emulsion with Wild Cherry and Hypophosphites, which is the latest and best combination of anti-consumptive remedies. Price 50c. and $1.00 per bottle.

THE SOURCE OF DISEASE.

How it Can be Warded Off and Robust Health Maintained—A Young Lady Tells the Secret of Her Renewed Health.

It is almost appalling to think of the number of women and young girls of one's acquaintance who are pale, often emaciated, subjects to fits of depression, headache and violent palpitation of the heart on slight exertion. Physicians tell us that these troubles are due to anæmia, or in other words poverty of the blood, and we can well believe it, for it is beyond doubt that impure or watery blood is the origin of nearly every disease that afflicts mankind, and if the cause is removed—that is if the blood is strengthened and enriched—the disease soon vanishes, and joyous spirits, bright eyes and rosy cheeks soon follow. Among all the discoveries of medical science for building up and restoring the blood, and driving out or warding off disease there is no other takes such high rank as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They cure when all other medicines fail, and thousands of grateful people in all parts of the country have testified in the strongest terms as to the benefit they have derived from the use of Pink Pills. Among these grateful, truthful words of praise may be placed the following letter from Miss Cynthia Holmes of Holmesville, N. S.:—

"Some three years ago I began to have poor health. My system was badly run down, I was weak, lost my appetite, had no ambition, and was unable to do any work about the house. Failing to receive help from doctors, I tried a number of advertised remedies, but without avail, and I almost despaired of being cured. Having read so much concerning Pink Pills, I decided to give them a thorough trial, and can truthfully say that their action in my case has been wonderful. After the use of five boxes I found myself enjoying once more the best of health and that my cure is permanent. I have since recommended Pink Pills to a number in this vicinity, and know that they have proved a blessing in each case, and I trust they will long enjoy the prosperity they deserve.

INHUMAN WORK

Is the Horrible Process of Docking a Horse's Tail.

One of the worst of all the imported manias of fashion is the docking of carriage horses, now practised in defiance of the law. It is a relic of the days when bull baiting and dog fighting were national sports in England, and appeared to have reached its climax in this country about 40 years ago. Even then it was only practised upon horses of the scanty, spear-tailed variety, but now nothing is sacred.

Less than a month ago the best horse shown under saddle at the Madison square horse show was ordered out of the ring because the owner was too humane to deprive the brute of nature's adornment and almost the sole protection against the legion of pestiferous insects which madden horses in this climate. If the Humane Society would encourage such horse owners, a medal should be voted both man and horse.

In England the mosquito is unknown, and flies and gnats abound in very sparing quantities. On that account the practice is cruel only at the time of the amputation. The fadders who insist that their horses shall be mutilated and exposed say the operation is painless and that the horse will not notice it enough to stop feeding. Unprincipled farriers can be found who support them in this ridiculous claim.

In contradiction of this is the whole anatomical structure of the tail. Its angle of use is universal, as it is swung to any part of the body at the will of the horse. In order to do this, a thousand little muscles and sinews are required. The energy which calls these into play is represented by a multitude of nerve fibers, while in the center of the tail is the spinal cord which is the center of the nervous system.

The purchaser of a carriage horse in New York will not buy a docked horse except it be a high-bred hackney. He is afraid the horse will be second-hand. A fine, green horse, fresh from the pastures of the country, is brought to his stables, and a farrier is summoned, who brings a charcoal furnace, sharp knives, ligatures and a sort of plumbing kit with him. The horse is slung from the floor in a canvas hammock, so that his feet are lifted from the floor, and a fence is crowded close to his heels, to prevent him from hurting the gentleman who is about to make him "in fashion." Then the long hair of the tail is turned back so as to bare the place where the cut is to be made, and a cord is tied about the tail. With a keen knife the farrier then hews and whittles until the flesh and nerves are cut down to the bone. Then the point of the knife is driven through the joint, severing the spinal cord, and while the horse gives an agonizing scream the tail drops into the farrier's hand.

The worst is not over.

Now the charcoal furnace is brought forward, and red-hot irons are taken from the glowing coals to be jabbed into the raw stump to stop the flow of blood. Before proceeding at all the doors are closed and the windows darkened, that no one may witness the crime against nature, and bring both operator and procurer within the grasp of the law.

Less than 200 years ago the ears of horses were also cropped, and this disfigurement was as much admired as the mutilation at the opposite end is at the present time. Whether this mania will spread so as to include other species beside the horse and dog remains to be seen. With the horse it is an act of unwarranted cruelty.—Detroit Evening News.

The Gallant Lilliputians.

In the middle ages the court jesters were dwarfs, but history relates that, though they made others laugh they generally were cloudy-minded little men with sore hearts who could vie with giants in grumbling. It is not so with the merry Lilliputians, the petit actors, who please their audiences and yet retain enough exuberance of spirits to disport themselves occasionally for their own small personal enjoyment.

For instance, those tiny gentlemen, Ebert and Rink, perpetrated a refreshing joke recently. They were both in a Broadway car, occupying adjoining seats. Soon the car filled. A lady got in and had to stand. Seeing this, Ebert jumped up and politely offered his place. But the lady was a fine—a very fine woman. She looked at the homœphatic quantum of seating accommodation which had amply sufficed for the gentleman of reduced inches, crimsoned and remained standing. Instantly alive to the situation of Affairs, Zink, too, sprang up with:

"Ach! Madame taghque (take) boose our zeats!"

The laughter delayed the car some seconds and the conductor was fined. He says, though, that the joke was worth the money!—Truth.

Gartens and Husbands.

A picturesque ceremony takes place every year in Haute-Vienne. All the girls in the place on the day of St. Entrope file in procession to St. Junieules Cathedral to the cross which is erected near the church to the saint. Each girl hangs her left garter on the cross and prays that she may have a good husband and then gives way to the next girl. The cross is so smothered in garters of different colors that at a short distance it looks as though it was covered with flowers.—Philadelphia Times.

Rebellion Was Spoken Of.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—A special to a morning paper from Des Moines, Iowa, says: J. R. Sovereign was seen yesterday in reference to the statement attributed to him by the Leader, of Des Moines, on Sunday, to the effect that he and E. V. Debs had considered a plot to lead a rebellion against the government at the time of the big railroad strike in Chicago last summer. He denied that he had said that the scheme was considered. Several such plots were submitted, but not considered.

A Bold Attempt at Escape.

BUFFALO, Jan. 16.—George Stone and Robert Cameron, two Canadian pickpockets, who were arrested last Sunday, made an attempt to escape from the "freezer" at police headquarters by using a table knife converted into a saw to cut away the iron bars of the window of the main room. Their attempt was discovered just in time to prevent the plan being carried into effect.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Jan. 16, 1895.

Grand Trunk returns of traffic for week ending January 12, shows a decrease of $22,385 for the week this year.

Street sales here were 200 bushels white wheat at 62 1-2 to 63 1-2c.; red quoted at 61 1-2 to 62c.; 2,000 bushels barley at 45 to 48c.; 800 bushels oats at 33 1-2 to 34 1-2c. White wheat is selling at 58c. west and from 58 to 58 1-2 on the Northern.

In Buffalo malsters are looking after barley and took 5,000 bushels. Canada at 63c. and 13,000 western at 61 1-2c.

Wheat declined half cent in Chicago on bearish crop reports. Corn was 1-8 to 1-4c. lower at the close and oats unchanged.

At East Buffalo in sheep and lambs 10 cars fresh receipts mostly Canadas and 42 cars held over constituted the offerings. The market was somewhat weaker. On the whole good prices were realized, the bulk of the Canadas sold $5.15 to $5.20, quoted up to $5.30 for extra and down to $4.85 for fair.

There was no change on Wall street in the stock market general situation. Prices began with considerable show of strength, the Granger stocks leading the movement. The industrials were generally lower; Chicago Gas becoming obvious and embarrassing deadlock in which the new controlling interest finds itself.

The strength in the London stock market continues. There was a marked improvement in Americans, notably in Louisville and Illinois Central. The continent is buying a little.

A Book for Young Men.

An immeasurable amount of suffering and injury to the human race, is due to the ignorant violation of physiological laws by the youth of our land. Ruinous practices are indulged in, through ignorance of the inevitable injury to constitution and health which surely follows. By every young man, the divine injunction, "Know Thyself," should be well heeded. To assist such in acquiring a knowledge of themselves and of how to preserve health, and to shun those pernicious and most destructive practices, to which so many fall victims, as well as to re-claim and point out the means of relief and cure to any who may unwittingly have violated Nature's laws, and are already suffering the dire consequences, an association of medical gentlemen have carefully prepared a little book which is replete with useful information to every young man. It will be sent to any address, securely sealed from observation in a plain envelope, by the World's Dispensary Medical Association of 663 Main street, Buffalo, N. Y., on receipt of ten cents in stamps (for postage), if enclosed with this notice.

Consumption—Low Condition

Wonderful Results From Taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Miss Hannah Wyatt
Toronto, Ont.

"Four years ago while in the old country (England), my daughter Hannah was sent away from the hospitals in a very low condition with consumption of the lungs and bowels, and weak action of the heart. The trip across the water to this country seemed to make her feel better for a while. Then she began to get worse, and for 14 weeks she was unable to get off the bed. She grew worse for five months and lost the use of her limbs and lower part of body, and if she sat up in bed had to be propped up with pillows. Physicians

Said She Was Past All Help

and wanted me to send her to the 'Home for Incurables.' But I said as long as I could hold my hand up she should not go. We then began to give her Hood's Sarsaparilla. She is getting strong, walks around, is out doors every day; has no trouble with her throat and no cough, and her heart seems to be all right again. She has a first class appetite. We regard her cure as nothing short of a miracle." W. WYATT, 29 Marion Street, Parkdale, Toronto, Ontario.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

A Common Affliction

Permanently Cured by Taking

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

A CAB-DRIVER'S STORY.

"I was afflicted for eight years with Salt Rheum. During that time, I tried a great many medicines which were highly recommended, but none gave me relief. I was at last advised to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, by a friend who told me that I must purchase six bottles, and use them according to directions. I yielded to his persuasion, bought the six bottles, and took the contents of three of these bottles without noticing any direct benefit. Before I had finished the fourth bottle, my hands were as

Free from Eruptions

as ever they were. My business, which is that of a cab-driver, requires me to be out in cold and wet weather, often without gloves, and the trouble has never returned."—THOMAS A. JOHNS, Stratford, Ont.

BROOKLYN'S BIG STRIKE

Cars Moved Under the Protection of the Police Officers.

STICKS AND STONES FLYING

Mounted Police Forced to Charge the Mob —A Crowd Takes Control of a Mail Car—The Railway Companies to be Compelled to Run on Schedule Time.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 16.—The strikers caused some trouble in the 29th Ward yesterday by placing timber and stones on the tracks near the Flatbush depot. The policemen who guarded a mail car attempted to remove the obstructions. The strikers did not interfere with the officers, aside from jeering and shooting at them. One man was arrested and held for trial.

At 12 o'clock Peter Butcher, a motorman, was arrested on a charge of obstructing a car. He threw a heavy iron girder in front of United States mail-car No. 1,108, the Flatbush avenue line. The car was stopped, but went on to the Flatbush later. He was held in $500 bail for examination.

The first car on the Fifth avenue line was started from Twenty-fourth street station at 1.40 o'clock p.m. At that time the avenue was packed with people as far north as Ninth street. As soon as the car left the station it was attacked by the mob who threw sticks and stones but were soon dispersed by the police. The next car was started at 2 o'clock. That was attacked also. One woman standing beside the car station threw a stone through the car and was arrested. The car proceeded on its way a short distance and then came to a standstill and sticks, stones and bits of iron began to fly. Inspector Mackellar ordered the mounted police to charge on the crowd and they promptly gave way before the horses.

A third car and a fourth were started out later, each accompanied by a squad of mounted police. There was no further molestation. Shortly before 3 o'clock 1,000 persons, under the lead of strikers, overpowered the police who had manned a mail car of the Atlantic Avenue Co. at Union street and Fifth avenue. The police had to apply for help and four loads of policemen were sent to their rescue. About two o'clock three thousand persons crowded the Prospect Park Plaza and declared no car should pass. A mail car came along and the strikers stopped it. Policeman Hotchkins, who was on the car, sent to headquarters for help. A squad of policemen were sent to the spot to disperse the strikers.

The presidents of all the roads affected by the strike have notified Mayor Schieren that they will have the cars running on schedule time to-day.

"I have the right," the Mayor said, "to compel them to run their cars or to forfeit their charters. I have taken no steps in either direction as yet, for the reason that nobody has complained to me because the cars are not running. If the cars are not running by Wednesday I may take action whether complaint is made to me or not." President Morton, of the Atlantic avenue line, refused to appear before the Board of Arbitration or to notice the board at all and a subpœna was issued for his appearance.

Pierce's Big Swindling.

YANKTON, S. D., Jan. 16.—Information received here from London regarding J. T. M. Pierce's swindling transactions show that the aggregate British losses may reach $8,000,000. A letter from a London firm of solicitors says that not one-quarter of the transactions have yet come to light. It is asserted that the receipts by Pierce at his London office were limited only by his ability to issue bonds and mortgages and papers. He often exceeded $100,000 a week and it is alleged in London that he received no less than $500,000 during his last week. About $1,404,000 of forged bonds, mortgages and tax deeds are now in possession of agents of creditors of Pierce here. They have been sent here as claims against the estate of Pierce, but this estate will not sell for enough to pay the attorney's fees.

The sugar-coating, which makes Ayer's Pills so easy to take, dissolves immediately on reaching the stomach, and so permits the full strength and benefit of the medicine to be promptly communicated. Ask your druggist for Ayer's Almanac, just out.

It has been suggested that the contrast between the black and white of a printed page would be less trying to the eye if the latter could simultaneously rest on a bit of color. Accordingly, a Boston publisher is getting out books that have margins of azure, yellow or green. No reports have been received as to the success of the experiment among disinterested purchasers.

Saints cut only a small figure in the geographical names of New England. They are abundant upon the maps of most of the southern states saves Virginia and the Carolinas and they are to be found scattered over the rest of the country in three or four different languages. It might be a little harder to find in any calander the St. Jones of Delaware, the name of a small creek familiar to the river and harbor bills if not to commerce.

A New York collector owns a Louis XIV. watch that is said to have once belonged to the Empress Josephine. While she lived at Malmaison she presented it to Abbe Blanchard, and he in turn gave it to his niece, Marie Fectig, of Strassburg. This watch, which was purchased at the Fectig sale in Strassburg in 1879, occupies the center of a black enamel and gold cross and is decorated with the figure of a kneeling angel and heads of saints.

A New York electrotyping firm is said to have hit upon the idea of electrotyping articles of apparel which it is desired to preserve as mementoes. A baby's first shoes, for example, may be preserved indefinitely in metal. We might give other instances, but, although we should be sorry to discourage the firm, so far as our experience goes mementoes do not generally take the form of wearing apparel. Such things as Tommy's first trousers and Johnny's first "top" hat would scarcely make good souvenirs.

More women than men voted at the recent election in Colorado, and they cast a larger percentage of their registered vote than the men. They led the men in Denver by 8,000 votes, besides inducing 6,000 men to vote who usually neglect this duty. Only a few of the 70,000 women who voted took part in street processions. A large majority voted the republican ticket and a few supported the prohibitionists. Throughout the whole state not the slightest affront was offered a woman voter. Such are the silent facts of the first general election in Colorado in which women had an equal share.

A handy little device has been brought out for preventing the waste of current that often goes on in the electric lighting of hotels and large buildings. In hotel bedrooms, cellars and other places where persons are constantly passing in and out and requiring light for only short periods it not infrequently happens that the light is switched on and left burning, sometimes for many hours, to no purpose. The apparatus which makes such waste impossible is a small piece of clockwork, by means of which an incandescent lamp is automatically switched off in half an hour, an hour, or any prearranged time. It can be included in any ordinary circuit instead of the switch, and at very moderate cost.

To ascertain the time at night the Apache Indians employ a gourd on which the stars of the heavens are marked. As the constellations rise in the sky the Indian refers to his gourd and finds out the hour. By turning the gourd around he can tell the order in which the constellations may be expected to appear. The hill people of Assam reckon time and distance by the number of quids of betelnuts chewed. It will be remembered how, according to Washington Irving, Governor Wouter van Twiller dismissed the Dutch Colonial Assembly invariably at the last puff of his third pipe of tobacco. A Montagnis Indian of Canada will set up a tall stick in the snow, when traveling ahead of friends who are to follow. He marks with his foot the line of shadow cast, and by the change in the angle of the shadow the oncoming party can tell, on arriving at the spot, how far ahead the leader is.

Impoverished land is now "vaccinated" on the continent of Europe. It is generally known that land is enriched by planting it occassionally with a leguminous crop like clover or lucerne, the roots of which absord more nitrogen than they take from the ground. Where the nitrogen come from was a problem. Messrs. Hellriegel and Willfarth have discovered that the absorption is due to minute organism, a sort of disease in the roots, which, when the supply of nitrogen in the soil begins to fail, appear as an excrescene, draw nitrogen from the air and so enrich the soil again. Experiment have been made in France to hasten the growth of disease by sprinkling the fields with soil in which tuberculous crops have been grown or with water in which they have been steeped. In Prussia a field was sown with lupins, one part of it was then treated in the ordinary way, the other inoculated from an old lupin crop; the yield in the latter part was five and a half times as great as in the other.

MR. TUCKER DISQUALIFIED.

West Wellington Election Petition—The Patron Unseated.

GUELPH, Jan. 16.—The West Wellington election petition was opened here before their lordships Justice Rose and Justice McMahon. The petitioner, Thomas McQueen, a retired farmer, sought to have the defendant, Tucker, unseated and disqualified on account of corrupt practices by himself and by agents with his knowledge.

There were originally 180 charges, which had been reduced to 16. Charge No. 11 was first taken up. It was to the effect that Tucker had said prior to the election he would see an account settled for blacksmithing done on his father's account. Their lordships held that there had been no violation of the law. Charges 9 and 16 were then taken up. One Hambly, a clerk at White's grocery, Drayton, testified that Tucker threatened to withdraw his patronage from their store unless they supported him and had not dealt there since the election. Mr. White admitted in evidence that he said to Tucker that it was only right Tucker should support those who supported him, but that he (White) had promised to vote for Allen.

Several other charges were investigated, including one of treating at a Clifford hotel, which was proven, and the election voided and defendant disqualified.

Damage by Floods in British Columbia.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Jan. 16.—High tides with the assistance of heavy rains and the gale which was blowing on Sunday did considerable damage along the beach of English Bay. The bathing sheds were undermined and the summer houses along the beach have suffered severely, one small cottage having been washed away altogether with all its contents. Several warehouses on Falls Creek have been flooded and Hastings' mill has been shut down in consequence of the water flooding the engine room. As far as could be learned no stock or cattle were lost, but the lower stories of several houses were flooded. The municipalities will be the heaviest losers and considerable damage was done to roads. The water is now steadily falling and no further damage is anticipated.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Jan. 15, 1895.

Street sales here were 200 bushels barley at 46c. White wheat is being quoted west at 58c and on the Northern the prevailing price is 59c. On the track at Port Arthur 83c was paid for No. 1 hard and the same quality is quoted at 79c in the west.

The visible supply of barley is 2,624,000 bushels, a decrease during the week of 257,000 bushels. On January 15, last year, the visible supply was 2,159,000 bushels.

There is not much change in the Buffalo barley market. Holders are firm and buyers are vacillating.

The wheat market was weak in Chicago, following New York and Liverpool, the close being 1-8 to 3-8c below Saturday. Corn declined 1-4 to 3-8c on large offerings. Oats closed 3-8c lower.

Offerings were 100 cars and advices of several cars of Canadas were received, which did not get in owing to the storm. The supply of Canadas was light, only about 12 cars, and the market was active, some lots selling as high as $5.25, the bulk at $5.10 to $5.25 and a few down to $4.75; fancy Canada sheep, $4.15 to $4.25; mixed, $3.25 to $3.50 for extra stock.

Though trading was very light and the course of the stock market prices irregular, the same unmistakeable feeling that some more favorable turn of events may be at hand was evident in Wall street. As before, this sentiment focused in Washington, but without any definite information. What seems certain is that the disposition to attack the market has for the present vanished. The most noteworthy movement was a sharp decline in Chicago Gas, a not unnatural development since the books closed last week for the election and such contest for control as may have existed is now over.

ITCHING AND PIN WORMS, PILES

No More Misery.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and sometimes obstinate disease, found alike in the rich and poor. Blind, bleeding, protruding Piles are a severe affliction, whether at work on the farm, in the shop, or in the home. Worms in the form of pin worms, or seat worms, are a terrible torment, making it impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously scratches the parts until they are sore—almost raw—and then, if relief is not obtained, Eczema or Tetter may set in, and a case of Piles, originally trifling, be transformed into a most obstinate disease, causing untold misery, irritation and anxiety. Pain and itching of any other description of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, bleeding and ulceration, dry up the moisture,

PIN WORMS is an ailment entirely different as to cause from Itching Piles, yet its effects and symptoms are exactly the same. The same intolerable itching; the same creeping, crawling, stinging sensation characterize both diseases. Chase's Ointment acts like magic. It will at once afford relief from this torment.

AN INTERESTING SUIT.

A Widow Sues a Hotel Keeper for Damages for Causing the Death of Her Husband.

Our readers will remember the announcement of the death of Walter Clark, near Codrington, Northumberland county, in November last, in these columns. Clark, with several friends, was at Warkworth, at the Leonard House. When leaving the hotel yard Clark's waggon was upset and he was thrown and injured about the head, from the effects of which he died a few days subsequently. The accident was witnessed at the time by Mr. Geo. J. Horkins.

The widow, Margaret Ann Clark, through her solicitor, A. L. Colville, of Campbellford, has issued a writ for $1.000 damages against John Leonard, proprietor of the hotel in which her husband is said to have got liquor. The action is brought under R. S. O., 194. Actions under this section are very rare and this will, no doubt, prove interesting.

G. J. GALVIN, President. W. SHERIN, Secretary

Mr. Elliott read a letter from the Deputy-Minister of Agriculture advising, in reply to a query, that the meeting being a statutory one, should be held before that of the Farmers' Institute.

In order to expedite business the reading of the minutes of the last meeting was dispensed with.

The report of the Directors was then read as follows by the president :

To the Members of the West Peterborough Agricultural Society :

GENTLEMEN,—In submitting our annual report, it gives us pleasure to state that this year has been fully up to, and in many respects ahead, of any previous year.

At our last annual meeting we felt warranted in predicting, on account of the operations of the society for 1894, a large surplus of receipts over expenditures. This expectation would have been realized but for circumstances over which we had no control. Our claim to the use of the Driving Park ceased at the close of 1893. Therefore, it was necessary to make provision for supplying its place, and to this end we had to make changes in our own grounds to meet our requirements. It was necessary to provide a horse ring and this made it also necessary to remove our main building. A practically new third of a mile ring was made and a new grand stand erected. The change, including incidental expenses, involved an expenditure of about $500. This amount used up what should have constituted our surplus. However, these improvements, which are permanent, were only made after careful consideration by your directors. We believe that the money has been judiciously expended, and that the resulting improvements will admirably serve the purposes of the Society for some time to come.

Our expenditure in 1894, including the above improvements, and necessary expenditures for successfully carrying on the exhibition, and paying the prize list, amounted to over $2,300, and we are pleased to be able to state that all liabilities arising out of these expenditures have been fully met, and we can present you with a clean sheet, but not, however, without drawing upon our reserve fund to a certain extent to secure such a result.

The thanks of the Society are due, and are hereby heartily extended, to all those who in any way contributed to the success of our annual exhibition—to the Street Railway Company for substantial aid in removing the main building and enlarging the horse ring, to the County Council for their annual grant, and to the merchants and hotel men of the town for handsome voluntary contributions.

In conclusion your directors wish to say that their object has been to make the Central the finest exhibition in the Midland District, and the success achieved in this direction has been reasonably realised by the cordial co-operation by the members and the public generally, and to meet the fullest measure of success we trust we can fully rely upon a continuation of the co-operation and sympathy of the citizens of both town and county.

All of which is respectfully submitted,
GEO. E. ELLIOTT, President.

The secretary read the treasurer's statement as follows :

ASSETS.

Value of buildings	$3500 00
Total assets	$3500 00

LIABILITIES.

Amount now due treasurer	$132 87
Grants to other societies unpaid but still due	105 00
Total liabilities	$3237 87

SOCIETY EVENT IN ASHBURNHAM.

A Most Enjoyable Event : Spent at the Residence of Mr. J. C. Sullivan.

On Monday evening last Mrs. J. C. Sullivan, of Ashburnham, gave a progressive euchre party, to which a large number of guests were invited. Her handsome residence on the summit of the hill was aglow with light from top to bottom and presented a most attractive appearance indeed.

Mrs. Sullivan was assisted in receiving her numerous guests by her daughter, Miss Frankie, in honour of whose birthday the invitations had been issued. The prize for the young lady, who won the most games during the evening, consisted of a magnificent bunch of roses and was won by Miss May Kelly, who was successful in winning no less than thirteen games in the course of the evening.

At midnight a most recherche supper, consisting of cold meats, salads, cake and wine was served, and afterwards those so inclined indulged in dancing for several hours to the inspiring strains of Butcher's orchestra. The well known geniality of the host and hostess made the evening pass off most pleasantly.

CAVAN.

(From our own Correspondent.)

The Fallis line fife and drum band, which has been serenading the councillors elect, on Monday evening, accompanied by about forty of their friends, called at the residence of Mr. Robt. Hooton, the baby member of the board, and dispensed their melodies till the early hours of the morning. At the usual hour the minstrely and their friends sat down to a table heavily laden with the richest viands, which were dealt with in a manner satisfactory to the guests, if not of the host. The party dispersed at two o'clock in the morning, each feeling that he had spent a most enjoyable evening, and vowing that councillor Hooton is a "jolly good fellow."

A high Tea, with unusually attractive features, will be held in the Charlotte street Methodist church on Monday evening next, Jan. 21st. Don't forget the date.

FLORIDA GRAPE FRUIT.

Mr. Wm. Cluxton, having spent a winter in Florida, furnishes the following reliable commendation of the salutary and health-giving qualities of the Florida "Grape Fruit" (resembling an orange), sold by OSTROM BROS :—

The Grape Fruit sold in the shops in Peterborough is a native of Florida.

Some persons believe it is the best fruit in the world—others say it is the "forbidden fruit" of the Garden of Eden.

It is a providential arrangement for Florida which, in parts, is a malarious country. It is a tonic containing quinine, which is a preventive of fever.

The trees are grown from seeds planted in rows, and the the young trees are transplanted in the same way as apple trees in this country. The fruit matures at the same time as the orange—the end of January or beginning of February—although some of both are allowed to remain on the trees later.

For the breakfast table the Grape Fruit should be cut in two halves and the core taken out with a sharp knife, then use a dessert spoon, squeeze the fruit and sup the juice. When finished in this way it has the appearance of a squeezed lemon.

IT PAYS TO ACT ON PRINCIPLE.

The Supreme Court has rendered its decision to the effect that the Provincial Government has no power to enact total prohibition of the liquor traffic. This is another tribute to the soundness of Sir Oliver Mowat's interpretation of the constitution of Confederation. It will be remembered that in the debate arising out of the bill introduced by Mr. Marter to prohibit the retail sale of liquor in Ontario, Sir Oliver took the position that the Provincial Legislature, under the constitution, had not the power to enact such legislation, and that while a doubt as to jurisdiction, the enforcement of such a law would be difficult and that the result would be that the ends it sought would be defeated and the cause of temperance would be discredited. Thereupon Mr. Meredith, now Chief Justice Meredith, the then leader of the Opposition, assailed Sir Oliver and his government as enemies of temperance, and his example was improved upon by his followers and the whole Conservative party. But Sir Oliver, firm in his conviction that the Province had no power to pass such a law, and in the conviction that under such a law the interests of temperance would suffer, adhered to his position and the bill was defeated. Consistently with such a stand, Sir Oliver had prepared a series of seven questions to be submitted to the Supreme Court, whose judgment would decide the question of the correctness of Sir Oliver's contention. He was not to be moved from his position, which he believed to be the correct one, and upon it went to the country, with the result that he was sustained, the people feeling that he was honest in his contention, as well as earnest, and trusting that his record of constitutional triumphs would be maintained and added to by the decision of the Supreme Court. And his position has been confirmed, as will be seen by the seriatim judicial answers to the seven submitted questions as follows :

First—Has a Provincial Legislature power to prohibit the sale within the Province of intoxicating liquors?

To this the Chief Justice and Fournier answered yes, and Gwynne, Sedgewick and King no. So that the judgment of the court is no by three to two.

Second—Has the Legislature such jurisdiction regarding such portions of the Province as to which the Canada Temperance Act is not in operation?

The court answered this question the same as the first.

Third—Has the Provincial Legislature jurisdiction to prohibit the manufacture of such liquors within the province?

The court was unanimous in answering this question in the negative.

Fourth—Has the Legislature jurisdiction to prohibit the importation of such liquors into the province?

Answered unanimously in the negative.

Fifth—If the Legislature has not the jurisdiction to prohibit the sales of such liquors irrespective of quantities, have they the power to prohibit the retail sale?

This important question was answered in the negative, the Chief Justice and Fournier dissenting.

Sixth—If the Local Legislature has a limited jurisdiction only as regards the prohibition of sale, has it jurisdiction to prohibit sales subject to the limits provided by the Scott Act?

The court answered no, the Chief Justice and Fournier dissenting.

The general result of these decisions is to place the whole responsibility of prohibition legislation upon the Dominion Government, where Sir Oliver Mowat contended that, according to the Act of Confederation, it belonged. The question will no longer be a subject of discussion in the Provincial Legislature, and it is not at all likely that the cause of prohibition will be less earnestly advocated, but on the contrary, perhaps more hopefully, because the decision in question has removed the elements of doubt and divided jurisdiction, and the advocates certain of the source from which they have a right to expect prohibition, will concentrate their efforts in that direction without any diffusion of effort, and with more telling effect. The decision will doubtless incite the temperance people to greater zeal from the fact that it makes unconstitutional the local option, which is no doubt justifiably claimed, has had a beneficial effect, especially in the rural districts.

The public will now see that the Ontario Government was fully justified in the opposition to the Marter Bill—an act which would have been inoperative, and therefore prejudicial to the interests of temperance, and would have given a disastrous set-back to the agitation for prohibition. Sir Oliver Mowat and his government took stand on principle in the matter of the provincial powers in respect of legislation, and the result proves that it pays to act on principle, instead of courting popular favour.

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action ; but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs, will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

DEATH OF MR. JAMES McKIM THIS MORNING.

He was an Oddfellow and a Canadian Forester.

At two o'clock this morning, Mr. James McKim, of McDonel street, who has been suffering from an attack of pneumonia for the past ten days, passed away.

Mr. McKim was an employe in the Wm. Hamilton Coy's works, was married and had two children. He was born in Glasgow in 1855 and came to Peterborough about twelve years ago. In October 1891 he was united in marriage to the daughter of Mr. John King. Mr. McKim was held in high esteem by his companions at the foundry, and, in fact, by all who knew him. He was president of the Machinist's Union and a prominent member of Peterborough Lodge No. 111 I.O.O.F., and Court 29 Canadian Order of Foresters.

The funeral will take place on Friday afternoon next at 2.30 o'clock, from the residence of the deceased, under the auspices of the Oddfellows. The service will be conducted by Rev. Dr. Torrance. The pallbearers will be Messrs. Albert Lech, Andrew McFarlane, Daniel Harvey, James D. Tully, Thos. T. Emerson and A. C. McCallum, all Oddfellows and all employees of the Wm. Hamilton firm.

A particularly sad incident in the death of Mr. McKim, exists in the fact that he is supposed to have contracted the sickness which caused his death through the devoted care with which he nursed his little boy, who was suffering from an attack of pneumonia. Mr. McKim was accustomed to sit up all night with the little fellow, and to resume his work at the foundry next day. Naturally, when he contracted a severe cold his system was too run down to enable him to thrown it off, and after ten days' sickness he succumbed.

MILLBROOK

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Prof. Pemberton's residence on Centre street narrowly escaped being destroyed by fire at noon, last Sunday. The fire originated in the garret near the chimmey and was making rapid progress when the brigade arrived. Two streams were soon playing on the building and in a short time the fire was extinguished. Loss about $150. Covered by insurance.

The rink is now in full swing under the management of Mr. Geo. Brooks. Curling and hockey are receiving good support and the skating is drawing large crowds, especially on Friday evenings when the Citizen's Band is in attendance and helps to make the evenings still more lively. The first carnival of the season will be held on or about the 22nd of this month when a good list of prizes will be offered. The first Hockey match the people of Millbrook will have the pleasure of witnessing will be played here on Thursday evening, at eight o'clock, when the Millbrook seven will face the Peterborough Collegiate Institute team. As this is the first season for hockey here, it is not likely the Peterborough boys will go home defeated. Nevertheless the home team intend making a good showing and the spectators can rely on seeing a good exhibition of the new and popular game.

Mr. W. S. Pickup the defeated candidate for the reeve-ship has issued a card thanking those that supported him and stating that he will again be in the field next year.

Mrs. David Harkness died at her home on Tupper street on Thursday evening at the age of ninety-eight years and eleven months.

Miss Verta O'Brien and Miss Maggie Wood left this week to attend Havergal Hall Ladies College, Toronto.

Miss Annie Louise White will appear in the Town Hall, on the 22nd of this month, under the auspices of the Mechanic's Institute.

The Goods are RIGHT If They Are LEFT.

We refer to our REMNANTS which have been LEFT over after a heavy season's selling, and which are going so fast that they won't trouble us at stock-taking time.

The qualities and prices are RIGHT—if they are left. Because we have decided to give customers the advantage of good, serviceable, staple oddlengths at and below original cost.

Some of the snaps still left on our Remnant Counter consist of short lengths of DRESS GOODS, CLOAKINGS, FLANNELS, BLANKETS, COMFORTERS, TABLE LINENS, TOWELINGS, &c. But they are going fast. It's worth while to come in and look them over.

We are grateful to our customers for their valuable patronage during 1894, and respectfully solicit continuance of the kind favours during 1895.

NEW YEAR NEW GOODS NEW LEAF 1895

On looking over last year's business we find that we have everything to be thankful for, as it was one of the best years that, notwithstanding the hard times, we ever had, and that is saying a great deal.

Now, as this is the season for making good resolutions, we have resolved to surpass, if possible, last year's trade. To attain this end we have duplicated all our fall Cloths and added all the latest winter patterns we could find. We buy for spot cash and can afford to sell on a small margin. Give us a call and we will do the rest.

Our Gent's Furnishings and Underclothing Departments are both well stocked. We have a few choice Overcoats still left which we will let off cheap.

LONG STRING of diseases follows a "run-down" system when liver is inactive and the blood in disorder. Look out for "breakers ahead" by putting the liver and blood in a healthy condition. You've only to turn to the right remedy to make yourself secure from disease. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery prevents as well as cures. Take it, as you ought, when you feel the first symptoms (languor, loss of appetite, dullness, depression) and you'll save yourself from something serious.

In recovering from "La Grippe," or in convalescence from pneumonia, fevers, or to build up needed flesh and strength it is indicated.

It's a blood-purifier that has stood the test of time. For a quarter of a century the "Discovery" has numbered its cures by the thousands. The manufacturers prove their faith in it by guaranteeing it for all disorders arising from bad blood; in Scrofula, Eczema, Tetter, Salt-rheum, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, and every kindred ailment.

If you receive no benefit you'll get your money back. What offer could be fairer?

It cures Catarrh in the Head — perfectly and permanently — Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

SINDBAD'S DIAMONDS.

IN THE ISLAND OF JAVA WAS THE GLITTERING VALE.

Where the "Arabian Nights" Sailor is Supposed to Have Found His Fortune—At Least the Description Reads Like His—Sindbad's a Sailor Yarn.

The spot which inspired an anonymous author to hold schoolboys spellbound for generations past, to write a romance which will probably survive for centuries to come, where the scribbler of ages ago dropped the world-renowned Sindbad the Sailor from the feet of his fabulous bird, has ever been a subject for grave controversy.

But the ancient mariner who contributed to the "Arabian Nights" the startling story of Sindbad's seven voyages must surely have visited the island of Java, in the Eastern Archipelago, and made it the scene of his second adventure. Ample proofs of its locality exist in the anecdote itself.

The very tall tree by the seashore up which the forsaken sailor climbed, the "very deep valley surrounded on all sides with mountains of great height," the air "growing suddenly dark, as if obscured by a great cloud," the arrival of the merchants in quest of precious stones, the enormous serpents, and even the colossal bird itself, allowing for poetic license, all point to this place as the source of the author's inspiration.

Here the snakes seem almost big enough to "swallow an elephant with ease," and condors or eagles which prey on them could, by a little stretching of an Oriental imagination, be easily expanded into the prodigious proportions of the roc. Rhinoceroses and elephants, mentioned in the narrative, still inhabit the island, and the "tree whence camphor is extracted" is of common growth.

But the diamonds are not here. Sindbad probably "salted" that marvellous mine of his. And that is a process not altogether unknown in the island.

This volcanic valley is prosaically known as the Bromo. It is situated in the Residency of Pasocroewan, about a day's journey from the port of that name, on the River Gembong, which flows into the Straits of Madura. It is in the midst of a range of thirty six lofty mountains, eleven of which are actually volcanoes, and whose highest peaks are Semaroc and Mahamern.

Sturdy ponies and coolie guides are provided for the ambitious visitor who would penetrate this wilderness of eruptive and awe-inspiring nature. But the journey is so arduous, and the dangers arising from the erratic, fiery furnaces and the avalanches of lava which abound so great, that one could almost wish to be borne to the interior tied to the leg of a giant bird, as was the hero of the "Arabian Knights."

The early part of the trip, over the fertile plains around Pasocroewan, through the tropical, yet bracing atmosphere, redolent of the sweet perfume of the metati, the favorite flower of the Javanese, is as delightful as the later horrors are appalling. Well-kept roads traverse the outer mountains, and for hours the path is surrounded by coffee fields which perhaps are rightly claimed to be the richest in the world.

These extend to an altitude of 3,000 feet; then commences a series of forests and jungles literarly alive with gayly colored birds and chattering big black monkeys. Under the gigantic palm trees and the tall, waving bamboos, fully eighty feet in height, and amid the rank and prolific undergrowth, elephants and rhinoceri crush their way with thundering tread, while tigers, harts and wild swine stealthily creep away at the approach of human intruders.

After a five hours' climb a cliff is reached, which affords a superb retrospective panorama of the plains beneath and shortly after this the first glimpse of Sindbad's Valley of Diamonds and its deadly surroundings breaks upon the view. The Bromo lies at the extreme end of a miniature desert of scorching sand, some three or four miles in diameter. Around this natural arena rise walls from ten to fifteen hundred feet in height, and away beyond these the majestic peaks of the volcanic range lift their heads into the bright blue, cloudless sky.

To the right is Semaroc fully 14,000 feet high, rising majestically from its forest covered sides, with its fine gray pointed cone towering above all others. In symmetry and shape it is an ideal volcano, seeming proud and peaceful, but for the little white cloud it puffs from its summit fan into the serene atmosphere every two or three minutes and which tells of the hellish fires raging in its bosom.

To the left, towards the Probolingo province, or "residency," is a monster mountain, which has been cleft in twain and belches forth fire, lava and rocks continually. This demon is a source of constant danger. On June 10, 1867, it first developed its malignant nature and commenced to shed death and destruction on all the country around. On that occasion, simultaneously with a terrible earthquake, it burst its brow and became the horror and perpetual apprehension of the inhabitants. The Buddhist guides cannot be prevailed upon to visit its vicinity. Even the Bromo, which is an extinct crater, they approach in fear and trembling.

When the visitor has descended the almost perpendicular rocks which at a height of 1,000 feet surround the insular desert, quite a family of smaller volcanoes are observed, smouldering in a quiet sort of way—sitting in a circle, smoking the pipe of peace, so to speak. But a sense of the latent powers they hold within and the angry tempers they periodically display makes the situation anything but pleasant. One can well understand a valley of diamonds being guarded by such ghastly sentinels as these.

In the desert itself there are no signs of precious stones or anything that could possibly be mistaken for diamonds, but there is a tradition among the few remaining Buddhists, who live nearby, that Arab traders in years past violated this sacred spot, which is still held in superstitious awe, and that their missior was to procure the treasures it held. Whether they did this by means of raw beef and rocs is not known.

The walls of the Bromo, in common with many volcanic mountains, are of lava-basalt rock. This has broken and crumbled away, strewing the floor with chrystalline fragments, which gleam and glitter in the equatorial sunlight. These may have been seen by the intrepid traveler who possibly accompanied a band of traders to its brink, and he imagined them diamonds. Hence his story, which has come down to posterity.

Talleyrand and Napoleon.

Prince Talleyrand might well be styled "the man with a pull." While Napoleon was in Spain, Talleyrand, his principal minister, was plotting against him at home. Intercepted letters revealed everything to the emperor. Pasquier describes the terrible scene at the first meeting between Napoleon and his scheming minister after the former's return. Before a crowd of ministers and generals Napoleon burst out in this manner: "You are a thief, coward, a man without honor; you do not believe in God; all your lifetime you have betrayed everybody; there is nothing sacred for you; you would sell your father. I have covered you with wealth, and there is nothing that you would not undertake against me.

"For 10 months you have had the impudence, because my affairs in Spain were going wrong, to say you always blamed my enterprises there, whereas you gave me the first idea of it and persistently urged it. And that man, that unfortunate (the Duc d'Enghien), by whom was I advised of the place of his residence? Who incited me to be severe with him? What are your projects? What do you want? What do you hope for? Do you care to say? I ought to break you like a glass. I can do it, but I despise you too much to take the trouble."

Talleyrand remained silent and impassive, and Napoleon retained him in his rank, titles and offices. What a "pull" he must have had!—Chicago Times.

A Matter of Compromise.

Gonebigh—You and your wife always seem to get on admirably together. How do you manage it?

Levelhed—We came to an understanding early in our married life, and have kept things up ever since on the basis we established then.

Gonebigh—Tell me about it.

Levelhed—Well, when we first went to housekeeping my wife wanted linen sheets and I wanted cotton ones, and—

Gonebigh—Well?

Levelhed—Well, we compromised by having linen sheets.

A Fruitful Cause of Loss.

The loss of stock from impure water is greater than is usually known. In many cases the animals do not die but lose condition and do not make weight in a satisfactory manner. Where the drinking water has a green scum over it it is not fit for drinking purposes for any animal, and unless pure spring or creek water is in plentiful supply it is good economy to put down wells and erect windmills. This may cost something to begin with, but will save money in the end.

A Chip Off the Old Block.

"Young Graball seems to be pretty near."

"Yes; he takes after his father."

"Then, if he takes after his father he'll take everything that he can lay his hands on."

The Comparative Degree.

"Any swag?" asked the first bandit.

"Swagger!" rejoined the other in a hoarse whisper, nodding in the direction of the Summer Girl he had just captured.

Where His Armor Was Weak.

"What's the matter with Chappie?"

"Concussion of the brain. His mother patted him on the head this morning."

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

THREE RUNNING SORES

PHYSICIANS FAILED

BUT B.B.B. CURED

DEAR SIRS—After having used Burdock Blood Bitters for Scrofula in the blood, I feel it my duty to make known the results. I was troubled by a skilled physician but he failed to cure me. I had three Running Sores on my neck which could not be healed until I tried B. B. B., which healed them completely, cleansing the skin and flesh sound and whole. As long as I live I shall speak of the virtues of B.B.B., and I feel grateful to Providence that such a medicine is provided for sufferers.

UNENDURABLE ITCHING

Suffered Three Years—Now Perfectly Cured by B. B. B.

GENTLEMEN—I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for Skin Diseases, from which I have been a sufferer for three years. I have used six bottles and am now entirely cured. I have used Dr. Donald Kennedy's Medical Discovery and such as Dodson's Remedies, but all to no good. I doctored one year with the best physicians in the land; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but could not remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard dry scales. The itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured, and I owe it all to B. B. B.

A Confident Prisoner.

It was a case of chicken stealing, and the prints of bare feet were found in the gravel around the henhouse. The lawyer for the prosecution was one who, if he had been a Napoleon, never would have crossed the Alps. He would simply have pulled them up by the roots and thrown them over the fence. The prisoner was an unknown tramp, and lame at that.

"You say you don't know anything about this theft?"

"That's what I swore to, sir," said the tramp meekly.

"You were in the back yard of Slamtiff's house about supper time?"

"Yes, sir."

"You know the location of the henhouse?"

"Yes, sir."

"You were seen on the road in front of the house some time after dark?"

"I was there, sir."

"You were in the yard after dark?"

"Yes, sir, and after supper also, sir," replied the prisoner, with a wan smile at his innocent little joke in such a place.

"And you were seen by the cook sitting on the doorstep with your shoe off?"

"Yes, sir, there was a pebble in it that was too big to get out of the same hole it got in at."

"Now, sir, I propose to prove that you made these tracks with your bare feet while you were stealing chickens from the plaintiff."

"You can't do it, sir," said the prisoner, mildly but firmly.

"And why not, pray?" asked the lawyer, with fine sarcasm.

"Because, sir, I've one wooden leg, sir," and he gave a kick that sent it clean across the courtroom and almost knocked a constable senseless.—London Tit-Bits.

Potash vs Soda.

Prof. Maerker of the Halle experiment station seems to have demonstrated by some experiments on sugar beets that nitrate of soda had the effect of reducing the contents, while kainit was beneficial in the desired direction. This seems to be because the plants take up considerable soda from the nitrate which unfits them for absorbing a sufficiency of potash, and as the latter is necessary for forming sugar and starch, the deficiency appears. In the use of kainit, which contains plenty of soda, the plants seemed to absorb but very little compared with the potash. It is growing more and more evident that soda cannot take the place of potash as an element of fertility.—American Agriculturist.

To Kill the Smut of Oats.

Please remember before sowing oats in the spring that smut can be killed by holding the seed in hot water of the temperature of 135°. It is to be spread and dried, the spreading being done at once. The water must be kept at substantially this temperature. Five minutes will answer for a temperature from 135°, while a double time is required if the temperature falls four or five degrees.—Mirror and Farmer.

How to Make Meat Croquettes.

For six persons, have about one pint of finely chopped cooked meat. Add one tablespoonful each of flour and salt; three of butter; one teaspoonful of pepper; one half pint of water. Make a thickening of the flour, water and butter, and heat to a boil, then add the meat to which the seasoning has been added. Cook a few minutes, then remove from the fire. When cool, shape with hands into cylinders or balls. Dip each one into beaten egg, then roll in fine bread crumbs, being careful to see that every part is coated. Fry in deep fat, arrange on a napkin and serve at once.

Superstitions About Cats.

Here are some of the superstitions in which cats figured:

When they washed their faces over their ears, it meant that there would be a big fall of rain.

When they sneezed, it meant good luck for the bride who should marry the next day.

When they covered the fire more than ordinary or spent much time licking their feet and trimming their hair or mustaches, rain was sure to follow.

When they jumped over corpses, it was bad luck. Faith in these superstitions has almost died out. But others have taken their place. A gambler, for instance, regards a black cat as an omen of ill fortune, which may be averted only by touching the animal on the back. So if you see a man going out of his way in order to touch a black cat you may be reasonably certain that he is a gambler.

An Amiable Suggestion.

A rider, somewhat new to the saddle, had a terrific struggle with his horse on the Place de l'Etoile. The gentleman wanted to inhale the fresh morning breeze in the Bois de Boulogne, while the fiery steed felt a sudden longing to return to his stable in the Champs-Elysees, and managed to get his head turned in the desired direction, obstinately refusing to change its position. At that moment a wag stepped up to the rider, and taking off his hat politely remarked:

"If you have no objection, sir, the turntable of the tram car company is close at hand."—Bocage.

When the Nerve Centres Need Nutrition.

A Wonderful Recovery, Illustrating the Quick Response of a Depleted Nerve System to a Treatment Which Replenishes Exhausted Nerve Forces.

MR. FRANK BAUER, BERLIN, ONT.

Perhaps you know him? In Waterloo he is known as one of the most popular and successful business men of that enterprising town. As managing executor of the Kuntz estate, he is at the head of a vast business, representing an investment of many thousands of dollars, and known to many people throughout the Province. Solid financially, Mr. Frank Bauer also has the good fortune of enjoying solid good health, and if appearances indicate anything, it is safe to predict that there's a full half century of active life still ahead for him. But it's only a few months since, while nursed as an invalid at the Mt. Clemens sanitary resort, when his friends in Waterloo were dismayed with a report that he was at the point of death.

"There's no telling where I would have been had I kept on the old treatment," said Mr. Bauer, with a merry laugh, the other day, while recounting his experiences as a very sick man. "Mt. Clemens," he continued, "was the last resort in my case. For months previous I had been suffering indescribable tortures. I began with a loss of appetite and sleepless nights. Then, as the trouble kept growing, I was getting weaker, and began losing flesh and strength rapidly. My stomach refused to retain food of any kind. During all this time I was under medical treatment, and took everything prescribed, but without relief. Just about when my condition seemed most hopeless, I heard of a wonderful cure effected in a case somewhat similar to mine, by the Great South American Nervine Tonic, and I finally tried that. On the first day of its use I began to feel that it was doing what no other medicine had done. The first dose relieved the distress completely. Before night I actually felt hungry and ate with an appetite such as I had not known for months. I began to pick up in strength with surprising rapidity, slept well nights, and before I knew it I was eating three square meals regularly every day, with as much relish as ever. I have no hesitation whatever in saying that the South American Nervine Tonic cured me when all other remedies failed. I have recovered my old weight—over 200 pounds—and never felt better in my life."

Mr. Frank Bauer's experience is that of all others who have used the South American Nervine Tonic. Its instantaneous action in relieving distress and pain is due to the direct effect of this great remedy upon the nerve centres, whose fagged vitality is energized instantly by the very first dose. It is a great, a wondrous cure for all nervous diseases, as well as indigestion and dyspepsia. It goes to the real source of trouble direct, and the sick always feel its marvellous sustaining and restorative power at once, on the very first day of its use.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease).
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want.
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that house they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Hugh,
To push us forward when of age.
They then went home, but as, I mind,
They gave us every one, a kiss,
An said, "be good and mind Mamma.
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home,
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

The Guest Chamber.

I have just been reading an article in one of my papers on the above subject, as to how the guest chamber should be provided for.

The writer of the article says: "Hair brushes, combs, a pincushion well supplied with pins, a shoe buttoner, a pair of scissors, a clothes brush with a small work box containing needles, thread, tape and buttons, are all conveniences that will make a guest feel at home even in emergencies. On the table should be placed a writing desk furnished with ink, pens, paper and envelopes of different sizes, sealing wax and postage stamps, thus making it convenient and pleasant for guests to write in the seclusion of their own rooms without calling on the family to supply the needed articles for writing."

"I did not write at once," said a lady to her husband, when visiting a friend, "as there was no writing material in my own room, indeed none to be seen in the house, so I waited till I found an opportunity to purchase some." So the husband and children were allowed to spend many anxious moments for the delayed letter.

Now I have to say that the guest who would be so careless as to leave her home on a visit, expecting them to furnish her with every article of need, deserves to have her family kept in suspense. She should have left her home with paper and envelopes directed and stamped and a lead pencil with which to write the letter. She should also have in her trunk some thread, a paper of pins, a needle, a pair of scissors, and a shoe-buttoner. I call it imposing on the hostess to expect to have all these little things provided for her, besides being merry and gay, and keeping the house in order, and serve up dainty and tempting things for the table.

A guest should have some thought for the comfort of her hostess as well as vice versa. I have known a guest to lie in bed and keep the family waiting when she knew at what hour the family breakfasted, and also keep the lower rooms strewed with her innumerable small belongings and fancy work.

Said a husband to his wife who was going away for a visit, "Here are five dollars; in case you should have an accident or get sick you will not be on the charity of strangers or friends." Now that is what I call the right kind of independence.—Anna, in Ohio Farmer.

No Excuse for Ignorance.

N. B. Franklin, the experienced dairyman, hits the nail on the head on a recent communication to the Jersey Bulletin: "With all the aids so easily at command for weighing and testing milk, there is absolute no excuse for any Jersey breeder not knowing precisely the capacity of each cow in his herd. And knowing their several capacities, the man who hesitates about which to keep and which to discard has no business breeding Jerseys. He is out of his place, be he ever so good or great elsewhere. A cow that has been a good cow, but is by some accident injured as a milker, may be kept as a breeder, on account of her good pedigree, but a poor performer, one that never has paid for her feed at the pail, is not a cow to breed from, be her pedigree ever so fine. That is, if you wish to improve your herd."

House Moving by Trolley.

This looks like an entirely new application of electricity, at least it has not previously been called to notice. Over in West Hoboken last week, a house, about thirty by fifty feet had to be moved across the tracks of the street railway. As the wires must be cut and the cars stopped it was desirable to complete the job in the shortest possible time. Nothing of this sort ever phases Superintendent Bonta. He had a trolley car ready at hand and the house was moved close to the track, the wires cut, ropes passed over the track and back to the trolley car which easily pulled the house across out of the way. The wires were reconnected and the car moving again in a very few minutes. The house-mover remarked that the motor beat horses all to smash. In passing it may be said that a family was living in the house at the time.—Electrical Power.

Varieties of Grass.

The Massachusetts station has conducted an experiment with varieties of grass. As an incidental result of other trials Prof. Goessman reports the following yields of the different varieties: Kentucky bluegrass, 3,100 pounds; meadow fescue, 2,100 pounds; Herdsgrass, 3,225 pounds: meadow fescue and Herdsgrass, 3,025 pounds to the acre. This makes a poorer showing for meadow fescue than its general reputation bears.

It has been ascertained by Professor Kernot of Melbourne university that the usually assumed weight of 60 to 100 pounds per square foot, produced by a dense crowd of persons, may be largely exceeded.

In Holland it is customary when there is infectious disease in the house to notify the fact to intending visitors and the public generally by tying a piece of white rag round the bell handle.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY MEETS.

THE PRESIDENT'S ANNUAL REPORT SUBMITTED.

The Last Exhibition the Largest and Best in the History of the Society—Election of Officers.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Horticultural Society was held yesterday afternoon, in the Council Chamber, with the president, Dr. Burnham, in the chair.

Dr. Burnham submitted the following report, which was adopted on motion of Messrs. J. R. Stratton and W. H. Hill:—

To the Members of the Peterborough and Ashburnham Horticultural Society:

GENTLEMEN,—The Directors beg to submit the following report: The annual show having been held at an earlier date than in former years was the best in the history of the society. We regret to have to inform you that there was a falling off in the membership last year, owing no doubt to the canvass not having been as thorough as in the year before. The society also suffered a loss in the diminution of the government grant. The Directors beg to report that the committee appointed at the last annual meeting waited on the town council and asked for a grant of $500, but were unable to secure the amount and consequently your directors were unable to carry out the necessary improvements in the park. It will be advisable for the meeting to consider whether it will be in the interests of the society to look after the park in the future, if the grant required is not given by the council. Your Directors advertised for tenders for the care and planting of the grounds for the coming season. Mr. Mason's tender was accepted on the condition that the society secured the necessary grants. The grant given by the county council terminated in 1894, and it will be necessary to take steps to have the grant renewed, if possible.

On account of the absence of Mr. Lewis, the treasurer (pro tem) is unable to present the financial statement at this meeting.

GEORGE H. BURNHAM,
President.

The president drew the society's attention to the fact that Mr. Peter Henry, the secretary, had tendered his resignation, and on motion of Messrs. J. R. Stratton and W. H. Hill, Mr. Henry Cobb, jr., was unanimously chosen to fill the position.

Mr. Adam Hall and Mr. W. H. Hill were appointed to audit the treasurer's statement, which will be presented by Mr. Lewis on his return to town.

The following officers were then elected for the ensuing year by acclamation:

President—Dr. Burnham.
1st Vice-President—Jas. Stevenson, M.P.
2nd Vice-President—D. W. Dumble.
Treasurer—W. H. Hill.
Directors—Rev. V. Clementi, J. R. Stratton, M.P.P., T. E. Bradburn, H. C. Rogers, J. H. Roper, John Burnham, M. P., J. H. Cobb, W. H. Manning, T. A. Hay, A. Hall and W. H. Ford.

On motion of Messrs. John Burnham and J. R. Stratton the secretary was instructed to write the town council, asking for a grant of $500, in order that the Court House Park might be properly maintained and at the same time to state that if the grant was not forthcoming the society would discontinue the supervision of the park in question. Messrs. John Burnham, J. R. Stratton, Adam Hall and W. H. Hill were appointed a deputation to wait on the council in reference to the grant. The secretary was also instructed to communicate with the county council and solicit a continuance of the usual grant.

On motion of Messrs. John Burnham and Adam Hall the following members were appointed a committee to revise the prize list, namely, Messrs. Dumble, Roper, Cobb and Foord.

The meeting then adjourned.

SUNDAY SCHOOL COLUMN.

The County Convention for Peterborough will be held on Feb. 28th and March 1st next. Steps should now be taken to appoint delegates to attend the convention, and every school in the county should be represented. As the county is pledged to contribute $100 this year for the Provincial work, which is largely home missionary work, there will be need of increased giving all along the line. In a few days copies of the programme will be forwarded to all the pastors and superintendents whose names are on fyle with the County Secretary.

The County Secretary would like a report from the Harvey and North Smith Association.

DISTRICT MEETING.

The following account of the doings of the sub-committee of District No. 4, Eastern Ontario, in connection with the Provincial Sabbath School Association at its recent meeting in Port Hope, has been furnished by the Secretary, Rev. J. McEwan:

Communications were read from Messrs. Lytle, Fenelon Falls, and N. McNaughton, Cobourg. The minutes of the previous meeting held at Lindsay on Nov. 7th, 1894, were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from Mr. Alfred Day, General Secretary Provincial S. S. Association, stating that he was prepared to fall in with arrangements and attend conventions to be consecutively held in the district.

On motion it was agreed to affirm the arrangements made last year for holding county conventions in the district viz: Haliburton, Monday, Feb. 25th, 1895; Victoria, Tuesday, and Wednesday, Feb. 26th and 27th; Peterborough, Thursday, Feb. 28th and Friday, March 1st; East Durham, Monday and Tuesday, March 4th and 5th; Northumberland, Wednesday and Thursday, March 6th and 7th; and West Durham, Monday and Tuesday, March 11th and 12th.

The General Secretary and Normal Secretary are available for these conventions, but the committee recommends that both be not engaged for the same days and same meetings, because the expense to the General and Local Executive Committees. The committee also recommends that each county Executive Committee meet at an early date and prepare its programme and correspond with all parties as to the subjects selected.

(The Normal Secretary submits the following subjects for Normal work: Normal work illustrated by "A Birds-eye view of the Bible," "The Life and Ministry of Christ, outlined on Gospels," Reviews, their value, how to prepare them.)

The committee recommended that inasmuch as the value of home classes along the line of the International S. S. Lessons, as an important element of religious home life, is coming to be felt as of great importance, that the subject be put upon every programme of every convention to be held in 1894-95, and committed to some person who either understands their working, or who shall inform himself on the subject; for all information write to J. J. Woodhouse, box 535, Toronto, for circular No. 236, the Home Department of the Sunday school, who will supply free.

Rev. James McFarlane, Warkworth, was added to the committee representing Northumberland. Attention was called to the fact that the township of Percy in the above county is not organized.

A request was presented by the South Monaghan S. S. Association seeking to be transferred from the County of Peterborough to the Cavan Association of East Durham, which was granted.

A resolution moved by Dr. Harrison and seconded by Rev. W. J. Crothers, expressing the deep sympathy of the committee with Rev. J. McEwan, Normal Secretary, in the loss of his youngest daughter, Mrs. J. H. Sherin, of Lakefield, was passed and conveyed to Mr. McEwan by the chair, which was accepted in appropriate terms.

The officers of the District Committee were re-elected for 1895.

Committee adjourned to meet at the call of the chairman, Mr. R. W. Clarke, Millbrook.

CURLIANA.

Two rinks of Colts left town yesterday afternoon to play in Campbellford, as mentioned in last night's EXAMINER, and the older curlers evidenced the greatest interest in the trip, it being the first match of the season among the Colts, who had not even been divided into rinks. The enthusiasm was unbounded when a telephone message was received to the effect that the Peterborough Colts had been victorious in both rinks, and led at the close by seven shots. The rinks that played were composed as follows:—

Majority for Peterborough, 7.

In the rinks skipped by F. J. Smith and Dickson Davidson it will be observed that Davidson's rink won the draw by just one shot. The game was most interesting. Peterborough won the first end, but Campbellford took the lead very soon after and actually maintained it until the twenty-first end, when Peterborough, as she always does, whether in lacrosse, baseball or football, showed up so strongly on the "home stretch" as to win the draw by one shot. The excitement during the match was intense, and the rink was so densely packed with spectators, who lined the ice on either side, as to make it difficult to keep the red ring clear. In the evening the rink skipped by Geo. J. Horkins led from start to finish. The interest in this match was also great and half Campbellford crowded into the rink to witness it, play being considerably delayed while the crowds arranged itself when the ends were changed.

The Peterborough boys report that the trip was greatly enjoyed and that the Campbellford Colts used them "white." Campbellford will be welcomed when the return draw is played off here on the 16th. The local rinks returned this morning.

The first of the Granite inter-rink matches was played last night between rinks skipped by Messrs. D. W. Dumble and E. B. Edwards, Mr. Edwards winning by three shots. The rinks were composed as follows:

H S Greenwood,	Col H C Rogers,
H J Sherin,	C Fessenden,
W L Allen,	G A Schofield,
D W Dumble, sk....13	E B Edwards, sk 16

Skips Harry LeBrun and Ed. Brown had a brush during the afternoon with the following rinks:

P Henry,	Harry Phelan,
Will Bradburn,	W H Robertson,
John McClelland	G W Hatton,
H LeBrun, sk 17	Ed Brown, sk.....18

Rinks skipped by Mr. LeBrun and Mr. Brown will play on Friday for a barrel of flour to be given to the poor. A barrel of fun is warranted to the witnesses of the game, if it proves to be a close one.

During the evening Skip J. H. Connal scored an overwhelming victory over Skip T. P. Attrill as follows:

N St C Gurd,	C Matthews,
W H Hill,	L M Hayes,
W G Morrow,	W J Drope,
W Sallsbury,	C Rutherford,
J H Connal, skip....17	T P Attrill, skip..... 1

The members of the Thistle Division assembled in force last night in the rink parlours and following skips were appointed to play in the match in Toronto on January 23rd:

S Ray,	R H Kells,
T Rutherford,	R S Davidson,
C McGill,	W G Ferguson,

Messrs. S. Ray and T. Rutherford were appointed skips for the Tankard and Dryden Cup.

Messrs. C. McGill, R. H. Kells and R. S. Davidson will be the skips in Toronto-Peterborough Cup competition which will be played in Toronto.

The Granites will be represented in Toronto on the 23rd by Skips E. B. Edwards, Geo. Edmison, Judge Weller, G. W. Hatton, D. W. Dumble and T. P. Attrill.

HOCKEY.

The members of the first team of the first team of the Trinity University Hockey club are expected to arrive from Toronto, at five o'clock, this afternoon, and the game with the local team will begin at eight o'clock sharp. The names of those, who will uphold the Peterborough end were published in yesterday's EXAMINER, and as all are crack players, a star game may be expected. The visitors will be entertained during the evening by the local club.

Port Hope and Belleville hockey teams play in Belleville, on Saturday evening next.

The Collegiate Institute team plays in Millbrook on Thursday evening.

Grafton & Co's big clearing sale now going on.

Own a Good Piano.

It costs but a trifle more to own a good piano, like the "Rheimer," the "Morris," the "Heintzman" or the "Mendelssohn." The difference in cost is not for one day, or one month, or one year. It's worth five dollars a year for ten years to have exactly what you want. Just think it over. Have a talk with Mr. J. W. Crosby, of 343 Water street, the agent for those four first-class instruments, and close the purchase before the end of the year.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Whooping Cough.

For Whooping Cough and all throat affections, chest troubles, etc., Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the best embrocation ever discovered. It promptly relieves inflamation, pain and soreness from whatever cause arising.

The Result of Care.

A good poultryman never needs any medicine for his poultry. He knows that prevention is better than cure, because a sick fowl is very troublesome. He keeps disease from his chickens by feeding sound, wholesome food. Keeping the pens and roosts clean and free from vermin, giving the chicks sunlight and plenty of fresh air.

A Finished Courtier.

"What makes you think Jack Youngley is going to propose to you?" "Why, we were dancing the other night and I complimented him upon the easy way in which he held me. 'Oh, yes,' he said; 'it's always easy for me to hold my own.'"—Brooklyn Life.

Worth Accepting, Anyway.

Mrs. Potts—Rev. Dr. Thirdly has just had a call at $500 a year more salary.

Jack Potts—I should think that was more like a "raise."

FLORIDA GRAPE FRUIT.

Mr. Wm. Cluxton, having spent a winter in Florida, furnishes the following reliable commendation of the salutary and health-giving qualities of the Florida "Grape Fruit" (resembling an orange), sold by OSTROM BROS:—

The Grape Fruit sold in the shops in Peterborough is a native of Florida.

Some persons believe it is the best fruit in the world—others say it is the "forbidden fruit" of the Garden of Eden.

It is a providential arrangement for Florida which, in parts, is a malarious country. It is a tonic containing quinine, which is a preventive of fever.

The trees are grown from seeds planted in rows, and the young trees are transplanted in the same way as apple trees in this country. The fruit matures at the same time as the orange—the end of January or beginning of February—although some of both are allowed to remain on the trees later.

For the breakfast table the Grape Fruit should be cut in two halves and the core taken out with a sharp knife, then use a dessert spoon, squeeze the fruit and sup the juice. When finished in this way it has the appearance of a squeezed lemon.

EXCITEMENT IN PARIS

The Resignation of Casimir-Perier Strongly Commented Upon.

SOCIALISTS CLAIM A TRIUMPH

The Presidency Between M. Felix Faure and M. Brisson—The National Assembly Summoned—The Duke of Orleans Waits a Turn in His Favor.

PARIS, Jan. 17.—The city has been intensely excited throughout the day over the resignation of the President of the French Republic, M. Casimir-Perier, after a term of service covering a little more than six months, and the preparations for the election of his successor. A meeting of the ministers was held yesterday for the purpose of discussing the changed situation in view of the resignation of President Casimir-Perier. There was a full attendance of the members of M. Dupuy's cabinet, and the gravity of the position was fully taken into consideration.

Although the regulations forbid street vendors from starting out with their wares before eight o'clock in the morning (which includes prohibition of the sale of newspapers by the criers), the newsboys were allowed to begin their sales before daybreak. The streets were filled with boys whose cries informed many persons for the first time of the resignation of the President. The announcement came like a thunderbolt to thousands of persons and every one was asking the reason of the President's sudden and seemingly unnecessary action. Various reasons were given by the newspapers, but none of them seemed to satisfy any great number of the people. The action of M. Casimir Perier in abandoning his office in the face of the enemy was vigorously denounced by the newspapers, which regard his withdrawal at this time as an act of cowardice.

Commenting upon his resignation the Journal des Debats which is extremely mild in its criticism in comparison with many other journals, said: "History will explain the retirement of M. Casimir-Perier but it remains to be seen whether the act will be justified."

The Figaro said: "If the President persists in his deplorable resolution to retire from office at this time all Europe will judge him as severely as France does."

The Gaulois strongly condemns the step the President takes and characterized his resignation as an act of desertion under fire.

The Matin was also very severe in its criticism of the President's course and declared that instead of running away at the first hostile demonstration of his enemies he should have dissolved the chamber without hesitation or delay and submitted his position to the judgment of the people of the Republic.

Some newspapers declared that M. Casimir-Perier had become physically unfit to resist the impulse to resign. He had, it was alleged, been subjected to most extreme nervous tension ever since he became prominent as a candidate for president and it was asserted that after his election he threw himself upon his couch, where he remained completely prostrated for several hours. Since then he has repeatedly given way to the intense nervous strain put upon him. When M. Buddeau, the president of the Chamber of Deputies, died M. Casimir-Perier was deeply affected, and it is said that he has not since recovered from the shock which the announcement of his friend's death gave him.

All of the groups in the Chamber of Deputies held meetings yesterday to discuss the situation. The ground was thoroughly gone over, but no decision was arrived at in regard to the selection of candidates for the succession to the presidency. The names of M. Felix Faure, M. Loubet, M. Waldeck-Rousseau and M. Brisson were mentioned and discussed, but definite decisions were reserved pending the developments of the day. The supporters of the government are willing to re-elect M. Casimir-Perier, but, failing in this because of his refusal to accept or for any other reason, it is regarded as likely that they will support M. Dupuy.

The Socialist members of the Chamber of Deputies issued a manifesto denouncing M. Casimir-Perier and declaring that his re-election is impossible. Indeed they do not regard him as likely to present himself for re-election. The manifesto says: "M. Casimir-Perier has gone never to return. He is vanquished by socialism. He departs in order to avoid fighting the battle of the reactionists. His weakness of character has been the chief cause of his overthrow, which is a victory for the Socialist party. He is killed by the corruption of the regime of which he was head and defeated by the intrigues of the president of his own council of ministers. It is in dishonor such as his flight, that the capitalist society will perish. The downfall of M. Casimir-Perier is the downfall of capitalism and reactions."

The ministers held a conference for the purpose of discussing the situation created by the resignation of the President whose entourage strongly condemned the step he has taken. Crowds of persons awaited the result of ministerial council, which was held in the office of the Minister of Interior. After the meeting a call was issued by M. Challemel-Lacour, the President of the Senate, summoning the national assembly, comprising the members of the senate and chamber of deputies, to meet in the palace of Versailles at one o'clock this afternoon for the purpose of electing a successor to President Casimir-Perier.

The conference of Senators and Deputies in the Place du Luxembourg dissolved shortly before eight o'clock without taking a vote. In consequence of the refusal of M. Waldeck-Rousseau to be a candidate the union republicans and the union progressists have put forward as their choice M. Felix Faure. This leaves M. Brisson and Faure the principal candidates. According to the latest estimates M. Brisson will obtain 330 votes in the first ballot of the national assembly.

Orleans Watching the Turn of Events.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The Duke of Orleans, chief of the French monarchists, left London with his suite yesterday for Dover, where he will hold himself ready to start for France in case political developments favor his cause. The Duke said in an interview in Dover: "I came here to be near my beloved France, to learn as early as possible of the progress of events and to give instructions to my supporters. Should an opportunity arise in which I could serve my country, I would be at the disposal of France and my friends."

The Feeling in Germany.

BERLIN, Jan. 17.—Emperor William was informed early in the morning of the French President's resignation. He took his coffee rather hastily and then drove along from the old castle to the French embassy, where he had a long interview with M. Herbert. He expressed his high opinion of the President and his regret that the sudden change had been deemed expedient.

The Berlin newspapers reflect clearly the apprehension felt by the people.

The Reichsbote says: "The Socialists have achieved their purpose. They have overthrown Casimir-Perier. They are ripe for revolution."

The Post: "The assaults of the revolutionary parties upon the Ministers were part of a conspiracy to overthrow Casimir-Perier."

Neueste Nachrichten: "The political confusion in France has reached the danger point. History shows no similar situations. All things are tending to precipitate the death struggle of the bourgeoise republic. It will be only good luck if no dictator appears to give it the fatal blow."

NEWFOUNDLAND AFFAIRS.

Position of the Union Bank—Riot Leaders Sentenced.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Jan. 17.—A statement of the condition of the suspended Union Bank was presented at the meeting of shareholders of the bank yesterday. The statement shows the liabilities to be $3,464,900; assets $3,174,778, leaving a deficit of $290,128. This will necessitate a call on two thirds of the reserve liability fund of the shareholders, but as many of these will be unable to repond, the bank must become insolvent. When the liquidation is finally accomplished it is not expected that more than 90 cents on the dollar will be realized for all creditors.

The leaders of last week's labor riot in this city were sentenced yesterday to three to six months imprisonment each with hard labor and the remaining two to pay a fine of $20 or to be imprisoned for two months.

BROOKLYN CAR STRIKE.

Possible Settlement of the Trouble by the State Board of Arbitration.

BROOKLYN, Jan.—The third day of the battle between the trolley companies and their employes resulted in a slight advantage for the companies. Three lines out of the 48 tied up were operated under police protection, but the ranks of the strikers are still intact. The striking motormen and conductors laid certain propositions before the State Board of Arbitration which may result in a settlement of the strike by compromise. Pending such a compromise there was a truce in hostilities and rioting was not resorted to. Practically the surface lines of the city were paralyzed. The public, as usual, were the greatest sufferers.

RIOTING IN PE-CHI-LI.

Missionaries Advised to Seek the Coast—The Battle of Kai-Phing.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The Times' correspondent in Pekin telegraphs: "There are riots and lootings in the provinces of Shan-Tung and Pe-Chi-Li. The mission stations are believed to be safe, but the missionaries would be wise to retire to the coast."

The Times correspondent in Tien-Tsin says: "Authentic details of the battle of Kai-Phing are scant. It appears that the Japanese outgeneralled Liau. Among the 200 killed were many high officers. Generals Shui and Ma were near the scene with a sufficient force, but they held aloof."

O'Brien and the Tweedmouth Cheque.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—In the Times Mr. William O'Brien, M. P., gives his version of the transaction concerning Lord Tweedmouth's cheque for £2,000, which, according to common report, that nobleman, then Right Hon. Edward Marjoribanks, donated to the home rulers. Mr. O'Brien gives the story in straight contradiction to the story told by Hon. Edward Blake. The Irish Daily Independent, the organ of the Redmondites, says that it prefers to believe O'Brien's story to that of Blake, and goes on to say that Mr. Blake is endeavoring to practice statesmanship at the expense of truth.

MALONE, N. Y., Jan. 17.—Isaac White who has been on trial for over a week for the murder of Mary Lafrance, his mistress, on the St. Regis Indian reservation near Hogansburg, August 21, was found guilty last evening and sentenced to die in the electrical chair at the Clinton state prison during the week beginning March 3rd.

BUTTE'S BIG DISASTER

Terrible Havoc Worked by the Explosion of Giant Powder.

MANY LIVES WERE SACRIFICED

Only Three of the Firemen Who Attempted to Overcome the Fire Escaped With Their Lives—Seventy-five Are Thought to be Dead—A Hundred Injured.

BUTTE, Mont., Jan. 17.—By the explosion of giant powder in the hardware warehouse which was reported yesterday many lives were lost. The grounds for a block around the scene of the explosion was strewn with the quivering flesh of dismembered men and horses, pinned down by fragments of the fire engines and burning brands from the demolished warehouse. The building was literally blown to pieces, and a hole 70 feet deep was excavated in the ground by the force of the explosion

The list of the dead will possibly reach 75, and the damage done to property will be more than $1,000,000. In all, three carloads of powder exploded. A boy, ten years of age, was found dead in the street two blocks from the scene of the explosion.

Two of the injured, John Sloan, sr., and Barley Dunford, died last night. Many others cannot recover.

Over 100 are injured, many of them fatally. Every hospital in the city is crowded. The citizens who escaped appear to be stunned and unable to fully realize the extent of the calamity. Most of the dead are so frightfully mangled that identification is impossible. Heads, legs, arms and other parts of bodies were picked up all about the scene of the explosion; within a radius of five blocks fingers, brains and fragments of flesh were gathered up with shovels and deposited in baskets.

The horror of the scene was intensified by the surrounding darkness, outside the circle lighted by the flames. The pitiable cries of the wounded were almost drowned by the wailings of women and children.

The scene of the tragedy was soon surrounded by a dense mass of people. All seemed panic-stricken, and few were able at first to become sufficiently composed to render assistance.

At two o'clock yesterday morning 48 dead bodies had been found and removed to the morgue. Many of them were so shockingly mutilated as to be totally unrecognizable.

Three policemen had been detailed to keep the crowd back and they were killed. Many of the spectators were instantly killed and several were hurled back some distance from the scene of the fire and rendered unconscious. Numbers of people have lost powers of hearing and speech from the force of the shock. The fire marshal, J. D. Cameron and several firemen, are killed.

The firemen went to work without any idea of danger, and when the first explosion occurred killing at least twelve of the firemen the calamity was wholly unexpected. The men rallied bravely, however, and with such of the fire apparatus as had escaped destruction attacked the flames which during the confusion had gained great headway. The work was progressing favorably when a second explosion occured. The first, it is believed, was caused by nitro-glycerine. It was bad enough, but the second which resulted from the ignition of two cars of giant powder standing on the side tracks beside the blazing building was absolutely appalling in its force.

A woman was so affected by the shock that she gave premature birth to a child in the street. It was reported by some of the rescuing party that several human ghouls, while pretending to assist in the work, went through the dead and injured and robbed them. The dead body of a small boy, John O'Leary, was picked up in East Gold several blocks from the scene after the second explosion had occurred. There were no marks on his body. Only three working firemen escaped being killed. Chief Cameron was blown to atoms and the only thing found of him was his belt attached to a charred portion of his body.

The shocks scattered buildings, knocked down chimneys and rent limb from limb men within thirty yards. It wiped out of existence what remained of the fire department, killing men and horses and converting the fire engines into heaps of twisted and discolored metal. This explosion was the most fatal of the three, for the reason that when a quantity of giant powder stored in the warehouse of the Butte Warehouse Company blew up a few minutes later there was practically no one left to be killed.

The explosions coming in rapid succession terrified and bewildered the rescuing parties and few dared to venture within range of the burning building until it was certain that no further danger was to be apprehended. By 6 o'clock it was thought all the dead has been recovered except the dismembered fragments, torn and bleeding limbs and particles of flesh that were to be found everywhere within a radius of a quarter of a mile of the scene of the explosion.

The fire started in a warehouse of the Kenyon-Connel company in which were stored tons of giant powder contrary to the law, and the firemen were assured there was no danger when they expressed fears. Coroner Richards has commenced an inquest and it is probable the criminal responsibility for the horror will be fixed.

The principal losses as far as ascertained are the Butte Hardware Co. $60,000; Kenyon Connel Commercial Co. $30,000, insured for $6,000; Caplice & Blannington $1,200; Royal Milling Co. $15,000. The Montana Central railroad loss in wrecked buildings and burned cars will reach many thousands, the destruction of residences in the vicinity and the wrecks of plate glass all over town will increase the total loss to nearly a million dollars.

Spurious Spanish Silver Dollars.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The Central News correspondent in Madrid says a sensation has been caused by the discovery that 34,000,000 spurious Spanish silver dollars are in circulation. The coins are of the full mint weight; many are even slightly superior to the standard. The Spanish officials say that the dollars are produced in France and America.

AN INTERESTING LIBEL SUIT.

The Ottawa Evening Journal Secures Damages From Ald. MacLean.

OTTAWA, Jan. 17.—A somewhat celebrated local libel suit was decided yesterday before Chancellor Boyd. In the aldermanic campaign of 1893 the Evening Journal opposed the re-election of Ald MacLean, alleging that his course in the council had been more in the interests of the Electric Street Railway Company than of the city. Ald. MacLean was victorious, however, being returned again for Victoria Ward. The day after his election he published a letter in another city paper, pitching into the Evening Journal and hinting among other things that the paper was corrupt and purchaseable. The Journal took a suit for libel.

The case first came to trial in March last, when Dalton McCarthy appeared for MacLean and pleaded that the Journal Printing Company could not legally sue, inasmuch as a company was not an individuality and could not be guilty of corruption any more than guilty of murder or incest. Judge Falconbridge took the same view and nonsuited the Journal. The paper appealed and got Judge Falconbridge's ruling upset and a new trial ordered.

The second trial came on in September. Ald. MacLean did not plead that he could prove anything against the Journal, but simply that he had not mentioned the paper by name. The jury disagreed.

The case was tried the third time yesterday and the jury gave a verdict for the Journal for $200 and costs, which will be heavy against MacLean, as the whole three trials and the appeal are involved.

THE TORONTO MAYORALTY.

Election of Mayor Kennedy is to be Protested.

TORONTO, Jan. 17.—The Mayoralty recount was completed yesterday, Judge McDougall declaring Mayor Kennedy's majority to be forty-eight. All necessary documents have been prepared, and but few steps remain to be taken to legally test, by quo warranto proceedings, the election of Mayor Kennedy.

These charges are:

1. That polling booths were kept open by Deputy Returning Officers after 5 p.m., the legal hour for closing.

2. That rigs were hired and paid for by Mayor Kennedy and his agents.

3. That Mayor Kennedy and his agents were guilty of corruption.

4. That Mayor Kennedy and his agents were guilty of bribery and undue influence.

Section 5 charges Mayor Kennedy and his agents with having influenced certain of the deputy returning officers not to place their initials on the back of certain ballots known to be in favor of R. J. Fleming, and that certain promises of gifts and promises of lucrative employment were made in case they should refrain from marking said ballots.

BARRISTER BROWN ON TRIAL.

Charged With Trying to Induce Ling to Leave the Country.

WOODSTOCK, Jan. 17.—At the police court yesterday Thos. Brown, barrister, of Norwich, was called upon to answer to a charge of attempting to persuade Louis Henry Ling, an important witness in the Hartley murder trial, to leave the country and not to give evidence for a reward. F. B. Ball, Q.C., represented the crown and Mr. Samuel G. McKay the defence.

The crown called two witnesses, Ling and his brother, to prove that on the 7th or 11th of October last Brown visited their place to induce Louis Henry Ling to go away to the States and not to give evidence. Another unimportant witness named Hussey was called, which closed the case for the crown, and an adjournment was asked for by the defence, which was granted until Wednesday next.

Confessed to a Murder.

MONTREAL, Jan. 17.—During an inquest held here on the body of a woman named Marguerite Lacoste, who was found dead in her boarding house, some sensational evidence came to light. Eight years ago a man named A. Gamache was found dead in the house of the deceased at Papineauville. The deceased's character at this time was not one that could bear much scrutiny, and as the affair had a suspicious appearance, the coroner of Aylmer was notified of the death, but for some reason or other there was no inquest held. Later on the Government was notified of the suspicious occurrence, but still no investigation was held. Two witnesses, Mrs. Amyot, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. L. Chapleau, in giving their evidence, testified that deceased, just previous to her death, confessed to them that she had poisoned Gamache, but did not say what kind of drug she had used.

Fined for Publishing a Sunday Paper.

TORONTO, Jan. 17.—In the police court yesterday Mr. Murdoch, for W. F. Maclean, of the World, admitted publication on the Sunday of the fire of a limited edition, purely as an act of mercy, and in the public interest, with no intention of wilfully breaking the law, or for gain, and that the company in the afternoon refused to print any more papers. He said there had been great excitement in the city over the great loss of property and loss of life, and that it was to allay the excitement that the paper was printed. The magistrate said that no person could convince him that publishing a paper on Sunday was a work of mercy or necessity, but under the circumstances, as there had been a great deal of excitement, unless it was intended to make a test of the case, he would not feel disposed to impose a severe penalty. He fined Mr. Maclean $1 and costs. The newsboys were discharged.

The Dairymen at Stratford.

STRATFORD, Ont., Jan. 17.—The second day's meeting of the Western Ontario Dairymen's Association opened with a largely increased attendance and the city hall was well filled. The receipts for memberships exceed those of the large meeting at Ingersoll last year. John Gould took for his subject, "All the year round care of the dairy cow." Prof. Dean, of Guelph, gave the results of some experiments in cheese making and his remarks together with a paper by Prof. Vanslyke in support of the Babcock tester gave rise to considerable discussion as to the value of rich and poor milk for cheese making purposes.

THEY TALK OF ANARCHY

Montreal's City Hall Besieged by Thousands of Unemployed.

POLICE GUARD THE BUILDING

The Men Threaten Serious Trouble if Work is Not Provided for Them—"Starvation or Anarchy?"—A Labor Leader Warns the Mayor of Trouble.

MONTREAL, Jan. 17.—Three thousand unemployed workingmen gathered outside the Montreal city hall yesterday and threatened to invade the building and proceed to violence if their demands for work were not complied with. The demonstration was the third of its kind that has taken place in the city within the last few weeks and it shows the condition of affairs in Montreal. Thousands of workingmen have been thrown out of employment by the closing of the Canadian Pacific shops and many of the men who have families to support have grown desperate and are prepared to resort to violence.

There would have been serious trouble yesterday if it had not been for some cool heads amongst the leaders. Finally a delegation of about thirty men was selected to interview the Mayor and the vast crowd remained outside while the delegates entered. A strong guard of police was on duty at the building, but as it was hundreds of the unemployed entered and packed the corridors, waiting to hear what the Mayor had to say to the delegation. R. Ouimet, who acted as spokesman for the delegation, reminded the Mayor that there had been two other demonstrations of the kind of unemployed men around the city hall. They had been told that work would soon be provided for them by the city. The men had waited patiently, but in vain. They were growing tired and they wanted to know, without any further parley or delay, whether they were to get work or not.

William Darlington, a prominent labor leader followed. He said that thousands of workingmen of Montreal had arrived at such a condition that they had been forced to ask themselves whether they had a right to work or in fact, a right to live. He knew that there were those who denied that poverty and hardship and want prevailed to a large extent in the city at present. But they were wrong. It was only too true that misery and wretchedness occurred to considerable extent. Many cases of death by actual starvation has been brought to his own personal knowledge. The doctors gave certificates that they had succumbed to pneumonia or consumption or some other similar complaint, but the real cause was starvation, lack of food and necessary medicine. The Knights of Labor, whom he represented, came a good deal in contact with workingmen and they knew the real state of affairs. He would tell the Mayor that men were not going to lie down peaceably to die from starvation in a country where there was plenty of food, and many others were living in luxury. If the Council refused to give the unemployed any assistance in the way of providing them with work he would not like to be answerable for the result.

He hoped that no personal injuries would be inflicted or any other sort of violence would be indulged in. But if, through their being refused work, they were driven to use guns and dynamite, they would not be to blame, nor would the labor organizations be to blame, for the latter were losing their influence over the men on account of their starving condition. He could assure his Worship that an army of five hundred anarchists could be raised in Montreal in a few hours.

He knew for a fact that many men had lately applied to be enrolled in the labor organizations for the avowed purpose of using force to oblige those who could do it to give them employment. The city could give plenty of work by means of a special tax. That indeed was the only remedy that the city could apply for the present. Extreme cases required extreme remedies. The question of the moment was: "Shall we have starvation or anarchy?"

Mayor Villeneuve expressed his sympathy with those who were out of employment. He pointed out, however, that many of those who posed as unemployed were not in need of work. They labored all summer and saved enough money to keep them all winter. The city had done its best to give employment. He suggested that a requisition be presented to him to call a mass meeting at the Board of Trade rooms to-morrow.

A requisition was immediately signed and presented to the Mayor. In the meantime the crowd outside was becoming impatient and were addressed by several speakers, who soundly denounced the Mayor, who, on being called for, responded by addressing the crowd. The Mayor repeated what he had said to the deputation, adding that Montreal was not worse off now than other cities on this continent. The Canadian Pacific railway and other large employers of labor were being obliged to lay off numbers of hands owing to the general depression of trade. He told the crowd plainly that he did not believe that they were all in want. He hoped that the capitalists of the city would attend the meeting to-morrow and would either provide work or subscribe to a relief fund.

The crowd impeded the traffic on the streets and several cars which attempted to pass through were mobbed. A fire engine was called out to disperse the crowd, but it had to retire from the scene. The mob stayed beside the city hall until the afternoon and only dispersed when asked by the leaders to await the result of the public meeting. The leaders threaten to repeat the demonstration if something is not done. The situation creates great excitement.

A Child's Horrible Death.

MONTREAL, Jan. 17.—Coroner McMahon held an inquest at St. Cunegonde on the death of a child, one year old, named Albert Bartholet, who was scalded to death by a pan of grease. It seems that a servant had placed the boiling grease on the edge of a table in a room in which the child was and leaving him alone. She was called back by terrific screams and found him covered with the contents of the pan, which he had tipped over. He died shortly after. A verdict of accidental death, blaming the servant for negligence, was returned. No arrest will be made.

A Common Affliction

Permanently Cured by Taking

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

A CAB-DRIVER'S STORY.

"I was afflicted for eight years with Salt Rheum. During that time, I tried a great many medicines which were highly recommended, but none gave me relief. I was at last advised to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, by a friend who told me that I must purchase six bottles, and use them according to directions. I yielded to his persuasion, bought the six bottles, and took the contents of three of these bottles without noticing any direct benefit. Before I had finished the fourth bottle, my hands were as

Free from Eruptions

as ever they were. My business, which is that of a cab-driver, requires me to be out in cold and wet weather, often without gloves, and the trouble has never returned."—THOMAS A. JOHNS, Stratford, Ont.

GHOSTS ARE POPULAR

They Once More Appear Frequently in Popular Current Literature.

Ghosts enjoy a curious popularity in England to day. Years ago they fell into unmerited disfavor; and for a century and a half they battled with scant success against that arrogant wave of reason and common sense which chilled the fair fields of poetry, swept romance from the land, and left the sombre glades of superstition tenantless and bare of every horror. From time to time, indeed, the exiled ghosts, like the exiled gods of Olympus, strove to regain their lost ascendancy; but there was something pitifully vulgar about their trivial triumphs. Apparitions whose modest mission was to sell a volume of dull sermons upon death, or to stir up a clamorous mob in Cock Lane, could scarcely aspire to a dignified position in the spirit world. Even their local coloring, though it lent them a transient estimation with the public, told against them in the end; for the city streets, and that highly vaunted bulwark of the nation, the great respectable middle class, are not harmonious accessories of the supernatural. As for the educated people, who now reverently await each new development of the impossible, theirs was a different attitude 100 years ago. Men who read Pope and Swift and Addison, whose heads were clear, whose hearts were cold, whose faith was limited, and whose digestions defied high living, could ill attune their minds to the "dark sweet horror" of mediæval ghostlore. "The deevil never appears to a man that's no frightened aforehaun ont 'o his seven senses," says the Ettrick Shepherd; and he lived in Scotland, where skepticism failed to attain the easy supercilious composure of her English sister; in Scotland, where the exiled fairies and witches shared with the exiled Stuarts the just affections of a loyal race.

There is little doubt that Sir Walter was secretly enamored of the superstitious which he affected to disregard, and which the stupid prejudices of his day would not permit him to enjoy in peace. What can be more pathetic than the contrast between his robust denials and his quick, half-smothered sympathy for all eerie things? How well he tells the tale of the apparition seen by Lord Londonderry—the naked child who emerged from the dying embers of the grate, and who, like Faust's terrible hound, increased in size as he approached the curtained and recessed bed. Lord Londonderry, Scott explains somewhat peevishly, was the only man he knew to whom a veritable ghost had ever appeared, and he is hardened with the conviction that it may be his duty to offer some explanation of the mystery. As for the supernatural element in his novels, it is almost always a failure; not from the lack of imagination or of vivid power, for the mingled horror and humor and pathos of Wandering Willie's tale have never been surpassed, but because the atmosphere in which he lived was unfavorable to the full development of such lawless fancies. The White Lady of Avenel is one of the tamest spirits in all fiction. Good Protestants may have rejoiced in the soundness of her religious principles; but it is not the place of apparitions to be progressive and enlightened. If they know what is best for them they will cling to the old order, for when it passes away it takes their strongest constituency along with it. I sometimes fear that modern ghosts are being lured to their destruction by the new semiscientific methods of research, which beguile them with a show of respect and a little worthless notoriety, but which in the end will rob them of their heritage—that shadowy power which has come down from the dim past to be bartered away at last, like Esau's birthright, for a mess of pottage.—Agnes Repplier in Atlantic Monthly.

THE HISTORIC PIE.

AN ANCIENT INSTITUTION POPULARIZED IN ENGLAND.

A Staple Article of Food in This Country—The Various Changes That Have Occurred Until the Present—A Wonderful English Pie.

Pie may, without exaggeration, be called an institution.

The history of the pie has yet to be written in a profound and scholarly way. It is a thing of stupendous antiquity. The word itself is one of that small class in modern English derived from the ancient British or Celtic languages. In mediæval English it was commonly spelled "pye," and this word appears to have been derived from the Gaelic "pighe." The Irish language also has the word "pighe." Allied words in Irish are "pithan" and "pighbeann."

This fact alone, it will be perceived, is full of historic significance. So great was the vitality and tenacity of pie as an institution that it survived the Teutonic invasion of ancient Britain and imposed itself on the conquerors. It had already lived through the Roman invasion of Britain, and the temporary introduction of Latin civilization and cookery in that island.

It is unfortunate that a historian like the late John Richard Green, who writes so fascinatingly of the life and customs of the people, has not attempted to give us a sympathetic description of an ancient British, Gaelic or Irish pie.

When, in their turn the Anglo-Saxons were conquered by the Normans, pie did not succumb. Gallicized methods of cooking, in which pie does not appear to have figured, prevailed among the ruling classes, but pie lived on in the homes of the people. It was solidly established there, and gradually it fought its way into an important position in the domestic economy of all classes, from which it has never been dislodged. Mince pie, in various forms, is one of the most characteristic features of old English cookery.

The pie, as it has developed in Canada is a flat, circular thing, with a sodden undercrust. This form is scarcely known in England. There the fruit or meat is put in a deep dish and the crust spread over the top.

An English cook-book of the eighteenth century contains the following recipe for something not very different from a mince pie: "To make a lumber pye—Take a pound and a half of veal, parboil it, and when 'tis cold chop it very small, with two pounds of beef suet and some candied orange peel, some sweet herbs, as thyme, sweet marjoram and an handful of spinage. Mince the herbs small before you put them to the other. So chop all together, and a pippin or two, then add a handful or two of grated bread, a pound and a half of currants, washed and dried; some cloves, mace, nutmeg, a little salt, sugar and sack, and put to all these as many yolks of raw eggs and whites of two as will make it a moist, forc'd meat. Work it with your hands into a body and make it into balls as big as a turkey's egg; then having your coffin made put in your balls. Take the marrow out of three or four bones as whole as you can; let your marrow lie a little in water to take out the blood and splinters; then dry it and dip it in yolk of eggs; season it with a little salt, nutmeg, grated, and grated bread, lay it on and between your forc'd meat balls, and over that sliced citron, candied orange and lemon, eryngo roots, preserved barberries; then lay on sliced lemon and thin slices of butter over all; then lid your pye and bake it, and when 'tis drawn have in readiness a caudle made of white wine and sugar and thickened with butter and eggs, and pour it hot into your pye."

This is indeed a pie wherewith to feed a stalwart, conquering race. The remark about "having your coffin made" has a peculiar significance in these degenerate days.

Not only has the pie acquired a national shape in Canada, but materials are used in it which England does not possess. Squash pie, pumpkin pie and custard pie are all our inventions. In England they only eat mince pie at Christmas, and not three times a day all the year round.

Odd Things in Fashion.

There are lots of odd things about the clothes of to-day. For instance, a "heartsease" belt is a long, narrow ribbon, tied in a bow with drooping ends. Collars are cut in spirals and put on twisted. The lampshade style is now a recognized one so far as capes are concerned, and the lamp shade ballet would no longer be ridiculed were it to appear on the street, says the Home Journal. Moire ribbon is still a subject of fond conversation to modistes, but somehow the public seems to have had enough of it, and very little is seen. The "1840" sleeve is cut all in one with the shoulder fronts, and laid in tucks at the wrist. Not only are skirts wired to keep them in place, but an adroitly adjusted wire, so arranged as to be absolutely invisible, is put inside the newest sleeves, and makes the admired "bulge" on them. The newest brown is a sort of coffee shade and is called "Moka." About every outdoor costume has at least two capes made to wear with it, one a long full cape for cold days, the other a little butterfly affair, cut on a circle, with fur trimmed edges curling round the face like the petals of a flower.

Clerical Titles of Old.

Recent discoveries in Palestine have made more clear the secular use of the terms "deacon" and "bishop" before the establishment of Christianity. Texts and inscriptions have been found with mention of diaconoi as being certain subordinate civil officers. Episcopoi or overseers were functionaries of a higher grade under the Roman regime, and several lists of these have been found. From the first the terms were used by the church to meet the needs of her own organization, being borrowed from the civil organization of the times.—Churchman.

Encouragement for Sociologists.

Sir John Lubbock, addressing the Sociological congress at Paris recently, said that in London since 1870 the number of children in English schools had increased from 1,500,000 to 5,000,000, and that in the same time the number of persons in prison had fallen from 12,000 to 5,000. The yearly average of persons sentenced to confinement for the worst crimes has declined from 3,000 to 800.—New York Tribune.

Wear and Tear on Railways.

Taking the length of the permanent railways on the surface of the globe at nearly 60,000 geographical miles, with a daily average of ten trains, it is estimated that the total loss suffered by wear and tear each day by the metallic rails of the earth is about 600 tons. The 600 tons are lost in the form of a white powder, and are carried back into the earth in the shape of soluble iron salts.

Dr. Low's Pleasant Worm Syrup removes worms of all kinds from children or adults.

Intense Heat in Australia.

VANCOUVER, Jan. 15.—Officers of the steamship Miowara say an intense heat wave is passing over Australia. Over 100 degrees in the shade was reported from 20 points, at one place the mercury marked 112. Corn is withering and wheat is being cut for hay. Grass and bush fires have done incalculable damage, including the burning of the settlements of Madge, Mount Victoria and Blue Ridge and a part of Wagga. An epidemic of low fever prevails in many places. The hospitals are filled, and deaths are frequent.

Montreal's Unemployed.

MONTREAL, Jan. 16.—The order has gone out among the labor organizations for a mass meeting of unemployed workmen to assemble at the city hall to interview the Mayor and aldermen and demand that the long-promised relief works be started at once. There is expected to be trouble in connection with the demonstration and the authorities have decided to take precautions.

An Episcopal Rector Deposed.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Jan. 16.—The verdict has been made known in the case of Rev. W. H. Little, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, Sussex. The ecclesiastical court finds Mr. Little guilty of making false statements concerning Rev. J. Roy Campbell, rector of Dorchester, and decides that he be deposed from his office in the church. The finding is approved by Bishop Kingdon. Notice of appeal to the Metropolitan of Canada has been given.

Chapleau Spoken of for the Cabinet.

QUEBEC, Jan. 16.—The rumors of general elections are being circulated about town. Special despatches from Ottawa received fail to confirm the rumors. In the clubs and political circles the name of Hon. Lieut.-Governor Chapleau is mentioned as the future member of the Cabinet and a leader of the coming election. Government organs in Quebec unofficially give credit to this rumor.

Mr. Dickey Returned by Acclamation.

AMHERST, N.S., Jan. 16.—Yesterday was nomination day in Cumberland. There being no opposition, Hon. A. E. Dickey, Secretary of State, was declared elected. The Board of Trade advertise a non-political banquet in honor of Mr. Dickey to-night.

Held Up by the Cook Gang.

MUSKOGEE, I. T., Jan. 16.—James French and Mack Williams, of the Cook gang, rode into Fort Gibson and held up the proprietor and five men in E. H. Nash's general store.

MacLeod's Case Again Postponed.

BUFFALO, Jan. 16.—Herbert F. MacLeod, the Canadian engineer charged with fraudulently obtaining naturalisation papers, was before the United States Commissioner again yesterday. The case, which is creating considerable interest in marine circles, was again postponed till Monday next.

A Dredge Boat's Crew Drowned.

CITY OF MEXICO, Jan. 16.—The dredge boat Mount Waldo, belonging to the Central railroad, bound from Tampico to Yelasco, has been wrecked near Point Lobas Island. Captain Brock, his wife and two children and five other persons were drowned.

Deadly Grip in New York.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Seventeen deaths from grip were reported here during the 24 hours ending at noon yesterday.

Divorce in England.

In the last year for which the judicial statistics are made up (and only now published)—the year ending October 31, 1893—there were 387 decrees absolute for dissolution of marriage and 393 cases in which decree nisi was pronounced.—London Daily News.

Obituary.

Mrs. Thos. Barrie, wife of the late Thos. Barrie, Durham county, and sister of the late John, William and Robt. Darling of Smith, died on Tuesday, Jan. 15th, 1895, at the family residence, West Durham. The deceased lady came to this country from Scotland in the year 1833, with her sister and three brothers, and has resided in Durham county since her arrival in Canada. She is the last of the original Darling family in this country. It would have been a fortunate thing for this county if a larger number of families of such sterling integrity and industry had made Peterborough their home. Mrs. D. Belleghem and Mr. Jas. Darling, Smith, left yesterday to attend the funeral.

A Grand Success.

The entertainment under the auspices of the Methodist church, Gore's Landing, which was held on Friday last, Jan. 11th, and at which a very large and appreciative audience assembled, proved to be a first-class success. The vocal music was rendered by the following talented young people: Miss Merrifield, of Port Hope, Miss Ericson and Mr. Stewart, of Coldsprings, Miss Campbell of Port Hope, Mr. Barrowclough and sister of Wesleyville, and others. The instrumental music was rendered by the string band of Coldsprings, Miss Rundle of Port Hope, Mr. Barrowclough and sister of Wesleyville and others, and was fully appreciated. Everybody expressed themselves as highly delighted with the entertainment, and the heartiest thanks are due to the ladies and gentlemen who by their efforts made it a success.

—The Sons of Canada met last night, and made arrangements regarding another carnival, which will be held next month. Costumes not up to the mark will not, in future, be permitted on the ice.

—Messrs. Geo. Matthews & Sons, pork packers, town, commenced filling their huge ice house in Ashburnham, to-day. The work is being carried on under the supervision of Mr. John Craig.

—The Canadian Press Association is to hold its annual meeting on Jan. 31 and Feb. 1 at Toronto. A good programme has ben prepared, and a large attendance is expected. On the evening of Jan. 31 there will be a banquet in the Board of Trade rotunda.

—The Catholic Association has issued invitations for a social to be held in the Foresters Hall, Hunter street, on Thursday, January 24th. The committee in charge is composed of Wm. Rudkins, president; John Corkery, secretary; Thos. Dolan, M. Giroux, R. J. Hiller, J. L. O'Brien and Dr. Brennan.

—The Campbellford Herald says:—"In connection with the drama to be presented in the Salvation Army barracks tomorrow evening, "Cabbage" Mike and his wife, and Happy Bob, all of Peterborough, will take part." Peterboroughians were not aware that the town corps boasted of celebrities bearing these titles.

—The toboggan slide at Chemong Park has been doing a lively business during the past week. Toboggan parties from town and elsewhere enjoy themselves every evening to their heart's content. "Mine host" Fobert, of the Chemong Park hotel, gives every facility and accommodation to parties who may desire lunch or refreshments during the evening.

—Slate and slate pencils have been banished from Boston schools by official dictum. The light-grey mark on the only slightly darkened slate surface is pronounced very trying to the eye, and the operation of erasing, as most often practised by children, is not only uncleanly, but unwholesome as well. So the slates have gone, and paper and pencil have come.

—At a meeting of the Board of Police Commissioners, of Hamilton, yesterday, a statement was read from Chief of Police McKinnon, denying that he had been guilty of immortality, but admitting that his present humiliating position was owing to wine. He asked for time to collect evidence to clear himself of the charges made against him, and the board allowed an adjournment till three o'clock on Thursday.

—The interesting annual tea to the scholars of St. Paul's church Sunday school, which takes place on Friday evening Jan. 18th in the school room, is being looked forward to by parents as well as scholars with unusual interest this year. The principle feature of the evening in addition to the music and refreshments, will be the awarding and distribution of prizes to the scholars for meritorious studies, etc. Parents are expected to assist in providing the refreshments.

Own a Good Piano

It costs but a trifle more to own a good piano, like the "Rheimer," the "Morris," the "Heintzman" or the "Mendelssohn." The difference in cost is not for one day, or one month, or one year. It's worth five dollars a year for ten years to have exactly what you want. Just think it over. Have a talk with Mr. J. W. Crosby, at 320 Water street, the agent for these four first-class instruments, and close the purchase before the end of the year.

HOCKEY

Trinity University yesterday sent down its first hockey team from Toronto, to win laurels in Peterborough and by the open confession of the visitors they confidently expected to fulfil their expectations and easily score a victory, but after the game started a very few minutes sufficed to show that they were no match for the doughty Peterborough boys, and the score of 12 goals to 2 was easily run up against the visitors. At the conclusion of the match the Trinity boys openly stated their belief that their was no team in Canada that could stand before the perfect combination work of the local men and not go to pieces, a possible exception being the 'Varsity seven.

Peterborough outwitted Trinity at every point and came out of the battle with flying colours, chalking up one more to her long list of victories. This was certainly a very creditable win, as the Trinity team belongs to the senior league, and it goes to show very forcibly that Peterborough should throw away its swaddling clothes, or in other words, it should drop out of the intermediate and join the senior league at once. The members of the Trinity club said that they had not met such a perfect combination this year.

The teams lined up as follows:

Trinity.		Peterborough.
McMurrich (Capt)	Goal	Dixon
Douglas	Point	Montgomery (C)
Wilkie	Cover	Parsons
Bain	Forwards	Wonham
Osler		Phelan
Senkler		King
Macdonald		Lefevre

Referee, H A Moore. (Volts.)

The home team put up a very rapid game, so rapid, in fact, that they completely demoralized Trinity for the quarter part of the first half. During this time Peterborough sent shot after shot on the Trinity goal, a good many of which were stopped by the lightning work of Gaol keeper McMurrich. Wonham, Phelan, King and Montgomery were the principals in the play of this half. Wonham played the star game for Peterborough, making some splendid rushes, while King, Montgomery and Phelan were not far behind, in fact all the Peterboroughs did well.

The Trinity men were very strong in the defence. McMurrich stopped everything he could touch and was strongly backed up by Douglas. Senkler played an exceptionally strong game on the front line and did all Trinity's scoring. Osler also played well.

The score was:

1ST HALF.

1	Peterborough,	King,	2 mins.
2	"	Wonham,	8 "
3	"	Phelan,	2 "
4	"	King,	4 "
5	"	Wonham,	6 "
6	"	King,	2 "
7	"	King,	2 "
8	Trinity,	Senkler,	4 "

2ND HALF.

9	Trinity.	Senkler,	2 mins.
10	Peterborough,	Phelan,	2 "
11	"	King,	1 "
12	"	Phelan,	6 "
13	"	Wonham,	1 "
14	"	Wonham,	10 "

The galleries were lined with spectators who followed the game closely.

The crimson and blue was trailed in the dust, or snow, rather, and consequently not much shouting was indulged in by the Trinity boys.

At the corner of Charlotte and George streets the Trinity bus upset, and all had to disembark and help it up again.

The Trinity men said they enjoyed their visit here very much, i. e., except the result of the game.

At the conclusion of the game the town team banquetted the visitors at the Palace Restaurant, where a few pleasant and enjoyable hours were spent. The toast list was characterized by its brevity. Mr. Greenwood proposed the health of the guests, to which Mr. McMurrich responded. He hoped Peterborough would give Trinity an opportunity of repaying the hospitalities extended to them and would visit Toronto in the near future. Though the game had gone against Trinity, it had been an enjoyable one and he hoped had proved a good practice for the Peterboroughs. He then proposed the health of the entertainers, to which Mr. Montgomery replied for the hosts. In his remarks, he voiced the wish, which was enthusiastically received, that the match with Trinity might become to be looked upon as a fixed annual institution.

An adjournment was then made to the parlours, where the rest of the evening was passed very pleasantly. Songs were contributed by Messrs. McMurrich, Douglas, and Dave Rogers for Trinity, while the Peterborough end was held up by Messrs. Hurley, Wonham, Lefevre, Moore, Dunsford and Montgomery, all of whom proved to be good entertainers.

H. Blake, College Evangelist, S. M. Sayford, of New York, L. B. Hodge, of the International Committee, and Fred. S. Goodman, Associate, State Secretary of New York. Say! it's to-morrow night. Will you be here? Resolved "that the country boy is more awkward in the city, than the city boy is in the country." Some funny men are getting ready for it. A mixed quartette, ladies' quartette and male quartette are features of the musical part of Sanday's meeting. Rev. R. S. Shorey, of Lindsay, will address the young people. 4.15 is the hour and all are invited.

Prof. Froude's Property

The late Prof. Froude has "cut up" better than any historian since Macaulay. The total value of his property, which, I am told, is about £60,000, is in marked contrast to the estate of his ancient enemy, Prof. Freeman, which only figured out at £5,041. There would seem to be something in a picturesque style and a robust literary conscience after all. Mr. Froude got into hot water through some of the highly flavored Carlyle correspondence which he published, but the fact that he has ordered in his will that a holocaust should be made of the remaining Carlyle letters and manuscripts seems to indicate that he could have startled the world still more had he chosen.—London Figaro.

THE TOWN COUNCIL OF 1894 IS DEAD.

IT WAS FORMALLY BURIED LAST EVENING.

Jokes Were Cracked and Pleasantries Exchanged and it Didn't Seem Much Like a Funeral Many Accounts Received and Passed.

Last night the moribund town council put in a couple of hours at finally winding up the affairs of the year. They received reports and transacted other minor business in the best possible spirit and with the best possible object.

Following so soon after the elections one might have expected to note a look of dejection on the countenances of the town fathers, whom fate has retired from the proud position they have held during the year—honoured, flattered and feted. But not so. There was not one retiring member ready to exclaim with Byron:

My days are like the yellow leaf;
The flower, the fruit, have gone;
Naught but the canker and the grief
Are mine alone.

On the contrary all were jolly and cracked jokes, and seemed highly satisfied with the situation, past, present and prospective. And it is shrewdly suspected, if the truth were but known, each gentleman was wondering why some other gentleman did not cap the climax of good humour and good fellowship with an invitation to the nearest restaurant. However, all things come to him who waits and 'tis said something of this nature comes off on Monday evening.

All the councillors were in their chairs last night and the

FOLLOWING COMMUNICATIONS

Received and referred to the Finance Committee.

On motion of Messrs. Cahill and Brady, the report was adopted.

The

FIRE, WATER AND LIGHT

Committe recommended that two sets of sleighs be purchased for the fire department, one for the hose and the other for the hooks and ladders.

Received on motion of Messrs. Kelly and Dawson.

The

STREET AND BRIDGE COMMITTEE

reported that as instructed it had received tenders for 200 cords of stone. Thirteen tenders had been submitted. The lowest from a ratepayer was for 25 cords at $1.60 a cord, which, however was subject to the conditions as to the delivery. The next lowest was at $1.65 per cord and the Street Inspector had been instructed to take 25 cords from any ratepayer of the town who would deliver them as required at $1.65 per cord, the stone to be all breakable and to include no limestones and to be subject to the inspection of the street inspector, he to report to the committee when the quantity delivered amounted to 250 cords, and the same to be paid for upon the certificate of the Inspector.

Mr. Hall moved that the quantity of stone to be purchased be limited to 250 cords. He objected strongly to the committee having a free hand to purchase as much stone as they wished.

Mr. Best agreed to the amendment and the report was carried.

Councillor Hall reported for the Manufacturers Committee that a representative of the Universal Knitting Company, of Toronto, had been in town and was favourably impressed with Peterborough as a site wherein to locate the works. The representative was anxious to know what Peterborough would do in the way of inducements.

RESOLUTIONS.

It was moved by councillors Roger and Dawson that it be referred to the Finance committee to adjust with the village of Ashburnham the claim of the town for fire protection and to report upon terms for the future if such protection is to be continued.

Carried.

Moved by councillors Dawson and Roger that the Property Committee be instructed to insure the property of the town in and about the fire hall.

Carried.

Moved by Counncillors White and Sutton, that as in the building trades in Peterborough, the nine hour rule for a day's work had been established, and as nine hours constitute a day's work with the employees of the corporation, Resolved that in all contracts made by the town for the construction of public works, there shall be a condition in the contracts that nine hours shall constitute a day's work on all such works."—Carried.

Councillors Hughes and White moved that Mr. LaPlante receive a refund of $15 on his pedlars' license, he having become a resident of the town since taking out the license.—Carried.

On motion, the usual grant was made to the reporters, with a kind acknowledgement of their services during the past year.

Councillors Cahill and Dawson moved that the council, before its final adjournment this evening, desires to place on the records of the council, the loss the town is about to sustain in losing the services for the ensuing year of Messrs. McIlwain, Sutton, Roger, Hughes, Hall, Kelly and White, who have each rendered valuable services to the town during their respective terms in the council.

The motion was carried on a standing vote.

Mr. Cahill, Mr. Dawson and the Mayor spoke kindly words to the motion in which no little praise was bestowed upon the retiring members.

The councillors mentioned in the motion all made suitable acknowledgment of the kind remarks of the previous speakers.

Councillor White asked the permission of the council to state that his defeat had been caused by the fact that an impression had been created that he had been instrumental in trying to reduce the wages of the workingmen. He wished to state openly that such had not been the case. The Mayor bore him out in his statement. The council then adjourned.

YOUNG WOMEN'S ASSOCIATION.

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action; but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs, will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

UNION MISSIONARY MEETING LAST NIGHT

Of the Congregations of St. John's and St. Luke's—The School House of St. John's Well Filled—Two Interesting And Earnest Addresses on Missions.

A union meeting of the congregations of St. Luke's and St. John's was held in the school house of the latter, on Wednesday evening. There was a large representation of both congregations and unusual interest in the cause of missions, will, it is safe to assume, be the result of the occasion.

Rev. H. Symonds, rector of St. Luke's, presided and after devotional service, he briefly stated the object of the meeting, which was to arouse greater interest in the cause of diocesean missions. He first called upon Mr. L. H. Baldwin, of Toronto, who briefly addressed the meeting. He traced the history of the Church of England in Canada, and referred to the

the first bishop having been consecrated in 1787, and showed what work had been done in the extension of the church throughout the country from ocean to ocean, and also showed what progress had been made in home and foreign missions. He closed by appealing for greater practical interest in the cause of missions in this diocese, when there was need for greater effort on the part of the church, and greater liberality on the part of the members.

Mr. A. H. Dymond referred to the matter of money, not because it was a pleasant subject but one that must be met. It was to be regretted that there had been a falling off in the contributions to diocesan missions which would deprive several missions of aid altogether or reduce the grants all around. This was the fault of the lay element and not of the clergy. It was pointed out that many cultured men labouring in the mission field, who were working hard and successfully and, at the same time, were actually suffering—themselves and their families—suffering for the bare necessaries of life. A powerful appeal was made for larger sympathy for the cause of missions. The speaker paid a fine tribute to the noble body of workers in the mission field of the diocese of Toronto—men who were heroes in their humble way and who went on with their work uncomplaining. It was these men we were asked to help because we loved the cause of the church, which was the cause of God. The church was established to extend to them the blessings of the gospel to all the world, and the members of the church were recreant to their duty—ungrateful for the blessings the church has poured upon them.

The speaker spoke eloquently on the subject relating to the achievements of the church throughout all the world, which should be an inspiration to its members to help on its noble work. If the church of England was to be strong abroad it must be strong at home. The congregation was urged to pray more and give more—to give systematically and to pray daily for the cause of diocesan missions.

Rev. Mr. Symonds closed with a few brief remarks. He said the meeting he felt had attained its object, that of arousing greater interest in diocesan missions. The offertory would not be a missionary collection, but merely to defray expenses.

During the collection the congregation sang with great spirit "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name," Rev. Mr. Kenrick, as he did during the evening, accompanying on the organ.

The meeting closed with prayer and the benediction by Rev. J. C. Davidson, rector of St. John's.

Remarkable Trained Animals.

The most remarkable of animal trainers is, without doubt, Prof. Bonnetti, whose troupe of educated foxes, geese, ducks, fowls, ravens and dogs is marvellous. His foxes jump over hurdles and through hoops, they jump over ducks and fowls; they feed with these birds, whom it is their nature to feed on, and they run about the arena with foxhounds, whom they usually run away from. When the children see the professor's beautiful cat walk a bamboo bar, on which are eighteen lovely white mice, they cry "Did you ever?" and clap their hands in delight.

Of the trained animals now in London, however, the Siberian bears of M. W. Permane attract the most attention. To see them standing on a swing and "talking" to their master is really killing fun. The way they will sit down at a table and drink stout out of bottles is an edifying sight for any total abstainer to see. Perhaps the climax of comicality is reached when one of these unwieldly creatures has a lady's straw hat tied to his head and walks around the stage on M. Permane's arm, trying hard to kiss him all the time, and waddling about with all the gracefulness of any mature maiden lady of uncertain age among my acquaintances. That bear will shake hands with M. Permane like a thoroughly good fellow, but if you were to try to shake hands with him you would find his heartiness a little trying.—Strand Magazine.

Keep the Chin In to be Healthy.

"If my daughter were going to Europe to spend a year without her family," said a wise mother the other day, "and I were to give her a brief rule as a guide to health, it would be this, keep your chin in." This seemed unintelligible until she elaborated it and showed the effects of such an observance. She said: "To keep the chin in means to keep it well drawn back horizontally. That causes what physical culturists call a lifted chest or a live chest. A lifted chest insures deep and full breathing, and hence pure blood and perfect circulation. Perfect circulation is the greatest safeguard against contagion, and it prevents chilliness, the forerunner of colds. A lifted chest also throws the whole body into a graceful poise. The abdomen recedes, the thumbs fall into place by the side, the weight of the body falls upon the ball of the foot instead of the heel, and the shoulder blades flatten. These effects are produced when standing or walking. There are also effects in sitting. A lifted chest then insures a straight backbone with the end of spine against the back of chair, instead of a curved spine, which many women assume while sitting. The habit of retaining a lifted chest is is easily formed, provided the clothing is reasonably loose."—Prairie Farmer.

A Dead-Living Juryman.

A friend of mine, says a writer in London Answers, once paid an official £10 never to be called as a juryman. He was told all he had to do was not to turn up, even if he were called, in future.

When the day came for his attendance at the court, my friend (John Jones, I will call him) could not resist the temptation of seeing how his money had been invested, and repaired to the court.

He described the sensation of hearing "John Jones" called out as rather peculiar. It was called out a second time, and he could hardly resist answering to his name. When it was called out a third time he felt quite eerie, and much more so at what took place in consequence.

A person in deep mourning, and with a voice broken with emotion, exclaimed:

"John Jones is dead, my lord."

And his lordship, with a little reflected melancholy in his tone, observed:

"Poor fellow! Scratch his name out."

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 75c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

HAS GIANT'S STRENGTH.

WONDERFUL FEATS PERFORMED BY A CANADIAN FARMER.

Toted off a Ton of Hay—Fleet of Foot Also—His Daring Handsprings—Liked to Crack Men's Heads When in His Cups.

The performance of Sandow, Samson and all the other so-called strong men posing on the stage to-day were as nothing to the feats which made Joseph Berryhill, a farmer living within ten miles of London, Ontario, famous throughout this part of the country. Berryhill is an old man now, but is still able to do things that make him a marvel in the eyes of those who see him.

He is a trifle over six feet in height, weighs more than 300 pounds, and is so picturesque a figure that he might have stepped from the page of some tale of the Norsemen, so perfect is his blond beauty. He has always devoted himself to farming, and is comfortably well off, owning several hundred acres of land, together with horses, cattle, and everything else in proportion. As a young man Berryhill was probably as great an athlete as ever lived, for, despite his great weight, he was so fleet of foot that few professional sprinters could cope with him, while his prowess at jumping earned for him a wide reputation. He weighed perhaps 225 pounds when 20 years of age, and it was nothing for him after a hard day's work in the fields to leap 20 feet in a single running jump or to run a hundred yards in 10 1-4 seconds. His bodily strength was remarkable, and was perhaps his most distinguishing characteristic. The neighbors all knew of his feats of strength, but the first glimpse the outside world had of his capabilities was when the Great Western Railroad, now leased by the Grand Trunk, was building through Western Ontario. Berryhill, among others, contracted to furnish the railroad with timber for ties and other building purposes, and while hauling lumber to this city he came under the observation of the gang constructing that section of the road. Many of the men remarked his size and said that he would be a good man to avoid picking a quarrel with. One day, while unloading the timber from his sleigh, Berryhill began laughing at six or eight men who were striving vainly to place a pair of wheels and axle of an ordinary freight car truck on the track.

"Why, I could lift that on myself," he said.

"Bet you $25 you can't," said the construction boss, instantly.

The money was staked, and Berryhill, picking up the pair of ponderous wheels with the axle, walked ten or twelve steps with them and placed them upon the rails with as much ease as though they were of papier mache. Laughing loudly, the giant jumped into his sleigh and drove away, leaving those who had seen the feat looking after him in open-mouthed astonishment.

That was a pretty hard winter on some of the farmers, as hay had been a rather short crop, and Joe, having a number of horses to feed, drove over into Nissouri and began dickering with a farmer for some of his timothy. The Nissourian was hard-fisted and drove close bargains, and Berryhill finally gave up trying to purchase the quantity he desired at anything like a fair price. Turning to him Berryhill said, finally:

"I'll give you $5 for what I can carry off your farm myself."

The bargain was made and Berryhill departed. He came back in a few days with a sort of rack built on four short posts, and began piling hay upon it until the Nissourian's eyes were bulging. He tied it to the rack with ropes, and then, climbing beneath the load, carried off more than a ton of the farmer's good timothy, that was worth $15 a ton that winter in any market. Leaving it on the side of the highway he transferred it to a sleigh and carried it home with many a chuckle.

As a young man he was in great demand at all raising bees. A raising bee is quite a function in this part of the country. When a farmer is erecting a barn or other large outbuilding, and after all the timbers for the framework are in place, invitations are sent to all the farmers.

One of Berryhill's star performances on such occasions was to turn a series of handsprings on the plate or top beam of the framework after it was in position. The spectacle of a giant performing such evolutions forty or fifty feet from the ground on a surface not more than ten inches wide, was always an attraction to visitors, and nobody ever duplicated the feat. In the woods the man's prowess with the ax was equally remarkable. He used an ax twice as big and as heavy again as the ordinary tool, and so great was his strength that at every blow it sank to the eye in the wood. It was an ordinary thing for him to handle logs of wood that a team of horses would ordinarily be required to place in position for skidding, and whenever his horses got into a tight place or a pitch hole, and were unable to extricate the load, the giant would put his shoulder to a hind hub, call to his horses, and the trouble would be over.

When not in his cups Berryhill was as mild as a woman and was far from being quarrelsome, but when under the influence of liquor he liked nothing better than to crack men's heads together or to toss them about like ninepins. He incurred the enmity of the famous Donnelly family, which was all but exterminated sixteen miles from this place by vigilants in the winter of 1879, and he had a number of barroom fights with them in the tavern which lined the old proof line road in the days before the London, Huron and Bruce Railroad relieved the stage traffic from London to points north and northwest. No ordinary dozen men, unless they resorted to the use of firearms, knives, bludgeons or bottles could hold their own with him, and Berryhill usually came out of all such frays a glorious victor. When he got hold of a man he thrashed about with him as if his victim were a mere wisp of straw, and it is related of one encounter he had in Ryan's place at Elginfield with Patrick Gilgallin and a number of friends and followers, that he twisted the heel from Gilgallin's boot with his finger and thumb. Gilgallin had fled in terror up the stairs leading to the sleeping rooms, and Berryhill, reaching for him as he ran, caught him by the heel of the boot. With one wrench he tore the stout sole leather heel from the boot.

Berryhill is still living in London Township, and comes to the city occasionally. His chest measurement is over fifty inches, and there is little doubt that, although an old man, he can to-day duplicate most of the feats of the "strong men" who are on the road. Taken in hand by an expert as a young man Berryhill would have been the greatest of them all.—London (Ont.) Letter to New York Sun.

GOOD-NIGHT.

Good-night, I have to say good-night
To such a host of peerless things,
Good-night, unto that fragile hand
All queenly with its weight of rings,
Good-night to fond, uplifted eyes,
Good-night to chestnut braids of hair,
Good-night unto the perfect mouth,
And all the sweetness nestled there;
The snowy hand detains me, then
I'll have to say good-night again.

But there will come a time, my love,
When, if I read our stars aright,
I shall not linger by this porch
With my adieus. Till then, good-night.
You wish the time were now? And I.
You do not blush to wish it so?
You would have blushed yourself to death
To own as much a year ago.
What, both these snowy hands? Ah, then
I'll have to say good-night again.

—THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH.

FRUIT.

The Family Doctor Tells of Its Healthfulness as a Food.

If English people would only realize the immense importance and value of fruit as an article of diet in the early morning, we should find its appearance far more general on the ordinary breakfast table. Of its healthfulness at this period of the day there can be no question whatever, and more fruit and less animal food would undoubtedly conduce to a much healthier condition of body. In the morning there is an acid state of the secretions, and nothing is so well calculated to correct this as cooling, subacid fruits, such as peaches, apples and pears. The apple is one of the best of fruits; oranges also are generally acceptable to most people; but the juice alone should be taken and not the pulp, and the same may be said of lemons and pomegranates. Tomatoes act on the liver and bowels, and blackberries, figs, raspberries, currants and strawberries may be classed among the best foods and medicines. The sugar in them is nutritious, the acid is cooling and purifying and the seeds are laxative.

Fruits are the natural correctives for disordered digestion, but the way in which many persons eat them converts them into a curse rather than a blessing. Instead of being taken on an empty stomach, or in combination with simple grain preparations, such as bread, they are frequently eaten with oily foods or they are taken at the end of the meal, after the stomach is already full, and perhaps the whole mass of food washed down with tea, coffee, or other liquid. Fruits to do their best work should be eaten either on an empty stomach or simply with bread—never with vegetables. In the morning, before the fast of the night has been broken, they are not only exceedingly refreshing, but they serve as a natural stimulus to the digestive organs. And to produce their fullest, finest effect, they should be ripe, sound, and of good quality. In our climate fresh fruit should constitute not the finishing, but the beginning of the meal, particularly the breakfast, for at least six months in the year. The good effects that would follow the abundant use of fruits are often more than counterbalanced by the pernicious habit of saturating them with sugar. Very few fruits, if thoroughly ripe and at their best, require any sugar, particularly if eaten in the raw state, but it unfortunately is a fact that what is intended and prepared for us as a great good in the matter of diet should be transformed into exactly the reverse.—London Family Doctor.

Origin of the Match.

Romer, Preschel and Irinyi are variously named as inventors of phosphorus matches. From the testimony of a still living college friend, it appears that the real inventor is the Hungarian, Janos Irinyi. It was in 1835, when the latter, then 19 years old and a student at the Polytechnic School, in Vienna, attended Professor Meisaner's lectures on chemistry. He became greatly impressed by a demonstration of the reaction produced on rubbing together peroxide of lead and sulphur. It struck him at once that the reaction might be greatly intensified when substituting phosphorus for sulphur. Irinyi was not to be seen at the college for the next few days. His friend, wishing to see him, called at his rooms, but found the door locked. On joining his friends, Irinyi had his pockets full of matches, which he struck on the walls, all of them taking fire. He prepared them by melting phosphorous in a concentrated solution of glue and shaking until the mass became cold and all the phosphorus assumed a finely divided state. This emulsion was mixed with brown peroxide of lead, and sticks previously dipped in molten sulphur were immersed in the mixture. He sold his invention, it is recorded, to a merchant named Romer for about $3,500.—Invention.

Gentlemen—I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for Skin Diseases, from which I have been a sufferer for three years. I have used six bottles and am now entirely cured. I have read of Burdock Blood Bitters such as Donald Kennedy's, Medical Discovery and the Cuticura Remedies, but all to no good. I doctored one year with the best physicians in the land; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but could not remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard dry scales. The itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured; and I owe it all to B. B. B.

HE WAS HIS OWN PHRENOLOGIST.

It Cost Him Nothing Except Some Good-Natured Guying.

A man stood in front of a window a few evenings ago with his hat off. The crowd passing by noticed that he was intently studying something in the window, and at the same time feeling and rubbing his head. Some of the pedestrians stopped and watched the man and the object of his study. Pasted on the plate-glass was a phrenological chart, the various bumps being plainly outlined and labeled. The head in the chart was supplied with every bump and indentation conceivable to the most imaginative phrenologist.

Regardless of the crowd he was attracting, the man gazed bareheaded at the chart, now and then leaning over to study more closely the lines and figures, all the while testing his own skull. At a low estimate fifty persons watched the amateur phrenologist acquiring a cheap knowledge of his cranium by electric light.

"Wonder what he is?" remarked a bystander. "Say, partner, hit it yet?" put in another. "Get a plaster cast," "Go get your head shaved first, you'll feel better." "Oh, pay the man fifty cents and get a certificate," and many other similar quips were hurled at the man, but he never heard. At last some one asked him what office he was running for. He turned, saw the crowd of amused people, jammed his hat on his head and stole sheepishly away.

Foo-Bahs in Real Life.

In Panaria, one of the smaller islands of the Lipari, or Æolian group of islands in the Mediterranean, all the offices of the community inhabiting the island are united in one person, Padre Michelangelo, who is priest, mayor, harbormaster, postmaster, master of the marine telegraph and official general. He fills the whole of them to the entire satisfaction of the community, being assisted in the telegraph department by his widowed niece. Similar cases are not unknown in England. At the revising barrister's court, held on Sept. 4, 1894, at the Castle Eden Inn, Castle Eden, in the County of Durham, it transpired that in the township of Nesbitt George Brown, farmer, was the only resident and therefore filled all the public offices. He levies the rates upon himself and pays them himself. The township of Birches, in the division of Knutsford, Cheshire, has only one occupier, John Holland, farmer. He is both guardian and overseer, makes his own rates collects and pays them, and looks after the compilation of the parliamentary register. Another like township is that of Wallerscourt, in the parliamentary division of Eddisbury, where another gentleman, the only occupier, fulfils the duties of all the public offices connected with the township. At the various revision courts he attends with his parliamentary voters' list, which simply contains his own name.—Tid-Bits.

The Strength of Snails.

I have a weakness for snails, and one day, having found a fine specimen, I tied a fine cord around his shell after having fastened a bit of iron to the other end of the same, in order to keep him until I needed him. The iron was bigger than he was, and I supposed it heavy enough to hold him, until my attention was attracted by a dragging, scraping sound on the window-sill, where I had corralled my captive. This aroused my curiosity, and I determined to find out how much one snail could pull.

I loosened the string from the belt of iron and made it fast to a letter-scales, and watched Mr. Snail as he pulled the indicator around to very nearly nine ounces. Then I took a little match-box, such as matches are bought in, put it on two pendils, by way of wheels, and proceeded to hitch up my snail. I then loaded up my miniature cart with cents and found he could pull it up to a weight of nine and a quarter ounces; that is, about twenty times his own weight, which was half an ounce.

In any country where time is no object we would respectfully submit this new motive power to those studying motors.—St. Louis Republic.

To Purchase Carlyle's House.

A fund has been started in England with the object of purchasing, repairing and maintaining as a museum Thomas Carlyle's London house, 24 Cheyne Row, Chelsea.

The members of the Committee of the Fund include the Earl of Rosebery, Prof. Huxley, Lord Houghton, Lord Tennyson, Archdeacon Farrar and many others of rank and distinction.

It is proposed to raise a total sum of $20,000.

The Carlyle house is a handsome specimen of real Queen Anne architecture. In one room may be seen the fireplace and mantel before which Carlyle spent a famous silent evening with Tennyson. The stone-paved kitchen has the same open grate on which Mrs. Carlyle made her marmalade "pure as liquid amber" in taste and in look almost poetically delicate. Here, too, Leigh Hunt's Scotch porridge was stirred. The house is now for sale, unoccupied, and in a dilapidated condition.

When the Nerve Centres Need Nutrition.

A Wonderful Recovery, Illustrating the Quick Response of a Depleted Nerve System to a Treatment Which Replenishes Exhausted Nerve Forces.

MR. FRANK BAUER, BERLIN, ONT.

Perhaps you know him? In Waterloo he is known as one of the most popular and successful business men of that enterprising town. As managing executor of the Kuntz estate, he is at the head of a vast business, representing an investment of many thousands of dollars, and known to many people throughout the Province. Solid financially, Mr. Frank Bauer also has the good fortune of enjoying solid good health, and if appearances indicate anything, it is safe to predict that there's a full half century of active life still ahead for him. But it's only a few months since, while nursed as an invalid at the Mt. Clemens sanitary resort, when his friends in Waterloo were dismayed with a report that he was at the point of death.

"There's no telling where I would have been had I kept on the old treatment," said Mr. Bauer, with a merry laugh, the other day, while recounting his experiences as a very sick man. "Mt. Clemens," he continued, "was the last resort in my case. For months previous I had been suffering indescribable tortures. I began with a loss of appetite and sleepless nights. Then, as the trouble kept growing, I was getting weaker, and began losing flesh and strength rapidly. My stomach refused to retain food of any kind. During all this time I was under medical treatment, and took everything prescribed, but without relief. Just about when my condition seemed most hopeless, I heard of a wonderful cure effected in a case somewhat similar to mine, by the Great South American Nervine Tonic, and I finally tried that. On the first day of its use I began to feel that it was doing what no other medicine had done. The first dose relieved the distress completely. Before night I actually felt hungry and ate with an appetite such as I had not known for months. I began to pick up in strength with surprising rapidity, slept well nights, and before I knew it I was eating three square meals regularly every day, with as much relish as ever. I have no hesitation whatever in saying that the South American Nervine Tonic cured me when all other remedies failed. I have recovered my old weight—over 200 pounds—and never felt better in my life."

Mr. Frank Bauer's experience is that of all others who have used the South American Nervine Tonic. Its instantaneous action in relieving distress and pain is due to the direct effect of this great remedy upon the nerve centres, whose fagged vitality is energized instantly by the very first dose. It is a great, a wondrous cure for all nervous diseases, as well as indigestion and dyspepsia. It goes to the real source of trouble direct, and the sick always feel its marvelous sustaining and restorative power at once, on the very first day of its use.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease),
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then went home, but stop, I miss,

They gave us every one, a kiss,
An' said, "be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home,
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure:
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be whate'er befall.

RELIC OF A FORGOTTEN RACE.

The Fossilized Skeleton of a Man Found by Surveyors in California.

Down in San Luis, Obispo County, there has been found a puzzle that has for weeks perplexed the scientists of Standford University, a puzzle in the hardest of rock, so beaten and stained by the weather of ages as to bear all the brands and earmarks of a genuine fossil. It seems to the uninitiated to be a cast in solid rock of a human skeleton, a strangely treasured relic of a race that existed some hundreds or thousands of years ago. But there are doubts; that is a scientist's trump card; to doubt first, last and always. The find was made in February near the hamlet of Roblan, 12 miles southeast of Paso Robles. Van R. Elliott, a surveyor, was helping W. F. Gillis, superintendent of the San Luis Obispo Orchard Company, to run some new lines over the big tract. As they surveyed they came upon a stretch of rocky ground from which the rain had washed the thin covering of soil. They saw something that looked like a skeleton embedded in the rock, but on investigating more carefully found that the skeleton was part of the rock itself. The finders wrote to President Jordan about it, but as the university had no funds available for the recovery and identification of fossilized persons, the matter was dropped until a few weeks ago, when Dr. Jordan went to San Luis Obispo to attend a convention of teachers. His attention was again called to the matter, and he made a trip back into the hills to see the thing for himself. He was so impressed with it that he determined to have the curio cut out of the rock and removed to Palo Alto for study. Prof. J. P. Smith of the geological department of the university took charge, and with J. H. Means, a post-graduate student in geology, went to Roblan a week ago. They found that removal was impossible with the time and the facilities at their command, and, so, as the next best thing, made a plaster cast of the fossil. This cast is now on exhibition in the geological museum at Stanford.

Prof. Smith was asked about the fossil and in reply gave these facts: "The fossil is in the condition of a cast or mold in hard rock, very much indurated and weathered. Here and there are seen traces of bones as evidence that it was not carved by some practical joker. The specimen is 37 inches long 16 inches wide and consists of a backbone and ribs, with what may be traces of the pelvis. The number of vertebrae and ribs cannot be accurately made out. The rocks in the vicinity contain numerous invertebrate marine shells, and are undoubtedly of salt water origin, although they now lie 1,400 feet above sea level. Thus it is easily seen that the animal, whatever it may have been, is older than the San Luis Obispo Mountains. The rocks are of the miocene tertiary age, known as the white shale or the Monterey series of Prof. Lawson." Fossilized human remains have been found only as far back as quaternary times. A skull was dug up from the pliocene tertiary lava beds of Calaveras County in 1866, but it has not been generally accepted by geologists as authentic. It is also very doubtful as to whether the Calaveras lava is of the tertiary of quaternary age. Several years ago a supposed fossil man was found in the miocene tertiary of France, but this was proved a fraud. Thus the occurrence of human remains in the middle tertiary age is very doubtful, since the upper miocene, the pliocene and the whole of the quaternary periods have elapsed between that time and this. It is impossible to measure this extent of time accurately in years or even in centuries but it must have been several hundred thousand years, since in that time has accumulated the greater part of the thick mass of sediment out of which the coast range has been formed. The fossil might possibly be an anthropoid ape, but this, too, is very unlikely, since, although this class of similadae can be traced as far back as the middle miocene, they were confined to the land. Then, too, in the same rocks with the supposed man are found other vertebrate, remains of porpoises or other cetaceans. The "man fossil" might be the young of one of these.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Curing Cross Eyes.

Strabismus or "cross eyes" are now safely and almost painlessly corrected. The desired result may be obtained by the wearing of proper spectacles in early youth, but if the evil is not then corrected, an operation, later on, will be necessary.

The removal of a "cataract" from the eye is one of the most delicate operations performed by the oculist. A cataract is formed by the lens of the eye becoming opaque so as to appear grayish or otherwise, when it shuts out the light from the optic nerve. The oculist of to-day cuts into the ball of the eye and removes the darkened lens, and the optician supplies the defect by artificial lenses that make good the sight.

The demand for glass eyes is increasing as the character and quality of the eyes improve. Unsightly eyeballs are now removed in part, leaving enough of the muscles to rotate the glass shell that is placed over them. Where the work is properly done the possessor of the glass eye can move it about with all the naturalness of a real optic, and in many cases it is very difficult to tell the manufactured article from the genuine.

All the wild stories about substituting rabbits' eyes for human eyes, or the statements to the effect that oculists can take eyes from their sockets, wipe them on a coarse towel and restore them unimpaired to the happy patient, are all moonshine, and any one who is called upon to listen to any such tales is perfectly justified if, under such circumstances, he should wink the other eye.

WEST PETERBOROUGH FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

A HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL ANNUAL MEETING.

A Large Attendance of Farmers—Excellent Addresses by the Delegates Live Subjects Practically Dealt With.

The opening session of the annual meeting of the West Riding Farmers' Institute, was held in the town council chamber on Wednesday afternoon. There was a large attendance of farmers, more than the usual attendance at previous meetings.

Mr. J. Fred Davidson occupied the chair and introduced the several members of the delegation.

Prof. C. A. Zavitz, of the Ontario Agricultural College, opened the proceedings by an address on "The Best Varieties of Barley, Wheat, Peas and Oats." He detailed the means adopted to decide the question. The authorities of the College had received 81 samples of these grains from many countries of the world with similar climates. These experiments had extended over six years and the result was that in the matter of barley, oats and peas several foreign varieties had been found that were superior to the best native, but only two or three of peas. Of wheat, no foreign variety had been tried that was better than the native varieties. Of the approved varieties of grain, the department sent out five or six varieties, combining their chief characteristics, about 25,000 packages to be grown experimentally by 1,300 farmers in different sections of Ontario. In the matter of oats, 300 farmers experimented in 1894 and of these 121 carried out the experiments in full. Of these six varieties, the Siberia was at the head of the list, with 1.7 tons of straw per acre, and 48.7 bushels of grain per acre. The tests of last year were borne out by experiments of previous years. The average weight for six years per bushel was 35½ pounds. It matures earlier than the average. The Poland white was next given—1.7 tons of straw and 44.1 bushels of grain per acre. It was a very early out, short in straw, which lacks in stiffness The Jeanette, a black oat, gives 1.6 tons of straw and 47.7 bushels of grain to the acre; it was very thin in the hull. The Bavarian is a good all round oat; was an Ontario variety, where it has been grown 11 years and is at the variety. Its yield per acre was 46.9. The Lincoln variety had a yield of 46.9 per acre, and the White Schonor gives a yield of 45.7. In answer to questions the speaker said the Banner and Rosedale were good varieties. The varieties sent out four years ago as the leading varieties were superseded. Mr. J. H. Garbutt stated that his experience had been successful with the Joanette and Siberia. Mr. W. H. Riddell found the best results with the Joanette, but it requires to be sown thinly. He had also had excellent satisfaction with the Banner oats, a fact which the speaker showed was very important. Farmers should, in experimenting, try some of the older varieties with the newer. The Bonanza oats that had been so greatly boomed had utterly failed in experiment.

HEAD OF THE ONTARIO

In the matter of spring wheat of 19 experiments the Herison Bearded was the best—18.8 bushels per acre—a first class milling wheat. It has kept its lead in experiments for 6 years. Its average was 63½ lbs. per bushel. Hayne's Blue Stem was next, with 17.7 bushels per acre. It is singularly free from rust.

With regard to barley, the Mandscheuri stood at the head of the list for '94, '93 and '92 with 38.6 bushels per acre—an average of ten bushels per acre more than the common Ontario six-rowed. The Black Hullers yielded 30.1 bushels per acre. The Kinnakulla was the best yielder of the two-rowed varieties—27.7 per acre—and was the stiffest straw variety. The Duckbill, also stiff strawed, yielded 27.3 per acre. The six-rowed varieties as a class, were much earlier than the two-rowed.

As to peas, the best results of co-operative experiments came from Prussian Blue—27.9 bushels per acres. The next was the Canadian Beauty—27.1 bushels per acre. The Tall White Marrowfat—26.8 bushels per acre—and next the Egyptian Mummy—26.3 bushels per acre. Mr. W. H. Matthews, Ashburnham, submitted for identification a sample of peas, the Spanish, Egyptian, or Brazilian coffee bean. They grow on a sort of tree-like vine, yield well, but are difficult to harvest on account of short straw.

Of winter wheat experimented upon, Dawson's Golden Chaff stood at the head of the list in a long course of experiments—an Ontario variety grown to the exclusion of all other varieties in the district where it was originated—near Paris, Ont., in 1881. It always stood up straight. The yield was 35.7 bushels per acre, or about 39 4-5 bushels per bushel. The other varieties in order were Jones' Winter Fife and Early Genessee Giant, with 32.5 and 31.7 per acre.

Summarising, the speaker said that the best results were got from the best selection of grain—a matter of as much importance as the selection of stock.

The President pointed out that the detailed reports of these experiments were printed in the reports of the colleges, and these, as well as numerous other similar papers, would be sent to all members of the Institute.

A FEW POINTS ON BREEDING.

Mr. D. E. Smith, Brampton, spoke on "The Essentials of Breeding." In all kinds of stock the first essential was a strong constitution as indicated by a strong, cordy navel cord, a second indication (for cows, being the silky pliable hide—a coarse constitution was not a proof of strong constitution. The texture of the hoofs and horns of cattle was another sign. By selection and breeding any desired standard of form and quality could be reached. Another important essential was a thoroughly good digestive system—involving rapid development and maturity and consequently better profit. A good heart and lung power was necessary—narrow chest should be avoided in all kinds of stock. The next essential was early maturity. The first calf should be dropped at 28 to 30 months old to develop the milking quality. Pigs put into market shape at 150 or 160 pounds pay the best. The last point was breeding up to the demand of the market. This applied to horses, cattle, pigs and sheep.

THE MAKING OF ROADS.

Mr. J. F. Boan, of Black Creek, Welland County, vice-president of the "Good Roads Association" of Ontario, gave an address on "How to Construct and Maintain Good Roads." The methods of Macadam and Telford, the English masters of roadmaking, were contrasted, but both agreed on the point that no matter how the stone was applied, there must be through drainage. The speaker then went on to refer to the methods employed in several of the neighbouring States, which included state aid in addition to municipal funds. In some States, a good clay road when the soil admitted of it, along side of the stone road, to be used in dry weather to save the stone roads, the importance of easy grades in laying out roads was insisted upon. The statute labour system did not receive much consideration, it showed lack of system perfunctory performance of work, when the gravel is available this makes the cheapest kind of road. The speaker laid special emphasis of the importance of making the main thoroughfares to market good roads, and these should receive provincial aid. The poorer the road the greater necessity of wide tires; four and a half is the greatest width necessary. With a well built road the matter of tires was of little importance. If the from 4,000 to 10,000 day road work were commuted at a dollar a day and properly laid the result would be far better roads than we have now. The speaker said, as owner of a cheese factory, he had felt the necessity of good roads, and he wished to do what he could in solving the problem—for it was a problem—of how to make and maintain good roads.

Mr. Jos. Barnard had a good deal of experience in road making and believed that the statute labour, as at present done, would not give as much value as 50 cents a day in cash properly expended. He suggested a way to improve the statute labour system, which was to have councils to keep a good pathmaster when they get one.

Mr. Stewart thought there was not much hope of improvement of the statute labour system till that system was abolished.

VOWEL, CONSONANT, SYLLABLE.

Some Fresh Definitions of Great Value to Teachers and Others.

A. Mellville Bell, of Washington, in his note on "Syllabic Consonants," said:

"What is a vowel? What is a consonant? What is a syllable?

"A vowel is defined as a non-frictional emission of voice, or of unvocalized breath, through an oral channel with momentarily fixed configuration. Vowels, therefore, run smoothly into one another by merely altering the shape of the oral passage without interrupting it.

"A consonant is defined as an interception of the breath, or voice, by oral stoppage, or by emission through narrow chinks. The change from one consonant to another thus involves a motion of the articulating organs, producing, with more or less audibility, a puff, a flap or a sibilation.

"The two classes of elements meet in ee, y, oo, w. A syllable is any vocal element uttered with a single impulse of voice. All the vocal elements in a syllable must be clustered together, without admixture with non-vocals, but any number of non-vocals may precede or follow the vocal cluster without affecting the syllabic unity.

"The consonants l, m, n, when they are final, after consonants, frequently form syllables without vowels; as in bottle.

"The test of good pronunciation is to give each syllable its own distinct sound, so that in the most rapid utterance the ear can trace the boundaries of every syllable. But the syllabic sounds must be true to customary pronunciation.

"The name consonant, if held to imply an element that cannot be pronounced without a sonant, or vowel, would be a misnomer, and its use should, in that case, be discontinued in scientific terminology. Vowels are the soft and plastic substance of speech; consonants are the articulations or joints on which vowels and syllables turn. Their proper name is, therefore, 'articulations,' not consonants.

"Phonetic elements make syllables. Syllables make words; words are to be considered as the syllables of clauses. Clauses must be carefully individualized; for they are the syllables of sentences. Divide your sentences into their logical units, or clauses; and indicate within the clauses all their phonetic units or syllables, and you will fill the grand fundamental precepts of delivery.

Tennyson's Flowers.

Tennyson speaks of "a skin as clean and white as privet when it flowers," and truly the privet with its prim leaves and small white flowers looks a very Puritan for neatness and simplicity. References to the flowers of our gardens of course abound, and many will occur at once to the Tennyson reader. The rose and the lily play more than a commonplace part in "Maud," where, indeed, all the flowers are interested spectators of the drama. Passages such as "A walk of roses ran from door to door,

A walk of lilies crost it to the bower," from the Idylls might have been written by many others; and bell flowers, though we may be grateful to Tennyson for preserving the old-fashioned name "Canterbury bells," are easily paralleled from many poets. Perhaps the beautiful line, "Love like an Alpine harebell hung with tears," deserves an especial mention: he has written a poem to the snowdrop, which is styled "February-fair-maid," and it forms a fitting part of his picture of "St. Agnes Eve," which, as W. E. Henley has pointed out, is so dazzlingly pure in its whiteness, and a contrast to Keats' brilliantly colored poem on the same subject.

Of the early spring, with its violets, primroses and crocuses, our poet is never tired, and has avowed his especial love for April, being an Elizabethan in this as in many other things, so that it is surprising to find comparatively so little mention of the daffodil. It is hardly to be found anywhere except in "Maud," and "The Sonnet to the Nineteenth Century"—"Here in this roaming moon of daffodil and crocus." Perhaps Tennyson felt that it had been so fully celebrated elsewhere as to become hackneyed, in spite of all its beauty.—Good Words.

Charge Against a G. T. R. Detective.

MONTREAL, Jan. 17.—The case of Margaret Connell, alias Matilda Flynn, was again before Judge Dugas yesterday. The accused, who is charged with vagrancy by the wife of Grand Trunk Detective Flynn, through the agency of the Society for the Protection of Women and Children, related that she had been taken from a house of ill-fame by Flynn and kept by him; that her name was Margaret Connell. Flynn was ordered to be detained on a charge of perjury, having it is alleged, falsely stated that the girl was his illegitimate daughter.

Detective Fahey to be Released.

MONTREAL, Jan. 17.—Detective Fahey, who was sentenced to fourteen years in penitentiary in 1888 for participation in the famous Grand Trunk burglary, will, it is understood, be released in a few days, his case having been favorably reported upon to the Minister of Justice. Fahey is now in the last stages of consumption and cannot live much longer.

Carlyle, "Warts and All."

Froude thought Newman had the intellect of a Cæsar; Carlyle, he tells us, declared that Newman had the brain of a rabbit. Froude admered Charles Lamb above all English writers; Carlyle describes "Ella" and his poor sister in words that are harrowing to most of us to read. But as a conscientious biographer, intrusted with all the papers and documents, Froude decided, and rightly, that Carlyle must appear, "warts and all." And when he had given us his portrait, with these disfigurements, he told us in all sincerity that it was the portrait of the noblest human being he had ever known.—The National Review.

Costly Fur of the Silver Fox.

Next to the sea otter, for clothing purposes, the silver fox brings the highest price, and in this case the Russians are the principal buyers. The silver fox is one of the most precious denizens of the Hudson Bay territory, and as much as £120 has been paid for a single fine skin. The silver fox, however, is really not silvery, and has only a few white hairs mixed with his black ones—indeed, the most highly prized skins are entirely black. The principal use of these skins is for the collars of the cloaks of Russian ladies.—Chamber's Journal.

The Religion of Literary Men.

It is quite extraordinary how callous even the most religious persons in the past have often been to the miseries of their fellow-creatures, both in this world and the next. They have, indeed, expressed their gratitude for being safe and sound themselves, but not without a feeling of complacency that others are not so fortunate. It is this callousness which has rendered the man of letters—impulsive and sensitive, soft-hearted, yet easily moved to indignation, and charitable even toward the sins he is not inclined to—unorthodox and something more. There may be in him a want of submissiveness to the Divine will, and certainly of that unquestioning faith which is the comfort of so many souls, but there is no lack of human love and sympathy; and the man who loves his fellows, we are told, is very near to loving his Creator.

At all events, the feeling I have described seems to me to have more or less pervaded the minds of almost all men of letters with whom I have conversed upon spiritual things. Because literary men are not, as a rule, church goers, they are often considered irreligious or as complete Gallios in the matter; but this is not at all my experience with them, and I have lived in their midst for nearly half a century.

A very distinguished member of the clergy used to say, with those half-shut eyes that always showed when his vein of humor was touched, and which caused it to be said of him that he "never saw a happy moment." "What strikes one as so queer is that belief in their particular dogma is made the essential point of all sects, all of which, save one—and perhaps even that—must be wrong."

Who damns every creed but his own
Must look for a limited heaven,
And is like a man laying long odds
When the long odds to him should be given.

It never seems to strike a theologian that his calculation is contrary to the doctrine of chances.—James Payne, in the Cornhill Magazine.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Jan. 17, 1895.

Street sales here were 200 bushels white wheat at 63 1-2 to 63c, red quoted at 61 1-2 to 62c, 800 bushels barley at 45 to 48c, 500 bushels oats at 33 to 34c.

At Buffalo malsters seem supplied for the moment; there was no inquiry worthy of mention. Sellers would not shade prices and are offering very little choice barley.

Lack of speculation caused weakness in the wheat market in Chicago. The decline was small and was recovered at the close which was 1-8c higher. Corn was dull and unchanged. Oats were steady.

At East Buffalo the sheep and lambs offerings were 53 cars of sheep, higher lambs strong. All of the offerings sold at the close. The three cars Canadas on sale were not of extra quality. Very choice Canadas quoted $5.25 to $5.35. Good $5.00 to $5.20. Prime Canadia sheep $4.00 to $4.25.

Little more than a continuance of the last week's inactivity characterized the New York stock market. Chicago gas again for obvious reasons, the leading stock in volume of transactions, sold slowly off. The situation is perhaps embarrassing to the new investment interests in the stock, but situations often do grow embarrassing to investors who buy into litigation. The rest of the market was entirely inanimate until the afternoon when a moderate buying movement caused advance in almost everything.

The London stock markets opened dull on the resignation of the French President but there was a recovery later with a firm close. There was a general set back to American on sales in New York but with little selling here.

BIG SNAKES IN BRAZIL.

Anacondas Forty Feet Long Which Can't Be Kept at a Distance.

Whatever the possible dimensions of the Indian and African boas, there can be no doubt that the anaconda of Brazil grows to a size which would make this species as much the scourge of the Brazilian forest and of the waterway of the Amazons as the shark is of tropical harbors, were its ferocity equal to its strength and astonishing power of speed, whether on land or in water. It could kill and probably devour every creature, including man, which is found in the Amazon delta. The late Mr. Bates, in the eleven years spent in the Brazilian forest, saw and heard more of the habits of the anaconda than most travelers, though, like other great serpents, the individuals of this species are so little common that their appearance in any one district is too infrequent to make a special study of their habits part of the day's work of a busy naturalist. Bates' first personal experience of the creature shows how impossible it is to avoid the python by the ordinary means of isolation sufficient to keep other dangerous creatures at a distance. He was at anchor in a large boat, in deep water, in the part of Antonio Malaguerita. An anaconda swam to the boat, lifted its head from the water, broke in the side of a fowlhouse on deck, and carried off a couple of fowls. It was found that this snake had been stealing ducks and fowls from this part of the river for months, so a hunt was organized, miles of river bank were searched, and the serpent at last found sunning itself in a muddy creek and killed. It was "not a large specimen, only eighteen feet nine inches long." But Mr. Bates measured skins of anacondas which were twenty-one feet in length and two feet in girth, and he adds, "there can be no doubt that this formidable serpent grows to an enormous bulk, and lives to a great age, for I have heard of specimens having been killed which measured forty-two feet in length, or double the size of the largest which I had the opportunity of examining."

We must add a correction here. They were double the length; but the size of these great reptiles, like that of fish, increases enormously with every addition in longitudinal growth. A snake twenty feet in length would be probably four times the weight of one ten feet long, and the bulk of a four-foot anaconda would approach that of the largest crocodile. Since the publication of "The Naturalist's Voyage on the Amazons" an anaconda of twenty-nine feet has been brought to the Natural History Museum at South Kensington. A neighbor of Bates in Brazil nearly lost his ten-year-old son by the attack of an anaconda. He had left the boy in his boat while he went to gather fruit, and on his return found him encircled by the snake, whose jaws the father seized and actually tore them asunder.—London Spectator.

Good Enough For Remenyi.

The following is said to be a verbatim account of the introduction of an eminent violinist to a far western audience:

"Ladies and gentlemen," began Colonel Handy Polk, the well-known real estate agent, stepping to the front of the stage and addressing the audience, "it is my privilege this evenin' to interduce to you Signor ——, the notorious furrin fiddler, who will endeavor to favor us with some high class and A No. 1 violin playin'. The signor was born and raised in Italy, where fiddlin' is not merely a fad, but as much of a business as politics is in this country, and when it comes to handlin' a bow he emphatically knows whur he is at. He hasn't dropped into our midst by accident, but comes under the auspices of the literary society, which is payin' his wages and backin' him to the last gasp. So let it be understood that if you happen to have any criticisms to offer you are to do your kickin' to the society, and not to the signor. I'll just add that if you expect him to swing the fiddle around his head or play it under his leg, like we used to skip stones across the swimmin' hole when we were little boys and girls, you may just as well go right now and git your money back from the doorkeeper, for the signor hain't that kind of a player. That's all I have to say at present. Start up signor.—Harper's Magazine.

Business Aphorisms.

Carlyle wasn't a man of business, but he would have made a success of it had he tried it. In his writings one finds these lines of solid business truth:

A laugh is worth a hundred groans in any market.

Have a smile for all, a pleasant word for everybody.

To succeed, work hard, earnestly and incessantly.

All honest men will bear watching. It is the rascals who cannot stand it.

Better have the window empty than filled with unseasonable and unattractive goods.

When you hang a sign outside your place of business, let it be original in design and of good quality.

Wondrous is the strength of cheerfulness; altogether past calculation its power of endurance. Efforts to be permanently useful must be uniformly joyous, a spirit of sunshine, graceful from very gladness, beautiful because bright.

An Utter Impossibility

PRESIDENT OF FRANCE

M. Felix Faure Elected to the Office by the National Assembly.

NOISY SCENES AT VERSAILLES

Socialist Deputies Create a Furore During the Balloting—M. Brisson Received a Majority on the First Ballot—Extreme Indifference of the Populace.

VERSAILLES, Jan. 18.—M. Francois Felix Faure, member of the Chamber of Deputies for Seine-Inferieure, was elected President of the French Republic to succeed M. Casimir-Perier, whose resignation was read in the Chamber on Wednesday.

The day opened quiet and nothing in the appearance or demeanor of the people in Paris or Versailles indicated that the country was on the eve of an election to fill the highest office in the nation which had been voluntarily vacated by a President elected a little more than six months ago.

Except that a force of soldiers was massed at each railway station and four sappers and miners were guarding each railway bridge and grand crossing between Paris and Versailles, there was nothing to show that anything extraordinary was going on, or that anything unusual was even contemplated. Each detachment of soldiers at the stations and each guard of sappers and miners at the crossings were surrounded by an admiring group of small boys, but beyond this there was no interest evinced by the public at the event of the day. Very few persons arrived at Versailles before noon, but after that hour every train arriving here was packed with senators, deputies, newspaper reporters and sightseers.

M. Challemel-Lacour, president of the Senate, accompanied by his official secretaries, started from Paris for Versailles in the morning from the Mont Parnasse railroad station, and upon his arrival here was conveyed to the palace in an open carriage. A force of five hundred detectives arrived here from Paris early in the morning and the strength of the regular police was greatly increased, it being feared that the anarchists might seize the opportunity afforded by the crisis to indulge in bomb-throwing and other pastimes peculiar to the sect, but the fears were groundless, as nothing worse than socialist vaporings occurred throught the day.

The National Assembly, convoked in the Palace of Versailles, for the purpose of electing a President to succeed M. Casimir-Perier, was called to order by M. Challemel-Lacour at 1.10 p.m. M. Challemel-Lacour, in a brief speech, announced the resignation of President Casimir-Perier and read the text of the articles of the constitution regulating the election of a president.

As soon as the presiding officer had ceased speaking M. Michelin, Socialist, sprang to his feet and flourished a copy of a motion for revision of the constitution, shouting, "We ought not to have a President."

M. de Baudrey d'Asson (Legitimist) demanded a right to be heard, and in spite of the storm of protests from all parts of the hall insisted upon speaking from his place. While persisting in speaking he waved aloft a document which he declared contained a proposition to re-establish the monarchy. The protest had in the meantime become so vehement that they rendered M. de Baudrey d'Asson's remarks inaudible, and after repeated vain attempts to make himself heard he finally deposited the document upon the table, but it was contemptuously pushed aside by M. Challemel-Lacour, while the Republicans and members of the Centre made the hall ring with cheers. Nothing daunted, M. de Baudrey d'Asson produced a volume containing the rules governing the proceedings of the national convention and demanded a hearing respecting the breach of the regulations which had been committed.

The President remained obdurate and the fiery Legitimist, seeing that his efforts to make a speech were hopeless, finally subsided. Lots were drawn at 1.17 p.m. for 36 scrutators to supervise the balloting. Then came the drawing lots to see what letter the voting should begin with. Precisely as was the case last June, the letter "L" was drawn, and M. Labarthe (Moderate Republican) was enabled for the second time to begin the balloting for a president, he having began the voting when M. Casimir-Perier was elected. When the name of M. Mirman (Socialist) was called there was no response, that deputy being a soldier garrisoned at Vincenne, and the colonel of his regiment having refused to grant him a furlough in order that he might be present in the assembly. The Socialists raised a tremendous uproar because M. Mirman's vote was not recorded.

The voting was a slow process. It was conducted precisely as upon the occasion of the election of M. Casimir-Perier last June, each deputy and senator in response to his name walking to the platform, depositing his ballot in an urn and returning to his seat. While the voting was in progress the members of the assembly indulged in electioneering for their respective candidate. The balloting began at 1.20 p.m. and lasted until 3.30. The counting, revising, etc., of the votes required another hour and the result was officially announced at 4.30 p.m. as follows:—Brisson 338, Faure 344, Waldeck-Rousseau 184, scattering 28. Total number of votes cast 794; necessary to elect 398. The scattering votes included six for Meline, four for Dupuy, two for Cavaignac, two for Loubet and one for Henri Rochefort. When the result of the vote was proclaimed the members again fell to electioneering and speculating upon the outcome of the second ballot, M. Brisson having fallen sixty votes short of a sufficient number to elect him.

When M. de Baudry d'Asson voted he shouted "Vive Catholic France; vive le Roi."

The second ballot was taken in semi-darkness and the gallaries were in consequence almost emptied. The hall was wretchedly lighted and many of the spectators as well as a number of senators and deputies sought the better lighted lobbies.

The announcement of the second ballot was made amid a terrible din. Challemel-Lacour's voice was quite inaudible and his hands trembled violently. It was five minutes after he spoke before all members of the assembly knew the result. The figures generally known were then only approximated—Faure 430 and Brisson 361—but they sufficed to show that Felix Faure was the new president of France.

The scene was absolutely devoid of solemnity or even dignity. The Brissonites who had not once ceased howling were joined by other malcontents and the windows were fairly shaken by the indescribable tumult. The Radicals mounted chairs and benches shouting "Down with the President elected by the right." The Socialists ran up and down the aisles howling "Down with the thieves," "Down with the Congo adventurers." Down with the Panama scoundrels." Occasionally when the din subsided for a moment the Socialists would yell in an ear-splitting chorus: "Hurrah for the Social republic," "Hurrah for the Social revolution."

Baudry d'Asson, the Orleanist, had got a conspicuous place near Challemel-Lacour and with purple face and waving arms proclaimed a hundred times that the presidency was useless and the republic must end.

The investure of the new President with his official powers took place in the library of the Versailles palace. It consisted merely in Challemel-Lacour's reading to him the minutes of the assembly.

M. Faure is a tall, imposing figure, whose lines show the training he got in early life as a mechanic. Although a millionaire shipowner he has simple tastes. His election is a blow to the protectionist party. The substitution of reciprocity treaties for the Meline tariff is only a question of time. M. Meline's newspaper organ, La Republique Francaise, admitted yesterday that Faure's election would mean the same as tariff reform. The result of the election is received enthusiastically in Lyons.

STABBED BY AN ANARCHIST.

The Attorney-General of Milan, Italy, Assassinated in His Office.

ROME, Jan. 18.—Signor Celli, Attorney-General of the Province of Milan, was stabbed to death in his office yesterday. The assassin was captured by a policeman on guard at the door. He is an anarchist. The doorkeeper says that he gained admission by professing to have legal business with the attorney-general. The motive of the assassination is clear. This whole district has been for years a hotbed of conspiracy and there has been no end of trials for sedition. Many revolutionists are now awaiting trial. Among the agitators Celli is known as the "anarchist killer." At the opening of the judicial year he delivered an address denouncing the anarchists and pledging himself to bring as many as possible to justice. After making this speech he received many threatening letters.

Opening of the Swedish Parliament.

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 18.—The session of the Riksdag was opened yesterday by the King in person. The speech from the throne defended the union of Sweden and Norway by the Act of 1814. Though this union was necessary, his Majesty said it was capable of improvement in detail, yet the fundamental idea was a great one. The speech announced the introduction of grants for the maintenance of the workmen in case of age, sickness or accident. A bill was also submitted providing for an increase of the duty on cereals, in conformity with the royal decree promulgated January 5. The aim of this bill is to prevent the importation of grain for speculative purposes.

An Italian Victory in East Africa.

ROME, Jan. 18.—A despatch from Massowah says that Gen. Baratieri, commander of the Italian troops in East Africa, again met Chief Ras Hangasola and his army after pursuing them for 10 hours. The battle was fought south of Coatit. The Italian artillery cut down the enemy by the hundreds and eventually put them to flight. The Italian victory was complete and decisive. The enemy left all their dead and wounded, arms and ammunition and quantities of stores on the field. Among the wounded were several chiefs.

A Drummer Suicides.

BUFFALO, Jan. 18.—R. T. Palmer, aged 29, hardware drummer, suicided by shooting at his home here. He was engaged to be married and his relations with his fiancee and family were cordial and his business arrangements satisfactory. The cause for the rash act is a mystery.

UNEASINESS IN MONTREAL.

Violence Feared From the Mob of Thousands of Unemployed.

MONTREAL, Jan. 18.—The labor difficulty is causing the authorities grave uneasiness. The labor leaders threaten that ten thousand workingmen will march upon the city hall and demand work and that the demonstration will be repeated until something is done. If the demonstration takes place as planned there may be violence, as the mob has been fully incited to use dynamite and to resort to force. The police authorities propose to take precautions and a strong force will be sent to the city hall to meet any emergencies. The Mayor has started a fund for the relief of the distressed, but this fails to appease the labor leaders, who declare that the unemployed want work, not charity.

RELIGION AND POLITICS

Sir Oliver Mowat's Address to the Electors in Kingston.

HIS PLEA FOR TOLERANCE

The Sectarian Spirit as Manifested in the Opposition to Hon. William Harty Strongly Deprecated—The Government's Policy in This Respect—Mr. Ross' Address.

KINGSTON, Ont., Jan. 18.—The Opera House was thronged last night to hear Sir Oliver Mowat and Hon. G. W. Ross in the interests of Hon. W. Harty. The ministers reached the city in the afternoon and were cordially greeted by a deputation of leading Liberals and conveyed to the city station in a special car. Afterwards they visited the Dairy School and School of Mines and manifested much interest in these newly established institutions.

At eight o'clock in the evening they received an enthusiastic reception in the Opera House. Edward J. B. Pense, President of the Reform Association, presided and briefly opened the meeting.

Sir Oliver Mowat spoke first and chiefly dwelt on the religious question, which was uppermost in Kingston. He held that no one questioned the merits of Mr. Harty, either as a business man, moral man, or socially, but some objected to his religious faith. The Premier pointed out the support Canada had given to the grand wholesouled Roman Catholics, Cartier, Tache, Sandfield MacDonald and Sir John Thompson. The late Sir John Macdonald was earnestly supported by Roman Catholics, and had it not been for his alliance with them in Quebec he could never have maintained his place. This being so was it fair to raise the religious cry against Hon. Mr. Harty? Outside of that one thing every man said he was a faultless candidate.

Sir Oliver Mowat then went on to prove the grounds of common Christianity between Protestants and Roman Catholics. He showed that tolerance was being expressed by all religious denominations and they were seeking to introduce pure, true religion to the people. Persecution did no good and those who defended their religion with their tongue and libelled it with their lives commanded little respect from anybody. He spoke of the conduct of the Government as regards patronage and grants to Roman Catholics and of its Separate School legislation, proving that in all instances the acts of the Government were universally commended. He told of the work of Roman Catholics in the army, and closed this part of his address by saying: "If Roman Catholics have been our comrades in arms they should also be our friends in peace."

Sir Oliver reviewed the work of the Ontario Government and concluded by remarking that if the electors voted upon the merits of the candidate and Government he would have no doubt of the result of the Kingston election.

Hon. G. W. Ross followed in an address showing that no classes had any grievances against the Government. Its financial operations, its grand charitable work and its temperance policy were universally endorsed; its legislative work towards separate schools, continuously endorsed for thirty years by both parties, save as to the rights of the latest session, and its attitude to education and agriculture were strong advocated. He declared it would be a blot on Ontario if its elections were to be decided on grounds of religious intolerance. He said it was a slander to charge that politics existed in the education department. It could not be proved. If it could be, even before twelve Kingston Tories, he would retire. He closed with a review of the work done to maintain the constitutional rights of Ontario.

Hon. W. Harty also gave a short address

SENATOR TASSE DEAD.

He Passes Away After a Lingering Illness of Three Months.

MONTREAL, Jan. 18.—Senator Tasse died yesterday, after three months' illness, which he bore with great fortitude. In the last fortnight he has been unconscious for most of the time. During his illness he was visited by Sir A. P. Caron, Archbishop Fabre, and leading citizens.

Senator Tasse was 45 years of age, and leaves a wife and two daughters. For fifteen years he was editor of La Minerve and was an uncompromising Conservative. He formerly represented Ottawa city in the Commons and succeeded the late Senator Trudel in the Senate. He was unsuccessful in several elections.

He was one of the Canadian commissioners at Chicago at the World's Fair and was the author of several books.

The funeral will take place to-morrow morning.

Eleven Vacancies in the Senate.

OTTAWA, Jan. 18.—The death of Senator Tasse at Montreal leaves eleven vacancies in the Canadian Senate. There are two vacancies for Ontario, for the places vacated by the deaths of Senator John Macdonald, Toronto and B. Flint, Belleville. In Quebec province there are four vacancies to fill the places through death of Sir John Abbot, G. G. Stevens, Wm. Henry Chaffers and Joseph Tasse. In New Brunswick there are three vacancies in the places of A. E. Botsford, John Glazier and W. H. O'Dell. In Nova Scotia there is one vacancy and in Prince Edward Island one. The latter vacancy is for the place of Senator Howlan, who became Lieutenant-Governor of the Province.

Professor Mills Gets Clear.

OTTAWA, Jan. 18.—The libel suit of F. H. Mercer, of Ottawa, a breeder of fancy dogs, against Professor Mills, of McGill University, Montreal, was dismissed at the assize court here yesterday. Chancellor Boyd charged the jury very strongly against Mr. Mercer. He stated that it was quite evident upon the face of the evidence that Mr. Mercer's action in entering the dog "Newcastle" was a frand and that Prof. Mills was justified in writing the letters he did. A verdict for Mills with costs, which are heavy, was rendered by the jury.

Quebec Men Want Work.

QUEBEC, Jan. 18.—A large number of workingmen called on Mayor Parent, asking for work from the corporation. Mayor Parent says that 15,000 yards of stone would have to be broken soon and 200 or 300 men could find work. He also promised to do his utmost to provide work from other sources.

FLYNN HAD A RECORD

The Detective, Charged With Perjury, Has Been Heard of Before.

HIS CAREER IN QUEBEC CITY

While on the Police Force He Became Involved in Several Scandals and Was Discharged From the Force in Disgrace—His Preliminary Trial Commences.

MONTREAL, Jan. 18.—Detective Flynn who was arrested on a charge of perjury in connection with the case of the girl, Maggie Connell, was before the police court yesterday for preliminary examination.

There was an affecting scene during the proceedings between the girl and her mother. The girl, when she saw her mother, rushed into her arms and pleaded forgiveness.

The magistrate ordered the girl back to jail to await examination and the proceedings against Flynn were continued.

The arrest of the late Grand Trunk detective recalls several acts in his career which have lain beneath the surface for some time and are generally known. Detective Flynn was formerly a native of Quebec and became a member of the police force of that city. He was considered by many to be a first-class policeman, but he eventually became involved in several scandals of a [illegible] nature and was discharged from the force in disgrace. He came into close [illegible] nection with Judges Pelletier and Chauveau, both of whom can give interesting details of Flynn' Quebec record. After his discharge, he found Quebec too hot to hold him and he moved to this city. Several of the city detectives had come to know him in several cases in which he had assisted them in the Capital city and recommended that he be admitted to the Montreal police force, which was accordingly done. Flynn was still on the force when Chief Hughes assumed control of affairs some three years ago.

Flynn served under Captain Loye, of No. 5 police station, and was regarded as an intelligent worker. A few months after Chief Hughes' ascent to the police throne he received a letter from Quebec said not to be an official communion, giving several interesting facts as to Flynn's record in Quebec. Flynn was at once discharged again and shortly afterward the police world was startled by the announcement that Flynn had been given the position of Grand Trunk detective at the Bonaventure station. Many were the conjectures as to this startling preferment.

During the eighteen months or so of his services at the Grand Trunk he was regarded by the company as an excellent detective, the company stating when they discharged him last Monday that prior to his connection with the Margaret Connell case no rumor of anything to his discredit had reached them.

BROOKLYN CAR STRIKE.

One Company Comes to an Agreement With Its Employes—A Conference.

BROOKLYN, Jan. 18.—The State Board of Arbitration succeeded in settling the trouble between the employes of the Newton and Dekalb avenue street railroad. The president of the company announces that the strike, so far as it concerns his lines, has been declared off and that the cars will be running regularly. He says that no concessions have been offered to the strikers and that the arrangements are practically the same.

The Putnam avenue and Halsey street line had considerable trouble all the afternoon. The police had great difficulty in keeping the tracks clear and clubs were used freely whenever the crowd became boisterous. At 5 o'clock no more cars were sent out and as fast as those on the line arrived they were housed for the night. At the office of the Brooklyn City railroad it was stated that in all 100 cars had been running during the day on the three lines operated by the company. The company did not attempt to run the cars last night.

Manager Wicker, of the Brooklyn, Queen's County and Suburban Company, which operates the Williamsburg lines, held a conference with the strike committee in the afternoon. The State Board of Arbitration brought about the meeting.

Attempt to Reorganize the Clan-na-Gael.

BUFFALO, Jan. 18. — John Devoy, of Chicago, who was a prominent figure in the Clan-na-Gael before it was disrupted by the discovery of the murder of Dr. Cronin, has been in this city a week. Mr. Devoy has visited Batavia, Lockport and other near-by places to test the feeling of former members of the society on the question of reorganizing. A meeting is being held but leading members of the present leading Irish organization, the Acient Order of Hibernians, oppose Devoy's ideas and are endeavoring to prevent material results following the meeting.

His Record Not the Best.

OTTAWA, Jan. 18.—Chief McVeity received a letter from the chief of police of Saginaw, Michigan, enquiring as to the character of Ben Merritt, who had been arrested there and had pleaded guilty to a charge of burglary, and who claimed to come from Ottawa. Merritt had put on a plea of past good character. The Saginaw police consequently wanted to know his Ottawa record. The chief stated that Merritt, who was a printer, left Ottawa about six weeks ago before clearing up a charge connected with the disappearance of a watch and $15 owned by Miss Jennie Murdock in whose house he boarded.

Fatal Accident at Little Glace Bay.

SYDNEY, N.S., Jan. 18.—A terrible accident occurred at Little Glace Bay last evening. Just after dark a ballast train left Bridgeport for a ballast pit beyond Port Morien. Some time afterwards the mangled body of a man was discovered on the track by Stirling pit switch, which is but a few hundred yards from Glace Bay station. One arm was torn from the socket, both legs broken, the skull smashed and the body generally horribly mutilated. The man was Hugh McVarish, of Craigneish, Invernessshire county. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death. Deceased was unmarried.

CLARA FORD'S CASE.

The Accused Woman Makes an Affidavit—A Postponement Asked.

TORONTO, Jan. 18.—The criminal assizes were opened before Mr. Justice Street yesterday, William Lount, Q.C., acting as Crown prosecutor. The case in which Clara Ford is accused of murdering Frank Westwood is on the docket. The trial may not be gone on with, however, but postponed until the next court. Mr. W. G. Murdoch, counsel for the girl, will make the request for delay. Miss Ford has made an affidavit and upon this will be based the appeal. It is set forth that owing to newspaper publications public opinion has become intensified so against the girl that she would find it impossible to secure an unprejudiced jury or a fair trial.

She is in possession of the names of witnesses who are of the first importance to her, and of those who can testify as to her movements throughout the night of the shooting of young Westwood. Being confined a prisoner and without means she has been unable to secure the attendance of these witnesses, and therefore is not in a position to proceed with her trial. With reference to the confession she is said to have made to the detectives, it is believed that she will make a straight denial, not that she did not tell the story sworn to, but that she had been harrassed and questioned to such an extent that she was suffering from hysteria and made statements that were totally untrue.

In addressing the jury at the assizes, his Lordship briefly outlined the cases to be considered, calling special attention to the case of Clara Ford. He reviewed the evidence taken at the preliminary hearing and called attention to the prisoner's confession, this being an important factor in the Crown's case.

WESTERN DAIRYMEN'S ASSOCIATION.

Close of the Annual Meeting—Election of Officers.

STRATFORD, Jan. 18.—The meetings of the Western Dairymen's Association closed yesterday afternoon. This has been the most successful convention financially and otherwise that the association has ever held. A. W. Campbell, of St. Thomas, spoke on the relation of good roads to dairying, and was followed by Prof. Robertson on dairying in Canada.

In the morning Messrs. Everett, Chafals and Dilion were the principal speakers. At the afternoon session the attendance had fallen off somewhat, but under spirited addresses from Messrs. Gould, Pearce, Robertson, Derbyshire and others interest was fully maintained until the adjournment.

A resolution was adopted strongly recommending that such regulations be adopted and such laws enacted as may compell cheese factories to brand all cheese made with the date on which it was manufactured.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, A. Pattullo, Woodstock; 1st Vice-President, A. F. MacLaren, Toronto; 2nd Vice-President, Harold Eagle, Attercliffe. Directors, John Prain, Harriston; J. N. Paget, Canboro; J. F. Williams, Ingersoll; Geo. Robertson, Lucknow; Thos Ballantyne, Stratford; J. S. Pearce, London; Harry White, Hawkesville. Auditors, J. C. Hegler, Ingersoll and J. A. Nelles, London.

Last night the members of the association were the guests of the city in a banquet at the Windsor hotel.

South Brant Farmers' Institute.

BRANTFORD, Jan. 18.—The South Brant Farmers' Institute held a meeting Wednesday evening. A fair attendance was present. W. W. Hillton, Leamington, delivered an address on "The farmers' garden and how to make it pay." Prof. Panton delivered an address on plants and their effect on the soil. J. R. Moyle on sheep shearing. In the evening Prof. Panton addressed the meeting on the foundation of soil. Addresses were also delivered by Hon. Jno. Dryden and W. F. Cookshutt. Yesterday morning the session opened in the court house at 10 o'clock when Prof. Panton gave an address on "Insects" and Thos. McMillan on "Corn growing silo." Messrs. Holterman and Hillborn and others also addressed the assembly.

Burglars in Delhi.

DELHI, Ont., Jan. 18.—Our town has been again visited by burglars. This time Messrs. Cryale & Stralton were the victims. An entrance was made in their store through the side window. The safe was drilled with some tools stolen from Pettit's blacksmith shop and the door blown open with dynamite. They were unable to open the interior vault, so obtained nothing out of the safe. They secured about $1.50 in coppers out of the till.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Jan. 18, 1895.

In local grain circles there is next to nothing doing. Prices are unchanged and receipts are small. Wheat prices are unchanged, with moderate offerings. White is quoted at 57 to 58c west; spring, 60 to 61 1-2c on the Midland; Manitoba wheat No. 1 hard 82c west and 84c east. The barley market is slow. Oats are quoted, west, white 26c and mixed 27c.

Wheat was dull in Chicago and closed 1-4c lower, corn lost 1-4 to 3-8c on light business. There was a heavy selling movements in oats which caused a decline of 1-4 to 1-3c.

In Buffalo barley was quiet, malsters still awaiting a break in prices. Sales—2,000 bushels No. 2 western 60c and 5,000 bushels No. 3 extra Canada 60c. No. 1 Canada quoted at 65c.

At East Buffalo in sheep and lambs the total offerings 25 cars, including a few cars Canada lambs which sold at $4.65 to $5.10. No very prime here, either Canadas or natives.

While speculation at the New York stock exchange was quiet the undertone of the market was stronger than for a long time past. Prices were higher all around and the prominent issues made gains of 1-4 to 1 1-2c per cent. outside of Baltimore and Ohio which rose 2c per cent. to 64 3-4c. The industrials were less prominent in the dealings. Near the close Chicago gas rallied to 72 5-8c.

The London stock markets were active and strong all around. There was a sharp rise in English rails. The feature of the markets was the reduction of deposit rates by the Scotch banks caused by a renewed rush for gilt-edged securities. The better tendency for Americans continues.

Coffee and the Digestion.

To inveterate tea and coffee drinkers, says the London Graphic, we would commend the study of some interesting experiments made recently by an eminent German scientist, Prof. Schutzenstein, who has been investigating the effect on processes of digestion produced by these beverages. For this purpose the professor prepared an artificial gastric juice and mixed it with coagulated egg albumen, with and without additions of tea and coffee infusions. The results obtained are extremely instructive, for while the gastric juice by itself was able to digest 94 per cent. of the egg albumen, in the space of eight hours, when tea was added the proportion digested was reduced to 66 per cent. while when a decoction of coffee was mixed with the albumen, the gastric fluid was only able to digest 61 per cent., or less than two-thirds of the albumen. The digestive power of the gastric juice appeared to vary with the strength of the infusion, the disturbing effect being less when the solutions of tea and coffee were weakened. The professor is of the opinion that the deleterious effect produced is due to the tannin, which is extracted during the process of making, and not to the presence of thein and caffein, and he mentions that tea, which has not been allowed to stand more than two or three minutes is less injurious, because a smaller quantity of this undesirable ingredient, tannin, has been produced than when it is boiled up or left in contact with the leaves for a considerable length of time. But it should be remembered that the weaker infusions, besides containing less tannin, also contain less of all the poisonous properties contained in the tea leaf and coffee berry, and that it is not only the obnoxious tannin which is thus kept in subjection.

Steel vs. Iron.

One of the most noteworthy features in the industries of the Black Country just now is a steady and continuous substitution of steel for iron. For a long time steel tubes, steel boilers, and steel girders have superseded similar productions in best Staffordshire iron, but the latest and most important development is the manufacture of steel sheets for galvanizing purposes. One of the largest sheet firms in South Staffordshire has recently stopped their puddling furnaces, finding it to their advantage to import steel billets from the North Country and roll them into sheets, rather than rely as formerly upon bar iron of their own puddling.—Hardware Trade Journal.

Fruits to Preserve Health.

Fruit cools the blood, cleans the teeth and aids the digestion. Those who can't eat it miss the benefits of perhaps the most medicinal food on nature's bill of fare. Unripe fruit is sickening, because the pulp, instead of being soft and containing syrup and wine, is tough and filled with acid; the gastric system cannot dissolve the one or absorb the other, the organs become irritated, inflammation sets in and the result is distress, disease and often death. Spoiled fruit is simply so much decay, and the very thought of consuming it makes one shudder. If unripe and decaying fruit be eaten, by all means cook it, so as to soften the pulp and kill the worm.

How Much Food is Needed.

How much should a man eat in a week? Sir Lyon Playfair gives the following as all that is necessary: Three pounds of meat, with one pound of fat, two ordinary loaves of bread, one ounce of salt and five pints of milk; or for the meat five or six pounds of oatmeal may be substituted. This sounds like a starvation diet, but Sir Lyon Playfair generally knows what he is talking about. —Nature.

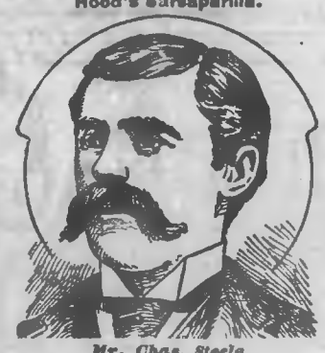
Appetite and Health Restored by Hood's Sarsaparilla.



Mr. Chas. Steele
St. Catherine's, Ont.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"For a number of years I have been troubled with a general tired feeling, shortness of breath, pain in the back, and constipation. I could get only little rest at night on account of the pain and had no appetite whatever. I was that tired in my limbs that I gave out before half the day was gone. I tried a great number of medicines but did not get any permanent relief from any source until, upon recommendation of a friend, I purchased a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which made me feel better at once. I have continued its use, having taken three bottles, and

FLORIDA GRAPE FRUIT.

Mr. Wm. Cluxton, having spent a winter in Florida, furnishes the following reliable commendation of the salutary and health-giving qualities of the Florida "Grape Fruit" (resembling an orange), sold by OSTROM BROS:—

The Grape Fruit sold in the shops in Peterborough is a native of Florida.

Some persons believe it is the best fruit in the world—others say it is the "forbidden fruit" of the Garden of Eden.

It is a providential arrangement for Florida which, in parts, is a malarious country. It is a tonic containing quinine, which is a preventive of fever.

The trees are grown from seeds planted in rows, and the young trees are transplanted in the same way as apple trees in this country. The fruit matures at the same time as the orange—the end of January or beginning of February—although some of both are allowed to remain on the trees later.

For the breakfast table the Grape Fruit should be cut in two halves and the core taken out with a sharp knife, then use a dessert spoon, squeeze the fruit and sup the juice. When finished in this way it has the appearance of a squeezed lemon.

A Common Affliction

Permanently Cured by Taking

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

A CAB-DRIVER'S STORY.

"I was afflicted for eight years with Salt Rheum. During that time, I tried a great many medicines which were highly recommended, but none gave me relief. I was at last advised to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, by a friend who told me that I must purchase six bottles, and use them according to directions. I yielded to his persuasion, bought the six bottles, and took the contents of three of these bottles without noticing any direct benefit. Before I had finished the fourth bottle, my hands were as

Free from Eruptions

as ever they were. My business, which is that of a cab-driver, requires me to be out in cold and wet weather, often without gloves, and the trouble has never returned."—THOMAS A. JOHNS, Bradford, Ont.

A LOVER AND HIS LASS.

Their Dialogue After Reading the Medical Press.

HE:

Take, oh! take those lips away!
Not but what I want to kiss them,
Not but what, believe, me, pray,
I most certainly shall miss them.
Heretofore, you know, I've joyed
In our frequent lip-communion;
Never yet have I been cloyed
With the sweets of labial union;
'Tis on other grounds, I say,
"Take, oh! take those lips away!"

My decision is no whim,
Due, my love, to fit of vapors,
'Tis the consequence most grim
Of perusing doctors' papers;
For these journals now declare,
With malign persistance, Beryl,
That each kiss in which we share
Reeks (excuse the word) with peril.
That is why I'm forced to say,
"Take, oh! take those lips away!"

SHE:

Try not thus to me dissuade,
For in vain is your endeavor,
What, shall I shrink back afraid,
When my Edwin dares? No never!
Darling, you know well our case.
Love has bound us in one tether,
So, if there be risks to face.
We shall face them both together;
As you love me, then, don't say,
"Take, oh! take those lips away!"

HE AND SHE:

We will never be coerced
By the bullying bacillus,
Doctors, though they say their worst,
With dismay shall never fill us,
Let us, therefore, both of us,
Their last raven-croak dismissing,
Show that thus—and thus—and thus!
We still mean to go on kissing.
Neither of us means to say,
"Take, oh! take those lips away!"

A GIFTED PARISIAN DOG.

He Knew a Better Trick Than Barking at the Burglars.

An amazing story of canine sagacity is told in a recent number of La Lanterne, of Paris. M. and Mme. Herisson, living in the Rue St. Sauveur, went to the theatre one evening, leaving their domicile guarded only by a very intelligent little dog, who answered to the name of Castor. They valued him highly, and often remarked:

"Castor? We would not sell him for 10,000 francs."

They had not been long away when burglars entered the house. Castor, who was at that moment in the kitchen, whiling away the hours by chasing his tail, heard the noise, and not recognising his master's step, pricked up his ears and listened. A moment more and he decided it must be thieves. To the proverbial fidelity of his race there was added in this wonderful dog the wisdom of serpents. Realizing that if he barked the intruders would seize and silence him forever, he sat down, covered his head with his paws and thought intently. At last a light broke over his mind, and he stole noiselessly from the house and ran swiftly to a near-by building which was in the course of construction. There he seized a lighted lantern in his mouth and returned with it to the house.

The ruse met with the success it deserved. The thieves, seeing the light in the adjoining room, believed themselves detected, and fled. Castor's joy knew no bounds, and when his owners returned they found him still rubbing his paws with satisfaction.

CHINA AND JAPAN.

China has an academy of manner that prescribes etiquette for the whole empire.

In Hong Kong, according to recent statistics, the population averages only 366 women to every 1,000 men.

If the United States had as great a population relatively as Japan it would have a population of 260,000,000 people.

Mrs. Marth C. Fisher, of Washington, D. C., having use for a baby carriage when living in Japan with her husband in the the early days, invented what is now known as the jinriki-sha. Wheeled vehicles had not being in use, and the little two-wheeled baby carriage attracted great attention.

Japanese workmen bathe the whole body once a day, and some of them twice. Public baths are provided on every street. They are fed by a constant current of cold and hot water. The bather plunges in, remains immersed some ten minutes, then comes out and receives a warm douche of fresh water.

TO TRAIN THE BABY IN BEAUTY.

Suggestions for Avoiding Some Common Disfigurements.

Have you ever noticed how many people have ears which project, eyes which look bald because they have no eyelashes and brows, and thumbs which are broad and flat on the end? That is because in infancy their mothers were either indifferent or ignorant of a few simple observances which would have obviated all these physical defects. Babies for the first few years are really only tiny bundles of malleable cartilage, and it behooves mothers to see that this cartilage is not trained in the way it should not go.

About the ears—Many men and women to-day have to thank the bonnet strings of infant years for oval appendages which establish a resemblance between them and donkeys. Mothers should avoid tying anything behind the baby's ears. A good plan, when the baby is asleep, is to lay it on its side so the little head will press the ear flat. So common has become this disfigurement that skeleton caps are made to press the baby's ears close to the head. A silk handkerchief, however, drawn over the top of the head, down over the ears and tied securely under the chin answers the same purpose. Children with ears which project should sleep with this arrangement over the ears.

Many children inherit "bald" eyes, or eyes without lashes and only a shadow where the brows should be. This is especially the case where one or both parents are blonds.

Pure vaseline rubbed on the brows several times daily and put on the lashes at night will promote immediate growth. Nor does this apply only to children, but is equally efficient with adults.

Nothing too strong can be said against permitting children to suck their thumbs. Charming and heart-delighting as this common occupation of the baby is to the average mother, nothing will more surely ruin the shape of the hands. It is the cause of broad, flat thumbs in after life. There are preparations to put upon the baby's thumbs which will render those rosy digits less palatable, and after one or two attempts baby will soon forget the injurious habit.

General Directions for Cooking Fish.

When some time must elapse before cooking fish, remove the entrails, sprinkle a little salt inside, and keep at an even temperature, as cold as convenient, but not directly on ice.

To scale fish place the fish on a large paper, scrape first with the knife parallel with the backbone and then from the tail toward the head. After it is done, the paper may be burned and the scales are out of the way.

Then wipe carefully with a damp cloth, but do not put the fish in water.

Since the skin is an excretory organ it is well not to cut it. The fish may, also be cut from the bone and served in various dainty fashions.

This, of course, does not apply to trout, smelt and other pan fish.

The only secret in boning is to hold the knife close to the bone, scraping away every particle of flesh.

To remove the skin, loosen it with a knife around the head and pull quickly toward the tail. If the fingers are dipped in salt occasionally it will give them a firmer grip on the slipping fish. This will be done in the markets if the purchaser so directs.

All methods, broiling, boiling, frying, baking, have a similar effect on the flesh of animals and fish, softening the connecting tissues and hardening the juices.

This is a guide for all ways of cooking—the fish is done when it loses its transparent, glassy appearance and has become opaque, and when it separates easily from the bones.

Whatever the method of cooking, apply great heat at first to sear the outside and prevent the escape of the juices, except for a soup or chowder.

Broiling is assuredly the oldest method of cooking, and no new one surpasses it. The skin of small or thin fish serves to keep them in shape; slices of halibut or salmon may be broiled whole or the skin and bone removed and cut in fillets.

Whitefish should be brushed with soft butter to prevent burning. Oily fish do not require it. Broil the flesh side first. A thick fish may be partially broiled, then put in an oven to insure thorough cooking. Sear quickly, then move further away from the fire.

Small portions are rendered more delicate by broiling in buttered paper.

Boiling is the most wasteful method of cooking, unless the water is also used for a soup or sauce. This may be done if too much salt is not added.

Cheap Silks and Laces.

One result of the cheapness of silk is the number of waists to wear with woolen skirts for ordinary occasions and with blazer suits for outings. Next to the silks in point of reduced prices for luxuries come the laces. Naturally point and real thread laces are as dear as ever, but the host of clever imitations of fine laces sell at prices most astonishingly low. The stiff and rather harsh point de venise is seen everywhere, but that is one of the dearest imitations. There are richelien collars that cover the shoulders, and there are others woven in vandyke pattern, and these deep collars give wonderful style and dignity to a costume. Such a collar can be purchased (imitation) for about $5. Next to this in richness is the point de gene, which is shown in several shades of white, from ivigny and ivory to a deep rich yellow. There are some laces in putty color, and they go better with some colors than any other shade. The margot is quite a favorite lace and is rich and gives a good effect at a small cost. Russian point is handsome and much in demand for trimming thin gowns. The net top bourdon laces for skirts are rich beyond compare, but very expensive. Black chantilly in very choice patterns is often seen, not as often as it should be, however, and black spangled laces are largely employed on handsome black dresses for receptions and in many coaching gowns. The importers say that bourdon lace is but at the beginning of its popularity, particularly for rich out of door costumes. For graduation dresses and for dainty afternoon and evening gowns for young girls the all silk spotted fishnets are much liked. There is a new white chantilly flouncing forty-five inches wide which makes it more than deep enough for a skirt. This made up over a slip of different color or even a different shade of white is exquisite. Lace is always handsome and dressy, and it is not a costly material. It has a certain air of high breeding about it that is transferred to the wearer, and lace is always useful in the last thread.

HEALTH AND HYGIENE.

The Value of Sulphur Di-Oxide in Diphtheria.

Dr. Harvey Gilbert, of Bay City, Mich., contributes the following clinical report to the May, 1894, issue of the New York Medical Times:

Nearly two years ago I commenced the use of sulphur di-oxide in diphtheria, and with such very satisfactory results that the readers of the Times are hereby courteously invited to consider a few thoughts in connection therewith.

Conclusions drawn:

1st.—That the constant, but slow combustion of sulphur in the sick room, or in the several departments of the house where diphtheria prevails, will prevent the second case in the house.

2nd.—That it is an effective and very potent remedy in controlling the disease itself, where it already exists.

3rd.—That it is perfectly safe and harmless.

Substantiating the first proposition, I will state that it is drawn from personal experience in a continuous practice with the remedy, covering a period of two years, during part of the time of which diphtheria has prevailed as an epidemic and with an average mortality of ninety-eight in 315 cases, in one year reported; only twice in that time, viz., once in August and once in September, when the weather was very warm, so that it was impossible to control the gas, did the second case appear; and they were very light.

Regarding the statement that it is also curative within a short time after commencing the use of the SO2, all noisome and offensive odors subside; even the breath of the patient, in malignant cases, becomes pure.

In one house a boy lay dead upon a couch, and five others were down with the disease in all degrees of severity, atmosphere reeking with bad odors; yet within four hours (time next visit) the air had become purified—amelioration simultaneous; no other remedy used except in one case where malarial symptoms appeared, and all recovered.

There is no question but that the fumes of sulphur in sufficient quantities will cause a dangerous irritation to the air passages; but sulphur is combustible at a much lower temperature (viz., at 180 degrees F.) than is generated when ignited. A plate with sulphur sublimatum sprinkled upon it, and placed over a boiling pot, will check all fermentation in the room, and absolutely render all decomposition with which it comes in contact innocuous, without annoyance to the most delicate.

Of course the theory in this short statement is that diphtheria is caused by a ferment—a microbe—and that the local phenomena are the hydro-carbons in a state of fermentation and decomposition, that the constitutional symptoms are due to the absorption through the blood of the product of this fermentation, and that this may be averted by the use of this oxidizing agent.

The Employer Was Absent.

A photographer left his office in charge of a newly engaged boy the other day, and as a result lost a customer.

Her beauty was of the doubtful sort, and the boy's eye was better than his judgment.

"Is the photographer in?" she asked.

"No, ma'am," said the boy, "but he'll be in soon."

"I want some pictures taken," the customer went on, "but I always have very hard luck. I hope Mr. —— will be able to suit me."

"Oh, Mr. —— will suit you, I am sure, ma'am. By the time the pictures are finished up they won't look like you a bit."—Exchange.

Finally Extinguished.

Hope rose anew within him.

"I can be rid of it," he exclaimed, with a faith that was sublime. "I will use it for a collar button."

Striding to his dressing-case he arranged the mirrors in such a way as to enable him to gaze in triumph at the wart on his neck, which had baffled medical skill to remove.—Detroit Tribune.

The sugar-coating, which makes Ayer's Pills so easy to take, dissolves immediately on reaching the stomach, and so permits the full strength and benefit of the medicine to be promptly communicated. Ask your druggist for Ayer's Almanac, just out.

ITCHING AND PIN WORMS. PILES

No More Misery.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The private parts are a severe itching, which is worse at night when the warmth of bed increases warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously rubbing deep scratches the parts until they are sore—then comes a profuse, exhaustive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and sensation. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

Gives Instant Relief.

PIN WORMS is an ailment entirely different as to cause from Itching Piles, yet its effects and symptoms are exactly the same. The same intolerable itching; the same creeping, crawling, stinging sensation characterizes both diseases. Chase's Ointment acts like magic. It will at once afford relief from this torment.

Can always depend on one thing at least—that the oysters we sell are ALL good. If people could only see how some cheap brands of oysters are handled and kept, and the conditions surrounding their handling, they never could buy them. Our long experience in the business and the direct connections we have with the most reliable oyster shippers, permit of no cheap crop being consigned to us.

A Strange Messenger.

During the past summer, while engaged packing eggs for Messrs. Dundas & Flavelle Bros., Mr. Albert Pilkie wrote on the shell of a good sound Canadian egg a request as follows: "Will the last purchaser of this egg write to A. E. Pilkie, Lindsay, Ont." The matter was entirely forgotten by him until last week when he was reminded of the fact by receiving a letter from L. J. Myers, "purveyor to the Right Hon. Lord Rothschild and family," cook and confectioner, 140 Houndsditch, E.C., who stands ready to do business with Mr. Pilkie, and is quite anxious to form a Canadian line of commerce—Watchman.

A Charitable Object.

The celebration of Burn's Anniversary, in Peterborough, by a concert of high order and one worthy of the occasion, is not the only laudable object which the St. Andrew's Society have in view. The proceeds of this concert are in aid of the benevolent fund of this Society, which it is learned, has stood the strain of hard times until its funds have become nearly exhausted. Ticket holders, therefore, have the satisfaction of knowing that they are assisting a purely charitable society, which has been helping to relieve the town of some of the burdens that must be borne by every community. Remember the date—January 23rd.

An Appreciated Bulletin.

The following is an extract from an article written by an experienced transcontinental trotter and which appeared in the New York Sun, Dec. 30th, 1894: "I wish that some of our transcontinental lines would adopt a little wrinkle that I saw recently on the Canadian Pacific line. It was a mere trifle, but it illustrates the desirability of looking after little things when persons are making a long journey. We were in the heart of the mountainous region and of coure practically cut off from the world for two or three days. It was at a time when there was big news in the world. Soon after we stopped at a station the porter came round with several telegraph sheets fastened together and passed them from passenger to passenger. It was a bulletin of the days news telegraphed each morning from Montreal, especially to the passengers on through trains. In a dozen items it gave all the important news in America, Europe and China. We heard the latest war news and knew the situation at Washington in national affairs. It was three days before we reached any large place with newspapers having a satisfactory news service, and you do not know how much we enjoyed that little attention and forethought on the part of the company. I found that at the chief hotels, where passengers drop off for a day or two to enjoy the scenery, the same system was carried out. Of course when one is sleeping he wants to get away from newspapers to some extent, but he is always glad to know what is going on, and by this system he could get everything of importance in three minutes. I wished the American lines used the same care in looking after their patrons. It wouldn't cost much, and it would be worth as much as many of the lotteries with which they fairly burden their patrons."

The Campbellford Colts are expected up to-night to play the return match with the local Colts who defeated them on Wednesday last by seven shots.

Quite a number of the local men were down at the curling rink this morning witnessing the match between Lakefield and Campbellford in the first draw in this group in the Tankard competition. The rinks started play at about a quarter to ten, with the ice in good condition and fairly keen, having been flooded last night. The last end was played at one o'clock and the results were as follows:—

HOCKEY.

The Collegiate Institute hockey team drove over to Millbrook, yesterday afternoon, and played a friendly game with the village team, which resulted in a victory for the Peterborough boys by a score of six goals to three, which is a most creditable showing indeed, as the Collegiate seven have had but little practice this season.

The teams lined up as follows:

Millbrook.		Collegiate.
S Pickup	Goal	J Hamilton
Deyell	Point	G White
N Coombe	Cover Point	C Pousette
G Leach	Forwards	L King
J Nattras		W Crossley
O Leach		Bell
T Nattras		H Lewis
E S Clarry	Umpire	F Jones

Referee—Geo Stinson.

2ND HALF.

4th Collegiate	Belleghem
5th "	L King
6th "	Crossley
7th Millbrook	Hamilton
8th Collegiate	Belleghem
9th Millbrook	J Nattras

The Millbrook rink is altogether too small for hockey and the town boys were sadly handicapped by not being able to work their combination with as great effect as in a larger rink and the game degenerated into what might almost be termed, a shinny contest. The seventh game, which was won by Millbrook, was scored by the puck striking an overhead beam and glancing through the Peterborough goal.

The home boys are greatly pleased with their trip and report being used most courteously throughout by the Millbrook players, who banquetted them at the close of the game. The Millbrook team will play the return match here on either the 23rd or 30th of this month.

THE TRIGGER.

The premises of Mr. Jno. Campbell, of Ennismore, were yesterday the scene of a turkey shoot held by the Goose Club of town, the members of which organization journeyed out there in the afternoon and brought home no less than seventeen turkeys. Mr. John Campbell proffered his well known hospitality at the close of the shoot: The successful ones were: G. Fitzgerald, 3; J. B. Pentland, 3; Sam Ray, 3; C. Curtis, 2; Mark McFadden, 1; D. Cameron, 1; T. Butherford, 1; George Hutchinson, 1; W. Morris, 1; J. Campbell, 1. During the evening the club elected Mr. Mark McFadden president and Mr. W. Morris secretary-treasurer.

MR. GARVIN AND THE BOARD.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

SIR,—As it has appeared in the public press that at a private meeting of the Board of Education it was decreed that the Inspector of Public Schools should send in his resignation, to take effect next July, permit me to say in fairness to the Board, that I have received no official notification of any such thing. I should like also to state that ever since I came to Peterborough, I have received nothing but courteous treatment from the Board, as a whole, and that our relations for the two years have ever been of a harmonious nature. If you look up the fyles of the EXAMINER you will see that last September several of the most prominent members spoke in eulogistic terms of the efficient condition of the schools under my management, and it was generally conceded that the change made two years ago had proved to be in the best interests of the town.

At present I have little fear that the Board of Education, whose members the last two years have shown exceptional independence and fair-mindedness will concern themselves more about Mr. Garvin's political opinions than about his efficiency as an Inspector, and the development and progress of their schools.

Truly Yours,
J. W. GARVIN.

SMITH.

From Our Own Correspondent.

A very interesting and pleasing event took place at the residence of Mr. T. R. Mann, on Jan. 9th, being the marriage of his daughter Ella to Mr. Alex. McGregor. The bride was assisted by her sister, Mary, and Miss Rosa McGregor, sister of the groom. The groom was supported by Mr. George Edminson, his cousin, and the ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. McLeod. The bride was handsomely attired in brown satin.

After the congratulations of those present to witness the happy pair being united, all sat down to partake of the bounteous repast prepared. About sixty-five guests were present. The presents were numerous and valuable.

About twelve o'clock the happy pair repaired to their new home in Smith amid the best wishes of their many friends.

A SUCCESSFUL MEETING AT LAKEFIELD.

Practical Subjects Practically Discussed — Lively Interest Taken in the Subjects.

The meeting of the Institute held at Lakefield on Thursday was highly successful. There was a fair attendance at the morning meeting, which was held in the Town Hall. The first address was that of Mr. C. A. Zavitz, of the Ontario Agricultural College, upon the subject of "Experiments in Growing Roots." He stated that at the college they experimented for some time with thirty or forty varieties, and then selected some half-dosen varieties, of which samples were sent to all parts of the province to be tried on all soils. Of the turnips tried over the province with eighteen varieties, the average yield per acre was, for Jersey Navet, 32 tons, the Early American Red Top 29.1 tons. The first keeps well, as well as the Greystone, and yields 2¼ tons per acre more. Carter's Elephant produced 24.8 tons per acre and Hartley's bronze top, 24.3 tons per acre, and it had given excellent results. Mr. H. C. Garbutt had had experience with Carter's Bronze Top, Carter's Elephant, and Carter's Prize Winner, and had had the best results from Carter's Prize Winner. As to mangold's, the results of 14 co operative experiments showed that the number of tons per acre yielded was, for Long Red selected, 25.3 tons, of which 3.22 was solid matter. Giant Yellow (intermediate) 29.9 tons, Mamoth Red (intermediate) 27.4 tons. In the matter of carrots Steele's Improved Short White yielded 33. tons per acre, the Large White Vosges, 30.3 tons, the Large White Belgian, 29.8 tons. The yield of carrots was greater per acre than that of mangolds or turnips—though there was greater labour in growing them. The feeding value of carrots was higher, but it was not safe to feed carrots too strongly. Carrots did best by being thinned to from 4 to 8 inches apart. As to potatoes, the results of 38 tests placed Empire State at the head of the list with 303.1 bushels per acre and of good quality; next was the Pearl of Savoy, 271.3 bushels per acre. Burpees Extra Early 264.8 bushels per acre—it was early and of good quality.

The best of the 187 varieties experimented with was the Summit; the White Star and the Rural New Yorker came next in order. The 24th of May for planting generally gave the best results, as to time of planting. The best results were gained from planting medium sized whole potatoes, in rows, a foot apart, about four inches deep—and not hilling too much.

In answer to a question, Mangolds were stated to be good for butter making. Mr. C. H. Moore had proved that scalding roots tended to remove the taint from butter.

THE DAIRY COW.

Mr. D. E. Smith, of Brampton, spoke of the points and characteristics of the dairy cow. The most important points were good constitution, good digestive powers, and a good, large, long and broad udder, a good nervous system, shown by the conformation of the spinal column; the shoulder should be wedge shaped and the ribs should also be wedge shaped and and deep and not too close together. The breast should be full and broad and the milk veins should run well to the front and the crookeder the better. The hind quarters to be square set. The tail should be large and tapering and should extend below the hock before the brush begins. The legs should be fine and not long. The udder should be broad and the teats well apart and well shaped. The escutcheon at the rear of the bag should be broad, the broader the better. Milk ovals are indicative of a good milker. The coat must be silky and the hide mellow. Tests should be made to show that an animal was a good milker, and if her ancestors were good milkers, she might be depended upon. A delicate head was a good sign. These points applied generally to all breeds.

THE MATTER OF FRUIT CULTURE.

Mr. J. F. Bean pointed out that all parts of Ontario were suitable for fruit culture. As to apples, these required a warm soil. Soil naturally unsuitable can be improved by surface and underdraining and ridging up soil, which must be in good condition before planting trees, which should not be too close—from 30 to 40 feet apart, the standard. In planting dig a large space for trees, and put mellow soil on the fibrous roots; plant so that roots will grow shallow. Plant with the strong branch towards the prevailing winds. Trees should be staked. As to varieties, don't plant too many; plant the varieties that do best in the locality. Pruning should be done from the start, when a knife can do the work, early in the spring. Trim so that large limbs do not grow opposite, and so prevent splitting. Good cultivation but not too deep is essential. Clover is a good orchard crop, not cut but fed to hogs or sheep on the ground. Small fruit can be grown between the rows of young orchards. The cultivation necessary will make the land good for the orchard. The best orchard fertiliser is hardwood ashes. As to insect foes they can be pretty well mastered by thorough spraying. The Bordeaux mixture with a little paris green made a good spraying mixture. Preparing for market was also dealt with—honesty in this matter was the best policy. The big apples should be distributed all through th barrels. Apple growing was profitable, the most profitable farm crop per acre that could be grown.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

There was a very large attendance of farmers. Mr. Zavitz opened the meeting with the subject, "Succulent Food for Live Stock." A few years ago it took three acres to maintain a dairy animal. This was too much land to devote to that purpose; and it had to be supplemented with some succulent food for the dry months of summer. Experiments conducted at the Farm show that the sowing of mixed grains produced large crops with a better ration—peas and oats—in the proportion of 1½ to 1 bushel per acre, respectively. This was an excellent fat and flesh former, something like good clover hay. The nitrogenous element that peas derive from the air is one of the most important. Peas and clover were the cheapest food that could be raised. This mixture could be cut green, and fed directly to stock, or cured as hay, or allowed to ripen and be threshed for the grain. Fodder corn was one of the most important succulent foods. The six best varieties were, with their yield of green corn per acre: Cloud's Early Yellow, 21 tons per acre, Mammoth Cuban, 19.3 tons per acre, Salzer's North Dakota, 18.8 tons per acre, Wisconsin Earliest White Dent, 14.8 tons, Champion's Early, 13.4 tons, and Early White Flint, 13.1 tons per acre. The two latter were the earliest, that is ripened best. Salzer's, North Dakota, was considered the best general purpose corn in the province. Ensilage corn should reach a good stage of maturity—better ensilage and better keeping quality. Rape sown as a second crop, in drills 28 inches apart—1½ lbs. to the acre and well cultivated, not only cleaned the soil but afforded a splendid fall food for lambs—12 to 16 can be kept per acre for two or three months and gain largely in weight. Rape leaves the soil in good condition for the next crop. Rape was also a fine feed for hogs, which ate it readily. Rape was a valuable crop for young stock. The dwart Essex rape was the best seed.

Mr. C. Quinn stated that green rye in the fall was a fine food for lambs and young pigs. Clover should be cut while in bloom.

SILO AND ENSILAGE.

Mr. G. Y. Payne read a paper on this subject. A silo was defined as an air tight box that would keep the green crop in a succulent condition. Ensilage would tend to retain the fertility of the soil. A silo should be deep. A round silo was the best now made. A 30 ton silo will feed 30 cattle six months. The silo should be air tight—this is an absolute necessity. Corn should be planted in hills, three feet apart, five grains to a hill, so that it could be cultivated both ways. An acre of ensilage with a proper ratio of bran would keep a cow a year. An interesting discussion followed, during which Mr. Beam described the building of a circular silo, which could be built cheaply—like a big tank—and kept silage the best.

On motion of Mr. H. C. Garbutt, seconded by Mr. G. J. Galvin, the delegate to the Central Farmers' Institute was instructed remain over in Toronto to attend the meeting of the Good Road Association held at the same time.

CULTIVATION OF SOIL.

Mr. J. Fred Davidson, president of the Institute, spoke on the cultivation of the soil, which underlay all the operations of farming. Ploughing was an important feature. Fall ploughing is generally considered most satisfactory. It turns up the soil to the influence of the frost and weather, and permits of the development of a large quantity of available plant food. The elements of fertility contained in fall rains are also added. With fall ploughing there is in spring a greater quantity of available plant foods present than in freshly turned soil. Late fall ploughing destroys the eggs of many insect pests that burrow in the earth. Deep ploughing is not best at all times, on the ground that fertility is more easily maintained in shallow soils, and the fibrous or feeding roots of most plants are near the surface. Light soils may be ploughed flatter, then heavier. Spring ploughing may be made successful for certain crops and favorable conditions of weather. Heavy soils will turn up cold and lifeless with spring ploughing. Too early cultivation of soils in spring is to be avoided as it encourages evaporation of moisture. Soil should be cultivated to suitable depth as soon as ready, and as evenly to form a good seed bed, cultivation throughout the summer will bring the deep moisture up to the roots of the plant. Shallow cultivation should be started immediately after harvest, with a gang plough, to be followed by liberal harrowing. This will retain moisture and make following ploughing more easy. Rotation of crops will have some effect upon the cultivation, next to which it stands in importance. This was followed by the usual discussions which brought out many interesting facts.

DEHORNING CATTLE.

Mr. J. F. Beam gave a practical address upon the subject of dehorning stock. He pointed out the advantages of the process, showing how it would prevent the "bossing" of some animal of the herd and prevent the nervous excitement that prejudicially affected the yield of milking cows. The process was described in detail, the speaker explaining the appliances used in dehorning his own herd. The process was simple and quickly done and the pain was of very short duration. He did not think the process of dehorning any more painful than the common surgical operation that has been so long practised upon the males of domestic animals. Mr. Bean made out a strong case and showed his knowledge of the subject.

Mr. D. E. Smith, B. A., of Brampton, gave an address on the subject of "The Essentials in Successful Breeding." The matter was generally treated as the same subject was in Peterborough, of which a report has already appeared. It is, therefore not necessary to further refer to it.

During the afternoon, in the interval between addresses, Mr. J. F. Beam, the musical member of the deputation, afforded the large audience great pleasure by singing a farming song, accompanying himself on the organ that occupied a place upon the platform of the hall. He gave such great delight that he was compelled to respond to an encore. Mr. Beam is a singer of high capabilities. His voice, a powerful round toned baritone, is highly cultured and he sings with an artistic interpretation and execution of his selections. His expression is singularly excellent and the general effect of his vocal work is exceedingly effective. Mr. Beam is an example of the fact that the occupation of farming does not necessarily involve a neglect of the cultivation of the higher faculties. He has sung successfully in several large Canadian and American cities.

THE EVENING SESSION.

In the evening the town hall was crowded with an audience that listened to addresses by Mr. C. A. Zavitz on "Agricultural Experiments," by Mr. D. E. Smith, upon "City vs. Country Life as an Educator," and Mr. J. F. Beam, on "Dairy Farming as a business." In addition Mr. Beam favoured the audience with other highly appreciated vocal numbers, and to which were added contributions of local talent, all combined to make a very pleasant evening, and forming a fitting finale to the very successful series of annual meetings of the West Riding Farmers' Institute.

No small degree of credit for the success is due to the exertions of the energetic young president, who seems to be very popular among the members.

THE BAND'S COMPLIMENTARY CONCERT.

A Splendid Programme Splendidly Presented.

Last night the Fire Brigade Band gave a grand complimentary concert to their friends and patrons in the Market Hall. There was a good attendance, the full seating capacity provided having been occupied. An excellent programme of judiciously balanced selections, popular and classical, was given in a most musicianly manner. The programme opened with the ever popular "Washington Post March," followed by a grand selection from Beethoven, introducing some of his well known sonata movements. A Fantasie by Thiere, Thessalian, was excellently rendered, but the selection that appealed most strongly to popular sympathy was the nautical fantasia by Hare, introducing a variety of popular sea songs, and also striking mimetic passages, representing a storm at sea, the crashing roll of the thunder, the wash of the waves, the weird whistling of the gale through the cordage etc. The imitation was excellent. "The Death of Nelson," incidental to the fantasia, was splendidly rendered, and when, by a rapid run through the "Bay of Biscay," the finale was reached in the stirring strains of "The Red White and Blue" the admiration of the audience rose to enthusiasm. A beautiful valse suite by Ivanovici and a tuneful march by Voelker brought the ensemble numbers to a close. The work of the band was worthy of all praise. The attack and tempo were creditably, prompt and exact, the shading delicately placed and the crescendo and decrescendo pleasingly even and uniform. Special praise should be given to the solo numbers, accompanied by the band, contributed by Mr. F. W. Miller, cornet—Allen's "Golden Cornet," Mr. E. McCabe, euphonium—"Last Rose of Summer" and Mr. Thomas Bysbe, piccolo. All did their work effectively and artistically.

Altogether the concert tendered by the band to their friends, was a delightful musical treat and furnished practical evidence that the members have not been idle in their practice hall since last summer, when they delighted the public with their park concerts. The Fire Brigade Band is a musical organization of which the town should be proud, and one that deserves the most liberal measure of sympathetic, as well as practical, support. The suggestion is made in some quarters, on the strength of the success of last night's recital, that these concerts might be given in the same hall weekly. This would, no doubt, be very pleasing to the public, but would be a little severe on the band boys. Persons who have not made music to some extent a study, do not, perhaps, stop to think that first-rate weekly programme, with substantial changes, played as the band would insist on playing them in a first class manner, cannot be ground out like tunes from a barrel organ, but involve a great deal of study and practice, which, in time, involves a great sacrifice of the hours of rest of the members. The best musicians in the highest rank will not risk their reputations by appearing in public without most thorough preparation. Still, if the band is willing, the people will be delighted.

It is said the band is willing to meet the desire for something like weekly concerts, if the public will provide the lights for the hall. The lights used last night are only temporary and are only put in on special occasions. The public should certainly do that much for the great enjoyment they would receive.

HE "WORKED" PETERBOROUGH.

A Clothes Wringer Repairer who "Did Up" Many of the Citizens.

This morning the Chief of Police received the following letter from the Chief Constable of Colborne relating to a personage who "worked" Peterborough for all it was worth last fall:

Chief Roszel, Peterborough:

DEAR FRIEND,—I write you enquiring if there is a person in your town who goes from house to house looking for clothes wringers to fix or repair. He left here last Saturday night for the west, and got off at Port Hope. The charge is that he got two wringers from a woman to repair, but he has not returned them, but has sold one of them to a neighbor for $3.50. His name is James Elves, about 35, very tall and slim, sandy complexion, with a moustache, wore a light-coloured rubber coat, without a cape, when here. If in your town arrest and wire, as warrant is issued.

Your truly,
W. H. SMITH,
C. C.

The description furnished tallies to a nicety with that of a supposed mechanic, who set up a little shop on Hunter street last fall and canvassed the town for clothes wringers to repair, his specialty being the replacing of worn out rubbers. After the order had been secured the wringer would be returned apparently as good as new and the man would receive his pay and promise to return the next week in order to ascertain if the wringer was doing satisfactory work. Invariably something went wrong, however, and the wringer was again taken away for repairs, but it never came back. The owner would get anxious about the matter in the course of a couple of weeks and call around to the repairer's shop to inquire as to the cause of delay, but the bird had flown and either taken the wringers with him or resold them in town.

This schemer "did up" dozens of Peterboroughians, but all felt so ashamed of being taken in so completely, as to actually pay over the money for the repairs and then lose the wringer, that none could be found who were willing to lay the required information with the police.

Port Hope, Whitby and Cobourg were also cleverly worked by a like individual for whom the law is now stretching out its hand.

The wife of a well-known carriage manufacturer was amongst those who lost valuable wringers in town. The machine was repaired and the bill amounting to $1.25, was paid, but the zinc slide which runs the clothes away after going between the rollers, was so placed that the clothes fell under it instead of upon it. The sneak-thief called the following week and with many apologies took the wringer away to remedy the mistake. This was the last seen of it.

AT HYMEN'S ALTAR.

The Nuptials of Miss Ellen Hendren and Mr. James Walton.

Lakefield News.

On Wednesday evening last the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Hendren was the scene of joyous festivities, the happy occasion being the marriage of their eldest daughter, Ella Louise, to Mr. James Walton, of Douro. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. C. Reeves, B. A., the bride being given away by her father. The bride, who was attired in a mauve silk henrietta costume, handsomely trimmed with white jet gimp and silk velvet, and wearing a veil and orange blossoms, and looking very handsome, was assisted by her sister, Miss Emma Hendren, who was dressed in Nile green cashmere with Bengaline silk, and steel trimmings, while little Miss Alice Hunter acted as maid of honour, and each carrying handsome bouquets of natural flowers. Mr. J. C. Grylls acted as best man, and Master R. Hendren as groomsman.

The drawing room looked very pretty and unique, being tastefully decorated with flowers, and lit up with wax candles. Miss Myrtle Hendren presided at the piano, and just as the ceremony had been performed, played the wedding march.

After the ceremony, and the couple had received the congratulations of those present, the party partook of a sumptuous wedding dinner, after which the evening was spent in music, games, etc.

The happy couple left in the evening for Peterborough, from which place they took the 9 o'clock train for Port Hope, Toronto, Rochester, and other places, followed by the best wishes of a large number of friends.

The bride was the recipient of many handsome and costly presents, one in particular being a handsome polished red oak bed room suite, it being manufactured and presented to her by her brother, Mr. Geo. Hendren.

THE HOUSEHOLD

THE CHILDREN.

Eva A. Madden Discourses Wisely on Restrictions on Children.

We hear much of the spoiling of only children, but little of what we shall term the restrictions which are often laid upon them by parents, who in their relation to these, their most precious possessions, see something which belongs exclusively to themselves, upon whom they are to shower benefits, and demand in return an amount of affection proportionate to the benefits. There is a higher duty to a child than this. It is the recognition of the rights of that child's individuality, the right to exist, the right to grow, the right to make use of itself when developed. Parents who study the future welfare of their child will recognize that any training or restriction which interferes with these rights becomes paternal selfishness.

In a family of a number of children these rights are more apt to be respected than where the love of both father and mother is centered on one. In the first place, he is often denied the right to exist as a separate nature. The mother, in her intense love desires to know every thought and act of his small life, will say, "Who cares for him as I do?" and will probe him with questions, will torment him with embraces and kisses until he longs with all his small heart to escape into a less loving atmosphere.

Under what the mother terms "interest," she will endeavor to penetrate into the child's secret thoughts, into every act, into every dream. This interest, springing from a desire to be first with the one she loves best, is a development of maternal jealousy or selfishness.

There is nothing which increases a growing boy like this constant inquiry into his movements. Let him confide, if he feels so disposed, but above all things do not force his confidence. Often puzzled with the increasing complexity of life, boys and girls hardly know the reasons of their conduct. If every act has to be explained, accounted for, or even related, life becomes intolerable, and duty to parents takes the place of love. If proper relations exist between parents and children, confidence will be spontaneous. For a mother to insist on reading her daughter's letters implies a suspicion which in its way is insulting to the daughter. This constant exaction on the part of the mother will often lead to deceit in the child. Part of his actions will be suppressed in the daily relation to the interested mother. Little by little he will make his own life, withdrawing himself more and more from spontaneous exchange of confidence with the parent.

Another restriction often laid upon an only child is the one which shuts him off from the normal conditions of child life. The parents, ignoring the fact that in becoming the father and mother of a child they bind themselves morally to do for that child the best that will fit him for the struggle of life, keep him perpetually under their protection. "I must keep my child with me as long as I can," the mother will say. "I cannot bear to see him go among rough boys. He will never be the same to me again. It will break my heart to let my boy grow away from me."

So the boy or girl is kept away from other children. He is made a companion of father and mother. He is often taken to evening amusements, he is permitted to be present at grown up affairs at his own home, or he is shut up in a nursery or taken daily walks with a maid or nurse. We have all seen these children. They are all peculiar. They are either unduly precocious, or painfully shy. There is no evil like keeping a child shut off from other children, watching over him and protecting him, only suddenly to launch him unprepared and unfortified in the midst of boy or girl life with its often times unsympathetic brutality. It is not the man, ignorant of evil, who is commended, but the one who in the midst of sin "thinketh no evil."

There is nothing more pathetic than to see one of these tenderly cared for children at some gathering to which against his will, he has at last been taken. See how bored he looks. Assuming an indifferent air, and yet longing to join in the fun, resenting the neglect of the other children who, having endeavored to persuade him to join them, leave him to his fate.

The mother, feeling for her child, will blame the other children in his presence, and a feeling of bitterness will begin to grow in the small heart. A thoughtful mother will neither torment a child with endless questions as to his welfare, nor will she so shut him up in her love that his nature cannot freely expand.

Parenthood means an eternal sacrifice and yet not only a sacrifice of doing for the child, but a sacrifice of not doing, and the negative sacrifice is often the harder. How many mothers force an only son into uncongenial occupation that he may remain with them? How many fathers, loth to lose the companionship of son or daughter, will refuse consent to departure from home when for the best interest of his child? The child, weary of the contest between what is best for himself, and what is his duty to his parents, generally in a spirit which we unwisely call unselfishness, yields to the solicitations of his parents, and makes but a poor success of life. The foundations of these errors is laid in childhood. The mother sacrifices herself to the child, rather than to the child's welfare. Having surrounded him with every maternal comfort and given him her love, she thinks her duty done.

The chief joys of childhood lie in intercourse with other children, in unconscious and natural enjoyment of life. When a child becomes conscious by over solicitude he will grow either priggish or bashful. He will either weakly yield his rights, or he will break bounds sooner or later.

Has the mother of an only child the right then to keep a child shut up in her love, has she the right to not prepare that child for the struggle that must be made later on, has she a right to prevent a child from developing in a manner in conformance with the existing conditions of child life? Let such a mother ask herself these questions and make her conduct to her boy or girl conform to her answer.—Eva A. Madden, in the Housekeeper.

When to Flavor.

In flavoring custard or candy with vanilla leave out the flavor until nearly ready to serve. Vanilla loses one-half its strength in cooking.

FEAR AS A CAUSE OF DEATH.

The Imagination a Potent Factor in Acquiring a Fatal Disease.

"Of the whole number of persons supposed to die of disease," said a prominent physician the other day, "I should say that at least fifty per cent. are really carried away by fear. Were it not for this element mortality would be far less than it is."

In support of his statement he cited various cases where the element of fear had entered largely in as a potent factor to persuade people that their time had come. Presentiments, prophecies, premonitions and general nervousness all played their part. On the other hand, a short time ago a patient of a New York hospital was frightened into getting well. This man was brought in an ambulance, supposedly dying from heart failure.

He was laid on a table and a diagnosis showed him to be suffering from hysteria. The surgeon turned to one of his assistants and, asking for a knife, remarked that he would cut down to the heart, and find out what the trouble was. The patient gave a yell, and leaping from the table started for the door. Remonstrance was in vain. That man was cured and never came back.

Some years ago four criminals, condemned in Russia to die, were taken to a house and shown several beds, in which they were told a number of cholera patients had died. As a matter of fact, the beds were new, never having been slept in. The criminals were informed that they would be set at liberty if they would undergo the ordeal of sleeping several nights in the beds. From the prisoner's point of view it was a possible, though desperate, chance to escape. They one and all decided to take the chances. At the end of the time prescribed, two were uninjured and went free; but the others developed all the symptoms and died of Asiatic cholera.

Two physicians determined to take advantage of the impressionable mind of a female patient and prove a theory for the benefit of science. The lady had complained of an itching on her back. She was told that a blister would be applied. Instead, a common postage stamp was applied, and, so runs the chronicle, performed all the offices of the plaster which was not there.

A college professor was once the subject of a practical joke at the hands of the students. They met him one after another, and each successively inquired after his health, saying that he looked ill. He took to his bed, a physician was called and for days the professor imagined he was ill.

Facts About the Foreleg.

The tongue of a lion is so rough that a close look at it will almost take the skin off the looker. It is not safe to allow a lion to lick your hand, for if he licked the skin off and got a taste of the underlying blood, supposing it to be there, he would want the hand and everything adjoining thereto. Nothing more perfect in modern machinery exists than the mechanism by which a lion works his claws. He has five toes on each of his fore feet and four on each of his hind feet. Each toe has a claw. Nothing about a lion is without reason, and the reason he has more toes and claws on his fore than on his hind feet is that he has more use for them. If this were not so the majority would be the other way. The lion is nocturnal by choice. He has no particular objection to daylight, but likes to spend it in the bosom of his family, or at least adjacent to it. It should not be supposed that because he roams about at night he neglects his family. He roams in order to fill the family larder. He kills to eat, not for amusement. He never bothers small game so long as there is big game within reach. When feeling fit he can take an ox in his mouth and jump fences and ditches like a professional steeplechaser.—Westminster Budget.

The Elements of Success.

The successful farmer of these latter days must be intelligent in his methods. He must produce the best and at the least cost. He must decrease his expenditures and increase his profits. He must quit raising scalawag stock that is always a drug on the market, and instead, must produce the kind that is always in demand at the highest price.

PHYSICIANS FAILED

BUT B.B.B. CURED

DEAR SIRS—After having used Burdock Blood Bitters for Scrofula in the blood, I feel it my duty to make known the results. I was treated by a skilled physician but he failed to cure me. Three Running Sores on my neck which could not be healed until I tried B. B. B., which healed them completely, leaving the skin and flesh sound and whole. As long as I live I shall speak of the virtues of B.B.B., and I feel grateful to Providence that such a medicine is provided for sufferers.

UNENDURABLE ITCHING

Suffered Three Years—Now Perfectly Cured by B. B. B.

GENTLEMEN—I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for Skin Diseases, from which I have been a sufferer for three years. I have used six bottles and am now entirely cured. I tried other remedies, such as Donald Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura Remedies, but all to no good. I doctored one year with the best physicians in the land; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but could not remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard scales. The itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured, and I owe it all to B. B. B.

WAS ONCE BARE ROCK.

THE PRESENT SITE OF HONG-KONG SOME FIFTY YEARS AGO.

A Quarter of a Million People Now Living Where Half a Century Ago Only a Few Fishermen Could Be Found—A Scene Resembling Western Bustle.

Nearly 250,000 people live in the Anglo-Chinese City of Hong-Kong. Fifty years ago the site of the city was a bare rock save for a few fishermen's huts scattered here and there. The great sea basin was rarely disturbed by a passing keel. A comparatively few Englishmen, assisted by a large number of Chinese, have wrought the transformation. The site of every building seen in this picture was once precipitous. The requisite level for buildings was obtained only by blasting. In a recent report Sir William Des-Voeux, Governor of Hong-Kong, gave a graphic description of the city:

"The visitor sees a city of closely built houses stretching for four miles along the island shore, and rising, tier over tier, up the slopes of the mountain, those on the upper levels interspersed with abundant foliage. The silent and deserted basin has become a harbor so covered with shipping that even if the visitor had been round the whole world he could never before have seen so much in a single coup d'œil. At anchor or moving are some forty and fifty ocean steamers, including ships of war, large European and American sailing vessels, and hundreds of seagoing junks, while in the space intervening and around are many thousand boats, for the most part human habitations, with steam launches rushing in all directions.

"Going ashore the visitor sees long lines of quays and wharves, large warehouses teeming with merchandise, shops stocked with all the luxuries as well as the needs of two civilizations.

"In the European quarter a fine town hall, stately banks, and other large buildings of stone; in the Chinese quarters, houses constructed after a pattern peculiar to China, of almost equally solid materials, but packed so closely together and thronged so densely as to be in this respect probably without parallel in the world; and finally he sees streets stretching for miles, abounding with carriages (drawn for the most part not by animals, but by men), and teeming with a busy population, in the centre of the town chiefly European, but toward the west and east almost exclusively Chinese.

"Ascending higher he finds churches, public buildings and many houses, all of exclusively European design (extending now about one-third of the distance up the mountain) for the most part detached or semi-detached, some of handsome appearance, and nearly all fronted with stone-arched verandas, which at a distance give somewhat of a palatial flavor even to the smallest; he would see moreover beautifully laid out gardens, public and private, and solidly constructed roads, some of them bordered with bamboos and other delicately fronded trees and fringed with the luxuriant undergrowth of semi-tropical vegetation; while meeting here but comparatively few passengers he would scarcely realize the neighborhood of a large population except from what has been aptly termed the indescribable hum of congregated humanity, arising from the town harbor beneath.

"Ascending still further to the summit of the ridge, he, in the course of a two-mile walk, would observe that not only Victoria Peak, but Mount Kellett and the heights above the Magazine Gap, with the many intervening knolls and ravines at a high elevation, are for the most part intersected by roads and studded with houses, similar to those last described, built in one or two places so close together as to present almost an urban aspect, and looking down whence he came he, while no doubt recognising the grand mountain amphitheater of fifty years ago, would at the same time notice that its arena, occupied by city and shipping, has changed as though by the wand of an enchanter."

THINGS IN GERMANY.

Germany's proportion of suicides is larger than that of any other European country.

The number of telephonic stations in Germany was 1,504 in 1881, had increased at the beginning of the present year to 63,558.

An international matrimonial paper is about to make its appearance in Berlin, Germany. The new journal will be printed in three languages—German, English and French.

Great discontent is shown in Germany at the large number of pensioned officers in the army. Since the present emperor ascended the throne in 1888, 4,000 have been forced to resign.

Eisleben, the birthplace of Martin Luther, is sinking into the moor upon which it is built. Measures have been taken in recent years to drain the bog, without avail, and the inhabitants are seriously thinking of abandoning the town.

How to Cross a Crowded Street.

"Don't be in a hurry; take it easy."

In following that injunction lies the whole secret of crossing a crowded street in safety. Nearly all accidents come from rushing into danger by too great haste. Many persons appear to think that the way to cross a crowded street is to wait until they think they see a clear way to the other side, then to make a run. If in this performance they come in contact with somebody from the other side of the street undertaking a like feat they become excited, making imminent a danger that before may have been remote.

The safest way by all means is to take the advice: "Don't be in a hurry; take it easy." Following this counsel a pedestrian with his eyes about him and with a moderate amount of judgment can cross a crowded street at any point with comparatively little danger.

When the Nerve Centres Need Nutrition.

A Wonderful Recovery, Illustrating the Quick Response of a Depleted Nerve System to a Treatment Which Replenishes Exhausted Nerve Forces.

MR. FRANK BAUER, BERLIN, ONT.

Perhaps you know him? In Waterloo he is known as one of the most popular and successful business men of that enterprising town. As managing executor of the Kuntz estate, he is at the head of a vast business, representing an investment of many thousands of dollars, and known to many people throughout the Province. Solid financially, Mr. Frank Bauer also has the good fortune of enjoying solid good health, and if appearances indicate anything, it is safe to predict that there's a full half century of active life still ahead for him. But it's only a few months since, while nursed as an invalid at the Mt. Clemens sanitary resort, when his friends in Waterloo were dismayed with a report that he was at the point of death.

"There's no telling where I would have been had I kept on the old treatment," said Mr. Bauer, with a merry laugh, the other day, while recounting his experiences as a very sick man. "Mt. Clemens," he continued, "was the last resort in my case. For months previous I had been suffering indescribable tortures. I began with a loss of appetite and sleepless nights. Then, as the trouble kept growing, I was getting weaker, and began losing flesh and strength rapidly. My stomach refused to retain food of any kind. During all this time I was under medical treatment, and took everything prescribed, but without relief. Just about when my condition seemed most hopeless, I heard of a wonderful cure effected in a case somewhat similar to—mine, by the Great South American Nervine Tonic, and I finally tried that. On the first day of its use I began to feel that it was doing what no other medicine had done. The first dose relieved the distress completely. Before night I actually felt hungry and ate with an appetite such as I had not known for months. I began to pick up in strength with surprising rapidity, slept well nights, and before I knew it I was eating three square meals regularly every day, with as much relish as ever. I have no hesitation whatever in saying that the South American Nervine Tonic cured me when all other remedies failed. I have recovered my old weight—over 200 pounds—and never felt better in my life."

Mr. Frank Bauer's experience is that of all others who have used the South American Nervine Tonic. Its instantaneous action in relieving distress and pain is due to the direct effect of this great remedy upon the nerve centres, whose fagged vitality is energized instantly by the very first dose. It is a great, a wondrous cure for all nervous diseases, as well as indigestion and dyspepsia. It goes to the real source of trouble direct, and the sick always feel its marvellous sustaining and restorative power at once, on the very first day of its use.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease),
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Paps,
To push us forward when of ages.
They then went home, but step, I miss,
They gave us every one, a kiss,
And said, "be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home.
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

A FUEL-SAVING HINT.

Leakage of Air Through Unsound Brickwork of Boilers.

It is a matter of common knowledge among steam users, says the Engineering Record, that the resetting of a boiler when the brickwork has become deteriorated is generally attended with a saving of fuel. This is said to occur when nothing more is done than to relay the brickwork in the same shape that it was formerly, no change being made in the style of the setting. The economy thus realized is no doubt attributable to the prevention of the loss which results from an excess of air supplied through the unsound brickwork of the old setting. In some remarks made by Chief Engineer Isherwood, at one of the recent informal meetings of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, interesting allusions are made to this subject. In Mr. Barrus' book on "Boiler Tests," two references are made to the same matter. In one it is a case where a sectional boiler was in use, and the brickwork of the setting was so arranged that there was unusual opportunity for air leakage on account of the number of exposed surfaces protected by unsound brickwork. The fact of the leakage was determined by comparing the force of draft in the main flue with that in the furnace, at a time when the fire-doors and ash pit doors were tightly closed and the damper set wide open. Had there been no leakage, or if this had been a small amount, the full force of the draft would have been obtained in the furnace. As it was, the draft in the flue amounted to .65 inch water pressure, and in the furnace it was reduced to .34 inch. In the case of another boiler, which was of the water-tube type, the same kind of trial was made to ascertain the effect produced by sealing all the cracks in the brickwork and all the crevices around the cleaning doors. Before this was done the force of the draft was .31 inch in the main flue and .25 inch at the boiler. After the openings were closed the full draft of .31 inch was realized. When the draft was partially cut off by closing the damper it was found that the force realized at the boiler before the openings were sealed was .09 inch, while after they were sealed it rose to .2 inch. The statement is made that the closing of the air leaks was attended by an improvement in the economy of the boiler, though the exact amount is not given.

Rusting of Boiler Shells.

In a paper read in Germany on the rusting of boiler shells, the author concluded that the most serious cause is the introduction of air with the feed-water. If the feed-water enters the boiler near the low-water level he concludes that it will soon be expelled with the steam, unless it has a chance to accumulate in pockets. Such pockets rust rapidly. The feeding, he advises, should be completed before stopping for the day, so that the water standing in the boiler overnight shall be as free from air as practical. Faulty construction, the author believes, is the frequent cause of internal rusting. For preventing rusting he recommends: First, while the boiler is working—(1) Removing air from the feed-water before it enters the boiler. (2) Removing air from the water while in the boiler, and preventing its accumulation in pockets, etc. (3) Addition of chemicals to the feed-water. (4) Protective coatings applied to the inside of a shell. Second, while the boiler is standing idle.—(1) Removing all moisture from the boiler, (a) by blowing it off whilst hot, (b) by producing an air current through it, (c) by placing hygroscopic bodies inside. (2) Direct protection of the shells, (a) by painting with tar, varnish, etc., (b) by covering with protective paints, and such an alkaline coating as milk of lime. (3) Protecting the shells from various temperatures by keeping the draught in the flues constant, and so as to prevent moisture alternately depositing and evaporating on the shell. (4) Protecting the shell by completely filling the boiler with water from which all air has been expelled.

Preserving Railroad Ties.

In this part of the country, where wood is comparatively inexpensive, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, the railway companies do not find it necessary to treat all their cross-ties by some process which will lengthen their period of serviceability, but out in the semi-arid and arid regions, where cross-ties are costly, the case is different. Nearly 8,700,000 cross-ties in use on the lines of the Atchison, Union Pacific and Rock Island systems have been treated at a cost of 17 cents to 20 cents each by a process which consists in first injecting chloride of zinc with glue into the timber, and then forcing a solution of tannin into it. The tannin fixes the chloride so that it is not washed away by the rains or removed more slowly by the standing water in damp localities. The distinguished past president of the American Society of Civil Engineers, Octave Chanute, states that on the Atchison system tie renewals have been largely reduced by this treatment. In 1890 it abandoned the process and injected chloride of zinc only, but in 1893 the zinc-tannin treatment was resumed and is now operated. The Union Pacific stopped operating its works in 1887 for financial reasons, and they have not been opened since then. On the Rock Island lines practically no ties treated by the process were renewed until 1892, after six years of service, and at the commencement of the current year over 90 per cent. were still in service.

SIFTINGS OF SCIENCE.

According to a French journal, a Geneva firm is manufacturing phonographic clocks which talk the hour instead of striking it.

Dr. Ehlers, of Copenhagen, has made a special inspection tour of southern Iceland to ascertain the number of lepers, and found fifty-three, or twice as many as was expected. A hospital is to be built to prevent further spread of the disease.

An analysis of water taken from the Great Salt lake, Utah, in August, 1888, showed that a ton of such wateer, would contain 391 pounds of solid matter, of which about 214 pounds would be common salt. Dead Sea water contains only 151 pounds of salt to the ton, but the proportion of solids is much greater, there being about 528 pounds to the ton.

It is reported that a lampwick of clay, that will give twenty-five per cent. more light than a cotton wick, has been invented. It is made capillary by incorporating with the clay, while still plastic, filaments of unspun vegetable fibre, which, burned out in the baking, leave minute tubes running through the wick, through which the flame draws the oil by capillary attraction. The flame thus fed, it is claimed, is white, odorless and smokeless, while the novel wick itself is almost indestructible.

WOMAN'S DRESS.

The gray-white and yellow tans are the shades for gloves in demand at the present time.

The use of lace, as a trimming, continues, and it will be used on the winter gowns as successfully as it has been on those for summer.

The newest winter cheviots and diagonal serges appear with large checked patterns, and large plaids, both in silk and wool, are in favor. Velveteens will be welcomed again by many.

Fur capes, the length of the graceful Inverness ones, will be the popular fur garment this winter, although it is yet too early to say which of the many kinds of fur will be most commonly worn.

The new fall hats are pronounced very ugly in appearance. The crowns are high with narrow rims, and altogether unsatisfactory. The English walking hat is renewing its popularity, and will be much worn.

Black and white has lost none of its popularity. It is used for both old and young, and will be enlivened by the striking millinery on the hats and bonnets. Gayly colored, over-trimmed headgear is announced for the fall and winter styles.

NEWSY NOTES.

The phylloxera, or the vine pest, is making such ravages in the sherry wine districts of Spain that the government has appropriated $100,000 for the extermination of the disease.

The Danish government has undertaken, during the years 1895 and 1896, a deep sea exploration in the Greenland and Iceland waters. The expedition will be accompanied by a botanist.

It is said that in the past ten years the city of Nashville lost $10,000,000 in various boom schemes and wild speculation ventures, and of this vast sum not ten per cent was spent at home.

There are two small Jewish agricultural colonies in California, the first in Orange Vale, opposite Folsom, and the other in Porterville, near Fresno. Both have passed the experimental stage and promise success.

Russia proposes to connect the Baltic with the Black sea, according to recent report. The rivers Dnieper and Dwina are to be joined by a canal; surveying has begun at both ends of the route, and Cherson is spoken of as the harbor for the canal on the Black sea.

FASHION'S MIRROR.

Short jackets cut square in front are used for little girls from four to ten years of age.

Slashings in sleeves, showing a different material underneath, are seen on many of the new models.

The divided skirt for bicycle riders is an accomplished fact, since it has received the sanction of fashion.

The new sleeves for autumn are no smaller than those now worn, but there is a tendency to do away with berthas and the extreme revers trimming, which add such breadth to the corsage.

You will be quite correct, says an authority on dress, if you have your new costume made with a velvet bodice, and skirt and sleeves of heavy crepon. The former may be a direct contrast to the latter if you wish, or of the same color and tint, although of such diverse material. Velvet bodices will undoubtedly be one of the features of the coming season, and will be made without sleeves, the latter almost invariably matching the skirt.

Tobacco Causes Loss of Memory.

Those annoying and unaccountable lapses of memory experienced when one is unable to recollect some well-known word or the name of some perfectly-familiar friend are attributed by a French physiologist to the excessive use of tobacco. This gentleman has observed that aphasia and amnesia are at present almost unknown among the gentler sex. On the other hand, he has nearly invariably found these afflictions common in men who are habitually heavy smokers, while in cases where they are only of rare occurrence he has frequently known the extraordinary lapse to have been preceded by an extra dose of the fragrant weed. It is comforting, however, to be assured by the same authority that a moderate use of pipe or cigar is in no way harmful to the memory.

THE EXPORT CHEESE TRADE.

Now that the holidays are over, holders of cheese in Canada are anxiously looking for the commencement of the demand from England, which usually sets in about this time. Buyers in England are eagerly canvassing the situation as regards stocks held in Canada and the United States. And upon the result of this information will depend the nature of the business in the immediate future. There is not a very great quantity of cheese held in the west here or in Canada. In fact not as much as the English buyers estimate. The quantity held in Montreal, says the Trade Bulletin, is placed at 110,000 boxes, according to a carefully prepared estimate by prominent men in the trade, and 70,000 boxes outside, making a total of 180,000 boxes in all Canada. This is the conclusion arrived at by some of the principal holders, while those whose interests lie in the opposite direction, hoping to buy as low as possible, calculate stock as follows:

	Boxes.
In Montreal	120,000
Between Montreal and Canada	30,000
West of Toronto	100,000
Total for Canada	250,000

However, it is difficult to estimate exact quantities held at any stated period, as they can only be accurately arrived at after the close of the season, when the total shipments tell the true tale. Still sufficiently approximate estimates can be got at for a basis of business, and from all that can be learned indications point to a larger amount of cheese to go forward between now and April 31st, than for the corresponding period last season; but that will make very little difference if the usual after-holiday consumptive demand is good. All will depend on this, as the prospects for business are much brighter with fair stocks and a good enquiry, than with small stocks and a poor enquiry. It is true that a speculative demand is sooner worked up on smaller supplies than average ones; but it frequently happens that speculative movements work more harm than good, as they eventually tend to curtail the legitimate demand by hoisting prices; which are lower than the were this time last year, are very reasonable, and should induce a good trade as soon as English buyers are compelled to replenish supplies. Those who have sold short at 49s. appear well satisfied, as they claim they can fill their contracts now at a profit.

Bentley's "Living Christ."

It has been a question in the minds of the public why Mr. Bentley named his work "The Living Christ." You have but to look at the canvas to see that it is not the dead Christ or the Jesus of Nazareth or Jesus King of the Jews, of the old masters' work, but the risen Christ; Christ after resurrection: Christ who died to save the sinner. Christ who cast his eyes up to heaven and cried "Oh, God, why hast thou forsaken me?" and then passed into eternal life. It must have been a supreme moment to Him—one that took away the sad, sorrowful, haggard look which has been protrayed so often by the old masters. His sorrows and troubles were at an end, but He lived and lived the brighter and more beautiful thought that was left to us. Though He died the sad and sorrowful, yet He lives the bright and beautiful. That He liveth to-day there can be no possible doubt, and so the artist has portrayed him on canvas—a Godlike face, a good and true man, a Christ-man and one which to-day we do not doubt, but still do not follow.

The Christ that the artist has painted is one of warmth and happiness. "Come unto me and I will give you rest and peace." You have but to look on the canvas and you have both, for in the picture you see that He could give all of this would you but accept it. It is impossible to look on the Christ in any other light than that of beautiful in righteousness and power. When you look on the Christ as Mr. Bentley portrays him, you feel the warmth and love that none else but Him could give, for love in His face, and we all know that love was in His heart. "Fear not, for I am the light and the truth and the way."

A Turkish Cave.

They have a mammoth cave in Turkey which takes all the brag out of Kentucky. It is near Selefkeh. And where is Selefkeh? Well, it is near that part of the Turkish coast which is just exactly north of the Island of Cypress. One of the natives went in with a party and roamed around for five days, and when he came out he said he had tramped fully twenty-five miles until he came to a large lake with great cliffs rising up in it. Having no boat he had to turn back. Of course, he was a Turk, and perhaps we should be a little careful about accepting his idea of distance too literally; still it is probable that the exit of the cave is at Cape Lisau el Kabeh, fifteen miles eastward of Selefkeh, right on the sea, where the waves dash in the mouth with a rush and a roar, which has given the place the name of "The Roaring Hole." If one stands at the entrance at Selefkeh, he can hear a dull, booming roar, which is in all probability the waves at Cape Lisau el Kabeh, rushing into the Roaring Hole.—St. Louis Republic.

A New Arithmetic.

The lady who came into the book store was one of the very primmest and most particular.

"Have you any arithmetics?" she inquired stiffly.

"Yes, madam," replied the polite clerk.

"What kind?"

"Any kind you wish, madam. We keep a complete stock."

"Well, I want an expurgated edition.

"I beg your pardon?" gasped the clerk.

"I want an expurgated edition. I desire it for my daughter, who is just beginning that branch of study."

"I don't think I quite understand you, madam," stammered the poor clerk.

The lady showed some slight traces of annoyance.

"Don't you know what an expurgated edition of a book is?" she asked.

"Certainly, madam; but not of an arithmetic."

"You must be very stupid," she said, starting to go out, "if you don't know that it means one from which the vulgar fractions have been eliminated."

The clerk let her go at that.

The New Stockings.

Silken hose are a luxury, but what woman can resist them? The varieties shown for 1895 are more tempting than ever before. Black stockings of web-like texture have the instep embroidered in gold threads. They are exquisite, and are particularly effective when worn with a low out evening slipper. A new fancy is the silk stocking with the owner's monogram embroidered on the instep. It is a trifle odd, but when the letters are worked in some delicate silk it is pretty.

Salt rheum with its intense itching, dry, hot skin is cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, because it purifies the blood.

Requirements of a Prohibition Candidate.

SUSSEX, N.B., Jan. 18.—The convention of prohibitionists held at Berwick yesterday was attended by a large number of leading temperance people from various parts of the country. Resolutions were adopted affirming the desirability of having the man to be elected in King's county to be a thorough temperance man and prohibitionist. Rev. Mr. Grant submitted a statement of what the prohibitionist candidate should subscribe to, which in brief required that he should be of good moral standing, to abstain from all intoxicating beverages; use all proper means in Parliament, irrespective of party or how his vote may affect his party; make prominent his purposes in at least three papers, and keep before his constituents during the campaign his views on prohibition. Several delegates thought it would be hard to secure a man to subscribe to all this platform, and before a vote was reached the convention adjourned, to meet at the call of the executive.

Transfer of a C. P. R. Branch.

OTTAWA, Jan. 18.—It is learned from reliable sources that the transfer of the Aylmer branch of the C. P. R. to the P. and P. J. railway is to take place within the next few weeks. Only a few conditions remain to be fixed by the two companies interested. Both companies are somewhat busy just now, so the arrangements for the transfer are not being rushed to completion quite as rapidly as they might be under other circumstances. It is understood all the employes of the P. and P. J. railway are to be paid in full before the change goes into effect.

Mr. Freed Denies the Rumor.

HAMILTON, Jan. 18.—A. T. Freed, inspector of weights and measures, and formerly editor of the Spectator, denies the report that he had accepted the position of chief editorial writer on the Toronto Empire. Mr. Freed says no proposition whatever has been made by either the Empire or himself in reference to the position.

Damages for Her Husband's Death.

HAMILTON, Jan. 18.—At the winter assizes before Judge Robertson the case of Badcock v. Freeman was finished yesterday. This was an action brought by Mrs. Emma Badcock against the estate of W. A. Freeman for $2,000 damages for the loss of her husband, who was killed by a boiler explosion at the fertilizing works of defendants. The case was tried before Judge Armour in September, 1893, and the jury disagreed. Yesterday the jury gave plaintiff a verdict for $1,900.

The Donkey in Jokes.

"By Jove!" said the country squire who had got the worst of an argument with Sydney Smith, "if I had a son who was a donkey, I'd make a parson of him straight away."

"Possibly," returned the wit, "but your father was evidently of a different mind." That is one type. Here is another: A man had a portrait taken with his children in a donkey carriage, he standing at the animal's head. Showing it to a friend, he asked his opinion of the likeness. "It's the very image of you," was the verdict, "but who is that holding your head?"

Here is still another specimen that recalls the "Society Upon the Stilnslaw:" Two gentlemen in an auction-room were disputing the possession of a picture by a celebrated painter, which faithfully represented an ass. Finally one of them said: "My dear sir, it is of no use, I shall not give in. The painting once belonged to my grandfather and I intend to have it."

"Oh! in that case," replied his rival, suavely, "I will give it up. I think you are fully entitled to it if it is one of your family portraits."

Next to this we may place the retort of the Irish girl, who, caught in the act of playing on Sunday morning and being accosted by the parish priest with the greeting, "Good morning, daughter of the evil one," replied promptly, "Good morning, father!"

The Kaiser Gavotte.

A square dance in which society is much interested is the Kaiser gavotte. This dance owes its origin to a German professor, who gave it its name in honor of Emperor William. The dance so delighted His Majesty that he has ordered it to be danced at all the Court balls.

The Kaiser gavotte is a stately dance much resembling the minuet. As danced at the German Court balls a profound obeisance to the Emperor and Empress begins and ends the dance. The continuous figure leave the beholder in a transport of admiration. Only a professor of dancing could describe every figure. Two figures which are particularly beautiful are called the rosette and the star.

The gavotte balance, however, is the most effective figure in the dance. The ladies, with their left hands, very daintily catch their skirts, lifting them ever so little, still enough to show satin slippers and clouds of lace. With right hands held high over their heads, they catch their partners' hands, and in this wise, balancing, one couple following another in succession, they make a grand tour of the ballroom. All the steps are stately and dignified, and only persons with natural grace can dance the Kaiser gavotte well.

Henry Irving's Legs.

Some time ago, when Henry Irving was in Edinburgh, a Scotch clergyman came and informed him that he was to attend the theatre that week for the first time in his life, to see one of the Lyceum productions. Irving felt duly flattered, and so expressed himself; but the divine, after a certain amount of stammering, confessed that he did not wish to see a play in which there was a ballet. Irving, greatly puzzled, informed him that there was no dancing in the plays he was then producing, but that, according to the slang of the "profession," the supernumeraries of both sexes were "the ballet," and hence probably arose his visitor's mistake. The worthy man's face beamed, and he took an affectionate leave of his host; but at the door he was seized with misgivings and suddenly demanded, point-blank: "If there is no ballet, Mr. Irving, why do people talk so much about your legs?" Irving's answer has not been chronicled.

NATIVE QUEEN OF INDIA

PECULIAR PHASES IN THE LIFE OF THIS EASTERN GODDESS.

An Interesting Picture of Oriental Beauty, With Charity and Kindness for All Shining Characteristics—A Lover of Sport, Yet a Queen.

The life of a Queen is not altogether as ethereal and blissful as some of us ordinary mortals would suppose. It has drawbacks and inconveniences innumerable. This is particularly marked in the lives of the Brahman Queens of India. The present Maharanee of Kunigal is no exception. This daughter of the East, so much admired and loved by all who are fortunate to meet her, exists among a host of worshipers, secluded from the outer world and its attractions, as "the fair goddess" of her tribe. A Queen whose impulses are ever for good, she weilds a rare influence over all. Her constant thought is for those around her and especially for those of her subjects who are needy and destitute. She is never happier than when planning some little device for the pleasure of others, even sometimes those who may be the most abject among a great nation. Her simplicity and winning ways are captivating: she is at her best when the center of interest and play in the nursery, which is a fairyland to behold.

The Maharanee (the Queen) is a picture of Oriental beauty, a study which any artist might well covet. Her rich olive complexion contrasts well with the profusion of raven hair that is coiled carelessly a little to one side of her shapely head and fastened with jeweled pins, a small wreath of jasmine or stephanotis usually entwined therein. Her features are long, with bright laughing eyes, and her firm month displays the most perfect teeth. Her ears are literally filled with precious stones, there being ten or eleven distinct holes in each, graduating in size to the tip. In her right nostril is set a tiny jeweled button and around her neck are charms of various significance.

Her tall figure is draped with airy and artistic effect. The robe consists of much soft India silk, elaborately embroidered, arranged about her in mysterious grace, a very enigma of garment without the explanation of a single stitch. It is closely pleated at the waist in front, falling in a fanlike train over the feet, and fastened with a belt of gold that is studded with crescents of pearls. This garment is short in the back and is brought over the shoulders hanging in soft loose folds. Her left arm displays a bracelet of costly gems of rare beauty and of profound historic interest which carries one back to the time of Cleopatra. It was found among some other buried treasures more than a century ago, when the remote ancestors of the late King acquired it. This bracelet is supposed to have the power to resist the venom of all species of reptiles. A tiny linked chain connects it to one of no less value at the wrist. Jeweled sandals grace her otherwise unclad nether limbs surmounted by anklets of gold.

She will often express to her friends the great pleasure it would afford her to be abie to go freely among her people. This is, however, forbidden her by the exacting and severe law of her caste: for being a Brahman, which is the highest of all castes in India, she is obliged to adhere strictly to the "law of inclosure." This compels her at the age of twelve to be veiled and live in seclusion for the remainder of her life.

This rigid deprivation of all enjoyment of the world is necessarily a severe shock to the sensibility of even an Eastern Queen. Never again does she receive or converse with one of the opposite sex, save only her husband, the Maharajah. Neither is a domestic of her household permitted to look upon her, otherwise her caste would be broken and her birthright canceled.

This law among the high caste seems cruel and inconsistent, but the penalty of disobedience is supreme. The violator of a law so sacred among the sex as that of "inclosure" has a horrible destiny awaiting her. She is expelled from among her tribe in shame to become an outcast, exiled from within the walls of the city for her crime.

But the present Maharanee, now in her 24th year, has six little brown faces to cheer her solitude. Her apartments, large and luxurious, occupy one side of the palace, opening one into another. Through long tapestried windows she steps into her private gardens, where the air is perfumed with the delicious fragrance of flowers. The little rustic bridges that greet the eye occasionally through these grounds connect the many beautiful terraces beneath which flows a refreshing and babbling brook, which, however, must babble no secrets. Rivulets and brooks are treasures in India. They are few and far between in this region of magnificence. Here the royal prisoner, for so she is, takes her daily exercise, joined occasionally by her children, who come with the delightful anticipation of hearing some new fairy tale from the lips of the beautiful memsahib—who happens to be a rare story teller—as she is seated in one of her favorite arbors where the citron vines envelop the happy little group—a picture only Eastern.

When the Maharanee wishes to leave her apartments the command is given, and in a moment the turbaned attendants that crowd the halls disappear as if by magic. The silence that follows indues the surroundings with the air of a sanctuary rather than that of a palace. Presently there breaks upon the stillness the faint tinkling of a bell that announces the royal presence, and the Maharanee comes forward stately, gracious, kindly, "every inch a Queen."

She speaks English fluently, and is fond of sport.

REBELLION IN HAWAII

Natives Supplied With Arms and Ammunition From Vessels.

ROYALIST PLANS FRUSTRATED

An Attack by the Police Precipitates the Fight—A Prominent Young American Resident Killed—Several Royalists Arrested—Honolulu Under Martial Law.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 19.—The steamer Alameda has arrived here, bringing advices from Honolulu. The United Press correspondent writing under date Jan. 10, says:

On the evening of Sunday the 6th, as many as 600 rifles were landed between Waiala and Diamond Head nearly six miles from town. Some 500 natives were collected there and received guns and ammunition. The natives were under command of Bob Wilcox and Sam Wilen. The headquarters were at Anton Rosa's houses on the beach near Waialae. It was the intention to rush in early in the evening and surprise the city while the people were at church. The authorities received information towards night that arms were being landed at Diamond Head at the house of George Bertelmann, a half white royalist leader, well under the base of the head. A strong squad of mounted police was immediately sent out to search Bertelmann's house. The citizens guard were put on the alert and the volunteer military companies summoned. Captain Parker, with his police, reached Bertelmann's place after dark. While the police were lined upon the lawn below the house they were fired upon from the beach.

At that moment there arrived from their houses in the park, some distance toward town, three prominent young men, J. B. Castle, Charles L. Carter and Alfred Carter. They came to assist the police. Charles L. Carter observed that the firing proceeded from a canoe shed on the beach. He sung out to the police to come on and with them made a rush on the shed. John Lane, half white, fired on him with a pistol at close quarters. Carter received three shots, one of which entered his ribs. He fell, calling out that it was not serious, but immediately exclaimed that he was hard hit. At the same moment Bertelmann fired with a carbine from the verandah and shot Lieut. Holl, of the police, who is dangerously wounded. The enemy were driven from the shed by a resolute attack, but ran inland to the bush. From there they kept up a hot fire upon the houses to which the wounded man had been carried together with Lane and two other prisoners.

Alfred Carter went for a doctor leaving Castle in care of Charles. Brown and Parker made an effort to drive away the enemy but found the fire overpowering. They ran to their horses and rushed off to telephone for troops. Brown got to Nolter, a mile away, and called for help. Captain Parker kept meeting the enemy everywhere and was driven into the bushes with one man and did not reach town until daylight. Meantime Alfred Carter returned to Bertlemann's with Dr. Welters, but was unable to pass the enemy. Castle and one policeman cared for the wounded, held the prisoners and compelled Bertelmann to order firing on the house to cease.

Getting Brown's telephone before six o'clock, the government at once hurried out 30 soldiers from the executive building under Lieutenant King. The whole force of volunteers was called out and stationed at the most important points. The citizens guard were put on their posts in squads on the street corners and before 9 o'clock the city was in full state of defence. King and his men were on the ground by 9 o'clock. The enemy retired before them keeping up a galling fire. Early the next morning Lieutenant Coyne was sent out with 25 more soldiers. He and King formed a line from the beach at Sans Souci to near the west slope of the head to keep the rebels from advancing. The latter left the shore and ascended to the rim of the crater whence they could fire to advantage upon the soldiers. A rifled gun was sent out to Coyne and shells dropped with accuracy upon the summit. This move frightened the rebels away. One shell burst in the group on the highest peak and killed several men. The number of rebels on the crater was estimated at over 100.

At an early hour T. B. Murray with twenty-five specials and ten mounted policemen was sent out on the Waialae road. Nearing the ridge back of Diamond Head the force of rebels opened fire on them with a field piece. Bob Wilcox handled the gun. No one was hit. Murray fell back and established a camp. Captain Ziegler was then sent out with a force of volunteers and sharpshooters and a rifled gun, arriving at 3 p.m. Partly by shelling and partly by the direct attack of the men Wilcox was forced to abandon his position. Large numbers of natives were in the chapparal, both below and above the road. Firing was sharp on both sides for several hours. Ziegler and Murray's men escaped with a few casualties, none serious. The natives did not know how to handle their guns. Several of them were killed and wounded.

Towards night over 80 of the rebels surrendered to Ziegler. At the scene of battle, Anton Rosa's house, was captured 120 carbines, 500 pounds of cartridges and 25 dynamite hand grenades of foreign make.

A native was captured with a note from Wilcox to Nowelin, proposing that as they were defeated they should seize the steamer Kaala which had anchored six miles up the coast on her way to Kahuka, go to Maui and there set up a government. This move was prevented.

Charles Lamb Carter died at 5 a. m. and his death created a profound sensation. He was a young man of fine presence, unusual ability, engaging manner and high character. He was one of the five commissioners who negotiated the treaty of annexation with President Harrison in 1893. He was a leading member of the convention which framed the new constitution last year and was expected to be a leader in the coming session of the legislature, although barely thirty years old. He was the eldest son of the late Hawaiian minister at Washington, Henry A. Carter, and a nephew of Chief Justice Judd. He leaves a widow and two children.

Judge Wideman's son Carl was with the rebels.

Martial law was declared early Monday morning. About sixty arrests of suspected persons have been made, including many leading loyalists. C. B. Wilson and Sam Parker are not suspected of complicity. Rickard got the guns sent here and will fight, as will also Davis, who landed them. Both the Ashfords are in jail with Peterson, Greighton, Wendenburg and Testa, who were leading witnesses for Commissioner Blount. There has been a strong demand for the summary trial and execution of Davis and Lane, who killed Carter. The authorities will probably consider it necessary to make some examples.

Nothing has been seen or heard of any rebels in the mountain for twenty-four hours. Military operations are probably at an end. The guarding of the city under martial law may be continued some days longer. The royalists were supplied with arms and ammunition from vessels. Grave alarm was caused at the same time by large bodies of Japanese laborers on the plantations rising in mutiny.

WELSH DISESTABLISHMENT.

This Will be the First Measure of the Next Imperial Parliamentary Session.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Lord Rosebery said in a speech in Cardiff last evening that Welsh disestablishment would be the first measure of the next parliamentary session. He did not doubt that the established church in Wales was doomed, but everybody must remember that the House of Lords presented a permanent barrier to the measures on which the Welsh had set their hearts. The position of the Lords was the supreme question of the hour. When the Government resolution dealing with this question should be submitted it would involve the dissolution of Parliament. Before the dissolution, however, he wished Parliament to deal with the liquor traffic, representation of labor and the one-man one-vote issue.

HONORS FOR M. FAURE.

Presented With the Collar of the Legion of Honor—Forming a Cabinet.

PARIS, Jan 19.—Gen. Fevrier Grand, Chancellor of the Legion of Honor, gave M. Faure yesterday the collar of the Grand Master of the Order.

It was learned last evening that M. Leon Bourgeois after a two-hour conference with M. Faure, had consented to try to form a cabinet. He will go to the Elysee to-day to report the result of his negotiations. It is expected that M. Perncaire will return to the minstry of finance and M. Leygues to the ministry of education. Paul Peytral, Louis Terrier and Eugene Godefroy Cavaignac would accept cabinet places under Bourgeois as premier.

CALLED OUT THE MILITIA.

Bayonets Necessary to Check the Strikers in Brooklyn.

BROOKLYN, Jan. 19.—One of the new motormen of the Putnam avenue line, Ernest Hinshe, of 123 Hudson street, Hoboken, who was on his way home after working all day, was assaulted by three men in the York street station of the elevated road last evening. His assailants escaped.

Mayor Schieren decided last evening that troops will be needed to preserve order. The entire brigade of some 3,000 men has been ordered out. All will be held in reserve at the armories except 600 or 700 who will do guard duty at the depots.

Severe Hurricane Off Fiji Islands.

AUCKLAND, N. Y., Jan. 19.—Advices from the Fiji Islands report the occurrence there of a hurricane which did great damage to shipping and property on shore and caused the loss of many lives. The bark Ophir, Capt. Ferguson, from Sydney, N. S. W., November 6, for Fiji, was wrecked on a reef near Levuka. An unknown schooner foundered near Tavuina, and several smaller vessels were lost along the coasts of the islands. Many buildings were unroofed and otherwise damaged, and the cocoanut plantations were ruined. Three churches at Suva were wrecked, and the customs bonded warehouse at that place was destroyed. The large sugar mills there were not injured.

To Defend America's Cup.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—The syndicate formed to build a yacht to defend the America's cup, composed of W. K. Vanderbilt, E. D. Morgan and C. Oliver Iselin, will award the contract for building the yacht to Herreshof. He has two designs ready, one for a keel boat and the other a centre-boarder. Mr. Iselin has not yet announced which kind of a boat will be built, but he is known to be in favor of the keel model. It is possible that the other design may be taken by another syndicate. George Gould will not build a yacht or enter another syndicate if one should be formed, but will enter the Vigilant in the trial races.

An Awful Domestic Tragedy.

FAIRMONT, Minn., Jan. 19.—Sam Hoteling, a farmer living five miles south of here, went to the house of T. B. Whitney, his father-in-law, and shot and killed both of the old people and his wife, who had left him and gone to live with her parents. After committing the murders Hoteling fled to his own house near by and barricaded the doors and windows, in anticipation of a siege. He kept the sheriff's posse at bay until morning, when the house was riddled with bullets. An entrance was forced and Hoteling was found dead, having shot himself in the head.

A New York Broker's Big Robbery.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Edwin O. Quigley, the senior member of the well-known firm of Quigley & Tuttle, bankers and brokers, at 6 Wall street, was arrested yesterday on the charge of robbing the Mercantile National Bank of $144,000 by means of getting loans on bogus municipal bonds which he forged. He confessed his guilt and exonerated his partner from all blame. Quigley will probably make no defence, but follow the example of Sealey and plead guilty in order that he may begin his sentence at once.

BROKE OUT INTO A RIOT

The Unemployed in Montreal Evidently Bent Upon Mischief.

BLOODSHED NEARLY RESULTED

Crowds Around the City Hall Become Violent in Their Demonstrations—Clubbed by the Police—A Number of the More Turbulent Spirits Arrested.

MONTREAL, Jan. 19.—Montreal narrowly escaped serious riot and bloodshed yesterday afternoon and had it not been for the effective work of the police the results would have been serious. The mob of idle men which had been surging around the city hall since early morning, towards one o'clock grew turbulent. While one of the leaders was addressing them a carter attempted to pass through the ranks and this was the signal for the disorder to commence. The police were appealed to, and they began to pilot the sleighs, but they could not go beyond the outskirts; the crowd hemmed them in, those in the rear crushing the others upon the officers, and separating them from their charges. Pandemonium at this point began to reign. The speakers' voice was lost in the uproar and the leaders could not be heard; they could only be seen gesticulating wildly. Cries rose on every hand to those in the middle of the street to stop the disturbers and allow no passage. The officers continued to try to effect an opening, but though they were badly jostled and bruised they refrained from using their batons. Those who were on guard at the entrance of the city hall left their posts to hasten to the assistance of their comrades. They could not pass through the crowd, but they emerged from the side of the city hall and took the crowd in the rear and in the flank. They were soon hemmed in and they were thrust against the walls. At one time it looked as if they were fairing badly. Sub-Chief Lapointe directed his men and they acted well in concert. Finally Superintendent Hughes appeared on the scene with reinforcements. All the reserve men of the Central station were called out and the patrol wagon came dashing down the street. Constable Gratton was seriously hurt at this point; some say that the patrol wagon passed over him. He was carried into the station. Another young man was carried to the station, blood flowing from his face. He was placed under arrest. The Chief addressed the crowd and told them that they would have to allow a passage for vehicles. He was interrupted by howls and jeers and many began to throw ice and snow. It was then found necessary to disperse the crowd, which became violent. But it was no easy matter, for they refused to move.

The most excitable spirits were placed under arrest and lodged in the cells. Ten were arrested. They protested and some refused to accompany the officers quietly. One young fellow was very impertinent towards the Chief of Police, and he even wanted to attack the Chief, but he was calmed.

The police used their batons only as a final resource; but when the crowd saw that the officers were in earnest they dispersed. During the rest of the afternoon they gathered in squads around the city hall, but they were peaceful. The prisoners were subsequently allowed out on bail.

DEATH IN A FIRE.

An Ottawa Woman Suffocated in Her Burning Dwelling.

OTTAWA, Jan. 19.—The home of Joseph Geroux, Rochester St., was gutted by fire yesterday, and Mrs. Geroux was taken from it dead. She apparently came to her death suffocated from smoke. Mrs. Geroux was found near the door in a sitting posture, on the floor. A chair stood right besides her, but she apparently had not been sitting on it. She had one shoe on and the other was at her side. From her position it looked as though she had been in the act of putting on her shoes, when death came. As soon as discovered, Mrs. Geroux was carried out of the burning building by the firemen. Though her body was still limp, she was dead. Her face and a part of one side of her body was burned and blackened by the flames, and her hair was signed on one side, but the injuries were not of a nature to cause immediate death. The husband, it is said by neighbors, has not lived at home for five or six days. Mrs. Geroux was, it is said, inclined to indulge rather too much in strong drink. She was 31 years of age.

Chief McKinnon Must Resign.

HAMILTON, Jan. 19.—The Board of Police Commissioners finally dealt with the charges against the Chief of Police yesterday. The board was unanimously of opinion that the fact that Chief McKinnon had been in various hotels with another man's wife for a week was sufficient to forfeit the confidence and respect of those under him and could not be overlooked. They asked for his resignation. The chief asked for a short time in which to get his affairs in shape. He put in an open resignation, which the Commissioners will make take effect in a few days at furthest.

Preferred Death to Dishonor.

TORONTO, Jan. 19.—Laxness of morals led William H. Durand to become entangled with a woman who was not his wife, and the strain on his purse of keeping two homes led him to dishonesty. He defrauded the Massey-Harris Company, whose collector he was for Western Ontario and expected arrest. Rather than meet his trouble he took morphine and died at his home, 333 Shaw street. He had always been looked upon as honest. The firm does not known the full amount of his shortage. His wife is deeply distressed.

Burglars in the Royal City.

GUELPH, Jan. 19.—Burglars entered Robert Dillon's residence on Cork street by smashing in a side door while Mr. and Mrs. Dillon were visiting Mrs. Dillon's mother in another part of the city. They ransacked everything and held high carnival, taking away with them a keg of beer, some whiskey, four diamond and two torquoise rings, a gold watch and other sundries.

THE VIEWS OF A CATHOLIC.

CATHOLIC ELECTORS AND THE CONSERVATIVE PARTY.

The P. P. A. Conspiracy—No Repudiation by Conservative Leaders — Treatment of the Catholics in Ontario— A Review of the Situation.

The EXAMINER has been requested to publish the following letter, which appeared in the Globe of Monday, January 14th:

SIR,—"The man who encourages a religious war is eminently qualified for companionship with the thugs of India."

The above extract, taken from one of O'Connell's speeches, wherein he was denouncing the Orange plot to prevent the accession of the Princess Victoria to the throne of England, might be read with profit by the leaders of the Tory party who have either openly abetted or encouraged by their silence, the "No Popery" campaigns that have been so regrettable a feature in several Provincial elections, and which brought into life and activity the P.P.A., with all its unneighbourly and unchristian obligations.

In political as in social affairs nothing is more detestable than ingratitude, and surely the Conservative party became basely forgetful of the past services of the Catholic electorate when, on the mere chance of defeating the Ontario Government, it called forth the evil spirits of religious hatred to bait the Catholics and generate the P.P.A., whose mission is not alone to deprive their old Catholic allies of political preferment, but to prevent them obtaining employment and sharing the ordinary benefits of civilized society. During the last few elections it has pleased the Tory speakers and press to make frequent references to the "Catholic vote," and loud have been their denunciation of what they offansively called the "corporate vote," meaning, of course, that the votes of the Catholic electors were controlled by their bishops and priests at will, and this idea they sought to impress on their gullible hearers and readers that they might be duly alarmed at the imaginary danger of permitting Rome to rule. Happily the good sense of the Protestants of our country rejected such appeals to passion, but the guilt of Catholic-baiting must remain with those who, regardless of truth, justice and neighbourly feeling, tried to create a religious war in a community that had been distinguished for "peace and good will." The cry of Catholic vote, and "corporate vote," was raised without justification, for no religious denomination can possibly be freer from clerical influence in political matters than the Catholic, for it is a very rare exception, indeed, where a priest is known to express any political preference, or to solicit the vote of any of his flock.

That the Catholic electorate usually vote as a solid body is not true, except where a common danger threatens, or common gratitude moves them to support the party that has been just, and in so doing they act no differently than any other denomination would under like circumstances, and in casting aside ordinary party leanings in the recent Provincial elections they only showed that they were human, for it was too much to expect any body of free and independent electors to be enamored of a political party that was ready to throw them to the wolves, and which was encouraging the hooded band of political and social thugs to make war on them and theirs. But the cry of "Catholic vote" has always been studiously avoided by the Tories whenever the Dominion elections were in view, for then it was that they became solicitous for their "dear Catholic allies," and then throughout the land was heard the claim of the Tory party for Catholic support because they had fought for Separate Schools when the Grit party was arrayed in opposition to them.

That the Catholic electorate has changed in its general party support is true, but it is surely the right of all men to change sides from election to election, if they see fit, and if the great body of the Catholic voters have passed from one political army to another they did not more than the Protestant electors would have done under like conditions. Prior to and long after the rebellion of 1837 the Catholic people of Ontario were staunch Reformers, for they were of Irish birth or Irish stock, and were decidedly opposed to the maintenance of what was known as the Family Compact, and the struggle for responsible government was loyally supported by the Irish Catholics of the Province, and with the Reform party they remained until the contest over the establishment of Separate Schools.

THE P. P. A. CONSPIRACY.

But while Mr. Brown and his associates contended for what they believed to be the good of Catholic and Protestant alike, they fought in the open and did not descend to the baseness of establishing secret and oath-bound societies directed against Catholics or of making war on Catholics as individuals, as in the case of the P. P. A., the pet institution of our Provincial Tories. Their opposition to Separate Schools was conducted, unfortunately, not free from extreme references to much that Catholics held dearer than life, but free from plottings, cousipracies or attempts to injure them politically, industrially or commercially, and when the Act of Confederation was consummated, Mr. Brown and the Reform party loyally recognised the settlement of the Separate School system, and from that out, the Catholics of Ontario had no more genuine friend than he. It was not till 1873 that the Catholic electorate became detached from the Tory party, which had used them so long as "hewers of wood and drawers of water," and to their influence in the elections of 1873 and 1874 may be credited some share in the defeat of the Macdonald and the endorsement of the Mackenzie Administrations; but prior to the general election of 1878, the Catholic electorate became inoculated with the protectionist virus, just like other people, when the easy-made-rich craze was abroad, and this, coupled with the attacks made on the Government by prominent Catholic Reformers and the Catholic press for its exclusiveness and lack of sympathy, found the great majority ranged on the side of the Opposition. And again might it with truth be stated that it was very largely due to their defection that the Reform party found their Waterloo and the Tories became entrenched in power at Ottawa so firmly that they have not since been dislodged.

Now, during these years Ontario had a Liberal Government, which, of course, was not pleasing to the Tory party, for they wanted it all, and failed not to try every device to capture the Provinces:—First, by appealing to the Catholics to smite the Government that was said to be so niggardly to their body in the distribution of offices and other patronage, and every effort was put forth to work on their supposed cupidity and prejudices, but, to their credit, they rejected the unworthy overtures; and then commenced the task of operating on the Protestant community by representing Mowat as the slave of the Catholic hierarchy, with the Jesuit-party further ing the ends of Rome, etc., etc., and though the leaders of the Tory party gave a faint denial to their responsibility the "Facts for the Irish Electors," they could not nor did they disclaim the offensive and untruthful "Lynch-Mowat Concordat" circular that was so generally published in the hope and expectation that the Protestant electors would prove less worthy and less intelligent than their Catholic fellow-citizens. This move on the part of the Tories failed, and then came the last and most iniquitous of all steps, namely, the founding and fostering of the P.P.A., which, while disclaiming affinity or alliance with either of the great parties, was Tory in its conception, in its belongings and its mission.

NO REPUDIATION.

This institution, forged for the real, purpose of destroying the Mowat Government, was specially devoted to the work of compelling Catholics to leave the province, and though its hateful and cruel obligations were well known to the leaders of the Tory party in Ontario and Dominion fields alike, not one of them, Catholic or Protestant, from Clarke Wallace or Mackenzie Bowell to Frank Smith or Costigan, had the courage to publicly denounce its aims or call on their No-Popery followers to forego, their pastime of baiting Catholics on Tory platforms, and threatening them with the loss of their educational rights. But this was not all, for neither did the Empire or any other Tory newspaper of standing pen one editorial line against the P.P.A. during the Provincial campaign, notwithstanding the many evidences and examples of Catholic loyalty to the Dominion Government.

The work of facing this oath-bound brotherhood was left to the Liberal press and leaders; and now when the teeth of this ill-favoured order have been drawn and its decay is apparent, the Tory leaders are anxious to prove and proclaim how friendly they have ever been to their "dear Catholic friends." But it is too late, now that the danger is passed, to preach the doctrine of good will to the Catholic people, for was it not the same Tory press that but a few months ago encouraged the P.P.A. by failing to denounce it, and is it not the same set of voices that so very recently called on the Protestant electorate to march against Mowat and Rome that is now ready to sing sweet songs of welcome to the lately despised and always hated Catholics? This may be called a strongly drawn picture, but if the colouring is thought to be too high the Empire can surely quote itself wherein during the Provincial contest it is said one word against the P.P.A. or out of harmony with the movement against the "Dogans." Its pleadings after the general election deceive no one, for the organ of the Ottawa Government knows that the Dominion elections are not far off, when, in order to win, it will be necessary to have the votes of their old-time Catholic supporters, consequently anything said or written now bears a strong commercial flavour and smacks of the desire to be saved in the hour of their visitation.

Shall the Catholic electorate so soon forget their cruel abandonment by the Tory party, and the generous advocacy by the Liberal press and leaders of the gospel of justice and blessed peace? I cannot think that the recollection of Tory baseness will so soon fade from Catholic memories, or that gratitude for the courage manifested by the Liberal leaders will fail to find a lodgment in Catholic hearts.

Of course the Tory leaders and the Empire expected that the waters of the P. P. A. would subside after they had destroyed the Mowat Ministry, and that the mock crusade against the Ottawa Government would disband at the bidding of the "captains of the host," or at least cease to give trouble. Everything was well timed by the Clarke Wallaces and the Bowells, and it was either a pretty plot or they failed in their duty to the Catholic people by not publicly discountenancing the merciless order, whose very existence is a discredit to our common civilization. Happily the day is near at hand when the Catholic electorate will have an opportunity of settling accounts with those who sought to sweep them, and of manifesting their appreciation of the splendid services rendered to the cause of justice by the Liberal party, in overthrowing a movement that threatened the destruction of the good and kindly feeling that has so long existed between the Catholic and Protestant people of our Province to the happiness and well-being of both.

A Mimico, Ont., Man Speaks From Experience.

HIS SUFFERINGS, MISERY AND AGONIES ARE BANISHED.

He Says: Paine's Celery Compound Has Made Me a New Man.

The strong testimony of men and women who have endured sufferings and agonies from disease for months and years, is always the means of rescuing and saving the lives of others who suffer, and who have not found the true means of escape from death.

Mr. Wm. Wilson, of Mimico, Ont., desires to point every sufferer to that true life-giver, Paine's Celery Compound, the only medicine that can truly banish disease and suffering and give a new and happy life; he writes as follows:—

"When Heaven sends into the world an agency for banishing suffering, misery and disease, I think every afflicted human being should know of it.

"I thank God that in my time of pain and suffering my attention was directed to Paine's Celery Compound. For months I was in such a condition that I could not work. My trouble was pain between the shoulders and general weakness of body. I went to several doctors, but the medicines were used in vain.

"I continued in suffering and agony until I was recommended Paine's Celery Compound. The first two bottles I used worked wonderfully in relieving my pain, I gained strength and had an assurance of better days.

"I have continued with the marvellous medicine until the time of writing, and feel myself a new man. I can positively affirm that Paine's Celery Compound has been the means of saving me from being crippled in body. It is a medicine that I can honestly recommend to every sufferer, and I can never forget what it has done for me."

DISSOLUTION IN SIGHT.

Evidences That a General Election is Not Far Off.

OTTAWA, Jan. 19.—The Cabinet met yesterday. The Premier was not present. The absentees were Hon. Messrs. Montague, Ferguson, Patterson and Dickie. Although nothing official was given out, it is understood there was a talk about dissolution, but nothing definite was decided.

TORONTO, Jan. 19.—An evening paper publishes the following: "There will be a general election for the House of Commons before the snow is off the ground. This may be taken as an assured fact as information on the matter comes from too many well informed sources to permit of doubt in the matter whatever. The only question is as to the exact date on which polling will take place, but the general opinion is that it will be some time in April, as the lists cannot well be got ready before then. The old campaigners in both parties cannot get their armor on too soon, as the whole Dominion will in a few weeks be ringing with the fiercest battle that has taken place in Canada since the National Policy victory of '78.

HAMILTON, Jan. 19.—Sir Frank Smith, of Toronto, was in the city yesterday, and was asked if there was any likelihood of a general election being held shortly or if another session of Parliament would be held. He replied: "I can't tell you, but it will be decided this week by the Cabinet."

Trade in the Dominion.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Bradstreet's says: Toronto reports a moderate volume of trade, with some improvement in orders for heavy and seasonable goods and a fair outlook. More than usual dullness is reported by Montreal jobbers, the redeeming feature in the Province of Quebec being that purchasers have long been confined to actual wants, so that liabilities are smaller than usual. In Nova Scotia the volume of trade for the year has about equalled expectations, although prices have been disappointingly low and profits consequently interfered with. The situation in Newfoundland remains unchanged, with the outlook not encouraging. Bank clearings at Winnipeg, Hamilton, Toronto, Montreal and Halifax aggregate $21,159,000 this week. Last week the total was $22,630,000 and in the week a year ago it was $13,767,000. There are 64 business failures reported from the Dominion of Canada this week. Last week the total was 58, and one and two years ago respectively it was 48 and 39.

Accident on the G. T. R.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The Lehigh G. T. R. express ran into a horse and cutter which was being driven by Mr. Robert Haggard, St. Paul street, London West, at the Hyde Park crossing of the Grand Trunk yesterday morning, and mangled the driver and horse in a frightful way and smashed the cutter into kindling wood. An inquest will be held on Monday, a jury being empanelled by Detective Ward. The deceased leaves a wife and child in London West. For a couple of years he has resided on Oxford street but recently moved to Paul street.

Irrigation in the Northwest.

OTTAWA, Jan. 19.—Mr. Lucas, M. P. P., of Calgary, N. W. T., who is here for a week past, has left for Toronto. He wants the Government, under the Irrigation Act of last session, to allow the township of Springbank to divert sufficient water from Bow river and Jumping Pound creek to irrigate 50,000 acres to that district. The Government has practically agreed to this. Mr. Lucas has, therefore, been able to float the debentures of the municipality to the extent of $100,000 at 6 per cent. interest with capitalists in Toronto. He is in Toronto now completing his arrangements.

Overdrawing His Account the Cause.

HAMILTON, Jan. 19.—The liabilities of the firm of Bowman & Moore, who assigned on Thursday, are estimated at $25,000, and it is claimed the assets will reach $45,000. The cause of failure is on account of one of the younger members of the firm who had overdrawn his account with the Bank of Hamilton to the extent of $5,000. The bank closed down on him, and as Mr. Moore had endorsed for him the failure resulted. A meeting of creditors will be held in a few days.

FLORIDA GRAPE FRUIT.

Mr. Wm. Cluxton, having spent a winter in Florida, furnishes the following reliable commendation of the salutary and health-giving qualities of the Florida "Grape Fruit" (resembling an orange), sold by OSTROM BROS:—

The Grape Fruit sold in the shops in Peterborough is a native of Florida.

Some persons believe it is the best fruit in the world—others say it is the "forbidden fruit" of the Garden of Eden.

It is a providential arrangement for Florida which, in parts, is a malarious country. It is a tonic containing quinine, which is a preventive of fever.

The trees are grown from seeds planted in rows, and the the young trees are transplanted in the same way as apple trees in this country. The fruit matures at the same time as the orange—the end of January or beginning of February—although some of both are allowed to remain on the trees later.

For the breakfast table the Grape Fruit should be cut in two halves and the core taken out with a sharp knife, then use a dessert spoon, squeeze the fruit and sup the juice. When finished in this way it has the appearance of a squeezed lemon.

Permanently Cured by Taking

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

A CAB-DRIVER'S STORY.

"I was afflicted for eight years with Salt Rheum. During that time, I tried a great many medicines which were highly recommended, but none gave me relief. I was at last advised to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, by a friend who told me that I must purchase six bottles, and use them according to directions. I yielded to his persuasion, bought the six bottles, and took the contents of three of these bottles without noticing any direct benefit. Before I had finished the fourth bottle, my hands were as

A CLERGYMAN'S LETTER.

HE SHOWS HOW RHEUMATISM CAN BE CONQUERED.

He is Released From Suffering of Years' Duration and Gladly Tells the Story That Others May be Equally Fortunate.

From the Syracuse News.

Few men of modern times are characterised by such distinct personality as the Rev. S. R. Calthrop, pastor of the May Memorial church of Syracuse. Over seventy years of age, with hair and beard as white as the driven snow, his figure is as erect and symmetrical as a youth of twenty, while his step is as light and every movement as active as in the first flush of early manhood. He is a familiar figure in the streets of this city, and no man is more universally respected, for he has shown that it is possible to combine the beauties of true Godliness with the practical wisdom of a broad-minded man of the world.

Some time ago Dr. Calthrop was troubled with rheumatism, and suffered from it at intervals for several years. At times the pain would be so great as to almost prevent him from walking. Many remedies were tried without success; and friends of the clergyman had about given his case up as hopeless, when it was reported a cure had been effected and the disease completely driven from his system. When the fact was reported the News assigned a reporter to interview Dr. Calthrop, and learn from him the truth of the matter, with the result that the doctor put his statement in the form of the following letter:

To the Editor of the Evening News:—DEAR SIR,—More than thirty-five years ago I wrenched my left knee, throwing it almost from its socket. Great swelling followed, and the synovial juice kept leaking from the joint. This made me lame for years, and from time to time the weak knee would give out entirely, and the swelling would recommence. This was always occasioned by some strain like a sudden stop. The knee gradually recovered, but always was weaker than the other. About fifteen years ago the swelling recommenced, this time without any wrench at all, and before long I realized that this was rheumatism settling in the weakest part of my body. Fortunately, the use of solanicine was known to me, and I found that it reduced the swelling very quickly. The trouble came so often, however, that I was obliged to carry solanicine in my pocket everywhere I went. I had generally a packet in my waistcoat pocket, but in going to a conference at Buffalo I forgot it, and as the car was damp and cold, before I got to Buffalo my knee was swollen to twice its natural size. I had seen the good effects that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were having in such cases and I tried them myself, with the result that I had never had a twinge of a swelling since. This was effected by taking 7 or 8 boxes.

I need not say that I am thankful for my recovered independence, but I will add that my knee is far stronger than it has been for 35 years.

I gladly give you this statement.

Yours,
S. R. CALTHROP.

These pills are manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont., and are sold only in boxes bearing the firm's trade mark and wrapper, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and are never sold in bulk. They may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company.

The Old Czar and the New.

Almost the last thought of the late Czar was for the theatre employes, who, in a way, would be among the chief losers by his death. Opening his eyes with an effort, he signed to the Czarowitz to approach. "Do not let the theatres suffer on account of the long mourning. I do not wish so many people should be reduced to misery on account of my death." The new Emperor did not forget his father's dying words, for one of his first acts was to give 800,000 roubles toward the support of the actors and actresses during the time that they were to be out of employment.

The new Czar has received his late father's Ministers with cordial warmth, and when M. De Giers, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, requested permission to retire from his post on account of ill health, Nicolas II. expressed a hope that they might work together for many years to come. But M. De Giers replied, "See, your Majesty, my feet can no longer carry me." "It is not your feet, but your head of which I have need," responded the Czar.

A TRAMP ON TRAMPS.

A TRAMP'S NARRATIVE AND HOW THE "COPY" WAS SECURED.

The Story of a Vagabond's Life—Hard Lines that Became Second Nature to an Educated Man Who Liked Strong Drink—His Remedy for Tramps.

He slipped in unannounced.

"Excuse me," he said, falteringly, "but I want to see one of the writers on this paper—a man who was a schoolmate of mine twenty-five years ago. I don't remember his name, for whisky has taken my memory."

The man was a tramp—a little fellow with piercing black eyes, gray hair and unkempt beard. He stood quietly in the doorway as two or three names were suggested to him. At the mention of the fourth he stepped forward.

"That's it," he exclaimed. "Where is he?"

When the little tramp learned that his boyhood companion was in another city, a prominent and prosperous citizen, he shook his head and put out his hand. "Well," he said, "I will humble myself at your feet—a stranger's—and ask for a dime. And say," he went on, "wouldn't you like to buy the story of a tramp's life? I am an educated man and I can give you an article worth printing."

He received little encouragement and he went away. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon the tramp had returned with a manuscript that was "respectfully submitted." The story follows:

Born to a good name, educated at a college whose colors are famous on many an athletic field, I have been for the better part of a quarter of a century now a common tramp.

I have been thoroughly identified with every phase of the haphazard, reckless vagabond life embraced by that term. I have spent seemingly interminable hours of bitter winter nights turning myself like a spitted chicken by a tin fire over against the railroad track. I have infested back doors in quest of fragments of cold victuals. I have been the occasional patron of nickel lodging houses, sharing the wretched shelter they afford with thousands of nameless bedfellows. I have utilized the talent bestowed for nobler purposes to coax coin from the sympathetic with which to satisfy the insatiable appetite which has been my destruction. In fact, I have lived, and according to all evident probabilities, shall die a thorough vagabond.

You have asked for a recital of some of my experiences. They have been so varied and extensive that it is difficult to make selection. Tramps, as a body, are a divisable quantity. There are the altogether vicious and irredeemably depraved, who inherited the vagabond instinct, born to prey upon society and entering upon the career as does a just hatched duck seek the nearest pond of water; but it is a great mistake to class all nomads with this unbruited specimen.

It has become so generally known that tramps can and do traverse great distances by fast trains without surrender of any financial consideration to the corporations providing the rapid transit that when a single man finds himself unemployed and behind with his board bill, the suggestion is at hand that the continent is large and the means of traversing it in search of betterment easily available.

And so he loads his already ruined fortunes into the first convenient freight car and starts upon an aimless journey, often only terminating with the close of his life. Presently a stopping place is reached and the trainmen eject him at some lonesome wayside station. About this time the demands of hunger assert themselves, and since they will have no denial he timidly approaches the nearest house with a plea for food. As may well happen, the substantial fragment of a chicken or a quarter section of a porterhouse steak is handed out, with perhaps some toothsome cake and a piece of delicious pie on the side. In many cases that preliminary experience settles the man's future. At the best of times, when in employment, he is not regaled with such fare as this, and so elects to enjoy it without any other physical exertion than is involved by asking for it.

And then another recruiting agency of tramphood is promoted by the growing indisposition of discriminating people to feed robust, able-bodied beggars. This has led to a systematic practice of decoying young children away from their homes with enticing promises of alluringly adventurous travel—eventuating only in compulsory begging and petty theft for the support of the kidnappers.

The more I draw upon my recollection the more it becomes enlarged. A ponderous volume would contain but a cursory fragment of it.

As the Nineteenth Century approaches its close, I see much of encouragement behind and not a little before as tramps. Just so long as strikes and social discontent prevail the tramp will be in clover. The benevolent have no reliable means of discriminating between the industrious workingman, idle and destitute, and the professional vagrant.

A remedy for the tramp nuisance? A problem that has fruitlessly puzzled the nation's greatest statesmen, is too tough a nut for me to tackle. From the point of view of a tramp I should say that at least a partial remedy might be achieved through concerted action of the railroads to seal all empty cars and to compel trainmen to effectively patrol all trains at starting and stopping points.

Your professional tramp is distinctly opposed to walking or any other form of physical exertion. I believe this action by the transportation companies would centralize the nuisance in great centres of population where there is, or could be, created efficient machinery for its control.

It is, of course, useless and impracticable to suggest the formation of a universal league to withhold food or other material aid from all applicants, therefore, as the next best and reasonably possible thing I should say to apprehend all vagrants everywhere, at whatever temporary cost, subject them to the hardest and most humiliating labor upon the most meager and uninviting dietetic regimen consistent with health, and my belief is that the nearest possible abatement of the tramp nuisance will be accomplished which is achievable this side of the millennium.

"Hoodlum."

I frequently hear "soodlum" and "soodles" applied to dawdling, unthrifty, loafing fellows, although I never heard they were so called after a leader named Sood. It seems to me this is one of the fanciful derivations so detested by Professor Skeat. My own impression is that "soodlum" and "hoodlum" are mere variations of "noodles" and "noodlum." The great unwashed are rather given to such play on words.—Notes and Queries.

DAIRY STOCK.

Principles of Dairy Application Laid Down at a Grange Meeting.

W. F. Whitman read a paper on "Breeding Dairy Stock" before the Turner Grange, extract from which are from the Maine Farmer:

"Here in Turner our aim is, in the main, to produce cream. We want the best machines for converting our forage, grain, vegetables, etc., into cream; the final value of the animals is of comparatively small importance."

The writer then calls attention to the opportunities to study the prize winning dairy cows at dairy tests at fall fairs and the opportunities for study of the points that constitute a good dairy cow, and alludes to the culpable indifference of farmers to these tests during their progress.

Mr. Whitman then describes these cows:

"We have noticed that the prize winners have certain points in common. As a rule they have deep bodies, stand wide between the front legs and have large stomachs well filled; soft, velvety skins and their bones somewhat loosely knit together. In size they have been medium; we have never seen among the winners an overlarge animal or a small one, though many such have competed. From what we have seen we arrive at the following conclusions: First, the cow must have a good constitution; lots of them break down because of the want of it. Next, she must have good digestive organs, and she must also have the ability to turn the food she consumes into milk and cream, having these qualities and her keeper bearing well in mind the fact that nothing can be drawn from the cow's udder except what has first gone into her stomach. We may hope for good returns from our cow.

"We will suppose that all of them have been selected with good judgment and all have a good inheritance, i. e., are descended from good producing ancestors. Difficult as it is to select the females of our herd, it is infinitely more difficult to select the males, for with our widely different herd of cows it will be useless to expect to find any one male fit to cross with them all, and really fine males, such as we are in search of, are 'scarce as feathers on toads' backs.'

"Let us suppose, again, that we have been fortunate in our selection. When our calves are born we will rear all the females that are an improvement on their parents and discard the rest. If 25 per cent of them are desirable enough to keep we shall be fortunate. After a few years have passed we shall begin to weed out our cows that were purchased. Probably but a small per cent. of them will be retained to old age. As we go on year after year selecting the fittest and rejecting all the rest, our herd has gradually begun to assume a form something like our ideal."

Stub Ends of Thought.

A woman talks at her best when she doesn't know what she is talking about.

Domestic felicity is of as many types as religion is.

We unconsciously judge all men by ourselves.

"Leave the house."

For an instant he confronted the girl in silence.

"Very well," he answered, with an effort.

He was true to his word.

Although a burglar and a social outcast, he left not only the house, but the stationary tubs in the kitchen and the grand piano.

HE NEVER ADVERTISED.

There was a man who vainly strived
To build a fortune. Hard he tried,
But sadly failed, while others thrived.
Till finally his business died.

He saw his neighbour richer grow,
He saw great crowds pass through his door,
And wondered oft why it was so
While few e'er came to his own store.

And yet in vain he struggled on,
'Till long ere life's alloted span
Was reached, with every prospect gone,
He died a broken-hearted man.

Just ere he breathed his last he spake
To his poor wife. "Before I go
I would like some amends to make,
But 'tis too late now well I know.

"At last, here on my dying bed,
The solemn truth I've realised,
That wealth came not to me," he said,
"Because I never advertised."

Own a Good Piano

It costs but a trifle more to own a good piano, like the "Rheinier," the "Morris," the "Heintzman" or the "Mendelssohn." The difference in cost is not for one day, or one month, or one year. It's worth five dollars a year for ten years to have exactly what you want. Just think it over. Have a talk with Mr. J. W. Crosby, of 343 Water street, the agent for those four first-class instruments, and close the purchase before the end of the year.

THE MINISTERIAL VISITATION.

Peterborough is to be favoured with a visit from four ministers of the gospel—of high taxation and extravagant expenditure. On Feb. 7th Hon. John Haggart, Minister of Railways and Canals ; Hon. J. C. Patterson, Minister of Militia and Defence ; Hon. Dr. Montague, Minister in general, and "another minister" will address a mass meeting in the Opera House. Naturally considerable interest will be felt as to the nature of the message these distinguished gentlemen will deliver. We can easily fancy what will be said. Hon. Mr. Haggart will, of course, talk canal, but, equally of course, he won't talk Tay canal, which was largely built to "bring grist to his mill," but Trent Valley Canal. He will, of course, show how much the government has done to push on the work, and tell a great deal more about what they are going to do, repeating the roseate promises that have been made so glibly the past dozen years. He will doubtless tell how work has been delayed by circumstances, over which the government had no control—the "circumstance" being that the Confederation Act did not allow a general election oftener than every five years. We shall be told that the finances of the country are in a flourishing condition in spite of the trifling fact that the past year the gross debt has been increased over eight million dollars, and that the total net debt of the Dominion is over two hundred and forty-six thousand dollars. That the country is getting wealthy inasmuch as there is a deficit of nearly a million and a quarter dollars for 1894, with the prospect, nay, almost certainty, of having in 1895 the biggest deficit of any normal year in the history of the country. We shall be told that every government department is economically and honestly administered, and that Hon. Mr. Haggart is not responsible for the stealing of tens of thousands of dollars in the matter of the Curran bridge ; that the waste in canal expenditure in all quarters is only a trifle for a country whose exhaustless resources (not its wise government) enables her to borrow money on easy terms. We shall doubtless we told that Sir Adolphe Caron was perfectly justified in milking railway subsidies, and bleeding contractors, to form a boodle fund, and that he would be happy to do it again. We shall be told that the delicate state of health of the condemned contractors justified their release from prison before their terms expired. We shall be told that everything is rosy and blooming, that times are good, that money is plentful, that our workingmen have constant employment at the highest wages, according to the promises of the N. P. That everybody is prosperous and happy and has plenty of money, if only the right pocket is searched; we should be told how protection has boomed our manufacturing interests, so that our export of manufactured goods increased from the trifling figure of five millions odd in 1876 to five millions odder in 1890. We shall no doubt hear a great deal that is worth hearing, and that is worth taking with a pretty liberal pinch of salt. It is eminently proper that ministers should give an account of their stewardship, and that the people should hear and weigh well their utterances.

MR. GARVIN AND THE BOARD.

In last evening's Review there appeared a letter fathered by Mr. C. W. Sawers, in which an attempt was made to create sympathy for Mr. Garvin on the ground that the Liberals are seeking his decapitation, and the attempt is also made to lionise him because he is a Conservative. Apart from the evil of introducing political feeling into school matters, the statement of Mr. Garvin in Mr. Sawer's letter, that the Liberal members of the board were hostile to Mr. Garvin from political motives, is absolutely false. It is well known, and no person knows it better than Mr. Garvin, that the Liberal members of the board have been his staunchest friends and it was only on grounds well known to Mr. Garvin and not only particularly to recent events, that they felt it their duty to join the Conservatives on the board in an unanimous declaration that Mr. Garvin's usefulness as an Inspector was gone, and in unanimously demanding his resignation, giving him three months in which to tender it. If, as there is a reason to believe, Mr. Garvin is aware of the contents of Mr. Sawer's letter, he stands convicted of the basest treachery when he encourages an attack on the Liberal gentlemen who stood his friends, so long as his conduct permitted them to do so. If Mr. Garvin feels inclined to continue such unjust attacks he may be favoured with some wholesome, if unpalatable truths, of which the public are not generally aware. It is a matter of indifference to the Liberals whether the Inspector is a Conservative or not, so long as he does his duty satisfactorily, and surely in a board composed of ten Conservatives and five Liberals, even from a political point of view, it may be trusted that the Conservative party will receive justice. The EXAMINER does not introduce politics into school matters, but we cannot permit imputations against honourable-minded Liberals, who do not care a straw, which stripe of politics an inspector or teacher is of, so long as he does his work properly.

IT is understood that Mr. C. W. Sawers is to-day interesting himself in opposition to Mr. Peter Hamilton's re-appointment as High School trustee. The subject will come up for consideration at the council meeting on Monday night. Events, no more recent than the municipal elections, show what estimate the ratepayers place upon the value of Mr. Sawer's advice and the town council can be fully trusted to make a proper appointment without Mr. Sawer's counsel.

In Olden Times

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action ; but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs, will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES.

Pea-nut night has passed, that interesting debate is over, a number of fellows came within three yards of tailing the donkey, and between fifty and sixty young men enjoyed the "time." Mr. Alf. Parker was "host" and acted as chairman of the debate. Resolved that "the country boy is more awkward in the city than the city boy is in the country," was discussed ; for the affimative Messrs. Martin and Anderson, for the negative Messrs. Kennedy and McKeller. In a vote taken on the merits of the debate the negative won. The fellows expressed their appreciation of Mr. Parker's kindness, and gathering around the piano, brought a pleasant evening to a close by a hearty sing.

Mr. B. Anderson, is chairman of the Song Service at 8 o'clock.

Eight of the workers were at the meeting last evening.

Many will be anxious to hear Rev. Mr. Carruthers talk at the meeting to-morrow afternoon while the special music will add not a little to the attractiveness of the service. A mixed quartette from St. Andrew's, Mr. Jones, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Mulligan and Mr. Mulligan. A ladies quartette from George street and Charlotte street, Miss Fawcett, Miss A. Belleghem, Mrs. Seward and Miss V. Belleghem, and one of the male quartettes will provide an interesting musical programme. The service is at 4.15 closing at 5 o'clock, and all, both ladies and gentlemen, are invited.

THE INSPECTORATE CONTROVERSY.

To the Editor of the Examiner :

DEAR SIR,—If Mr. Garvin wishes to be judged on his merits, he should restrain the zeal of his champions lest he be led to pray, "save me from my friends." The position of having "a fool for a client" would be preferable, in my opinion, to damaging advocacy.

Yours truly,
FESTINA LENTE.

CURLIANA.

A close and exciting match was curled between rinks skipped by Messrs. Ed. Brown and Harry LeBrun yesterday afternoon. Right from the start the personnel of the two rinks worked hard for victory, and a large crowd followed the varying fortunes of the two popular skips with the greatest interest. A barrel of flour for the Peterborough Protestant Home was the forfeit of losing, and this time the fates decreed that Skip LeBrun's rink is to have the pleasure of presenting the flour, and, also, be it remembered, of paying for it. The personnel of the rinks was as follows :

Will Bradburn,	H Phelan,
J S Knapman,	W B Robinson,
John McClelland,	J Stanger,
H LeBrun, skip 15	E Brown, skip.....19

The Lakefield curlers felt so elated in winning from Campbellford yesterday morning, that they decided to stay over and give the Peterborough curlers a whirl during the afternoon. The word was sent round, and it wasn't long before there was two local rinks on hand ready to take up the challenge for a friendly game. The following rinks played :

Lakefield. Peterborough.

RINK NO. 1.

J Ridpath,	R H Kells,
W Baptie,	C Rutherford,
G Postlethwaite,	S Ray,

R J Strickland,	D Belleghem,
Geo. Hilliard,	H M Allen.
R C Strickland, sk..13	C McGill, skip.....14
27	30

Majority for Peterborough, 3.

As will be observed both games were most close and the excitement of both players and spectators ran correspondingly high. At the close the Lakefield men gave three cheers and a tiger for Peterborough, and the local men returned the compliment with a vim.

The Campbellford Colts played a return match with the Peterborough Colts, last night, in the regular schedule of matches drawn up in the Colts competition, embracing rinks from Belleville, Peterborough and Campbellford. The local men, it will be remembered, won from Campbellford on Tuesday and last night they again scored a victory by hard steady play. The rinks were composed as follows :

Peterborough. Campbellford.

RINK NO. 1.

H R H Kenner,	C A Smith,
Geo Matthews,	R Lowery,

Geo J Horkins, skip, 23	F J Smith, skip.....13

Majority for Peterborough—9.

It was almost midnight when the final end was played and an immediate adjournment was made to the Palace Restaurant, where the visitors were tendered an oyster supper by the members of the Peterborough Colts Division.

The Belleville Colts are expected to play here early next week.

HOCKEY.

Trinity College team which was defeated here on Thursday night by a score of 12—2, won from the crack Hamilton Hockey team by 12 to 8 goals. Mr. Perry Goldsmith of Peterborough, was on Trinity's forward line.

On Tuesday evening last, a meeting was held at the rink for the purpose of organising a hockey club, in Lakefield. The following officers were elected :

Hon. Pres.—T. H. Benson.
President—E. A. Tanner.
Vice-President—H. A. Lempriere.
Captain—T. C. Ridpath.
Vice-Captain—J. Clarke.
Secretary—F. H. Bell.
Treasurer—J. S. Madill.

Though starting late in the season, the club will no doubt make a good showing. It is expected that a match will be arranged with one of the Peterborough clubs for next week.

Last night Mr. J. P. Hurley wrote Mr. Hedley, of Toronto, to ascertain what arrangements could be made to give the Peterborough hockeyists a game with either of the crack teams of Osgoode Hall or 'Varsity on the afternoon or evening of Wednesday next, when the curlers go up to the Queen City.

This evening the Peterboroughs and the Volts play the first game in the Ontario Hockey Association schedule in this district. It is rumoured that the Volts intend making their defence particularly strong by playing two men instead of one at cover point and relying on their forwards to win for them. A large attendance of spectators is expected, as both teams being entirely composed of local men, will tend to make the match an interesting one. Puck faced at 7.30.

AS TO MATRICULATION.

Queen's University Endorses the Scheme Proposed by Toronto University.

The following report of a committee of the senate of Queen's University, Kingston, has been adopted by the senate :

Your committee recommends the adoption of the scheme of matriculation proposed by the University of Toronto, and expresses pleasure at the step which has been taken in the direction of raising the standard for matriculation by increasing the percentage of marks for passing from 25 to 33 per cent. on each subject. But while sympathizing with this desire to raise the standard, your committee regrets to see that the scheme tends to increase the quantity of work required for admission, rather than to improve its quality. Your committee is of opinion that it would be advisable to set papers of a more elementary character than has been the practice in the past, and to exact 40 or 50 per cent. as the standard for pass. This, we believe, would compel pupils to remain a year longer at the High schools, and would tend to foster a higher ideal of exact scholarship amongst those seeking admission to the universities.

OBITUARY.

The Campbellford Herald says :—"The remains of Mrs. Melrose, relict of the late John Melrose, were brought from Peterborough on the afternoon train on Friday last, and interred in Mount Pleasant cemetery. The deceased lady died of paralysis of the brain at the residence of her son in that town, on Thursday. She was a resident of Campbellford for eleven years, but moved to Peterborough about three years ago. Mrs. Melrose was born in Scotland, and came to this country when comparatively a young woman. Two sons and one daughter mourn her departure. Mr. A. P. Melrose is a resident of Peterborough, Mr. Alex. Melrose resides at Skowhegan, Maine, and Mrs. Robert Parker, at Newcastle. The deceased was 76 years of age.

A VOICE FROM OREGON.

A Canadian Woman's Letter—Her Heart Still in Ontario—The Agricultural Resources and Scenery of Oregon.

To the Editor of the Examiner :

DEAR SIR,—As it is some time since I have written you a letter, I thought that I could not employ my time better this afternoon than by writing you a few items. Although I am several years in Oregon my heart is still warm towards the land of my birth. We are having one of the finest winters I have ever seen in Oregon, bright sunshine nearly every day. The ground has been frozen a little the past week. We Canadians enjoy the cold weather better than the mud and rain. The fall wheat looks fine ; in some places it is six inches high. The farmers all pasture their sheep, hogs and calves on the wheat during the winter months. The fields all around look green and life-like. Although we have but very little snow and frost here, we generally have considerable rain. It is a common saying, "The more rain the better the crops." Oregon scarcely ever has a failure, still I think if a man is comfortable in Canada he had better stay there. Oregon cannot be surpassed as a farming country, but a person here does not have the same life about them as they have in a cold climate. If the farming land in your district was as good as here, many of the Canadians would prefer the cold climate.

The crops here were fine last year, but prices were very low. Wheat was only worth from 30 cents to 40 cents a bushel ; oats 20 cents to 25 cents, and everything else is down in proportion. Beeves that used to sell from $25 to $30, are now worth about $15 ; mutton that used to sell off the wheat for $4 to $5 a head, is now worth about half that amount. Nearly every farmer sells from 30 to 40 head of mutton off his wheat in the spring. Farmers here never had to economise like they did in Canada. They nearly all live very extravagantly and now when hard times comes come it is hard for them to practise economy. The price of land is much lower than it was five years ago, but there is very little changing hands. If a person is a lover of scenery they cannot help admiring the country. The mountains, Mt. Hood, Mt. Jefferson and others are all covered with snow, while we here in the valley are enjoying the green land. Even the hottest day in summer we can look out and see Mt. Hood clad in her robe of snow. On a trip to Eastern Oregon we passed by the "Three Sisters." They are a beautiful sight, standing side by side and covered with snow. Eastern Oregon used to be a great stock country, but of late years, the pasture is nearly all eaten out and the owners of the stock have to care for and feed them so much that it is no longer a profitable business. In the Williamette valley quite a number of hop yards have been set out, but they, like grain, did not pay the expense of raising them this year. Quite a number of hop men have not yet disposed of their crop, owing to the very low price that was offered them. It costs a man eight cents a pound to put them in the bale, and all he gets over that is profit and all under that is money lost. Wishing you a happy New Year, I remain

PRISON SUNDAY.

An Appeal to the Clergy by the Prisoners' Aid Association.

The Secretary of the Prisoners' Aid Association wrote to the press desiring that the Clergy of all denominations be requested to observe Sunday, January 27th, as Prison Sunday. On this day we specially desire, says the appeal, prayers for prisoners, prison officials, and for all who have to do with the administration of justice ; for legislators and municipal councillors, who have to do with the inauguration of prison reform in our penal and reformatory institutions ; for Prisoners' Aid Associations, and for the success of all wisely considered prison reform proposals.

As the county municipal councils of the Province will meet according to statute, on the 22nd inst., and as we are petitioning these bodies to take up the County Goal and House of Refuge question at the January meeting, we would invoke the Divine blessing upon this appeal.

The reforms we are asking for are as follows :—1. For each county to either establish a county house of refuge, or to unite with one or more counties in establishing a district workhouse. 2. To make efficient provision in the county jail for the absolute separation of the young and comparatively innocent from old offenders. 3. To provide the prisoners every day with industrial employment. 4. To keep the jail supplied with good books. 5. To keep a small sum of money in the hands of the jailer to give temporary aid to discharged prisoners. 6. A small annual grant in aid of county prisoners on being discharged from the Central Prison or the Mercer Reformatory at Toronto.

We believe that the establishment of county houses of refuge is the cheapest, most wholesome and morally beneficial way of dealing with the destitute poor of each county. It takes away from the county jail the tramps and the simply destitute poor, thereby preventing overcrowding in the jails and facilitating a better classification of prisoners. Of the great good which would result if the young and comparatively innocent prisoners were separated from the older and more hardened offenders in the county jails, it is necessary only to make emphatic mention.

A Charitable Object.

The celebration of Burn's Anniversary, in Peterborough, by a concert of high order and one worthy of the occasion, is not the only laudable object which the St. Andrew's Society have in view. The proceeds of this concert are in aid of the benevolent fund of this Society, which it is learned, has stood the strain of hard times until its funds have become nearly exhausted. Ticket holders, therefore, have the satisfaction of knowing that they are assisting a purely charitable society, which has been helping to relieve the town of some of the burdens that must be borne by every community. Remember the date—January 23rd.

Not Equal to it.

As a cure for frost bites, chilblains, burns and scalds, chafing, chapped hands, inflamed breasts, sprains, wounds, bruises, Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the most reliable remedy on the market.

The Goods are RIGHT If They Are LEFT.

We refer to our REMNANTS which have been LEFT over after a heavy season's selling, and which are going so fast that they won't trouble us at stock-taking time.

The qualities and prices are RIGHT—if they are left. Because we have decided to give customers the advantage of good, serviceable, staple oddlengths at and below original cost.

Some of the snaps still left on our Remnant Counter consist of short lengths of DRESS GOODS, CLOAKINGS, FLANNELS, BLANKETS, COMFORTERS, TABLE LINENS, TOWELINGS, &c. But they are going fast. It's worth while to come in and look them over.

We are grateful to our customers for their valuable patronage during 1894, and respectfully solicit continuance of the kind favours during 1895.

MISS RUDKINS

Opposite the Examiner Office, 412 George St., Crystal Block.

NEW YEAR
NEW GOODS
NEW LEAF
1895

On looking over last year's business we find that we have everything to be thankful for, as it was one of the best years that, notwithstanding the hard times, we ever had, and that is saying a great deal.

Now, as this is the season for making good resolutions, we have resolved to surpass, if possible, last year's trade. To attain this end we have duplicated all our fall Cloths and added all the latest winter patterns we could find. We buy for spot cash and can afford to sell on a small margin. Give us a call and we will do the rest.

Our Gent's Furnishings and Underclothing Departments are both well stocked. We have a few choice Overcoats still left which we will let off cheap.

A RECORD of twenty-five years of cures is made by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. In all blood disorders, this remedy has numbered its cures by the thousands. Years of uninterrupted success long ago led the proprietors to sell this remedy as no other blood-purifier can be sold. They have so much confidence in the "Discovery" that they guarantee it in all diseases that come from a torpid liver or impure blood. As a blood-cleanser, flesh-builder, and strength-restorer, nothing like the "Discovery" is known to medical science. Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, and the most stubborn Skin, Scalp, or Scrofulous Affections, quickly yield to its purifying and cleansing properties.

If it doesn't benefit or cure, you have your money back.

For every case of Catarrh which they cannot cure, the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy agree to pay $500 in cash. You're cured by its mild, soothing, cleansing, and healing properties, or you're paid.

There is a symbolic significance in the watch chain ornament formed of two boar's tusks bound together in crescent shape with a piece of gold or silver. This or any other figure of two prongs, a horseshoe, for example, or a pair of open shears, is believed to keep off witches.

Sportsmen who have never seen a moose will be interested in the dimensions of one recently killed near the Ebeeme lakes in northern Maine. The animal measured seven feet high at the shoulders and his body was nine feet long. The measurement from his nose to his hind feet was fifteen feet. The spread of his horns was four feet and four inches.

Upon the far western plains the antelope, a few years ago so familiar a sight to the traveler by rail or wagon, has now almost wholly disappeared. In Colorado, Texas and western Kansas, shy bands numbering from two or three to half a dozen antelope are sometimes sighted, where fifteen years ago the herds were many and large.

A London firm engaged in the transportation of Jews from Russia to American countries has made a report that between January and October of this year the number transported was nearly a quarter of a million, the majority of whom obtained pecuniary assistance from funds raised in their behalf.

A singular reason for deciding to end his life was given by Charles Jenkins, whose body was found in the Hunter River, in New South Wales. In a letter to a friend, he stated that he had a fixed opinion that a man over fifty-five had no right to compete in the labor market with young men and so he had determined to quit life. He asked that the verdict should not be temporary insanity. The jury returned a verdict of "Found drowned."

Half a dozen churches in New York bear upon their spires or weather vanes the figure of a cock, though doubtless without any intent upon the part of the builders to preserve an ancient superstition. As an inn sign the cock goes back to days before the Christian era, but the bird became invested with a sort of sacredness among Christians after he had announced the apostacy of Peter. One legend has it that Christ was born at cock crow and the bird was invested in the middle ages with a superstitious halo of sacredness.

Just before the Zulu war there was in Mauritius a stamp collector who was a friend of the local postmaster. One day he learned that there was to be a clearance of old stock and obtained permission to buy it all as waste. It occurred to him that he might do the same at other small colonial postoffices and acquire stamps without difficulty. One of his Mauritius stamps he sold not long ago for $4,250, and, according to the Manchester Courier, he has already made between $100,000 and $150,000 by his investment.

In London a paving stone was noticed to have raised above the other by its side, and workingmen were sent to replace it on a level with the rest of the pavement. Before they reached there numerous toodstools appeared between it and its fellows, and when it was taken up it was found that the growth of these fungi, soft and spongy though they are, had lifted the stone, which was four feet across one way and two feet across the other way, and weighed 312 pounds. This seems even more wonderful than the splitting of a rock by the roots of an oak or other tree growing in a crevice of a rock.

A novelty being placed upon the market is a new adapttaion of the incandescent light for the purpose of the desk. Upon the top of the desk is a sliding frame which allows the light to be placed in a desirable position. The light is placed longitudinally in a horizontal cylindrical ground glass frame. Over this is placed upon the top a sheet of perforated metal. This is for the purpose of protecting the hand or other substances from the heat common to the incandescent lamp. In front is a bronze apron which completely shades the eyes from the light, the results being that the full volume of light is thrown upon the desk, and a full utility in the way of effect is thereby realized.

STAGE DEATHS

Medical Authority Declares They Outrageously Violate Nature.

A French dramatic critic, with some show of medical knowledge, represents that nearly all actors and actresses outrageously violate nature in their imitations of death. He cites in corroboration of his charge, the customary theatrical death of Camille, in the younger Duma's favorite emotional play of that title.

According to the author, his heroine is affected with pulmonary consumption, and an incidental attack of hemorrhage of the lungs extinguishes her li e. There is absolutely nothing dramatic to be made out of this mode of dying; if fidelity to fact be obeyed. The gushing of a stream of blood from the mouth would be realistic, but the imitation of such a phenomenon is never made by actors, male or female, nor any discreet manager tolerate such a piece of stage business. Again, the overwhelming suffocation which produces the rapid death in Camille's case is never accompanied by convulsions, such as her dying representatives on the stage almost always assume. In natural death from this cause the sufferer simply collapses from failure of the vital powers.

Theatrical poisoning scenes are also usually untrue to nature. It is popularly believed that when a fatal dose of laudanum or morphine is swallowed the victim immediately sinks into a death-like sleep, as is commonly seen on the stage, whereas the first effect of this poison taken in like quantity is invariably to excite and enliven.

Nor is the mode of dying after the hackneyed cardiac stage-stab in conformity with the laws of nature. The actor simply falls at full length, or in a heap, whereas the every-day member of society gives a spring when the heart is struck before entering eternity by this unhappy gate. Even the modern Othello has not inherited enough of Shakespeare's wonderful fidelity to truth to die naturally after a stab through the heart.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Sweating Waiters.

Waiters in the foreign restaurants of London have distinct grievances that should be remedied, if the statements of a German waiter in a contemporary are to be believed. He makes complaint of the annoyance and anxiety suffered by himself, in common with other members of his class, owing to a system of sweating of the most obnoxious kind which, he asserts, is practiced in restaurants that are kept and mainly frequented by foreigners. The proprietors of these establishments not only pay their waiters nothing, but exact from them a premium of sometimes as much as half a sovereign for the privilege of attending to the wants of customers and performing other duties for twelve or sixteen hours a day. In those restaurants largely patronized by Englishmen and Americans it seems that these men are able to earn a more or less meager income, even though their masters impose a further tax upon them by charging for attendance in the bill, but where the customers hail from countries in which tipping does not obtain they find the struggle for existence both bitter and disappointing.

Stone That is Flexible.

It may be safely said that no specimen in a geological collection is more curious than the bar of flexible sandstone, which can be bent with less pressure than that required to bend a piece of wet leather of the same size. In an article upon the subject in the Mineral Collector we are told that "when a thin slice of the stone is looked at under a lens by transmitted light the fragments are seen to be locked together like the parts of a sectional toy, fixed, but only loosely. The simplest way of explaining how this stone was formed is to say that grains of sand were once cemented firmly together by another material, which has been partly dissolved, leaving countless natural ball-and-socket joints of jagged shape behind."

Tourists With Their Eyes Shut.

"It is a funny thing," said a prominent Philadelphia artist, who has lived abroad, the other day, "how some Americans living in Europe will be Americans still to the end of the chapter and actually pride themselves on living in Rome, but not doing as the Romans do. For instance, I know some Bostonians who have lived in Paris several years, but who have never in all that time drunk a bottle of wine and have their pork and baked beans for Saturday night supper as regularly as if they were still living in the Hub. They miss all the flavor of foreign life in that way, but when they return to this country they will have no trouble in falling back readily into their old habits."—Philadelphia Record.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

THREE RUNNING SORES

PHYSICIANS FAILED

BUT B.B.B. CURED

Dear Sirs—After having used Burdock Blood Bitters for Scrofula in the blood, I feel it my duty to make known the results. I was treated by a skilled physician but he failed to cure me. I had three Running Sores on my neck which could not be healed until I tried B.B.B., which healed them completely, leaving the skin and flesh sound and whole. As long as I live I shall speak of the virtues of B.B.B., and I feel grateful to Providence that such a medicine is provided for sufferers.

A SCALY ERUPTION

UNENDURABLE ITCHING

Suffered Three Years—Now Perfectly Cured by B.B.B.

Gentlemen—I have used Burdock Blood Bitters for Skin Diseases, from which I have been a sufferer for three years. I have used six bottles and am now entirely cured. I have been a sufferer such as Donald Kennedy's Medical Discovery and the Cuticura Remedies, but all to no good. I doctored one year with the best physicians in the land; they pronounced my disease a Scaly Eruption, but could not remove it. It came on in red blotches and spread over my body; the skin became dry and formed hard dry scales. The itching was intolerable, but I am now completely cured, and I owe it all to B. B. B.

WINDSOR IN WINTER.

SOMETHING OF THE FAVORITE HOME OF HER MAJESTY.

How the Queen's Residence is Heated and Lighted—Four Methods and Materials and How They Are Employed—Coal by the Train Load.

For lighting the castle four methods are available, all of which are more or less in operation, viz: Gas, oil, candles and the electric light, while for warming and cooking, wood, coal and gas are used. During the residence of the court some hundreds of persons are in the castle, besides the royal family and the visitors, consequently the adequate provision of all these processes is of a somewhat gigantic nature, keeping many servants constantly employed.

For the general lighting and heating gas and coal are adopted, but this is not so in the Queen's own rooms, nor in many other of the royal apartments. In the matter of fires for her own rooms the Queen strictly banishes coal. She has a confirmed preference for wood only. Special supplies of wood have to be obtained for this purpose from the thickly timbered hills a few miles up the river, above Windsor, where a number of workmen are regularly employed on this task. The timber, when felled and roughly trimmed on the spot, is brought down to a wharf on the river side, where it is dressed and cut up into blocks of fixed sizes. It is then stacked to get seasoned, and as required supplies are brought down to the castle for consumption in the Queen's rooms.

Gas and oil are excluded from her Majesty's apartments. Her light is provided by means of wax candles, all of one special pattern, their daily removal being the duty of a special official. In some of the other apartments gas is utilized, and in other parts oil lamps are burned, gas supplying the quarters of the staff generally. Moreover, although the Queen bars all but candles for her own private use, she has permitted the introduction of an electric light plant. This is placed underneath the north terrace, and is in charge of a special engineer, under the general supervision of a prominent electrician. This plant has never been largely used, but the light has been led into and applied to the main corridors, to one or two of the royal apartments and to the library. A year or so ago the original plant was replaced by newer and more powerful machinery, which would probably suffice to light the whole of the castle if the Queen so willed, but this has not yet occurred, nor is she likely to sanction it. Electric bells and telephones abound throughout the castle, but electric light is allowed very limited play.

The coal required for Windsor Castle chiefly comes from certain collieries in North Wales, brought in train loads of perhaps 500 tons at a time. From the station it is carried to the castle, in various parts of which are deep and spacious cellars, into which it is tipped. Thence it is conveyed as required to the different rooms and offices, numbering some hundreds Lifts are almost unknown in the castle, consequently the coal has to be hoisted from the cavernous cellars and carried hither and thither by coal porters. The replenishing of the fires is carried out upon a most careful and efficient plan, footmen and other higher servants receiving the coal from the porters and passing it on to the royal apartments at intervals throughout the day.

Each official connected with heating and lighting the castle has his allotted duties and recognized position, and thus the residence of the highest lady in the land is lighted and warmed in efficient manner by many and various processes.—London News.

New Light on Courtship and Marriage.

An English writer has recently been giving some what he calls "new light on love, courtship and marriage" that is worth considering. Anybody, he says, who has not yet fallen in love can readily raise the vision of the subsequent dear one by looking at himself in the glass. If he be stout, the girl will probably be thin; if he have a snub nose, his love will center about the Roman one; if he be dark, 10 to 1 a blonde ultimately captures him. Thus nature corrects defects and strives to realize her ideal. The same holds good in a measure of the mental qualities. A fool should make it his business to fall in love with a clever woman, and, conversely, a wise man should marry a fool if he has any respect for nature. Note, further, that girls with Roman noses are, as a rule, good house managers; but against this amiable quality must be set the fact that your Roman nose is essentially managing in every direction and is not content with domestic duties alone.

Your Roman nose, in fact, requires a complete surrender and is rarely happy till she gets it. Noses, he thinks, are a leading index to character. Avoid a sharp nose. If, besides being sharp, it is tinted with varying shades of red or blue, or is blue pointed, there is an asperity of temper, which it would not be well for you to encounter. Let your converse with "blue points" be confined to the oyster bar, then. Avoid the blue-nosed maiden as you would the blue-nosed ourang-outang—both are capable of infinite mischief. He also cautions us against red hair and bushy eyebrows. In selecting a husband "choose a sensible man, one of solid, mature judgment." Excellent advice, only a bit too general, as is his infallible recipe for winning his love. To do so a woman must possess womanly graces, the power of setting out her qualities so as to inspire the tender passion and gift of fascination. That is the whole secret.

Actors, Go to Russia.

Russia has few stranded actors. When a manager takes a troupe on the road he must make a deposit with the Government to pay the way home for the members in cass they become stranded.—Dramatic News.

When the Nerve Centres Need Nutrition.

A Wonderful Recovery, Illustrating the Quick Response of a Depleted Nerve System to a Treatment Which Replenishes Exhausted Nerve Forces.

MR. FRANK BAUER, BERLIN, ONT.

Perhaps you know him? In Waterloo he is known as one of the most popular and successful business men of that enterprising town. As managing executor of the Kuntz estate, he is at the head of a vast business, representing an investment of many thousands of dollars, and known to many people throughout the Province. Solid financially, Mr. Frank Bauer also has the good fortune of enjoying solid good health, and if appearances indicate anything, it is safe to predict that there's a full half century of active life still ahead for him. But it's only a few months since, while nursed as an invalid at the Mt. Clemens sanitary resort, when his friends in Waterloo were dismayed with a report that he was at the point of death.

"There's no telling where I would have been had I kept on the old treatment," said Mr. Bauer, with a merry laugh, the other day, while recounting his experiences as a very sick man. "Mt. Clemens," he continued, "was the last resort in my case. For months previous I had been suffering indescribable tortures. I began with a loss of appetite and sleepless nights. Then, as the trouble kept growing, I was getting weaker, and began losing flesh and strength rapidly. My stomach refused to retain food of any kind. During all this time I was under medical treatment, and took everything prescribed, but without relief. Just about when my condition seemed most hopeless, I heard of a wonderful cure effected in a case somewhat similar to mine, by the Great South American Nervine Tonic, and I finally tried that. On the first day of its use I began to feel that it was doing what no other medicine had done. The first dose relieved the distress completely. Before night I actually felt hungry and ate with an appetite such as I had not known for months. I began to pick up in strength with surprising rapidity, slept well nights, and before I knew it I was eating three square meals regularly every day, with as much relish as ever. I have no hesitation whatever in saying that the South American Nervine Tonic cured me when all other remedies failed. I have recovered my old weight—over 200 pounds—and never felt better in my life."

Mr. Frank Bauer's experience is that of all others who have used the South American Nervine Tonic. Its instantaneous action in relieving distress and pain is due to the direct effect of this great remedy upon the nerve centres, whose fagged vitality is energized instantly by the very first dose. It is a great, a wondrous cure for all nervous diseases, as well as indigestion and dyspepsia. It goes to the real source of trouble direct, and the sick always feel its marvellous sustaining and restorative power at once, on the very first day of its use.

AN OFT-TOLD TALE

Illustrating the hollowness of relationship in time of trouble, and showing how the widow's stay and the orphan's shield is a policy in the Manufacturers' Life.

When God removed Papa to Heaven,
And Ma was left to strive for seven,
With scarce enough for burial fees,
(So lingering was poor Pa's disease),
Though full of grief, we'd no despair,
Relations spoke so kind and fair.
Our Grandpa said that he, for one,
Would try and see what could be done.
Our Uncle William and our Aunt,
Hoped we should never come to want
But mother's brothers talked the best,
A great deal kinder than the rest.
They said that home they'd take us all,
Only their rooms were few and small.
We'd promises from Uncle Page,
To push us forward when of age.
They then went home, but stop, I miss,

They gave us every one, a kiss,
And said, "be good and mind Mamma,
And we will be to you—Papa."
For many weeks they could not come,
So much were they engaged at home.
Until they heard Mamma had found
Behind Pa's desk upon the ground,
An envelope, "to my dear wife,"
Five Thousand Manufacturers' Life!
Which soon the Manufacturers' paid.
So Ma commenced a genteel trade,
And then they came, it seemed so funny,
To beg Mamma would lend them money.
But Ma said no, if you are poor,
A trifle will your life insure;
And then the Manufacturers shall
Your best friend be what'er befall.

A GIANT OF FINANCE.

SIR C. R. WILSON THE RENOWNED ENGLISH FINANCIER.

A Man Whose Dealings are With Figures Big Enough to Make Your Head Swim—An Interesting Sketch of His Career.

This country is at present the scene of the labors of a financial angel of the very first magnitude in the person of Sir Charles Rivers Wilson, Knight of St. Michael and St. George, and Companion of the Bath, etc. Sir Rivers is over here as the champion and representative of the European stockholders of the Central Pacific Railroad, having in charge the interests of some $52,000,000 belonging to these worthy and confiding investors in American securities. This vast sum, however, does not mean anything to Sir Rivers. He is in the habit of dealing with money in sums so large that the bare mention of them is calculated to make the head of the ordinary man ache.

As Comptroller General of the British National Debt—an office which he has held since 1873 and which he only resigned last month, Sir Rivers has had charge of funds amounting to the stupendous total of between two hundred and thirty to two hundred and forty millions of pounds sterling. The income of this vast sum amounts to some fifteen illions of pounds sterling, all of which it was part of the duties of his office to invest. It will be realized, therefore, that it is not the amount of the interests which have been confided to his care which troubles him.

In appearance Sir Rivers is very much like the Marquis of Dufferin, both in form and feature. He is thin and tall, and might be a man of some fifty-five years of age. His hair has not yet turned, although his whiskers and moustache are quite grizzled. He has a most amiable, indeed a winning face, with a decidedly humorous twinkle of the eyes, but, all the same, there are certain ominous lines about the mouth which would suggest that this same kind face can be very hard and firm at times, and that it can be so probably no one knows better than His Highness Ismail Pacha.

Sir Rivers was brought up in that nursery of good breeding and repose of manner, namely, the Treasury Department of the government, and he shows it in every move. His manner is full of subdued bonhomie, with a distinct touch of a Chesterfieldian politeness, and his method of speech is slightly of the Parliamentary order, with the halting "er" of the public speaker, and his voice is very clear and penetrating.

Sir Rivers is above all things a diplomat, and shows it in a thousand different ways. Whether speaking of men or places, he always conveys the idea that he knows a great deal more of the subject than he is saying, and this gives him a suggestion of reserved power, with a suspicion of the iron hand in the velvet glove. As regards his dress, Sir Rivers is a bit of a dandy, but only to the extent that after leaving him no one could recall one prominent feature of his attire.

It is, of course, with Egypt that the name of Sir Charles Rivers Wilson must be always associated. One circumstance stands out in this connection which speaks for itself. When he first went out to Egypt, in 1876, as the representative of the British government, the country was practically bankrupt, and the seven per cent. unified bonds were quoted at 28. To-day, after various conversions, these same unified bonds, the interest on which has been scaled down in the meantime to four per cent., stand at about 103. To enter into the history of his Egyptian career would be impossible within the limits of this article, but the document which has passed into history is the report of the Commission d'Enquete, of which he was president, in succession to the late Ferdinand de Lesseps, which had for a result the practical recovery of 450,000 acres of the most fertile land in Egypt, which had been "annexed" by Ismail Pacha, and the placing of the finances and taxation on a basis of prosperity of which the wretched and downtrodden fellaheen had never dreamed or supposed possible.

Another historical episode in Sir Rivers' Egyptian career was when he threatened to adjourn the conference and withdraw. He went to the palace to make his adieux to the Khedive, who, after mumbling out an incoherent speech, placed in his hands a document which meant the complete surrender of his authority, accepting a constitutional government and placing himself entirely in the hands of England, France and Italy. Not the least of Sir Rivers' triumph in this connection is the fact that it was his personal influence which induced the Rothschilds to float a loan of eight and a half millions sterling on the security of the lands which he had compelled Ismail to disgorge. In leaving the Egyptian sketch of the career of this great financier, it should be recorded that he still is one of the three English government directors of the Suez Canal.

On the subject of Ferdinand de Lesseps Sir Rivers is very eloquent. He had been a colleague of "the great Frenchman" and has nothing but admiration for him. He claims that De Lesseps should not be judged by the standard of ordinary men, and pays high tribute to his generous nature, broad views and enormous mental and physical activity. The manner in which he approached England when Lord Palmerston was Prime Minister—the bitterest enemy of his great scheme—after he had won his fight, commends him to the liveliest recognition. He knew that once cut the best and largest customers the canal would have—they number about eighty per cent of the whole—would be Englishmen, and so he approached them in the most liberal spirit and made them concessions which earned for him the odium of his fellow countrymen to, an almost malignant extent.

"When I think," says Sir Rivers, "that this man, who was no engineer, no financier and an unsuccessful diplomatist, achieved a scheme which beat the great Napoleon himself, I am lost in admiration."

PROBING OLD WOUNDS

The Spirit of the North and South Crops Up in the U. S. House.

A ROW OVER THE PENSION LIST

Representative Jones' Opposition to Proposed Pensions Precipitates an Outbreak of Bad Feeling—He is Backed by Another Gentleman From the South.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—There was an excitement and almost riotous discussion growing out of proposed pension legislation in the House of Representatives. Last Friday night there was a tumultuous outbreak precipitated by the opposition of Mr. Jones, (Dem. Virginia) to the bill to grant a pension to Major-General John A. McClernand, and the proceedings last night were somewhat of an outgrowth of that occasion. The feeling ran high and bitter words were spoken. The immediate cause of the outbreak last night was the blocking of bills to increase the pension of the widow of Gen. Abner Doubleday and to pension another widow who had performed services as a voluntary nurse during the war, by the parliamentary opposition of Mr. Jones.

Mr. Cooper (Dem. Ind.,) took the place of Mr. Springer last Friday night, and with considerable temper he charged Jones with a lack of chivalry in thus opposing measures for the benefit of women.

Mr. Jones responded with warmth that he was not fighting women and asserted that there was no foundation for the charge. "What I am fighting for," he said, "is equality before the law and against the granting of large pensions to the rich, powerful and influential."

"I question the motives of the gentleman from Virginia," shouted Mr. Cooper. "His opposition to these pension bills I believe is actuated by the sentiment expressed by him last Friday night, when he said he was proud of the cause he had fought for in the trenches. Although he has taken an oath now to support the flag that floats above your head, Mr. Speaker, he displays toward it the same spirit of opposition as when he fought against it thirty years ago. I say only what he himself says."

Mr. Simpson (Pop Kans.), Mr. Cox (Dem Tenn.) and Mr. Moses (Dem. Georgia) took part in the colloquy. Epithets were bandied about and for a little time it looked as though a personal conflict might ensue.

Mr. Talbot (Dem. South Carolina) made a violent speech. He ranged up and down the centre isle, wildly gesticulating and shouting. He deprecated, he said, the continual appeals to sectional passions, but he noticed that they usually came from those who were invisible in war and invincible in peace.

"As to the 'lost cause,'" he said, "it is the everlasting cause under the same circumstances," (shaking his fists in a defiant manner at the Republican side), "and for the same reasons the men who fought then would fight again. You can like that or you can lump it. I love the cause to day as much as I did when a boy I bared my bosom to your bullets on the battlefields of Virginia."

Mr. Jones was accorded the floor for a few minutes at the close of the session and denounced Mr. Cooper's language towards him as being unworthy of a gentleman. Referring to the "lost cause," he said he would answer always and everywhere as he had then, that he was proud of it. "And when a gentleman said I believed it to be right, he slandered me. I know it was right."

This brought the House to the hour of 1.30, at which time the session closed under the rules.

CREAMER VISITS WHITE HOUSE.

The Peace Ambassador From England Presents His Memorial.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—William Randall Creamer, Liberal M. P. for a London constituency, and editor of the Agitator, called upon the President at the White House last evening by appointment and presented the memorial signed by 354 members of Parliament representing all shades of political opinion in Great Britain, proposing that all differences between that country and the United States that cannot be settled by the usual diplomatic methods, shall be submitted to arbitration.

Another Blow at American Cattle.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The state department has been informed that the Hamburg authorities have forbidden the importation of cattle and swine from England and Ireland. Inasmuch as a large proportion of the American cattle entering Germany go through England, this will be another severe blow at our cattle interests and our trade with continental Europe.

Demonstration of Berlin Brewers.

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—Eight mass meetings of unemployed workmen, the largest composed of 2,000 locked-out brewers, were held in Friedrichshain yesterday. The entrances to the park and the roads leading thereto were guarded by strong forces of police instructed to preserve order. Resolutions were adopted declaring that only active socialism can relieve the present distress among the people.

No Revolution in Greece.

VIENNA, Jan. 19.—Despatches from Athens say that mass meetings are held daily in many parts of Greece to protest against the increase of taxation. While much excitement is manifested there have been no outbreaks as yet and no revolution is expected.

FLASHES OF QUICK WIT.

SOME HISTORIC, SOME APOCRYPHAL, BUT ALL GOOD.

Not a Few European Sovereigns Have Been Fond of and Given to Repartee—Clever and Brutal Tests Passed Among Englishmen of Long Ago.

Generally speaking, the strong have refused to put up with jesting from the weak. The Czar Nicholas, who had some fine qualities, was hardened against a meditated act of clemency by the undaunted spirit of a prisoner. Relieff, a man of letters, had been implicated in the conspiracy of 1825 and sentenced to be hanged. He was launched from the fatal ladder, when the rope broke and he was thrown to the ground, severely bruised, but conscious. He picked himself up and said quietly, "They can do nothing in Russia, not even twine a cord properly." It was customary in Russia to pardon the condemned after a similar fiasco, but on Relieff's words being reported to the czar and his pleasure demanded he rejoined, "Prove him the contrary."

Henry VIII., with all his violence and tyranny, could bear with a retort as well as give one, for he loved a wit. When it was told him that the pope had sent the cardinal's hat to Fisher, Bishop of Rochester, he said, "He may have the hat, but he shall have no head to wear it with," and the bishop was brought to the block. On one occasion the turbulent Earl of Kildare was brought before the king, charged with setting fire to the Cathedral of Cashel. "I own it," said the earl, "but I never would have done it had I not believed the archbishop was in it." Henry laughed and pardoned the culprit. His bitterest enemy was the Bishop of Meath, who accused him to Henry of divers misdeeds, and closed his arraignment with "Thus, my liege, you see that all Ireland cannot govern the earl."

"Then," said the perverse monarch, "the earl shall rule all Ireland," and instantly made him lord deputy because his good humor equaled his valor.

Elizabeth resembled her father in her willingness to put up with retorts from saucy subjects and to pay them back in kind—not always with the greatest refinement. The little scene with the ill-fated Earl of Essex, when she boxed his ears for insolence and he laid his hand on his sword, saying that he would not take such treatment, even from her father, is familiar to every one.

Going back to still earlier dates, we constantly find the imperious Plantagenet kings giving and receiving retorts that bear witness of great independence among some of their powerful subjects. It was Edward I., who, on the refusal of the "Black Dog of Warwick" to join the king with vassals and supplies for war, said: "Sir Earl, you shall either go or hang." The retort was, "Sir Rex, I will neither go nor hang."

Henry IV., of France, was good natured above most monarchs in repartee. As a rule it is impossible to reproduce in conventional English dress the jests of this wise and witty king. On one occasion it was the turn of M. d'Aubigne to sleep in the king's ante chamber. Fancying the monarch was asleep, he began to talk to M. de la Force, who shared his watch, saying, "Your master is the most ungrateful of men." La Force, half asleep, asked him what he was talking about, when Henry cried out: "Wake up! he is telling you I am the most ungrateful of men."

"Pray go to sleep, sire," interrupted d'Aubigne. "We have a great deal more to say about you." Henry never showed less kindliness to his servant on account of what he had overheard.

But the cynical generosity of Frederick the Great is unique. A lackey who owed him a grudge had determined to poison him. One morning he brought in the king's chocolate and appeared visibly troubled in countenance. "What ails you?" said Frederick, looking fixedly at him. "You look as if you had put poison in my food." The wretch fell at his feet and avowed his crime. "Get out of my sight, you scoundrel!" said Frederick, and took no further notice of his attempt to murder him.

A delicate compliment is a work of far higher art than the most biting sarcasm. Everyone knows the story of the poor creature who found himself seated between Mme. Recamier and Mme. de Stael, and managed to offend them both by saying that he sat between wit and beauty, and was crushed by the retort of Mme. de Stael that he possessed neither. The court of Louis XIV. was the school where this art was brought to perfection. The flattery offered to the king was at once coarse and exquisite. Witness the inimitable reply of Mignard, who was painting the king's portrait for the tenth time, when Louis asked him: "Do I look older?" "I see a few more campaigns on the brow of your majesty."

One of Louis' marshals, Bassompierre, was great at repartee. He had spent ten years in the bastile, and, on emerging, his majesty asked him his age. "Fifty, sire." To the surprised look of the king the marshal added, "I don't count the ten years I passed in the bastile, because I did not spend them in your majesty's service."

Louis found amusement in Bassompierre's retorts—a curious illustration of pleasure that is sometimes derived from remarks that might reasonably be supposed to be far from flattering. On one occasion he was telling the court how he first entered Madrid as ambassador. "I was mounted," he explained, "on the very smallest mule in the world."

The king remarked, "It must indeed have been an amusing sight to see the biggest ass in the place mounted on so small a quadruped."

With a profound obeisance came the rejoinder, "I was your representative."

American Trade Report.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Bradstreet's says: With few exceptions, commercial, financial and industrial features indicate only a retention of improvement heretofore noted. Leading manufacturing industries and larger wholesale houses at business centres report that extreme conservatism in purchases will mark business during the spring; that interior buyers are not inclined to anticipate wants more now than in the previous year; that prices generally continue at very near the lowest reported for many years and that wages, with rare exceptions, are as low as they have been at any time during or since the panic of 1893. A redeeming feature is found in a moderately increased number of industrial employes at work compared with one year ago, but rates of compensation have not advanced. The number of business failures this week for the United States were 378 against 405 last week and 404 in the week a year ago.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TORONTO, Jan. 19, 1895.

In local grain circles there is next to nothing doing. Prices are unchanged and receipts are small. Wheat prices are unchanged, with moderate offerings. The barley market is slow. Oats are quoted, west, white 28c and mixed 27c.

In Buffalo malsters are holding off, expecting lower prices in barley which sellers will not come on this crop. Western advices in fact are higher.

The grain markets continued dull in Chicago and a general decline of 1-4c. to 1-2c. took place.

At East Buffalo the sheep and lambs offerings were 60 cars, 10 cars of which were held over; opened slow, closed dull and weak with at least 25 cars still unsold. Canadas in light supply, choice fat Canada lambs would sell at $5.10 to $5.25. Bucky stock not wanted and thin unfed Canada lambs if they come in any quantity will break values as feeders are not purchasing and the demand almost wholly for export grades.

Speculation at the New York stock exchange was strong although the dealings were again of a retail nature. The strength of the market was due in a large degree to the introduction of the Sherman financial bill, which is generally considered the best measure yet introduced. The engagement of $4,00,000 gold for shipment to Europe to-day did not dampen the ardor of the bulls and the market ruled strong almost from start to finish.

The London stock markets keep strong and active but closed under the best, on unconfirmed rumors of an insurrection in in Greece. The condition of the Paris Bourse is closely watched, speculation rather hinging on that quarter.

What is Eczema?

It is an agony of agonies.
A torture of tortures.
It is an itching and burning of the skin almost beyond endurance.
It is thousands of pin-headed vesicles filled with an acrid fluid, ever forming, ever bursting, ever flowing upon the raw excoriated skin.
No part of the human skin is exempt.
It tortures, disfigures and humiliates more than all other skin diseases combined.
Tender babies are among its most numerous victims.
They are often born with it.
Sleep and rest are out of the question.
Most remedies and the best physicians generally fail, even to relieve.
If CUTICURA did no more than cure Eczema, it would be entitled to the gratitude of mankind.
It not only cures but
A single application is often sufficient to afford instant relief, permit rest and sleep, and point to a speedy cure.
CUTICURA works wonders because it is the most wonderful skin cure of modern times.
